Farm Bureau Meeting To Be Held, Lubbock

Farmers in this county are urged to attend the Farm Bureau meeting at Lubbock March 14.

This meeting will be one of a series of nineteen similar gatherings called by the Texas Farm Bureau Federation.

Schuster stated that the American Farm Bureau Federation was organized by farmers of 36 states in 1920.

Topics which will be discussed at the meeting are: price control and its effect upon the farmer.

Schuster advises local farmers to see their county agent who will help plan for a large delegation from this county.

Visiting Minister To Preach Here

Rev. W. E. Hamilton, Conference Sunday school specialist of the Methodist church, will preach at the Muleshoe Methodist church Sunday night at 8:30 o'clock.

Reverend Hamilton will meet the officials and church school workers at the church at 3:30 p. m. Sunday and will teach a course for the benefit of local people through the week.

Reverend Huckabee, in commenting on the coming of the well-known Sunday school worker, said: "Brother Hamilton has been traveling executive secretary of the Northwest Texas Conference Sunday School board for about eight years.

The Lions Club will buy a registered gift for the boy winning the plaque award, this to be given on the rotation plan.

Mr. and Mrs. Seth Rutherford and family returned to their home in Dallas Friday after a visit here with Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Rutherford.

Raines Hayes Completes Work In Fire Control

Word was received this week that Raines Hayes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hayes of Muleshoe, has completed the fleet fire control school at San Diego, Calif., and is being sent to California.

Raines joined the Navy December 9, two days after the Pearl Harbor raid, and was sent to San Diego. He was one of 225 men who took the preliminary examination for the fire control school.

Fire control men must be tops as mathematicians, as they are the boys who make the American gunners the best in the world. They must acquire a thorough knowledge of fire control instruments.

Food Stamp Plan Not For Bailey County

Bailey county officials have decided to get along without the Food Stamp Plan. The announcement was made Monday that the commissioners' court had informed the Amarillo office in charge of the stamp plan.

The court was in Amarillo last Tuesday in regard to the program, but the question was not fully settled until Thursday.

The court reported that figures showed that several hundred dollars more would have to be spent to get the present results. Some members of the court stated that the only change which would be brought about, as they saw it, was the addition of more people to the relief rolls.

Metal Work Is New Course Study At Defense School

A new course of study has been announced at the Defense School, to begin Monday night, March 16. Those interested in metal work are requested to report at the school at 8:30 p. m. (war time).

The course will include instruction in electric welding and sheet metal work under the direction of Bud Holdeman. The course will continue for ten weeks five nights a week, three hours a night. At the end of that time, those who have completed the course satisfactorily will be given certificates.

FORM PRODUCTION UNITS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—American citizens living in foreign countries may carry on Red Cross production programs as their part in the nation's war effort. Formation of "production units" in foreign countries has been authorized by the American Red Cross provided they are established within the jurisdiction of the Red Cross society of the nation in which the citizens are residing.

FOLLOWS TRADITION

TIPTON, Ind.—Ancestors of Mrs. Fannie White, "Aunt Fannie" to this community, fought under George Washington during the Revolution. Erect and active despite her 90 years, she is enjoying the family tradition of service. To date she has knit 22 sweaters and two aviation scarves in the American Red Cross production program here.

Your Farm Can Help

A farm "ground crew" waves a comradely salute to America's air force while loading a truck with the kind of food that will help "keep 'em flying." The picture is from a popular U. S. Department of Agriculture poster entitled "Your Farm Can Help."

Final Rites Are Held For W. W. Humphrey

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday for William Webster Humphrey, long-time resident of this section. J. E. Romdall of Farwell, and John L. Norris, minister of the Muleshoe Church of Christ officiated. Services were conducted at the home at Progress and at the Church of Christ, Lariat. Interment was in the Oklahoma Lane cemetery.

Mr. Humphrey was born April 10, 1858 in Ohio county, Indiana. He was married to Miss Mary Ashe Feb. 28, 1880. She and their infant son preceded him in death. On March 15, 1916, he married Mrs. Mandanite McMahon. To this union, one son and one daughter were born. The son died in infancy. The daughter, Miss Eunice Humphrey, survives, and is at home.

Fifty-five years ago, Mr. Humphrey became identified with the Church of Christ, and for 43 years served as minister of that church. Four years ago, ill health caused him to retire from active duty.

