Pork a perk for tuition

With hogs bringing 40 cents a pound on a good day, Gina Kientzy fretted that her family's farm income would slump so much she couldn't afford to continue college.

But an innovative bartering idea at Lindenwood University in St. Charles, Mo., let her family trade hogs for tuition and she graduated with a degree in business administration.

The pigs became bacon, sausage and pork steaks for the college cafeteria.

Will it crow at morning?

Everyone's familiar with the computer mouse. But the computer chicken?

Researchers in the University of Delaware's ACRES program — Affordable Composites from Renewable Sources — have developed a computer processor made from chicken feathers.

Richard Wool, a chemical engineering professor and head of the program, said researchers looked to chicken feathers because they have shafts that are hollow but strong, and made mostly of air, a great conductor of electricity.

In early tests, electrical signals moved twice as quickly through the feather chip as through a conventional silicon chip, researchers said.

List lands man in trouble

A Muncie, Ind., man was charged with bigamy last month after his wife found his name in a newspaper listing of marriage licenses.

The charge is a felony carrying a 1 1/2-year prison term.

Leo Youngblood, 26, married Rebecca Copley on April 10 while still married to Michelle Youngblood, according to prosecutors.

Michelle Youngblood reported the second marriage to police after she saw her husband's name in the marriage license listings.

Cloudseeding ends Friday; rain falls Saturday

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

Only 10 days after the Bailey County Commission passed a resolution opposing cloudseeding (or weather modification), the state of Texas stopped its program for the rest of the summer.

The commissioners' court passed the resolution July 31 stating that many people felt the program did western counties more harm than good.

County Judge Marilyn Cox said she received a call Friday (Aug. 9) from Carol Funderburgh, head of the Texas Department of Agriculture's weather modification program, letting her know that the program had been suspended. (On the South Plains, cloudseeding had been jointly funded by the Agriculture Department and High Plains Underground Water Conservation District No. 1.)

On Monday, the conservation district circulated a press release stating that the program was suspended "until further notice."

The press release left no doubt who was responsible for the action.

"Criticism emanating from residents of Bailey County and some adjoining counties has alerted us to their concerns concerning the program," district manager Jim Conkright was quoted as saying.

The district "has a long history of listening to its constituents," he added.

Farmers asked to notify weevil workers about spray schedule

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

ABILENE — Texas Boll Weevil Eradication officials request that cotton farmers contact their district office with information on when a field has been treated with any chemicals and what chemicals were used.

Although fields that have been treated must be posted, contacting eradication personnel will help ensure that employees take the necessary precautions to protect their health and safety when working in these fields.

