

Two convicted of drug usage, distribution

Two Reese airmen were sentenced to confinement at hard labor after being convicted in general court-martial proceedings here last week.

A1C Michael J. Strong and A1C Kevin D. Ostrom were assigned to the 64th Organizational Maintenance Squadron when they were convicted in the Reese Federal Court Room of using and distributing drugs.

In United States vs. Strong, which concluded Aug. 20, Strong was found guilty of using marijuana, using cocaine, and distributing cocaine and amphetamines. He was sentenced to two years confinement at hard labor, reduction from E-3 to E-1 with total forfeiture of pay and will receive a dishonorable discharge.

In United States vs. Ostrom, which concluded Aug. 22, Ostrom was found guilty of 12 different drug specifications, including distribution of marijuana, cocaine and amphetamines. He was sentenced to five years confinement at hard labor, reduction from E-3 to E-1 with total pay forfeitures and will receive a Bad Conduct Discharge.

Both had previously received non-judicial punishment under Article 15 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice for the wrongful use of marijuana. The uses were discovered through the Drug Urinalysis Testing Program.

Drug use is not compatible with service in the United States Air Force and officials in the Staff Judge Advocate's office say that users will be prosecuted to the fullest extent possible.

"If you believe you are too smart to get caught, there are two former OMS troops who would beg to differ," said Maj. Robert Schwartz, staff judge advocate. "You should learn the hard lessons that Airmen Strong and Ostrom should have learned."

"It just isn't worth it," he said.

Some local clearances to be down-graded

Some local civilian and military employees will find their security clearances downgraded under a program recently announced by the secretary of defense.

"The civilian regrading actions will be the first to take place," said Lt. Col. Michael Vizzone, director of personnel. "Similar regrading actions will be applied to military personnel upon identification of access requirements of the position to which the individual is assigned."

According to Capt. Jerry Sehon, commander of the 64th Security Police Squadron, the organization charged with accomplishing the changes. "This is strictly an administrative policy change to reduce the number of clearances in effect by relating each clearance to the access requirements of the position to which an individual is assigned. We will visit all unit security managers and screen their civilian positions. The net result will be that if an employee has too high a security clearance under the secretary of defense's guidelines, the clearance will be downgraded."

Colonel Vizzone emphasized that this action is "an administrative not an adverse action. These actions do not reflect on the trustworthiness of the individuals affected by clearance regrading actions nor do they impact on the individual's future eligibility for a clearance when required by the position for which they are being considered, or to which they have been selected. The clearance can be restored through a simple administrative process should an employee's position sensitivity change or the employee be selected for another job requiring a higher clearance."

Air Force needs more second-term re-trainees

The Air Force has entered the second phase of its revamped

Airman Retraining Program still needing nearly 1,300 people, sergeants through master sergeants, to retrain into any one of 25 different career fields.

Air Force officials said they need about 400 five-level (E-4s and E-5s) and 875 seven-level (E-6s and E-7s) retrainees. Officials have identified 37 Air Force specialty codes that career and second-term airmen can now retrain out of.

Volunteers for retraining will be eligible for a base of choice reassignment officials said. However, assignments are not guaranteed.

"The primary reason for retraining is to balance the career field," said CMSgt. Robert E. Unger, enlisted skills resource manager.

Some AFSCS have too many people at a certain skill level, others have too few, Chief Unger explained.

The revamped program started April 15 and merged the Air Force's various career and second-term Airman Retraining Programs into a single program. That revamped program has already accounted for more than 1,000 approved retraining requests, according to officials.

"We were extremely pleased with the results of Phase One," Chief Unger said.

During Phase One, officials identified about 17,000 people in certain AFSCS and invited them to apply for retraining, into any one of 36 specialties.

Phase Two began in August. Officials again sent letters to career and second-term airmen inviting them to retrain. They contacted fewer people than in phase one.

"We only sent letters this time to about three times as many people as we needed to retrain," Chief Unger explained.

If necessary, Phase Three would involuntarily retrain people into shortage specialties. Chief Unger said officials would use involuntary retraining "only as a last resort." Air Force officials will decide whether or not involuntary retraining is necessary in late September.

People receiving letters inviting them to retrain during Phase Two were also told how vulnerable they were for involuntary retraining. Officials told them how many retrainees were needed out of their AFSC and where they ranked within their AFSC for involuntary retraining—for instance 3 of 27.

