Suspect arrested 2 hours following stabbing, robbery

A convenience store clerk was stabbed here Friday afternoon during a store robbery and Snyder police arrested a suspect in the case approximately two hours after the incident.

Mary Ann Harris, 44, was in serious but stable condition Saturday at St. Mary of the Plains Hospital. She suffered stab wounds to the chest and upper right arm during a struggle with a man who fled the store with some $200 in cash.

The incident occurred at 3:12 p.m. Friday at the Fina convenience store in the 1000 Block of 25th St.

Police took a 24-year-old Mexican citizen into custody for attempted capital murder two hours after the incident at the motel across the street from the store.

Jorge Serrato Solis was taken before County Judge Bobby Goodwin, who set his bond at $100,000.

Witnesses' statements led officers to Room No. 12 at the Travel Inn Motel, where a city policeman told the man's roommates to leave while he waited inside for the man to return.

Solis, reported to be from Mexico, was then arrested without resistance in the room at 5:42 p.m.

An officer said most or all of the money that was taken, about $200, was recovered.

Police were notified of the robbery by 31-year-old Debbie Ashley, who had come into the store as a customer and was also involved in the struggle with the suspect, suffering bruises but not requiring hospital attention.

1,100-plus spring expected at WTC

Another 1,100-plus enrollment for the spring term is expected at Western Texas College this year, college officials said Friday, with this year's count likely to exceed last spring's.

The last day to enroll is Tuesday and 1,080 students were counted as of Friday. The official count for the spring term on the last day to enroll last year was 1,117.

To surpass last spring's enrollment, the college needs to enroll some 37-plus students.

On Friday, the numbers broke down into 531 full-time students and 549 part-time. The figures at the close of enrollment last spring were 527 full-time and 590 part-time students.

In total semester hours, this spring has already exceeded last year's count. This year's figure as of Friday is 10,170 compared to 9,852 last spring.

The spring sign up as of Friday is also greater than last fall's count on campus. The increase to date is primarily linked to part-time students.

During the fall of 1988, the last day to enroll saw 1,026 signed up at the college to include 578 full-time and 448 part-time.

Extension center class enrollment is also looking healthy this spring, noted Dr. Duane Hood, dean of student services. On campus housing is down, however, noting a 20 percent vacancy.

Hood said this is normal for the spring term at WTC.

On the first day of class Wednesday, some 960 students were enrolled.

The spring term count exceeding the fall enrollment is a common occurrence at WTC.

The all-time record enrollment for the college occurred during a

Lawsuit disputes bond loss Bhakta case to resurface

By BOB CAMPBELL
SDN Staff Writer

Prospective jurors have been summoned to 132nd District Court Monday to hear a Texas Department of Corrections inmate's civil suit filed to regain $6,000 he says was improperly claimed by a bonding company during the period before his trial here for murder.

Bringing the suit is Bharat N. Bhakta, 34, who was found guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the April 25, 1985, choking death of his 25-year-old wife, Kumud. The incident occurred at the 25th St. motel, formerly the Strayhorn Motel, which the couple operated at the time.

Bhakta was found guilty by a Scurry County jury on Aug. 23, 1985 and sentenced to 18 years in prison.

The lawsuit stems from Bhakta's $40,000 bond being revoked when he left the United States prior to his trial to visit his native India.

With the revocation of the bond, some $6,000 Bhakta had placed on deposit with Mercury Bail Bonds of Snyder and Sweetwater was claimed by the company, according to papers filed with the lawsuit.

Bhakta eventually returned to the U.S. to stand trial.

In the suit filed by Lubbock attorney Pat Simek, Bhakta claims the company acted improperly in revoking his bond and claiming his money.

Snyder attorney James Clark is representing the bonding company.

Legislators gain committee tasks

Committee assignments for the two Texas legislators representing Scurry County have been announced.

Both Senator Steve Carriker (D-Roby) of the 30th Senatorial District and State Rep. David Counts (D-Knox City) of the 78th District are serving their first term.

Carriker has been assigned by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby to three Senate standing committees.

He will serve on the Committees on Natural Resources, Economic Development and Intergovernmental Relations.

Carriker will also serve on the Special Subcommittee on Agriculture.

The Senate Committee on

Natural Resources covers water, energy, agriculture, environment, hazardous waste and parks and wildlife.