RED CROSS NEWS

Quite a few garments were finished by the Red Cross ladies last week and shipped out. Twelve were present Wednesday, and 10 Thursday. All of the material has not arrived, but there is plenty to keep several more workers busy. Now that the weather is better, more workers are expected to attend and help on these work days. If you can sew or knit, please come to the sewing rooms and do what you can on this work.

SOME HUNT, SOME FUN!

KENSTON, N. C. Johnny Grant, local radio announcer and stunt driver, stood on his head, hounded celebrities for autographs and paraded down New York's Broadway, all for the Red Cross. He recently conducted a treasure hunt which took him to Washington and New York in search of a list of 50 articles which were auctioned to Kenstonites. The proceeds went to the Red Cross War Fund.

MOVING EQUIPMENT

Equipment of the Hamilton Beauty Shoppe is being moved this week to the St. Clair Variety Store. Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair purchased the business last week, and installation and decoration of the new quarters will be completed Thursday, it was announced.

Signing For Sugar Books Awaits Forms

Only a part of the necessary forms for sugar rationing have been received here, according to County Judge Jim Cook, and there will be some delay in signing up for the books.

Individuals will be signed up at the schools over the county dates for which will be announced as soon as the proper forms arrive.

Those in possession of more sugar than can be allowed under the rules, which is two pounds to the person, should return the sugar to the stores where they purchased it prior to registration time. This cannot be over-emphasized because the rationing booklets are not sugar rationing booklets, but are general rationing booklets.

Certificate Of Title Needed For '42 Licenses

The attention of all car and truck owners is called to an advertisement in this issue of The Journal concerning the registration of motor vehicles.

There seems to be a great deal of misunderstanding about the new certificate of title, which must be presented to the tax collector before new tags are issued.

This should be attended to at once, as tags cannot be issued without a certificate of title, properly executed. The 1942 motor vehicle licenses are now due and must be paid by April 1. W. E. Renfrow, county sheriff and tax collector, urges all car and truck owners to buy now to avoid that famous last minute rush.

Baileysboro Youth Gains Promotion

Official announcement from the public relations officer at Goodfellow Field, San Angelo this week confirmed the promotion of Harold M. Brinker. He was advanced from corporal to sergeant.

Goodfellow Field is an army air corps basic flying school, and Sergeant Brinker is attached to the 49th School Squadron as a radio mechanic. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Dove P. Brinker, live on the Arch Route, Baileysboro. Harold is a graduate of the Morton high school and attended Texas Tech.

CHANGES SIDES

SAN FRANCISCO—During World War I Mrs. Ann Benn knitted for the German Red Cross. Across the trenches in the mud of France was an American doughboy whom she was to meet later and marry. Her husband, now a member of the San Francisco Fire Department, assists in training auxiliary firemen. Mrs. Benn is knitting again—this time for the American Red Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Buchanan and family went to Silverton Sunday to visit Mr. Buchanan's brother.

Dairy Cattle Sale Set For March 24 At Pollard Place

Expected to be one of the biggest affairs of its kind ever held in this territory, a dairy sale will be staged March 24 at J. S. Pollard's place, a mile north of Stegall, Col. W. D. Wanzor, auctioneer, announced this week.

More than 100 head of milking shorthorns and Jersey cattle will be offered at the sale, which is expected to attract buyers from over a vast area.

Mr. Pollard has been breeding milking shorthorns for the past 16 years and his herd is considered one of the best in this part of the country.

In addition to the cattle, 600 bushels of pure cotton seed will be offered at the sale, according to the colonel.

Sales coming up next week include Monday at the Edd Pointer place, three miles south of Baileysboro, and one Tuesday at the L. W. (Bill) Brooks place near Muleshoe.

Merchants And Band Will Be Guests Of Maple

Muleshoe merchants and the high school band will go to Maple next Monday night for a banquet to be given by the church ladies of that community. The trip is being made to get better acquainted and renew old friendships among the people of the county.

The banquet was originally scheduled for Friday night, but was postponed until Monday for the convenience of many of those who wished to attend.

Some thirty members of the band are to make the trip, it was said Monday, and W. J. Finley, band director, has an excellent program prepared for the occasion. This organization is now capable of putting on some of the best entertainment to be found on the Plains. Mr. Finley is rapidly making "musicians" out of what were once just "players," and their programs are well balanced with compositions from the great march kings and popular numbers.

The committee in charge of arrangements ask that every business in town be represented, and that all others go who possibly can.