As I see it

Col. James McIntyre

A couple of special kudos are in order—again.

First, join me in congratulating one of our finest...SMSgt. Clyde Herring, from the T-37 maintenance branch office in OMS, who has just been selected by our headquarters to be Air Training Command's nominee in Air Force wide competition for the General Lew Allen, Jr. Trophy. Drop by and pat him on the back.

FLASH! I just received another great report on our folks in the services squadron. They have been selected as the ATC Outstanding Services Unit for 1985! On top of that, they are in contention for best in the Air Force. Congratulations to Capt. Bob Rush and all of the justifiably proud members of the services squadron, and good luck in the Air Force competition!

All of Reese shined this past Sunday with the biggest and best-run Open House I have ever seen. Nearly 100,000 visitors told us so too, by coming out for the show. Everyone was a winner—the Air Force, all the MAJCOM's and especially the "first command." Key Reese supporters like Congressman Larry Combest and Lubbock Mayor Allen Henry couldn't say enough about what they saw here during the day. Reese wins again. But most important, I was proud to see so many of our own, with their families in tow, enjoying the Golden Knights, Confederate Air Force, and of course the USAF Thunderbird team flying their F-16s. It was simply a fantastic day.

There are far too many to thank in this column. However, a very special thanks to Capt. Terry McCarthy, 54th FTS P-Qual, who was our chief organizer, along with his cast of spirited committee chairmen who planned for months to make this all happen. A special thanks too to the hundreds of you who put the plan into action and made it work: the OMS guys for clearing the ramp, the Comm folks for setting up extensive audio systems, the MWR community and CE guys for the new refreshment stands, portable latrines, ect..., and for the massive cleanup effort. Some interesting sidelights:

- Lt. Col. Larry Stellman, Thunderbird lead, told me he had never been in a better-run affair. Hope to see them back next year!

- The Confederate Air Force wanted me to pass on their thanks for the funds you donated from organizational booth profits that helped defray their gas bill. That was Reese hospitality at its best. Thanks to "Hutch."

- I was proud to see that four of the pilots on the Thunderbird team got their start, like so many of our folks, as FAIPS training the Air Force's future pilot force.

- And my only disappointment was not getting a snapshot taken atop Buford T. Light II, Mr. Jim Shoulder's famous Brahma bull. Sorry Jack Hood, occasionally I'll break a promise like that.

Career Day activities including the MAJCOM briefings, were also extremely successful—thanks to Capt. Charley Adams. A number of thank-yous have streamed in to him from the aircrews and briefing teams. I also appreciated seeing the super support from the wives for ATC's special briefing.

Last Friday's "Assignment Release" for Class 85-08 made me thankful for my reserved parking place...these affairs obviously generate interest. This was my first exposure as Wing Commander," and Lt. Col. John Lattig's Student Squadron guys get an A+. Lt. Watas told me it was his first time too as the Master of Ceremonies. Great job Bob—it was a big night for our soon-to-be newest Air Force pilots who graduate Sept. 20.

I thought you ought to know that the U.S. Navy may be changing their "winging ceremonies" after Reese "Showed the Way." Admiral Wesley McDonald, guest speaker for the graduation of our UPT Class 85-07 Aug. 9, was so impressed with the graduation ceremony that he has directed his folks to look into the way we do it. If you haven't seen one of our graduations, let me tell you that they are spectacular—a fitting end to a year of hard work. The folks in the student squadron have done it again!

MODEL INSTALLATION PROGRAM! I will plug this every chance I get. It was a real pleasure to pass out MIP certificates during a special ceremony Monday morning at the officers' club to all the Reese men and women who have contributed to the success of our MIP program with their 100-plus approved initiatives in the first six months of 1985. One of the more notable MIP's submitted by Lt. Col. Joe Trujillo, saved $26,000 tangible savings and $36,000 intangible savings every year in the ACE base operation. Congratulations to him, and to all of you. Let's all continue to think creatively, beyond the limits of the "accepted" routine way of doing business. I want to press the system whenever we think there is a smarter, more effective way of getting the job done.

This coming week I'll be off to Randolph to complete my initial T-38 checkout. "As I See It" is very important to do timely, so I will report from there next week, if anything newsworthy comes up.

A1C Bradley P. Bauserman
Public Affairs Office
Ellsworth AFB, S.D.

