

Many Irrigated Pastures Being Planted In Blackwater Valley Area

The possibility of using irrigated pastures as an economical source of succulent green feed is receiving considerable thought and attention. It has been proven that satisfactory pasture grasses can be grown here successfully. None have been established long enough as yet, however, to supply adequate data on the length of the life of the stand, frequency and cost of irrigation or yield as compared to other crops.

The following farmers, cooperating with the Blackwater Valley Soil Conservation District, have planned to establish from 2 to 40 acres each of a grass-legume mixture this season: Paul Lowe, 10; Edwin Williams, 40; E. L. Smith, 4; O. C. Thompson, 17; Virgil Nowell, 5; G. T. Malby, 11; Troy Actinison, 2 1/2; E. P. Burismit, 10; A. W. Copley, 5; I. W. Stinson, 3 1/2; E. R. Parker, 10; Guy Carpenter, 4; W. C. Thomas, 10; R. L. Dillard, 3; Eddie Ramm, 16; M. C. Mason, 16; W. B. McAdams, 3; Walter Ramm, 5; Wiley Baker, 9; Ray Black, 10; and John Williams, 4.

Value of a fertile, well managed grass-legume pasture under irrigation:

1. Provides a livestock ration adequate in proteins, minerals, vitamins and other essential feed elements.
2. Makes possible the production of more and better livestock.
3. Can be grown successfully on soils and sites unsuited to most other crops.
4. Can be made to fit into any planned crop rotation.
5. Under good management a mixed pasture stand remains productive much longer than alfalfa.
6. On areas where production of other crops would be limited by soil erosion, or poor soil, it is profitable to be grazed on it, can be fitted into a crop rotation.
7. The livestock carrying capacity can usually be increased.
8. Such a pasture, and livestock be grazed on it, can be fitted into most farm programs.

9. Prevents erosion on sloping lands, and the dense root systems improve the structure of the soil and increases its capacity to absorb water.
10. A vigorous stand of pasture plants competes successfully with most perennial weeds.
11. Contributes organic matter to the soil and nitrogen when a legume is used.
12. Maintaining a balance of grasses and legumes leads to high sustained production of crops grown after the pasture stand is plowed under.

Establishing An Irrigated Pasture
A firm moist and weed free seed-bed (same as alfalfa) is necessary for successful establishment of small-seeded pasture grasses and legumes. Careful preparation of the land, both for seeding and irrigation, will be paid for with a uniform stand and less costly irrigations later.

It is generally believed, from observation studies of mixed grass-legume pastures in this and neighboring areas, that the most satisfactory mixture and rate of seeding are:
Alfalfa, 3 pounds.
Brome (Smooth Southern Grown), 9 pounds.
Crested Wheat or Perennial Rye, 8 pounds.
The time of seeding this mixture should be the same as for alfalfa.

NURSE TRAINING IN TEXAS FACES CRISIS

A crisis exists in the nurse training program, according to a letter to this newspaper from the Texas League of Nursing Education. Student nurse enrollment, the League says, dropped to 1,137 during 1945 and now has declined to the "pitiful figure of 300 for this year." The League feels that a great

Parts Of Iowa Are Rather Dry

The Journal has received a letter from Mr. and Mrs. Levi Jensma, Newton, Iowa, which we print below:

Dear Editor:
Enclosed you will find $2.00 for which please send me The Muleshoe Journal for another year.
We have had plenty of rain this year. Corn looks fine, small grain is not so good. Soy beans look good. Pasture has been and is good. Garden stuff is good. Some parts of Iowa are rather dry. Wish you could see our tomatoes in our garden, for size and quality, also quantity. Have vines staked, they are 5 feet tall.
Respectfully yours,
Mr. and Mrs. Levi Jensma,

Bird Hunting Rules Outlined

Reductions in the hunting season from 80 to 45 days, in the daily bag limit from 10 to 7 and possession limit from 20 to 14, and in shooting hours, featured the announcement of the new regulations which will govern this season's shooting and hunting of migratory birds.