Co-op Banquet Is Held Tuesday

The annual banquet of the Bailey County Co-op was held at Fellowship Hall Tuesday night with more than one hundred members and guests present. An excellent meal was served and pictures were shown on the advantages of farmers' cooperatives. Pictures were shown of creameries, hatcheries, Gins and other businesses now being operated.

Entertainment consisted of special musical numbers by band director, W. J. Finley, accompanied by Mrs. C. S. Holland and readings by Mrs. Noel Woodley.

Muleshoe Bakery Leased Monday

Beginning last Monday, the Muleshoe Bakery went under new management. Walter Moeller announced Monday that he had leased the business to Otis Baker, who has been with the concern for the past several months.

Mr. Baker came here last fall from Portales, N. M., and has been doing an excellent job. He has had over 12 years experience in some of the best bakeries of the country, and he invites Muleshoe people to give his products a trial.

DEHYDRATING CARROTS

University of Texas food engineers are now working on plans for cooking and drying carrots, according to similar processes followed for sweet potatoes. Experiments are starting this week on a project for dehydration of carrots, which could then be packaged and saved for use when needed. Addition of water would make them ready for table preparation.

Tomato Plants To Be Furnished Area Growers

Arrangements were almost complete last weekend for furnishing tomato plants for Muleshoe vegetable growers. The Chamber of Commerce voted funds last Friday to buy seed for planting under the supervision of an experienced truck man. These plants will be grown in hotbeds here, and when planting time comes will be put out, free of charge, to those who will plant as much as two acres.

Mr. Case of the Muleshoe Canning Co., stated last week that the price of tomatoes would be 31¢ per ton field run, and is to fill demands of the government for tomatoes that additional acreage is being put in. In the past, there has been much trouble in getting the proper variety of tomato plants for this climate, as well as the best vegetables for canning. The seed to be furnished is of varieties approved by canners in this territory.

Although several acres additional to the usual crop has been listed, many more can be used. It is understood that the local plant can more than double its capacity over any previous year, so there will be no danger of not having a market for the product.

All those who wish to put in as much as two acres of tomatoes this season should contact either the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce or the agricultural committee, headed by Sam Logan, for plants. This should be done as soon as possible to be assured of getting plants at the proper time.

Durward Mann Killed In Wreck

Word was received here last Thursday that Durward Mann, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Mann, was killed in an automobile accident on February 22. He was 20 years old and lived at Indio, Calif.

Full particulars of the accident were not learned. Mr. Mann was well known here, as he was a resident of Muleshoe for several years, and had been in California only a few months.

THE FARMER IN WAR

The high oracles of the nation spoke to the farmers Monday night. Whether the farmers were "huddled" around their radios "hours ahead of time, in breathless expectancy," as one press service said, is not known. They probably were in some sections of the nation. We have taken the occasion to ask a few farmers their impression of the talks, and especially as to that part of ex-secretary of agriculture Wallace's insinuation that the farmer was trying to "chisel," and that they might be looked upon with disfavor in the future. The total sum of answers were: "We want what is right."

Of eleven farmers, picked at random last week-end, we asked the following question: "Would you be willing to make sacrifices other than the ones now imposed, in order to win the war?"

Everyone of them promptly said "yes." One farmer stated that he would be willing to give up his car, truck, or anything, and even use a walking plow again if it would beat Hitler and the Japs. "But," he said, "I would like to hear some of the big labor leaders say the same thing, or some government official who has authority enough to back it up."

He can now put his mind at rest about the labor question. There will be no more strikes, or demands for higher wages, or slow-downs in factories, or numerous holidays taken by defense workers. We know that to be so, for none other than "Modom" Perkins, secretary of labor, than whom there is none more "secretarial," told a congressional committee yesterday morning that all such troubles with labor was

The Tulsa Herald looks ahead to the 1942 football season without losing sight of the fact that we are in a war.

"For our 1942 football team we'll take the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard for our backfield, the Defense Plants for our line, and President Roosevelt and Gen. Douglas MacArthur as our coaches—with the grandstand filled with bond buyers."

The Herald's selections for a mythical pigskin classic are good, but incomplete. The fact is apparently overlooked that any game such as the proposed one must have officials—a referee, an umpire and a head linesman. Now it matters little to this observer who calls the game "The Herald visualizes, because we're going to win anyway. We'll be able to do it in less than a minute, however, with fair-minded officials who won't hesitate to penalize the opposing team for un-sportsmanlike tactics."