There I was, at home for the first time since being stationed at Ellsworth. As I sat in the living room, I talked with my folks about my experiences in the Air Force. They were very surprised by what I told them.

After that conversation, and others like it with friends, I realized that many civilians know very little about the Air Force, and what they know isn't always accurate.

For example, at one of my old stomping grounds, I saw a college buddy. As he recognized me, a radiant smile covered his face. "So how's the Army?" he asked. I reminded him that I joined the Air Force. He immediately asked if I flew, which I don't. He gave me a "doesn't everybody in the Air Force fly?" look.

I don't think it's disinterest that's responsible for the lack of knowledge about the Air Force; most people seem to be rather interested in this new way of life.

For some, the only source of knowledge about military life is television. Now that I'm in the Air Force I notice inaccuracies on television, and am sometimes annoyed because of their effect on public opinion.

Perhaps the media were responsible for my friends' reactions when I told them of the many Air Force programs to conserve resources. They had heard of the overpriced coffee pots and hammers, but not the Fraud, Waste and Abuse Program. I reminded them that Air Force members are taxpayers too, and are also interested in where the money goes.

When I told them about the many intelligent people I'd met since being in the Air Force, they seemed a bit envious and surprised. Not everybody in fatigues is a Gomer Pyle type.

No, the Air Force isn't perfect, but there are many good things about it that civilians will never hear unless they're told. I don't consider myself a super "gung ho" troop, but isn't it only fair to mention the good as well as the bad? (AFNS—courtesy Ellsworth AFB, Plainsman)

101 critical days to end

By Henry A. Ussery
Safety and Occupational Health Specialist

The forthcoming Labor Day weekend marks the end of another high hazard 101 Critical Days of Summer. Highways and recreational areas are expected to be crowded to capacity with people who are determined to get away from it all and have that last fling. Historically, traffic and recreational mishaps increase drastically during any holiday period and Labor Day is no exception.

Currently, Air Training Command's fatal ground accident experience this year is the lowest in history and we have not experienced a Labor Day fatality since 1981.

We're convinced that luck is not a major player in achieving this record. To bring this closer to home, Reese motorists will be driving in dangerous traffic environments whether they leave the Lubbock area or not. Some of our Lubbock intersections have taken the lives of several innocent vehicle operators.

For example, the corner of 4th Street and Frankford Avenue has been the scene of numerous traffic accidents. The area where 19th Street joins Loop 289 has a high likelihood of posing a similar hazard considering the number of convenience outlets and other businesses that have sprung up there recently.

These are just a few of the high hazard areas in the immediate vicinity. Similar conditions exist in every city and town in the country.

You can help cut the holiday death toll by meeting the added danger with extra care.

Leave early. Give yourself plenty of time. Don't rush!

Stay alert. Most accidents happen on familiar routes. Don't relax at the wheel when in your own neighborhood.

Buckle up. This can't be over-stressed. Seat belts do save lives.

Be smart! Don't let intoxication—either the alcoholic or the fun kind—lead to chance-taking.

These few, simple precautions, combined with a good dose of common sense, should ensure that everyone returns to work Tuesday just as healthy as when the weekend began.

Higher checks accepted

DALLAS—Maj. Gen. John E. Long, commander, Army and Air Force Exchange Service, has announced a change in the dollar amount a check may be written over the total purchase, at cash registers.

The new policy, effective immediately, affects only checks cashed at the point of sale, i.e., the cash register in facilities where AAFES accepts checks.

General Long explained, "We have decided to increase the amount from $10 to $20 over the amount of purchase. Customers will no longer be inconvenienced to stand in a line at check cashing windows and again at the register when they want a few dollars cash to spare at the check-out."

The new policy will allow customers to make any purchase and still write a check for $20 above the total purchase amount. This doubles the previous limitation. The change, however, does not affect the $100 daily limit for writing personal checks at AAFES check cashing windows.

The increase to $20 is in response to customer requests and remains a free service provided by AAFES.

Family Services names special member

All things come to him who works.

Maybe even some recognition.

Just ask MSgt. Michael Janosick of 64th FMS. After donating more than 250 hours of his time to Reese Family Services, he has been recognized as Honorary Volunteer of the Month for July.

Family Services, a volunteer organization run by military wives, serves the Reese community by loaning out brochures on other bases and essentials such as car seats.

