Fertilizer Increases Pond Fish Production

According to William Reeder, Range Conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service, addition of commercial fertilizer to farm ponds can bring about greater fish production. Fish do not eat the fertilizer but the fertilizer provides food for millions of microscopic plants and animals that live in the water. With addition of the fertilizer the microscopic plant increase provides food for worms, insects and other aquatic animals that are food for the fish. Also a fertilized pond will have less growth of submersed water weeds. Reeder stated, fertilizing of ponds should be started in the spring and continued until the color of the water will cause a white disk to go out of sight at about 12" deep. Any commercial fertilizer will do to fertilize a pond as long as there are equal amounts of nitrogen and phosphorus. For more information on pond fertilization contact the Soil Conservation Service through the Hall-Childress Soil and Water Conservation District.

TEXAS DEER HUNTERS "BRING HOME THE BACON"

Hunters in Texas brought home more than $16.5 million worth of venison during the 1973-74 hunting season, according to statistics from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

Hunters killed 10,260 mule deer and 366,033 white-tailed deer.

The average mule deer weighed 90 pounds when it was field dressed and produced an estimated 45 pounds of boneless meat.

White-tailed bucks averaged 78.5 pounds field dressed and produced approximately 39 pounds of boneless meat, and white-tailed does averaged 56.6 pounds field dressed and produced about 28 pounds of boneless meat.

Based on the price of ground chuck beef ($1.20 per pound) at the time of the hunting season, the mule deer meat was worth $554,040 and the white-tailed deer meat was worth $16,013,738.

The department estimates there were 50,000 bow hunters and 560,000 firearms hunters during the last deer season. The estimated mule and white-tailed deer population during the hunt was 3,622,000.

gown accented with a Venise lace bodice. The long full sleeves were accented with lace cuffs. The flowing skirt of organza was over satin. A lace headpiece held the veil of illusion banded with lace which extended into a chapel train.

For the traditional something old, the bride chose a wedding band that belonged to her great-grandmother, something new was her wedding gown, she borrowed a necklace from her roommate and added a blue garter.

Speed, Drinking Contribute To Most Fatal Accidents

Colonel Wilson E. Spier, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, today estimated that traffic accidents during the 102-hour July 4th holiday weekend would claim 42 lives in Texas.

Spier, who did not make an estimate for the Christmas-New Year period because of rapidly changing conditions brought on by the energy crisis, said the traffic situation has become more stable in recent months. He noted that gasoline is readily available in most sections of the state, and pointed out that this would probably bring additional traffic to the highways during the approaching holiday.

The July 4th holiday last year, which was only 30 hours in length, resulted in 13 traffic deaths in Texas. The 1972 holiday, which was 102-hours long—the same as the upcoming period—was marred by 80 deaths.

FARM INCOME PREDICTED TO LEVEL OFF AT "GOOD HIGH LEVEL"

Lubbock, June 23—U. S. farm income will level off "at a good high level," an International Harvester Company executive predicted here tonight.

Crop prices should remain strong "at a slightly lower level" that will benefit livestock feeders "who are having a rough time right now," J. P. (Pat) Kaine, president of IH's Agricultural Industrial Equipment Division, told 400 IH dealers and customers at a meeting at Lubbock Country Club.

"We see a continuing and increasing demand for U. S. meat both here and abroad," Kaine said, as he expressed optimism about the future of U. S. agricultural economy because of population growth, especially overseas where millions of new customers will have increased purchasing power.

International Harvester plants are working round the clock to meet the greatest demand for farm machinery since the end of World War II, the IH official said.

This year, he said, IH is producing 15 to 20 percent more finished machines and 50 percent more service parts than last year, but is still faced with "serious shortages" of both.

To help alleviate the situation, Kaine said, his company has recalled IH people from retirement to expedite parts from suppliers, is buying components all over the world at premium prices to keep assembly lines going, is restricting exports to only 1.8 percent of total production, and is increasing capital expenditures for expanded production. He cited a $14 million investment, announced just a week before, which would increase

The DPS director pointed out that excessive speed and drinking drivers would make the largest contribution to the fatal accident toll, and he warned that all available DPS troopers and department facilities will be utilized to watch for unsafe and reckless motorists.