"The Cogitations and Aphorisms of Jodok," which appears weekly in "The Friar's Star," is written by one who adroitly employs all the sagacity of age in putting over a point. Now the years which rest on Jodok's head may have been responsible for the failure of the three stoves to dispel the cold, but we rather suspect it was the low temperature of the stove which was the cause in the heat that he can warm things up with his col'n when the need arises. His opening comment in last week's Star follows:

"This is Tuesday night and the wind is howling dismally outside my room, and Jack Frost is sneaking around and poking his icy fingers in at every crack, crevice and key-hole, and I can feel the tips of those fingers as they creep up my spinal column, or maybe they are creeping downward. I cannot tell really which way they are creeping, although I have three stoves running at full blast in the room, and it just seems that they are each one of them 'slacking' on me, but maybe it is just the change in the weather."

A farmer in Kansas said to a friend, "Well, my son John has failed on his civil service examination."

"What was his trouble?"

"Well, he was short on spelling and geography and he missed plenty for on mathematics."

"What is he going to do about it?"

"I dunno. Times is mighty hard and I reckon he'll have to go back to teachin' school for a livin'."

The conductor had become irritated at an old lady, unused to traveling, who kept asking him how far it was to Barnessville, and finally he told her:

"Madam ask me no more. I'll tell you when we get there. But be forgotten to tell her and the train was a mile beyond Barnessville before he remembered. Ashamed of himself, he pulled the emergency cord and had the train backed up to Barnessville."

Approaching the old lady, he said, "Here we are, Barnessville, Quick, I'll help you with your baggage."

"Oh, thank you," she said complacently, "but I'm not getting off here. My daughter told me that when I got to Barnessville it would be time to take another pill."

One of the WPA men spoke, "I dug this hole where I was told to and began to put the dirt back in like I was supposed to. But all the dirt won't go back in. What'll I do?"

For a long time the WPA supervisor pruned the problem. Then: "I have it. There's only one thing to do. You'll have to dig the hole deeper."

Before the three men could drop to the beach below, where the canoe lay, there was the sound of someone approaching over the shore path.

"Club 'em with your gun, Blaise! Don't make a noise!"

"Here they are!"

With the impact of a sledge-hammer Red's clubbed 45 dropped the first jaws senseless. Finlay's heavy pistol glanced from the face of the next and he fell with a scream. In his surprise the third Montagnais fired his rifle in the air as a blocky body lunged into him carrying him to the ground. But the damage was done. The bush was now full of yelling Montagnais headed for the sounds.

"Launch the canoe, Blaise, while we stand them off!" cried Finlay.

The boat hit the water with a splash as an Indian lurched into Malone, who seized high in air and shattered against a big birch.

"Come on, Red!"

They dropped to the beach and into the waiting canoe.

As the Peterboro shot past the bow of the wooden craft knifed through the moonlight a canoe broke from the shore shadows to bar their path.

"Everyone down!" warned Garry. The three paddlers flattened as spurts of flame leaped from the birchbark. But in the half-light the aim from the moonlight was poor.

"Don't shoot! Run 'em down!" ordered Finlay.

The Peterboro leaped to the drive of the maple blades. With a crash the bow of the wooden craft knifed through the moonlight, amidships, rolling her under with its momentum. Before they could fire again the three Montagnais were in the water. With a lunge of his long stern blade Blaise pushed the filled shell of the birchbark clear of the Peterboro's stern. Then the maple blades bowed as the three friends drove their craft through the moonlit water and into the protecting shadows of the opposite shore.

"Close shaves!" panted Finlay, "but we made it!"

CHAPTER XVII

Late that night, when Wabistian's glare found the hidden camp of the police, the eyes of the old Indian glittered with triumph.

"You not hurt?" he asked, squinting into the faces of his friends as they wrung his hand.

"Not a scratch, chief!" Red patted the old man's shoulder.

"How glad we got clear of that canoe without using our guns," said Finlay. "Too many men have been shot here this summer."

"But it was their lives or ours, Garry. Tete-Blanche and his whiskey-fed crew would sniff us out as they would sniff a dog."

"I know, but headquarters must not see it that way. I'm sorry it had to be done."

With Flame and young Patamahis, who was devoted to Finlay and would be useful as a scout, the Peterboro started on the long haul through the islands, hugging the shadows of the western shores, for the moon was now low on the ridges.