"It was a total surprise," said MSgt. Janosick of the award. "It's nice when someone says, 'Thank you.'" The award, an engraved coffee mug, was presented at the organization's monthly meeting Aug. 7.

MSgt. Janosick's volunteer work has included refinishing cabinets and tabletops, building bulletin boards, hauling away worn items and framing a map. However, he refuses to boast about his efforts. "What you do is what you get out of it—it's a worthy cause and that's why I do it...I don't do it all so that people will talk about it; I do it because it needs to be done."

He says he and his wife Barbara, Family Services Coordinator, are a team; that's why he started helping out when she became a Family Services volunteer at Tyndall AFB in 1970. Mrs. Janosick estimates that he's put in over 1,000 hours since then.

MSgt. Janosick plans to stay active as an unofficial volunteer as long as he's needed. "As long as I'm here I'll support it any way I can."

MSgt. Michael Janosick replaces the handle on a cupboard after painting the door.

BOP change affects first-termers

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS)—First-term airmen will have to be on station two years to qualify for a base-of-preference assignment under a change to the BOP Program.

Air Force will increase time-on-station requirement from 12 to 24 months Oct. 1 for airmen applying for a BOP in conjunction with career job reservations.

First-term airmen also will be required to have 17 months base residency when applying for the BOP assignment.

Air Force Manpower and Personnel Center officials here said a Defense Department study showed the changes could cut in half the $13 million first-term BOP budget and improve personnel stability.

Air Force regulation 39-11, Airman Assignments, will include the changes later this year.

Officials said the changes do not affect the 12-month time-on-station requirement for first-termers requesting a BOP in conjunction with retraining under the Career Airman Re-enlistment Reservation System.

The changes also do not affect the career airman Base-of-Preference program that allows airmen to apply for a BOP after three years and five months on station.

DoD weighs cost of terrorism

Every 17 days, terrorists strike against U.S. government officials and installations abroad. During the past 15 years, terrorists have killed or maimed 1,000 U.S. military personnel, public servants, businessmen, educators and the clergy.

Each year, the statistics get increasingly grim and the terrorist incidents become increasingly lethal.

Fred C. Ikle, under secretary of defense for policy, recently told Congress the threat of terrorism comes principally from two distinct ideologies: communism and Iranian Islamic fundamentalism. Both use terrorism as a form of warfare with knowledge that democracies, their main enemies, are especially vulnerable.

The cost of terrorism goes far beyond the carnage and destruction caused by individual incidents, Ikle explained.

"When the United States is the target of such actions, the cost of terrorism must be measured not only in loss of American life or damage to U.S. installations and property but in less tangible, though no less meaningful, terms—loss of American credibility and a diminished capacity of the United States to influence international events.

Ikle said each terrorist attack—each bombing, each assassination, each incident that brings international humiliation to Free World institutions—undermines public confidence in the established government and erodes national resolve and faith in its leadership.

He said the Defense Department is responding to the terrorist threat with two forms of positive action:

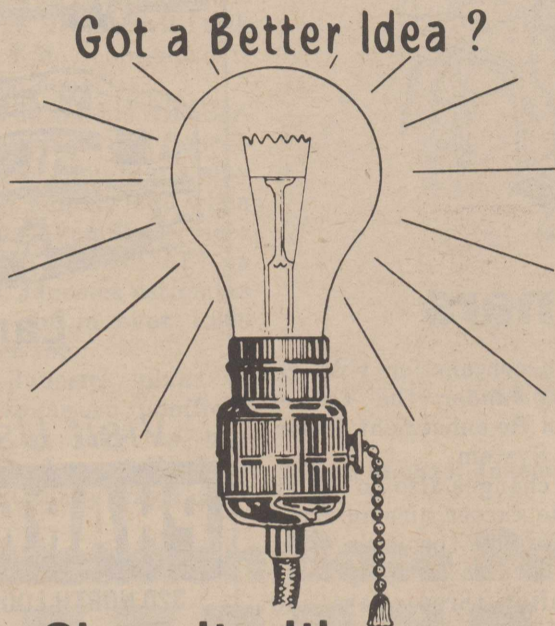

- Anti-terrorism—actions that reduce the vulnerability of people and facilities, such as barriers, gates, armed guards and travel and visa controls; and
- Counterterrorism—actions in response to terrorist acts, which include collecting intelligence about terrorist organizations and their training facilities, and apprehension of those caught preparing a terrorist attack.