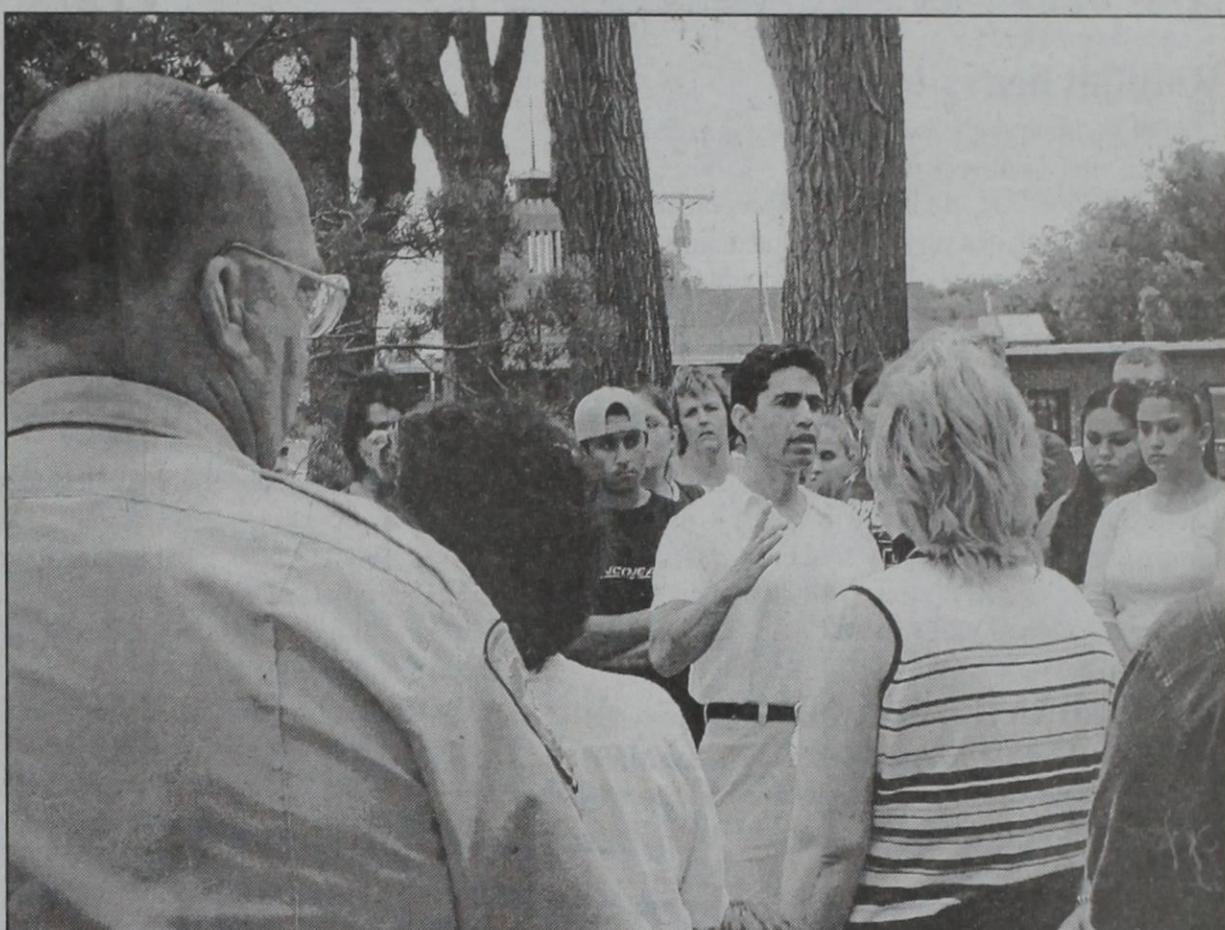

The foundation also wishes to avoid unnecessarily treating fields, as some of the pesticides growers use also provide control of boll weevils.

More information is available by contact a local eradication office (in Muleshoe, 272-5122, 6030 or 6032).

The foundation is a non-profit, grower-initiated and -funded organization dedicated to eliminating the cotton boll weevil from the state in the most cost-effective and environmentally responsible manner possible.

Health fair Sunday

The community health fair is scheduled for 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. at Eastside City Park. Free services and educational materials will be available.

Community rallies for missing girls

Mayor Victor Leal speaks at a Monday afternoon rally seeking the safe return of two teen-aged Muleshoe girls who wandered away from a family outing at a Lubbock amusement park Saturday night. The girls were located later Monday evening and were safe, but Muleshoe residents already had begun wearing yellow ribbons and praying for the two. Once the prayer rally formally ended, Leal urged people to "hold hands in groups of five or six and pray for God's deliverance from this situation."

School district to raise taxes slightly

JOURNAL STAFF REPORT

The Muleshoe School Board has scheduled a public hearing for 7 p.m. Aug. 26 to discuss a proposed tax increase and this year's budget.

The board proposes to raise the district's effective tax rate to $1.40 per $100 of assessed valuation.

The hearing will be held in the board room at 514 W. Avenue G.

According to figures from the Bailey County Appraisal District, this amounts to an increase of just over 2 cents per $100 valuation from last year's effective rate of $1.3794 — or a difference of $4.40 per year on the average house.

According to figures presented Monday by Superintendent Gene Sheets and corroborated by the appraisal district, the district would have had to increase the rate to $1.4225 in order to maintain last year's level of "maintenance and operations revenue."

Scrimmages are Saturday

Both the Muleshoe Mules and Lazbuddie Longhorns have scheduled their first scrimmages of the season for 10 a.m. (varsity games) Saturday on their home fields.

The Mules take on New Deal while the Longhorns host teams from Silverton, Ropesville and Roswell, N.M.

Junior varsity and freshman Mule games follow the varsity.

D.J. Domínguez signs baseball letter of intent

By DELTON WILHITE
Journal sportswriter

Former Muleshoe High School baseball standout D.J. Domínguez signed a letter of intent Monday to play for the Wayland Baptist University Pioneers next spring.