The Senate Committee on Economic Development oversees business and commerce, regulation of banks and savings and loans and laws related to the management of the state's economy.

Small business, rural development, Texas Department of Commerce and other elements of the state's economic development program are handled in whole or in part by the Economic Development Committee.

The Senate Committee on Intergovernmental Relations deals with the relations between the state and local governments. The committee also supervises the state's relationship with the federal government.

During his tenure as state representative of the 78th District, Carriker served on the County Affairs Committee in the Texas House.

Counts has gained his committee assignments from Texas House Speaker Gib Lewis. He will serve on the House Committees on Insurance and Human Services.

In making the announcement, Lewis cited Counts' interest in matters facing the insurance industry as well as social and rehabilitation programs.

Two sentenced here for felony offenses

Two guilty pleas were heard in 132nd District Court last week and a third suspect had their probation revoked.

Aracelia Sally Collazo, 30, of 1009 Ave. U pleaded guilty to possession of less than five pounds but more than four ounces of marijuana on Aug. 11 and received an eight-year probated term.

In addition, a 36-year-old Snyder woman was sentenced to 180 days in the county jail after pleading guilty to a felony DWI charge.

Marcia Gail Collier of 3700 Muriel Dr. entered the plea before District Judge Gene Dulaney in connection with her Jan. 8 arrest.

The two-year probated term of 29-year-old Esmeralda V. Sepulveda of Hermleigh for a Nov. 4, 1987, DWI offense was revoked because she had not paid her probation fees or court costs and because she appeared in public under the influence of an intoxicant on Jan. 8. Dulaney sentenced her to 180 days in the county jail.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "Good vision is essential to becoming a ref. Every one of 'em can see the sun and it's 93 million miles away."

It's been two years since we've watched a single play of professional football. Despite our personal boycott, the Super Bowl will be held today.

Dallas Cowboy fans at the coffee shop tell us that America's team is not in the Super Bowl this year despite a successful losing season. The poor won-loss record, they say, will insure Landry and company of a top pick in the 1989 college draft.

Sports scribes across the country say the NFL's handling and hype makes the Super Bowl one of the top events of the season. More people get excited about it than they will an election of a president and certainly more excited than the inauguration of one.

A Washington sportswriter last year suggested that the NFL is so good at running the Super Bowl activities that we should elect the NFL front office to run the country and they would probably make money in the process.

The Super Bowl is said to take one's mind off overdue Christmas bills and the impending arrival of income tax bills.

The game will be telecast live to more than 40 countries and some 20 will have the telecast on a delayed basis. Media representatives get the royal treatment. Last year media folks were given a game program, clipboard with tiny calculator, a flip card and a box lunch. Transportation was also provided to and from the stadium.

The host city really benefits from having the championship game. It can mean a return of up to $150 million to the economy.

The media folks complain about all the hype, but we thought that is what football is all about.

Bozo the Clown, starring some well-known political figure, may be on some other channel.

Computers, jail uses on agenda

A discussion of purchasing computers for the sheriff's office and county auditor's office is among the business to be conducted in a 10 a.m. meeting Monday of the Scurry County Commissioners Court.

Representatives of the two offices are scheduled to appear to discuss updating their computer systems.

The court will consider a proposal from Palo Pinto and Dawson counties for jail inmates from those counties to be housed in the county jail here.

Births here increase by 23 percent

Snyder and Scurry County had a little more of everything in 1988 — births, deaths, marriages and divorces.

The county clerk's office reported that the county had a 23 percent increase in births, 217 over 167 in 1987.

There was an increase in the number of deaths also, from 126 to 143, and there were a few more marriages, 164 to 153.

The district clerk's office reported figures related to divorce. There was a total of 122 divorces filed and 115 granted in 1987 compared to 130 filed and 119 granted last year.

New plans for black neighborhoods

MIAMI (AP) — Mayor Xavier Suarez unveiled an economic development plan for poor black neighborhoods in the wake of riots as the city geared up for the Super Bowl with fanfare, fireworks and fiestas.

Law enforcement officials, meanwhile, prepared for the funeral Saturday of one of two black men whose deaths in a police shooting Monday triggered the riots.

Suarez discussed the plan in a meeting Friday with black leaders as the black neighborhoods shaken by three days of violence returned to normality.

"We know that a little bit of anger can have good results, and we hope to turn what was more than a little bit of anger expressed in our community into many, many good results," he told them.