"Terrorism is at bottom a form of warfare, and it is directed at the United States and its friends," Ikle said. "It is unprecedented to argue that we should not defend ourselves against these kinds of hostility, or to help others do so on the specious premise that to do so is to violate the sovereignty of that nation from which the hostile action emanates.

"Sending a terrorist team across a border to attack one's neighbors is not different in principle from sending an army. To suppose otherwise is to encourage terrorism. That would be to assume a grave responsibility indeed."

New leave procedures benefit members TDY

New procedures for charging leave will go into effect Sept. 1, giving a break to members who take leave in conjunction with a temporary duty assignment.

Air Force Accounting and Finance Center officials here said members who take leave before going TDY will no longer be charged leave the day they depart if they work at least three-fourths of the regular duty day at their permanent duty station.

Currently members are charged leave even if they work the entire day. Officials said the new procedures are more in line with regular leave procedures.

Members will have to provide additional information on travel vouchers under the new program. Details are available from the Accounting and Finance Office.

AFAFC Officials originally announced the new leave charging procedures would become effective April 15. However, the program was delayed until September, they said. (AFNS)

Smokers warned again . . . and again

By Alice Boyd
American Forces
Information Services

You've just dropped your last bit of change into the cigarette machine and selected your favorite brand. After waiting a second or so, the package slides into the tray below. You pick it up, and there's "that message" staring at you again... "Warning: The Surgeon General has determined that cigarette smoking is dangerous to your health."

You ignore it. You've read it dozens of times before. So what! You're gonna smoke until, you die anyway. Right?

That's probably true, but while you're at it, the Surgeon General wants you to think about the risks you're taking.

So, beginning this October, cigarette packs will carry one of four new warnings. The warnings will be alternated every three months, as provided by the Comprehensive Smoking Education act passed in 1984.

They are:

1. Surgeon General's Warning: Smoking causes lung cancer, heart disease, emphysema, and may complicate pregnancy.

2. Surgeon General's Warning: Quitting smoking now greatly reduces serious risks to your health.

3. Surgeon General's Warning: Smoking by pregnant women may result in fetal injury, premature birth, and low birth weight.

4. Surgeon General's Warning: Cigarette smoke contains carbon monoxide.

If the warnings are not enough to make you quit, you can get additional information on smoking and your health by contacting: Department of Health and Human Services, Public Health Service, Office on Smoking and Health, Park Building 1-10, Rockville, Md. 20857. The telephone number is (301) 443-1690.

Phony doctor indicted because of claims

WASHINGTON (AFNS)—A grand jury has indicted a New Jersey man for impersonating a psychologist and causing medical claims to be filed with the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

James Bethea Epstein, alias "Dr. Epstein," was charged with eight counts of theft by deception and perjury. According to Department of Defense Inspector General Joseph H. Sherick, Mr. Epstein misrepresented himself to clients as a practicing psychologist and psychotherapist.

An investigation into the claims against CHAMPUS showed Mr. Epstein had no formal education or training in psychology or psychotherapy, nor was he certified or licensed by any professional organization or state agency to practice in New Jersey.

The DoD official said Mr. Epstein could face the maximum penalty of up to five years in jail and a fine of $7,500 for each of the eight counts if found guilty. (AFNS)

Reese joins in Hispanic fiesta

By James Hernandez
Hispanic Employment Manager

President Reagan has designated the week of September 15-21 as National Hispanic Heritage Week.

Hispanic Heritage Week has been celebrated annually since 1968, as a result of Public Law 90-498 and a presidential proclamation.

The central theme for this year's observance is "A Salute to Youth"—Un Saludo a la Juventud. This theme is based on the United Nations' proclamation which established 1985 as International Youth Year.

Hispanics helped colonize this land and participated in the American Revolution. They fought on both sides in the Civil War and rode with Roosevelt's Rough Riders. They were in uniform during World War I and in World War II more than 250,000 joined the services. Hispanics served and died during Korea, and in Vietnam; the first pilot downed, and the longest confirmed POW in the nation's history, was Hispanic. Throughout our military history, Hispanics joined and fought and sacrificed for this country's national goals.

Capt. John Gonzalez, project officer, urges you to commence planning early to ensure that this year's commemorative events recognize the contributions and cultural heritage of our Hispanic employees, as well as the efforts of our young men and women in our Armed Forces, Stay-In-School appointees, and Summer Youth Programs.