As a southpaw, Domínguez led the Mules both on the mound and at the plate last season.

Domínguez will pitch and play first base for the Pioneers and should see action at the varsity level this near, according to Pioneer Coach Brad Bass.

"I am very excited to be able to play at the college level," Domínguez said. "It will be good experience for me and a great opportunity to play and learn more about the game."

"It's close to home, so my family and friends can come and watch," he added.

Muleshoe Coach Kodi Crane spoke highly of Domínguez's play for the Mules. "He was one of the senior leaders this past season and has a good understanding of the game. He can do it all — hit, pitch and field — and was willing to work hard. I really believe D.J. understands that college is a different level and is up to the challenge — and will have much success at Wayland."

Domínguez was an all-district honoree for the Mules last season and played in the inaugural All South Plains All-Star Game. He also played football and basketball for Muleshoe.

Raspberries can be easy — just look for the right kinds

By RONN SMITH
Editor

If you have enjoyed the "bramble" berries that have flooded our supermarkets this summer but would like to try growing your own, raspberries are certainly worth the effort here (blackberries may not do as well).

I think, though, that some of the older varieties of raspberry may be a better investment for us than the latest trends.

For instance, 'Heritage' has just about become the standard in everbearing red raspberries. (As you probably know, "everbearing" in raspberries means mainly a fall crop in addition to the earlier one.) My experience with it indicates that it will do well here with regular watering, but 18-hour work days don't allow me to water anything regularly.

'Heritage' bloomed beautifully and formed little fruit, but much of the fruit didn't develop properly and I'm sure water was the problem.

On the other hand, the older 'Latham' red and 'Durham' everbearing red seem a little tougher.

Those three are probably the varieties most commonly available at garden centers, so they should be no problem to locate.

But I think without doubt two of the varieties best suited to our dry, hot climate are 'Jewel,' a black, and 'Indian Summer,' an everbearing red.

When garden centers offer black raspberries at all, 'Jewel' is likely to be among them.

As for 'Indian Summer,' I haven't seen it for sale in years, but if you see it, it's worth grabbing. I would say that for us, it's as near to being a low-maintenance bramble fruit as there is.

Blackberries take more care to succeed here, and I think water is a big factor in that. You might try 'Chester,' a commonly available kind that seems to be more drought-tolerant than most.

Keep in mind that the above fruits tend to be pretty thorny, although thornless varieties of blackberries are becoming popular.

Be sure you buy virus-free plants. Bramble fruits are susceptible to viruses that can't be eliminated if you start with diseased plants. If you're buying locally, the label should state the plants are virus-free; by mail order, the catalog will provide this information.

An alternative is boysenberries, which are not only more drought-tolerant than most brambles but are thornless. Their sprawling growth habit can make them more difficult for some people to pick, as opposed to the more upright growth of raspberries and most blackberries — but boysenberries can be tied to supports to alleviate some of that problem. (The rambling types of blackberries are called either dewberries or youngberries, but I don't know of any varieties that are adapted to dry climates.)

Boysenberry fruits are like blackberries but bigger.

Most of the pests that plague brambles in the East and Northwest are rarely a problem here, with the exception of spider mites — which bother many plants. Spider mites are barely visible, but the leaves will develop tiny yellow speckles or pale spots. Control by spraying the plants with neem or insecticidal soap, both of which are commonly available.

When planting brambles, don't bother with pruning if you're setting out potted plants. If they're bare-root, cut the tops back to 2 inches. Set them 2 feet apart, water well with a liquid fertilizer, and then mulch them.

The next spring, any plants that didn't make strong growth the first year should be cut back to 2 inches again, with a repeat of the liquid fertilizer and more mulch.

The second autumn, and each fall thereafter, trim the canes — stems — back to 4 feet in height. This will help produce stiff canes to support the following year's growth, but you still may want to install wire supports (12- to 14-gauge works best).

I think the best thing about bramble fruits is that they tend to ripen over long periods, so you have a lot for fresh eating rather than a one-time crop that overwhelms you and is gone.

This may be the last of these columns, at least for the time being. I have taken a job with the Muskogee, Okla., paper. Muskogee lies on the border of USDA zones 6 and 7, just as we do here, but with much more rain. Once I get resettled, we'll see about gardening columns.

In the meantime, happy planting!