Once they cleared the islands the rhythmic "churn-swish" of four paddles never ceased until dawn caught them far down the great lake. And throughout the long hours, Finlay had been accompanied by fear for Lise Demaris. He would send Patamahis at once in the birch-bark that had left at the hidden camp with messages for her to come at night to the islands opposite the post. It would not be long now before he'd have her in his arms—safe.

The following night they reached the old camp and Patamahis started with Finlay's message. Before dawn Garry was waked by something pulling at his blanket.

"Patamahis!" whispered the boy. "I find his undear stone."

Finlay's hand shook as he took the note, lit a candle lantern and read:

"Dearest:

"It has seemed so long—this waiting for you. Blondell is expected now, any day. Everyone except Lise and I are at the head of the lake. I tried to learn what was happening there, but could not. They haven't returned. Jules is drinking hard. Corinne heard him tell Labelle that if you saw that plane arrive from the North and got away with the information, the jig was up. I don't understand for he knows that people in Montreal suspect her's shipping gold south by plane. That's no secret. I've tried to convince him but he cornered me last night and said: 'You'll never see your friend again. He's walked into a trap, nosing around this lake. We'll take care of him this time. So, when Felix comes, you'd better agree to marry him. He's got plenty stowed away in Montreal—can give you anything you want. If you won't be reasonable, you can take the consequences.'

"Dearest, I'll not stay a day after that plane arrives. I'll take Lise and camp somewhere in the bush. Send for me! Oh, send for me! Let me know, quick, that nothing's happened to you! With all my love, 'Lise."

"You went to the post to find Miki? Is that the post? He could feel the drumbeat of his heart in his throat."

"'Ah-hah! Miki's was gone. Somebody strange was there, on de water!"

"On the water?" The news he dreaded hit Finlay like the chill of ice. "What was it?"

"Beeg cano' wid wing like gull!" In his remorse Finlay crushed Lise's note in his hand. Blondell's plane had reached Waswanipi! He found a scrap of paper and wrote:

"Just got your note! I'll wait at the nearest island, tonight tomorrow and every night following, for your canoe. Courage! I love you!"

"Garry."

That night, before the twilight died, Finlay and Red lay in the thick alders of the shore of the island opposite Isadore's with binoculars focused on the anchored sea-plane and the post. Later, lights, like stars, glowed in the trade-house and the living quarters. The lights died. Hour after hour the two men waited. But Lise did not come.

"She'll come tonight, Garry. Don't worry."

"Somehow we've got to learn why that plane comes here from James Bay before we go after Isadore."

"We know she carries flake gold and nuggets from the river bars when she finally heads south. Isadore admitted that to McNab, at Matagami."

"Get shot for our pains and, besides, spoil the whole show. No, I'm going to learn more about that plane from the Bay first. We can't arrest Isadore without a gun fight."

"Very good, Sergeant Finlay! What are the orders?" laughed Red.

"You'll get them, constable, when that plane shows up."

At daylight the faint hum of a plane's engine brought the police from their hidden camp to the shore. Far across the lake, above Isadore's, a mounted Policeman said:

"So you're Mounties? I've wondered what you really were. Jules Isadore has been wondering, too. He's pretty worried about it. Now that I've fallen into the hands of the police, what am I charged with?"

"You are charged with the felony of scaring two policemen half to death by swimming to this island, young woman."

"I had to. For a space her face was serious, then a smile broke through as Finlay handed her a steaming cup of tea."

The others left Lise and Garry by the fire while she told him her story. Since Felix Blondell came it has been hellish, Garry. They do nothing at night but drink and quarrel. I've learned what I could from Corinne. She's absolutely petrified, when Tete-Blanche returned, Jules was mad with rage at what happened. It seems Kinekib is dead. Did you know that?"

Garry's arm tightened about her waist. "Yes, I know it."

"Well, Tete-Blanche brought back a lot of drunken young Indians to hunt for you, Blondell. They're scared. He wants to return south. He told Corinne he was not in favor of what had been done. He says Jules has ruined the whole business by giving whiskey to the Indians. It's too dangerous. I avoid it, always carried my pistol. One night I had to fire it—to scare him. After that he was afraid of me."

"Good! Too bad you didn't shoot straight!"