Track meet

The 1985 Intramural Track and Field meet will be held at 5 p.m. Sept. 5 at the base track.

Individual awards will be given to the first, second and third place winners in each event. All entries must be submitted to the gym before 1 p.m. Thursday. For more information contact A1C Joel Greenfield at Ext. 3783.

Test time

Weighted Airmen Promotion System testing for the 86B5 airman promotion cycle will begin Oct. 1. Each person who is eligible for the cycle is responsible for making sure they study current study reference material. This can be done by personally checking AFP 39-8 and the index of ECI study reference material for the correct references.

Usually references for SKTs and PFEs cited in AFP 39-8 are available in each unit

WAP's libraries.

Each airman who wants promotion consideration must see that the testing requirements are met. This includes being scheduled during the testing cycle months of October and November. An individual who fails to appear for testing when scheduled is ineligible for promotion for that cycle unless the circumstances were beyond the individual's control.

Hail-Farewell

A Hail and Farewell Coffee will be held at the officers' club Ept. 5 at 10 a.m. for all officers' wives that are new to the base or leaving.

There is no charge, and reservations are not needed.

Speakers needed

Base senior non-commissioned officers are needed to participate in the NCO Preparatory Course graduation ceremonies as guest speakers. Senior NCOs who would like to take advantage of this opportunity should call TSgt. Diana Brzozowski-Reynoso at Ext. 3635, 3147 or come by the Professional military Education Center in Building 920.

Flea Market

The Enlisted Wives Club will sponsor a flea market Sept. 14 at the Mathis Recreation Center, and there is still some table space available, according to the club representative TSgt. Diana R. Brozowski-Reynoso.

"Don't wait!" she said. "Now is the perfect time to clean out storage areas, and make some money doing it." She added that this would even be a good time to "peddle your product."

The EWC will accept donations to be sold to help the organization continue to sponsor worthy causes. "Don't worry about any trouble, we'll come out and pick up any donated items," said Sergeant Brozowski-Reynoso.

Also, any organization is welcome to participate to help raise money for their worthy causes.

Call Mandy Boyle at 885-2161 or Linda Prince at 885-2257 to make reservations. "Don't put it off. Now is the time to act," said Sergeant Brozowski-Reynoso.

OWC meeting

The Hospital wives of the Officers Wives Club will host the organization's next meeting Sept. 12 at 6:30 p.m. in the officers' club.

The guest speaker's topic of discussion will be framing needlework. In addition, the meeting is sign-up night for special activities; some of which include bridge, Red Cross, tennis, Thrift Shop and Family Services.

The meal will feature chicken crepes.

Reservations must be made by Sept. 9 by calling 885-2175 or 794-7149. The cost is $5.

Space-walker to speak

One of the few people to ever take a walk in space will be the featured guest speaker at the Air Force Association's general meeting Thursday at the Officers' Open Mess.

Dr. F. Storey Musgrave, M.D., a NASA scientist-astronaut, will focus on his experiences during his two Space Shuttle Challenger flights.

Doctor Musgrave holds two bachelor degrees, two master degrees, and a doctorate in medicine. He was in an Air Force Post-Doctoral Fellow in 1965-66.

After he was accepted in the Astronaut program, he was assigned to Reese for Undergraduate Pilot Training in Class 69-06. At the graduation ceremony April 12, 1969, he was awarded the Air Training Command Commander's Cup and named the Outstanding Graduate.

Aerospace medicine physiology, temperature regulation, exercise physiology and clinical surgery are Doctor Musgrave's main fields. He has put that expertise to work in the design and development of the Sky Lab program, and most recently, in all shuttle extra-vehicular systems including space suits, life support systems, air locks, and manned maneuvering units.

He has been a crew member acting as a mission specialist on two of the challenger missions—the first in April 1983, and most recently the July 29 through Aug. 5 mission.

On both missions he conducted several medical experiments. Also he made a space walk to test a new suit he helped design.

Hot weather not over yet

By Lt. Col. Walter G. Reed
Chief, Aeromedical Services

Although Labor Day traditionally marks the end of summer, Reese can still expect some daytime temperatures exceeding 100F.

Temperatures at selected areas, such as the flightline and aircraft cockpits may reach up to 120F to 140F. It is important for everyone to be aware of the physiological impact of this heat and reasonable measures to prevent the consequences.