The city refused to let one of its worst weeks completely spoil the prelude to one of its biggest events: the Super Bowl this Sunday.

Frank Sinatra, Liza Minnelli and Sammy Davis performed Friday night at the Miami Arena on the edge of Overtown, the predominantly black neighborhood where the riots began. Another performance was booked for tonight.

In nearby Miami Beach, 3,000 people attended a bash held by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle at the Stephen Muss Convention Center. Fireworks burst over Biscayne

Bay as thousands of excited partiers listened to salsa and jazz bands at a shopping center and park less than a mile from where the shooting occurred.

A panel formed to investigate the shooting met for the first time Friday.

"I'm hoping we'll begin to deal seriously with this community's problems and do more than just put some iodine on its cancers," said the Rev. Richard Berry, chairman of the 11-member committee of police officers and black residents.

An unarmed motorcyclist, 23-year-old Clement Lloyd, was shot in the head by a Hispanic policeman Monday as he sped through Overtown. Lloyd's passenger, Allen Blanchard, died of injuries from the subsequent crash.

Spreadsheets class slated

Introduction to electronic spreadsheets is the subject of a new Continuing Education course set to begin Feb. 8 at Western Texas College.

Students will be working on IBM and IBM compatible equipment. They will study terminology, machine use, program parameters, formatting features, mathematical functions and printing.

Dale Williamson will be the instructor for the classes meeting from 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays through April 19. Minimum enrollment will be 10, with the class limited to 20 students.

Fees are $30 per person. To reserve space in the class call 573-8511, ext. 240.

The rioting that followed left one man dead, and 11 others were treated for gunshot wounds. Thirteen buildings were torched, others were looted and 372 people were arrested in Overtown and the predominantly black Liberty City neighborhood, authorities said.

About 150 of those arrested remained in jail, unable to post bond, said police Sgt. Michael Mazur. Authorities planned to keep them locked up until new arraignments Monday when, if they

Inmate dies in prison fire

LORTON, Va. (AP) — One inmate was killed and another injured as fires set by prisoners under the cover of a power failure destroyed an administration building at a troubled District of Columbia prison complex, authorities said.

Firefighters from Fairfax County, Va., let the flames spread unhindered for at least an hour late Friday night because inmates were roaming free within the Lorton Reformatory's grounds, fire officials said.

Mayor Marion S. Barry Jr., who came to the city-run prison complex in southern Fairfax County early Saturday, downplayed the disturbance.

At least four fires were set by inmates, according to Lt. Mike Reilly, spokesman for the Fairfax County fire department. One blaze destroyed the main administration building for the medium-security central facility, which houses about 1,280 male inmates in dormitories and has no individual cells.

plead guilty, they will be released based on time served.

Blanchard was to be buried Saturday afternoon. Officials said they were concerned about the potential for trouble at the funeral, primarily because of the involvement of the Rev. Al Sharpton, who has led protests by blacks in New York City and in Atlanta.

Sharpston will cause problems," said Mazur. "We don't need someone pouring gasoline on the situation."

Black leaders have said Sharpston is unwelcome, but he was scheduled to hold a news conference and rally anyway.

Suarez called his program "Miami's comeback plan," aimed at giving an economic boost to black areas and improving police-community relations.

The plan includes special tax districts, business and job creation programs and police sensitivity and screening efforts. He said that it was only a partial solution and some of the programs may fail.

Pointers on starting a business planned

Pointers on starting your own business will be given in a Continuing Education course to be taught at Western Texas College by Don Altman, director of Caruth Small Business Development Center at Abilene Christian University since 1986.

"Every business begins with an idea," Altman says. "The idea may be a product to be sold or manufactured or a service to be performed. Whatever the business or its degree of complexity, the prospective or existing business owner needs a comprehensive plan to transform a vision into a working operation."

In the course at WTC, Altman will be showing class members how to develop a business plan describing in writing and figures the proposed or existing business and its products, services or manufacturing process.

The plan will include an analysis of the market, a marketing strategy, an organizational plan and measurable financial objectives. The completed plan can be used by the business owner and investors as means for evaluating potential success.

Altman has worked closely with the small business community in the Abilene area since 1971. In the 1972-73 school year he initiated the Small Business Institute program at ASU. This program utilizes senior or graduate business students to provide free management assistance to small businesses as part of the students' course work. More than 300 businesses in the Abilene area have been assisted by the SBI.