Adopted by Interior Department Secretary Krug in accordance with an act of Congress making effective treaties relating to birds migrating between the U. S., Canada and Mexico, the amended regulations were approved by President Truman. They were recommended by the Fish and Wildlife Service after biological investigations, census figures and consultations with State game administrators.

Populations of wild ducks have declined within the past two years from a peak of an estimated 125 million in 1944 to 80 million. The 36 per cent decrease in populations, as a result of drought in the nesting areas coupled with a 50 per cent increase in the number of hunters from 1944 to 1946 would have invited disaster to breeding stocks without new regulations.

For the hunters in this area (southern zone) the new regulations call for waterfowl hunting from November 23 to January 4. The daily bag limit of wild ducks is 7 each day and only two days bag or 14 ducks may be possessed at any one time. For geese the daily bag and possession limit allows for two of any species or combination of species.

Mourning or Turtle Dove, White-winged Dove and Band-tailed Pigeon bag limits call for 10 a day. Open season on these birds varies by counties throughout the State of Texas.

Daily shooting hours for ducks, geese and coots will run from one-half hour before sunrise to one-half hour before sunset.

Waterfowl hunting methods and rules remain substantially the same. No. 10 gauge is the largest shotgun which may be used, all automatic or hand repeating shotguns must have the magazine cut off or plugged to limit the capacity to 3 shells (including the shell in the magazine). Use of live decoys, rifles, pursuing with automobiles, aircraft livestock, powered boats or by baiting a shooting ground are all prohibited. Hunters over 16 years of age must carry a "duck stamp" obtained at the post office.

to carry on its programs in research, education and emergency epidemic aid, and $7,797,554.86 by chapters for care and treatment of patients, making a total of $15,982,150.66. Basil O'Connor, President of the National Foundation announced today.

"The American people," Mr. O'Connor declared, "may well take satisfaction in the knowledge that their generosity will help save lives, alleviate pain and bring hope to thousands, mostly young children, who have been or will be stricken by this dread disease, which seldom kills but frequently cripples for life."

NO PRAIRIE CHICKEN SEASON

There will be no open season on prairie chickens in Texas this year. The announcement comes from the Game, Fish and Oyster Commission, and denies the restriction will be lifted, as rumored. The 47th Legislature made it unlawful to hunt prairie chickens until September 1, 1946, and repealed all laws pertaining thereto. Hence, the commission said, the prairie chicken on September 1 passes into the category of a game bird on which no open season is provided.

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Watkins and children and E. C. Brown re-

He said the plant had turned to packing black-eye peas. Recent rains in the territory probably will greatly increase the supply of black eye peas for the local company.

Just Between Us Girls

Fall seems to be just around the corner. It's the time of the year when you wonder what to wear and what to do with your hair. You deck out in a suit and felt hat and you're sure to roast and if you put on a summer dress and hat you feel like something the cats hauled in. Your hair is too long and the permanent is most gone and the question is whether to leave it long or short. Well-it seems that the new hair styles are neither long nor short but just a clever compromise between the two.

Here's a clever idea for novel chairs or love seats: Take the front seat of an automobile, which you can probably find at some auto junk yard for practically nothing and make gay slip covers for it. If you prefer, get two and make love seats and place in front of your fireplace. They make attractive pieces of furniture and comfortable chairs. When the seats are divided you can make lovely bedroom chairs out of them. Slip cover them to match your draperies or to go in harmony with other things in the rooms you use them in.

Mrs. J. A. Brown, of Fort Worth, is here visiting with her father, W. L. Jackson, and family.

Mrs. Jenkins Will Be "Miss Muleshoe"

Mrs. Jean Jenkins, wife of Pete Jenkins, has been selected to be Miss Muleshoe at the Littlefield Rodeo, members of the Lions Club were told at their luncheon Wednesday by Homer Sanders, Jr. of the selection committee. Sanders said selection was limited by the fact an entrant was expected to ride her own horse. A public contest had been tentatively planned. Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins will attend the rodeo and any expense will be paid by the Lions, who sponsored the idea.