"I'm not anxious about that plane from the Bay. It's overdue. They think now, that that's what you came here for—to get that plane. Corinne asked Blondell if that was the plane that carried the gold south and he looked at her queerly and said: 'Yes, it carries the gold. That's what these people are here for, to hijack it, but we've got enough men here to shoot them out of their canoes if they try that.' Garry, you're not going to try to take Isadore—just you three, are you? He's got a lot of Indians over there and he's desperate."

He drew her red-capped shape close and kissed the velvet eyes that searched his bronzed face. "Don't worry about that, Lise. You don't think I'm going to risk losing you when I've only just got you here—safe?"

They'll make it hot for us, now."

At daylight the faint hum of a plane's engine brought the police from their hidden camp to the shore. Far across the lake, above Isadore's, a mounted Policeman said:

"So you're Mounties? I've wondered what you really were. Jules Isadore has been wondering, too. He's pretty worried about it. Now that I've fallen into the hands of the police, what am I charged with?"

"I had to. For a space her face was serious, then a smile broke through as Finlay handed her a steaming cup of tea."

The others left Lise and Garry by the fire while she told him her story. Since Felix Blondell came it has been hellish, Garry. They do nothing at night but drink and quarrel. I've learned what I could from Corinne. She's absolutely petrified, when Tete-Blanche returned, Jules was mad with rage at what happened. It seems Kinekib is dead. Did you know that?"

Garry's arm tightened about her waist. "Yes, I know it."

"Well, Tete-Blanche brought back a lot of drunken young Indians to hunt for you, Blondell. They're scared. He wants to return south. He told Corinne he was not in favor of what had been done. He says Jules has ruined the whole business by giving whiskey to the Indians. It's too dangerous. I avoid it, always carried my pistol. One night I had to fire it—to scare him. After that he was afraid of me."

"Good! Too bad you didn't shoot straight!"

"I'm not anxious about that plane from the Bay. It's overdue. They think now, that that's what you came here for—to get that plane. Corinne asked Blondell if that was the plane that carried the gold south and he looked at her queerly and said: 'Yes, it carries the gold. That's what these people are here for, to hijack it, but we've got enough men here to shoot them out of their canoes if they try that.' Garry, you're not going to try to take Isadore—just you three, are you? He's got a lot of Indians over there and he's desperate."

He drew her red-capped shape close and kissed the velvet eyes that searched his bronzed face. "Don't worry about that, Lise. You don't think I'm going to risk losing you when I've only just got you here—safe?"

They'll make it hot for us, now."

At daylight the faint hum of a plane's engine brought the police from their hidden camp to the shore. Far across the lake, above Isadore's, a mounted Policeman said:

with his own from the night air. "I've worried so—been half mad!"

"It was too terrible, there! They're drinkin' and worried! I had to threaten to shoot Blondell. He wouldn't let me alone. Miki's disappeared. I got your note this morning — went for it myself. They've taken my canoe and left the others. So I had to swim to you, sweetheart. Do you mind my coming in my bathing suit?"

His arms tightened around her. "Mind? I love it, beautiful!"

"You seem to!" she laughed up at the others. She called out to Red whose thoughts were far away at Matagami as he drove his long paddle. "Not going to speak, Mr. Malone?"

"It's Red to you, Lise! If you know how glad I am to have you here! We've been pretty worried! I want to say they don't come any gamer than you!"

"Thanks, Red!"

Blaise stared open-mouthed as Garry led a girl wearing his coat over a one-piece bathing suit up to the fire.

"Blaise, this is Lise. We picked her out of the lake, swimming to the island."

"You swim—in de dark?" demanded the astounded Bernard. "By gar, you are brave girl! Tienst! She swim from Isadore's in dis black night!"

"Yes," said Finlay proudly. "Now top into the tent, Lise, an' crawl into my service top while we start the fire and get some tea and soup going."

Shortly the group of men smoking by the fire burst into laughter. Stuff in front of the tent wailed, hand at salute, stood a mounted Policeman. "So you're Mounties? I've wondered what you really were. Jules Isadore has been wondering, too. He's pretty worried about it. Now that I've fallen into the hands of the police, what am I charged with?"

"You are charged with the felony of scaring two policemen half to death by swimming to this island, young woman."

"I had to. For a space her face was serious, then a smile broke through as Finlay handed her a steaming cup of tea."