"We urge every Texas driver to join with us in this all-out effort to make the July 4th holiday period as safe as possible," he added.

Farmall tractor production by one-third.

The U. S. will export 20 billion worth of agricultural products this year, nearly 20% of the nation's total exports, Kaine said, and "that's going to buy us a lot of petroleum and other products we must import to sustain our high standard of living."

Commenting on foreign tractors being sold in the U. S., Kaine said his company has never sought import restrictions as protection against foreign competition.

"If we can't build a better machine and provide better service to the U. S. farmer than they can, we don't deserve your business," he declared.

Despite the fact that Americans spend a smaller proportion of their income on food than any other people in the world, Kaine pointed out, "there is a furor over increases in food prices."

He said price controls on food would be "ill advised" and would "discriminate against the producers of vital food and fibers who have not shared fully in the economic advances of other segments of the economy."

The IH executive criticized "self appointed defenders of the public good who seek to manipulate our business and personal lives," and "articulate headline grabbers" who seek to destroy American business.

Citing the vital importance of agriculture and agri-business, Kaine said "no single industry has made a more significant contribution to the socio-economic well-being of civilization."

The American farmer, he added, provides food and fiber that are "the basic needs which must be filled if civilization is to advance. There can be no lasting peace in the world if the hungry remain unfed. A world society of haves and have-nots is unacceptable and immoral."

Rare Folsom Site Being Excavated In Briscoe County

Briscoe County, which already has provided one important Early Man archeological site this year, is now yielding another which boasts evidence of the Folsom culture dating from 8,000 to 10,000 years ago.

Excavations which have begun at the site three miles north of Quitaque in the vicinity of Lake Theo mark the second time archeologists have been called to Briscoe within the past year. Earlier excavations near the Mackenzie Dam resulted in fossil bison bones and a unique type of spear point previously unidentified.

The latest site has yielded bison bones and to date, only fragments of the unique Folsom spear point although archeologists are hopeful that complete specimens may be found. Five of the fragments were found on the surface of the site and another was found embedded in the bones soon after excavations began. The find is considered significant, according to Billy Harrison, who is in charge of field work, because little is known of the Folsom culture except that the people were big game hunters.

Harrison, curator of anthropology at Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum at Canyon, says most of the excavations from that period have been at kill sites, locations where the now-extinct animals were killed and butchered.

MAY BE CAMPSITE
The Briscoe site may have been a campsite, also, says Harrison, who adds that the Indians apparently killed the bison and brought the carcasses across the creek to their present position. Charred bones lead to the conclusion that they had cooked the meat there. Bones which have been found also are fragmented and in piles.

ter Family Reunion at Morton at the time. Mr. and Mrs. Smith drove on to Amarillo as soon as they were notified.

Folsom Man hunted bison similar to those killed by Plainview Man and the time periods of the two cultures are thought by many scientists to be generally the same. Chief difference is in the type of spear points used by the two cultures. Folsom points, so called because they were first found in connection with fossil bones near Folsom, New Mexico, are considered outstanding due to the technology employed in their manufacture.

BEAUTIFUL POINTS
According to Harrison, the point "probably is the most beautiful point that was ever made by any aboriginal people in the United States." It has unusually fine longitudinal flaking on the sides and a distinctive flute, or channel flake, removed along the center of the point, often for its entire length. It is believed this "flute" facilitated hafting of the point to the shaft of the weapon.

Mrs. C. L. McWilliams of Silverton, noted amateur archeologist and probably the best known collector of Indian artifacts in the Briscoe County area, is credited with first reporting the site to archeologists. She has hunted the site for several years and had found Folsom points there in the past. The current project is the first time excavations have been carried on at the site, however.

The bison hunted by Folsom Man weighed an average of 3,000 pounds each, according to Harrison.

The excavation began about two weeks ago and will continue until September and is being funded by the Texas Historical Commission.