Rufus Gilbreath described the recent tour of his family by auto, to which a one-wheel trailer was attached. They enjoyed the scenery north from San Diego to British Columbia and back through the northwest, but the trailer

Trip For Football Squad Is Planned

A fund members of the Lions club raised to send the Muleshoe football squad on a summer trip has been left for disposal to the committee in charge of raising it. Lion Bill Moore suggested the money ought to be used to give the boys a trip, banquet or other entertainment at the end of the season, "win, lose or draw," and this seemed to suit club members. The squad was unable to go on their planned trip because no suitable place could be found.

His name is familiar to thousands of natives in India as the one man who can bring relief from the great fear inspired by a man-eating tiger. Whole villages have been known to stay indoors as long as five days—waiting only for him to come and kill a man-eater in the vicinity. His first tiger slaughterer 124 natives before he heard of her. Another so terrorized a work camp of several thousand men that labor was at a standstill. District officers—faced with the utter disorganization of rural life that attends the presence of a man-eater—turn to him for help.

He is Jim Corbett, whose book, "Man-Eaters of Kismoo," is a current Book-of-the-Month Club selection. Born in Naini Tal, United Provinces, in 1875, Corbett belongs to one of those English families who settled in India generations ago. By the time he reached his teens, he was a first-rate shot, thoroughly acquainted with jungle wild life, and could imitate animal and bird calls like a native. His boyhood ambition was to become an engineer, but family finances made college an impossibility. His father had died when he was four, and he went to work, after a primary education at the schools of Naini Tal at fifteen. By the time he was eighteen he had the job he was to hold for the next twenty years—with a railway company in Benal.

Corbett killed his first man-eater in 1907. But it wasn't until 1924, when his mother's death lifted some of his financial responsibilities, that he could devote real time to this job. In 1929 he was presented with a 16 mm. movie camera, and since then has become an expert in the difficult art of photographing tigers in their native haunts.

Corbett is death to man-eaters, but he has a real affection for tigers. Human beings are not their natural prey, he feels, and they will never stalk a man unless incited by old age or wounds. He also points out that unless molested they will never harm a man. He has never seen a tiger kill, with-out provocation, more than it needs to satisfy its hunger or the hunger of its cubs.

Howdy, folks: Auto accidents are on the increase. Almost daily we read of tragic cases on the highway.

Such accounts of suffering dampen our ardor as far as writing humor is concerned.

Many drivers are in such a hurry to get into the next county, they keep right on going into the next world.

Too many drivers try to horn in.

Reckless drivers are seldom wreckless long.

Just remember, folks, its better to be a small pebble on the beach than a large tomb stone.

We'd like to have you remember us next time you need any electrical appliances.

Drive down (safely) and see us, won't you?

Cotton Reached 40 Cents Pound After Two Wars

Since farmers are hoping to get 40 cents a pound for cotton this fall, it might be well to peruse a sheet handed the editor by Mr. H. E. Wood of Muleshoe, said sheet gotten out by the Ennis Tag Co. and showing high and low prices in New York for every year since 1828.

Low that year was 9. high 13 cents a pound, and only 680,000 bales were raised in the whole U. S.

In 1828 cotton slipped up to a high of 20 cents, and gradually slipped back to a low in 1843, 44. In the war between the states, cotton production slipped from a high of 4,491,000 in 1861 to a low of only 229,000 bales in 1864. The very next year after the war closed 2,994,000 were produced. During the conflict cotton was quoted at $1.90 a pound in New York and continued high until 1865 when a low of 8.81 was reached. In 1895 another 5 cent low was hit and cotton slowly recovered, with a high of 17.25 being offered in 1903.

Prices gradually rose from that time to World War I. In the 1919-20 period a high of 43.75 was reached for spot cotton. Another low