Altman has taught in the ACU College of Business since 1969. He served 22 years in the Air force, retiring in 1969 as a lieutenant colonel.

The Small Business Development Center is designed to provide comprehensive management and technical assistance to the small business community. It serves a 16-county area around Abilene and is part of a network of SBDCs throughout the United States.

The WTC classes will meet from 6:30-9:30 p.m. on Tuesdays from Feb. 7 through March 28, a total of 21 hours. The class will not meet during spring break. Tuition is $25 and students will need to purchase a textbook costing $26.25, making the total cost $51.25.

Students may call 573-8511, ext. 240, to reserve space in the class. Minimum enrollment will be 10, with a maximum enrollment of 25.

During World War II, Allied forces invaded Italy Sept. 3, 1943.

Mandatory death penalty established

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — A tough Iranian crackdown on drug traffickers took effect Saturday, with a mandatory death penalty for anyone found with a small amount of narcotics.

At least 75 smugglers already have been executed this month in the fiercest crackdown since the early days of the Islamic revolution, when hundreds of alleged drug users and pushers were rounded up and killed.

The new campaign followed the Aug. 20 cease-fire in the Iran-Iraq war and an alarming surge in drug abuse blamed on hardships caused by the 8-year conflict, worsening unemployment and Iran's religious ban on alcohol.

The laws mandate death for people convicted of possessing 30 grams, or just over an ounce, of heroin, codeine or morphine or smuggling 11 pounds of opium or hashish. Simple possession of opium or hashish carries a jail term.

Space available in firearms class

Registration is continuing for a basic firearm course scheduled by the Western Texas College Continuing Education department.

This course is designed for new owners of firearms as well as for owners who would like to be more confident in the safe handling of firearms. Joe Cheyne, deputy sheriff, will be the instructor.

Classes will meet from 6:30-9:20 on Monday and Thursday nights from Jan. 23-Feb 23 and on two Saturdays, Feb. 4 and 18, for range firing. Fees for the 36 hour course are $45 per person.

Call 573-8511, ext. 240 to pre-register.

Ernie Nevers of the Chicago Cardinals set the NFL record of 40 points in one game against the Chicago Bears in 1929.

"We have no fear of increasing statistics on executions because those who become the victims of the traders of death are far greater in number than the smugglers," said Mohammad-Mousavi Khomeini, Iran's prosecutor-general, on Tehran radio.

Official figures on drug abuse in Iran are not available. But Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani recently indicated the scale of the crisis by referring to "the devastating problem of drug abuse ... a blight that has ruined some of our young people."

"The problem ... is a political

Real estate class planned

An introduction to residential sales and marketing will be given in the real estate marketing course scheduled on Monday nights from Feb. 13-May 22 at Western Texas College.

The 45-hour course will be taught by Pat Cornett, Snyder realtor. Topics include fundamentals of basic real estate communication skills, professionalism and ethics, time management, the psychology of marketing, listing procedures, advertising, negotiating and closing, and the Deceptive Trade Practices-Consumer Protection Act.

Fees are $56.25 and students will also purchase a textbook. Minimum enrollment is 10.

Students are to pre-register by calling the Continuing Education office at 573-8511, etc. 240. Fees will be paid at registration at 6:15 on Feb. 13.

one," said Iran's chief justice, Ayatollah Musavi Ardebili. "The superpowers, just as they fought the Islamic revolution on the battlefield and in the economic field ... use narcotics as one method to battle with the people ... and taint the revolution."

Even before the new law came into force, Iranian authorities had rounded up more than 1,000 suspected smugglers and pushers, running them through Islamic tribunals and hanging them as soon as they were found guilty.

On Jan. 7, 19 smugglers were hanged or shot by firing squads.

Tehran's radical Jomhuri Islami daily hailed the executions as "a landmark on the path to eradicating narcotics."

Nine days later, Iran's official media said 56 were executed in one day in various cities, a chilling display of Tehran's determination to eliminate drugs.

Jomhuri Islami urged that authorities "put an end to the disgraceful life of a few who take joy in ruining a nation only to fill their pockets."

"It's much better if some families lose their breadwinners in this way than a nation loses its youth."

The new law was announced Dec. 5 by the 13-member Expediency Council, a body with special powers set up in February by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to speed legislation snarled in Parliament.