MULESHOE TEXAS

Just why the District Commander of the Legion should address it to us personally, is a mystery. The only reason we can see for picking on one man is that the writer was nothing but a machine-gunner in World War I. He did nothing but louse around up on the St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne, having lots of fun. While he was doing this, we were slaving day and night, trying to keep his extravagant bunch of bums in ammunition, shoes, undershirts, socks, good chow (well purty good), half of which they traded to the Froggies for vin roosh and coon-yak. But here's what he says:

Office of District Commander, Lubbock, Texas.
Mr. Clyde Holland, Muleshoe, Texas.
Dear Clyde:
As you were a member of the 144th Inf. Supply outfit during World War I—which, if you ask me, was the poorest excuse for an organization I have ever heard of—I still think of you not leaving a thing for the carrot soup but the peellings. For the chicken soup, the chickens had already passed through, and the horse's hooves were all that was left of the meat. I repeat, I STILL THINK OF YOU.

You raided the bee hive (ours) and burned up all the wood. You bought out the cantens and knocked out the window lights. You would milk the native's cows (before they got up of mornings) and steal their spuds, etc., etc. I repeat, I still think of you.
Now Mr. Holland, of the Supply outfit. Listen! As a citizen, are you any better than you were as a supply man? There are thirty-one Legion Posts in this District and all but six have reached their membership quota. The Muleshoe Post is one of the six that are short.
How about doing a better job as a citizen than you did as a supply man? Get in touch with some more of your good buddies and bring this up. You only lack eleven members, as of last report. I remember back in the 29's that your Post was an example all over the District, for you were forever doing something unusual. Get those memberships in.
I'm with you for a better Supply outfit—and your quota—for the Post.
I'll see you first.

Frame Gardens May Be Grown By 'City Folks'

By Lillie Gentry
Home Demonstration Agent

People who live in town and have only a small space which may be allotted to a home garden may still help with the Victory Garden Campaign by planting a frame garden.
Select a protected spot 20 to 40 feet long at the south side of a building, then spread about a half load of well-rotted manure over it. Then to 25 pounds of 6-12-6 commercial fertilizer may also be used. Spade it into the ground about ten inches. If the soil is fairly tight a row of sub-irrigation tile made of tin cans laid six or eight inches below the ground down the center may provide satisfactory watering.
The plot should be surrounded by a frame 12 inches high. A cover of wall canvas with a broad hem should be tacked at the back of the frame with provisions for fastening it securely across the front and ends.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS

The Distinguished Service Cross is awarded to persons who, while serving in any capacity with the Army of the United States, distinguished themselves by extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed enemy. This decoration was instituted by executive order in January, 1918, and confirmed by Congress July 9, 1918.
It is a cross of bronze with an eagle in the center and a scroll below the eagle bearing the inscription "For Valor." On the reverse is space for the recipient's name. The cross is suspended by a ring from a watered silk ribbon, composed of a band of red, white, blue, white and red. (Blue, an inch in width, predominates.)

CREAM SUPPLEMENT
A trade magazine announces that a product made from fresh cream, to which has been added edible vegetable stabilizer to keep the milk solids from separating, is ready for market. The product is said to retain much of the flavor of fresh cream and has no "canned milk" taste. It is packed in two types similar to fresh cream: whipping cream and coffee cream. Its purpose is to supplement the cream the milkman leaves on the doorstep.

"On Guard" Is Watchword Of Farm Group

"Never before has the need for large, well-informed, active Farm Bureau membership been so apparent as in these weeks, since the bombing of Pearl Harbor and our entrance into World War II," was the opinion voiced here Monday night at a pie and coffee get-together of Bailey county farmers.

"This need will become greater," it was said, "as the war continues and the importance of belonging to a strong farm organization is becoming almost a 'must' for every thinking farmer interested in protecting his home, farm and industry.

When you join your county Farm Bureau, it was explained, you band together with your neighbor to accomplish some rather certain definite objectives in your community, county, state, and the nation. In time of strife, unity and cooperation are more vital to you and your country than at other times.

"On Guard" is one watchword that the farm organization and the Farm Bureau know is important today. It's "On Guard" against inimical tendencies cropping out on every hand. It's "On Guard" against those interests which, perhaps unthinkingly, would put restraints upon the farmer which would displace a sound economy for agriculture.

Farmers present at Monday night's get-together represented 1 of the 13 communities in Bailey county. The group voted unanimously that Bailey county farmers have ridden the good horse long enough; this group intends to do something about seeing that the county does its part b, having a membership second to none in this territory.