State-leased dove sites offer affordable hunts

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
 AUSTIN — Anyone who wants to get in on the dove-hunting action this year but doesn't have a place to hunt, Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's public hunting program may be the answer.

For a $40 annual public hunting permit, hunters can access more than a million acres of public hunting lands, including 158 units covering more than 61,000 acres leased primarily for hunting dove and other small game.

"Nearly 1/3 of the 44,779 hunters who purchased the annual public hunting permit last year said they did so primarily to hunt doves," said Herb Kothmann, public hunting program director.

"The dove lease program has been extremely popular. Even though our dove leases comprised just 4 percent of the public hunting lands last year, they were used for 18 percent of all public hunting activity. Considering many of these properties are only accessible for two months out of the year, that's a fairly significant impact to our public hunting program," Kothmann said.

"We reached out this year and added opportunity for other small game, including 11 new units in Floyd County for hunting pheasant," Kothmann said. "Unfortunately, we lost a couple of prime spots near Austin due to change in ownership or conversion to other land use not attractive to doves," he added.

Kothmann added that it is important that hunters consider themselves guests on the property and treat the land with respect by not littering.

"Future access for hunting will be better assured if everyone makes a special effort to pick up trash such as spent shot shells, empty shell boxes, paper and plastic sacks and other debris," he said.

Annual public hunting permits may be purchased wherever hunting licenses are sold.

A map booklet and supplement of dove-lease maps will be mailed within 10 days of purchase of the permit at retail outlets; however, the map booklet and supplement can be obtained immediately by purchasing the permit at a Parks and Wildlife law-enforcement office.

Hunters are also reminded to renew their hunting licenses, which expire Aug. 31, before heading out on opening day.

Dove hunters must answer Harvest Information Program questions while buying their license. Program certification will be printed on the license at the time of purchase after a brief series of questions have been answered.

Lifetime license holders also must be program-certified in order to hunt migratory birds.

Federal government offering grants to local communities

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services announced the availability of $2 million in grants to help local officials develop volunteer Medical Reserve Corps units to strengthen local communities' capacity to respond to an emergency and to strengthen the local public-health infrastructure.

The deadline to apply is Aug. 23.

"Following the September 11 tragedy, many health professionals wanted to volunteer to help," HHS Secretary Tommy G. Thompson said. "While well-trained in their individual professions, they were not necessarily trained to respond in an emergency.

"Moreover, existing structures weren't fully adequate to absorb these volunteers and to use their expertise as effectively as possible. The Medical Reserve Corps will enable local officials to strengthen their community's ability to respond effectively."

Medical Reserve Corps units will be composed of community-led, community-based volunteers who may assist medical response professionals and facilities during large-scale local emergencies, such as naturally occurring influenza epidemics, hazardous materials spills or acts of terrorism.

Volunteers can include, but are not limited to, current or retired health professionals (such as physicians, nurses, mental health professionals, dentists, dental assistants, pharmacists and veterinarians), social workers, communications/public relations professionals, health-care administrators and clergy, among others.

Communities are allowed apply for up to $50,000 in grants to develop their own Medical Reserve Corps units.

The Medical Reserve Corps is part of the USA Freedom Corps, the cornerstone of the president's volunteer service initiative that promotes a culture of responsibility, service and citizenship.

President Bush announced USA Freedom

Corps during his 2002 State of the Union address.

The program works with key service agencies in government and the non-profit sector to provide incentives and new opportunities for Americans of all ages and backgrounds to serve at home and abroad.

USA Freedom Corps includes the Citizen Corps, Corporation for National and Community Service (which includes AmeriCorps and Senior Corps) and the Peace Corps. The Medical Reserve Corps is part of the Citizen Corps.

In addition to assisting during a local emergency, Medical Reserve Corps volunteers can assist their communities with ongoing public-health needs, such as immunizations, blood drives, health and nutrition education, anti-smoking campaigns and increased physical-activity campaigns.

The corps is not intended to replace a community's already-existing emergency response systems, but rather to supplement and support existing systems with volunteers who are trained to function effectively in emergency situations.

"The president has called upon all Americans to create a 'record of service' to their communities and donate 4,000 hours of their time — the equivalent of two years — to service," Thompson said. "The Medical Reserve Corps is an excellent opportunity for our dedicated health professionals to donate their time and talents."