There are several different heat disorders. They include:

Heat Syncope

Heat Syncope occurs when a person becomes dizzy or suddenly tired while exercising in the heat. As soon as he is removed from the heat and lies down, he recovers. This is the most common in people who have lack of acclimatization. Treatment includes rest, cooling and extra fluids.

Heat Exhaustion

This may take longer to develop than heat syncope (up to several days). It results from loss of fluid that has not been replaced.

Most prone to this problem are those who have no facilities to cool down such as no available air conditioner at night. Essentially, the body's ability to cope with heat is exhausted.

Symptoms include thirst, fatigue, giddiness, elevation in the body temperature, confusion, and finally delirium.

These individuals are more prone to careless mistakes early on in the problem.

These individuals require medical care which includes cooling, replenishment of fluids and bed-rest. Prevention is a matter of insuring an adequate fluid intake to replace losses from sweating. These losses can be as high as six to eight quarts per day in men working in hot, dry conditions. Thirst is an inadequate guide.

On extremely hot days, there should be mandatory rest breaks that include the consumption of eight to twelve ounces of water. Lack of acclimatization again is a major risk factor. This includes everyone on the first several days of extremely hot weather.

Heat Stroke

This is a medical emergency where the individual may die if not rapidly treated. Heat stroke occurs when the body's ability to dissipate the heat is exceeded. The body behaves like an overheated engine that easily burns out.

Symptoms include faintness, dizziness, staggering, headaches and nausea. This can lead to mental confusion, lethargy or irrational agitation to final coma and convulsions.

The body's temperature shows a rapid rise with an initially rapid pulse. It might be noted that obesity increases heat storage. Residual effects include damage to the brain, spinal cord, kidneys, stomach and intestines. Muscle damage is also possible.

Rapid cooling is mandatory, but do not give anything by mouth if the individual is mentally depressed, as he may vomit and suck the vomitus into his lungs causing further problems.

Call for immediate medical care while removing the individual from the heat. Cool him with whatever is available—such as a garden hose, ice, swimming pool, ect...Do not delay. Time is of the essence.

Flight personnel should strive to adhere to guidelines that ensure optimal performance without jeopardizing individual health and flying safety. Disregarding them is unprofessional and hazardous. All flight personnel should give their bodies the same respect, consideration, and care that they give their aircraft.

It is strongly recommended that each individual consume at least eight to twelve ounces of water before and after each flight. An attempt to avoid caffeine containing fluids should be made, as caffeine leads to dehydration. Remember that high altitudes are dry and therefore dehydrating.

Flightline personnel should pace their work, becoming fully acclimatized before they go all out. Supervisors should ensure frequent breaks in a cool area. Large quantities of cool fluids should be easily available and their consumption should be encouraged.

These guidelines have been established to minimize the effects of the heat on the people here. Only their free acceptance on all levels can prevent tragic and unnecessary events.

Financial help available

By Capt. Aubrey Hendrix
Chief, Accounting and Finance

Personal finances can help maintain a career, or destroy it. It's the individual that makes the difference.

The Reese Personal Financial Management Program is there to help individuals in financial hot water, and those heading for bad times. It's for those wanting to make their pay checks go a little farther, too.

The voluntary money management program is designed to help people get on their financial feet and stay there. It is in no way a get rich quick program.

The program gets those involved information, education and counseling in money management. "It can also help people find solutions to money problems they may have now."

Program attendees get general money managing information through pamphlets on subjects ranging from check-book maintenance to budgeting and credit buying. In all ways to make an individual's money go further. They find out what the program is and can offer if they need it.

Each new arrival gets the program education during the accounting and finance im-processing period. By educating the supervisors, finance staffers are ensured that supervisors know of the program, what it's about, and how they can help those working for them.

Confidential counseling (one-on-one) is the largest part of the program. "It is totally confidential and it is free." The counselors can help a person with a big problem just as easy as an individual with a small one.

Reese's financial counselors help identify financial problems, develop budgets to fit the requestor's needs, and work out a financial plan to help a person to financial freedom. "Best of all, the counselor can help a person get over their financial worries."

Supervisors and managers should encourage those having financial problems to call the program manager at Ext. 3432.

Many base military and civilian employees were recognized Monday for their participation in the Model Installation Program when they were awarded certificates. The ceremony coincided with a visit from personnel from the Office of the Secretary of Defense who were here to see how the program was doing at Reese.