A few of the things farm organizations have done for farmers of this community are:

1. Helped make REA available.
2. Helped adjust railroad rates.
3. Made AAA appropriations available, and
4. Been responsible for the recently enacted 85 percent parity bill.

For all this, running well above $4,000,000 for Bailey county, our farmers have put less than $200 into the Farm Bureau.

This enthusiastic group has formulated some definite plans. Henry Schuster was elected chairman, and W. M. Pool, Jr., to serve as secretary until community organizations are completed. Each man present took a membership in the Farm Bureau and a membership book with a pledge to contact his neighbor, explain the facts to him and get his membership. Some communities are formulating plans to organize on a community basis. Bailey county farmers are determined to do their part.

This unusual meeting was called by County Agent Sam Logan at the suggestion of several Farm Bureau members. The chief speaker was William G. Kennedy. The entire group took part in the discussion. Fourteen of the group pledged to go to a Farm Bureau meeting in Lubbock March 14, and plan to take other farmers from their community.

"The best meeting of its kind I ever attended!" was the consensus of opinion of everyone present.

Muleshoe Library News

"WINDSWEEP" By Mary Ellen Chase

"Windswept" is a novel set on the coast of Maine, which Miss Chase knows so well and which is the background for her earlier novels, "Mary Peters" and "Silas Crockett." But the scene of her new story is eastern Maine, that less known region of open, trackless, often barren land facing the open sea.

Windswept is the name of a house on a high promontory of land miles from villages or towns. Its name suggests the nature of its background and the character of its atmosphere. It is the home of the Marston family, built under tragic circumstances by John Marston, lived in and loved by his children and by their children. And yet its long influence extends beyond the Marston family to others, to the Bohemians Jan and Adrienne, to Adrienne and Julie, into whose life it enters and whose thought it forms.

"Windswept" thus becomes more an American novel than one only of Maine or New England, for in it Miss Chase has portrayed the past and the present of America, the gifts and graces of her newcomers as well as the contributions of her older stock.

The library has received eight new books recently. They are: "The UP Trail" and "Light of the Western Stars," by Zane Grey; "Frenchman's Creek," by Daphne du Maurier; "Pied Piper" by Nevil Shute; "Dragon Seed" by Pearl Buck; "The Secret of Dr. Kilgare," by Max Brand; "Miss Minerva and William Green Hill," by Frances Calhoun, and "Windswept" by Mary Chase.

Fourteen more books have been ordered that should arrive any day.

OBITUARY

Martha Emma Curry was born April 3, 1859, near Glasgow, Ky., the fourth child of George and Julia Ann Curry. The family came to Texas in 1877 and located near Waco. She was married to Cyrenius Elmo Locke of Bowling Green, Ky., in 1879. To this union was born nine children, eight of whom are living, one son having died in infancy. The Locke family lived near Waco until 1903, when they moved to near Plainview in Hale county. In 1920, Mr. and Mrs. Locke and son, Walker, the only child still living at home, moved to Bailey county, locating in the YL community. Later, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Tipton of Plainview moved to a nearby farm.

After Mr. Locke's death in 1926, Mrs. Locke made her home with her children, spending much of her time with Mrs. Tipton, who later moved to the Progress community.

Although confined to her bed or chair much of the time, and denied an active life for many years, Grandmother Locke, as friends and relatives called her, had a philosophy of life that enabled her to lead a rich, full life. She felt that happiness for everyone lay within the ability of each and simple things of life. She saw beauty in unsuspected places, saw it in a ray of sunshine that found its way into her room, a wild flower, or the smile of a child, the handclasp of a friend; she heard beauty in the song of a bird, the murmur of a breeze. There were words of encouragement and inspiration for all who made their way to her with their problems. Her mind was alert to the newer day in which she lived, while holding to the best of an older day which was gone.

She was converted at the age of 18 and joined the Baptist church, and at the age of 40 became a member of the Methodist church. While unable physically to take active part in church work, she found a way of life in the words of the Savior, and her close communion with God, her tolerant and sympathetic understanding of her fellowman, her abiding appreciation of truth and beauty in any form, whether a desirable characteristic in an individual or a bit of beauty in nature, literature or music, these attributes made her influence on the lives she touched considerable. May the influence she bore live on and on in the lives of those who knew her.

Of her we may say she is not gone but just away, like the rose that climbed through the crevice in the wall to shed its beauty and fragrance on the other side. Thus we think of her.