Applications must be prepared using Form PHS 5161-1 (revised July 2000), which is available at <http://www.cdc.gov/od/pgo/forminfo.htm>, and should be sent to Karen Campbell; Grants Management Officer; Division of Management Operations; Office of Minority Health; Office of Public Health and Science; Rockwell II Bldg., Suite 1000; 5515 Security Lane; Rockville, Md. 20852.

More information about the Medical Reserve Corps grant is available at <http://www.surgeongeneral.gov/topics/mrc>.

Admission to South Plains College involves three steps

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

LEVELLAND — There are three steps for admission to South Plains College, good news for students who are thinking about entering college this fall.

"It's not too late for students to begin the admissions process," registrar Cathy Mitchell said. South Plains' registration is Aug. 21-22, and classes begin Aug. 26.

Students to complete an application for admission, provide an official transcript from their last high school or college attended or a GED certificate, and provide evidence of Texas Academic Skills Program compliance.

Incoming freshmen, unless otherwise exempt, are required to take the Texas Academic Skills Program test, a state-required placement testing assessing basic college-level skills.

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
AUSTIN — A new Texas Historical Commission brochure on the Chisholm Trail that debuts Aug. 30 includes six state parks and historic sites found along the 19th-century cattle trail.

The brochure — part road map and part history lesson — is geared to travelers who want to experience the history of Texas cattle drives through a number of historical and cultural sites.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department sites highlighted in the Chisholm Trail brochure include Mustang Island State Park, Fulton Mansion State Historic Site, Goliad State Park and Mission Espiritu Santo State Historic Site, Cleburne State Park and Fort Griffin State Park and Historic Site.

The cattle route begins in at Brownsville in South Texas and winds its way through the center of Texas to the Oklahoma border.

The Chisholm Trail brochure is the seventh in a series of free Historical Commission brochures highlighting the historic people and places that make Texas unique.

The Texas Heritage Trails Program is a regional tourism initiative that promotes tourism, revitalizes local economies and fosters community leadership

Trading in used boats can be a smooth ride, with title

SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL
AUSTIN — The transfer of boats and motors is becoming more like a flip trade of a baseball card, with more and more people not getting titles, altering sale prices on transfer documents to avoid higher taxes and inadvertently purchasing stolen crafts. Game wardens want to advise people to treat the buying or selling of a boat as they would that of an automobile.

"We see people buying boats at garage sales and receiving no paperwork and wanting to transfer it to their name," said Texas Parks and Wildlife Department game warden Tony Norton of Henderson County. "You wouldn't buy a car without getting the title."

If the seller doesn't have a title but has proof of boat ownership, they can request a duplicate title and then transfer it over to the buyer. The penalty for not transferring a title is up to a $500 fine. And without a title, the boat can't be registered.

It could be worse. "What if somebody steals it? They have to come up with proof they own the boat, and a lot of them can't," said Sgt. Fred Churchill, member of a new Marine Theft Unit formed in March.

Another common mistake is getting a title but not completing the boat transfer and motor transfer forms correctly.

The forms can be obtained at any Parks and Wildlife office or at (www.tpwd.state.tx.us/boat/forms.htm).

A separate transfer form must be filled out for the outboard motor title.

There is a civil tax penalty and a fine for not registering and paying the sales tax on the boat and outboard motor within 20 days of purchase.

Since boat registrations are good for two years, some people may have boats for as long as 18 months before they try to register the boat in their name and by then, it may be impossible to track down the previous owner and get a bill of sale to prove it was a legitimate transaction.

"Most people don't worry about it until the registration expires," Churchill said. "Then they realize what a mess it is."

Another common violation is people selling boats without endorsing the title in the first place. They thereby skip paying taxes on the boat — another violation punishable by a fine of up to $500. Norton says he also sees changes made in the tax affidavit sections on transfer forms (title applications). "They change the price of the boat so they don't have to pay as much tax," he said.

Title applications are government documents and falsifying information or altering them for financial gain is a felony, according to Churchill.

"Because people see boats as toys, they don't put as much importance on the titling process as they do with cars," Churchill said. "People don't realize when they're trying to save a couple hundred bucks, if the altered documents are presented to one of our offices and processed, they committed a felony," he said. And that violation is punishable by up to two years in prison and/or a $10,000 fine.

More information on titling, registration and boat sales is available on the Internet at www.tpwd.state.tx.us/boat/title.htm.