Apart from the death sentences, the law provides for a minimum 20-year prison term for anyone convicted of addicting another person to drugs. Those convicted of causing widespread addiction could also face death.

Mokhtar Kalantari, deputy commander of the Islamic Revolutionary Committees, which have largely taken over law enforcement from police, acknowledged shortcomings in recent years in combatting the narcotics trade from neighboring Afghanistan and Pakistan while Iran concentrated on the war with Iraq. There are extensive poppy fields in Iran as well.

Feds investigate alleged jail beatings

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — Federal authorities say they are investigating allegations that two police officers took turns beating a man in the Clute city jail, an incident reportedly recorded on videotape.

The tape later was viewed by Police Chief Mark Wicker and at least eight department employees, officials said.

The tape reportedly shows the officers beating Jesus Louis Dominguez, 28, who was arrested Jan. 13 on charges of public intoxication and making a terroristic threat.

Patrolman Pete Soto and Sgt. Jack Brown are the two shown punching Dominguez in the face, said several officers who viewed the tape.

FBI spokesman Johnnie Joyce said a federal investigation into the alleged beating is in progress and is expected to last about three weeks.

"We are investigating that matter as a possible civil rights violation," Joyce told the

"If it looks like an offense was committed, the FBI might take it, or we might take it," Mapel said. "It just kind of depends on what develops."

Officers told the Houston Chronicle that the black-and-white tape was made by a police dispatcher who was following normal booking procedure.

The officers who discussed the incident said they saw the tape the following morning before Wicker confiscated it. Wicker refused comment, directing all questions to Mayor Jerry Adkins, who did not return telephone calls to the Chronicle. Wicker also declined comment on the

The Clute officers who have seen the photos said they show Dominguez with two black eyes and several facial abrasions. After consulting with the county attorney, Wagner said he could not release the pictures because they were exempt from the Dominguez was seen by a county jail nurse but did not require hospitalization.

Officers said Dominguez is shown on the tape standing in the booking area with his arms to his sides when Brown strikes him in the face.

Dominguez then was removed to a small space between the back door and a room, his hands again by his sides when Soto began to punch him in the head and face, said officers who viewed the tape. He was then pushed into a set of lockers and taken to a detoxification cell, where he was struck again by Brown and knocked into the wall, they said.

Dominguez, who has been interviewed by the FBI about the incident, said he drank three or four beers at his home and walked to a nearby convenience store, where he was arrested.

In February 1988, Dominguez was sentenced to three years in prison after pleading guilty to selling $100 worth of cocaine to undercover agents, the Brazosport Facts said. He recently was released on parole. Dominguez also was convicted in 1982 of felony aggravated assault.

Soto, one of the officers supposedly shown punching Dominguez, has been part of another recent controversy after revelations that he was rehired by the department after Wicker changed at least one answer on his basic literacy test. That boosted the total score from failing to passing, the Chronicle reported.

When Washington Public Power Supply System (WPPSS) defaulted on $2.25 billion of bonds in 1983, it was news. If you had bought any of these bonds, you knew your investment was in trouble because of national publicity. This is not always the case with municipal bonds that default.

Information on most municipal bonds is not readily available. The Wall Street Journal prints about 40 daily quotations out of the thousands of bonds issued. In most cases, particularly with non-registered coupon bonds, bondholders may not know a bond issue has defaulted until they try to collect their interest.

Richard Lehmann discovered this when he became involved in the WPPSS default. He joined the bondholders' committee to try to recover money for more than 30,000 investors caught with the defaulted bonds. In 1984 he independently formed the Bond Investors Association (BIA).

The BIA, a non-profit corporation located in Miami Lakes, Fla., offers information on municipal and corporate bonds and assists bondholders in the event of a default. According to their press information, a number of bond defaults were brought to a satisfactory and timely settlement without the need for prolonged litigation.

For a $25 membership, you receive several worthwhile services including a newsletter, a bond-rating service and information on called bonds or bonds called for tender.

In addition, Lehmann recently started the Defaulted Bond Newsletter, which reports on defaulted municipal and corporate bonds. The monthly publication is aimed both at investors who are stuck with defaulted bonds and speculators who buy defaulted bonds at a fraction of their face value.

A recent Forbes article described a typical municipal bond default in which many bondholders take their lumps and bail out within six months for roughly 15 to 30 cents on the dollar. The bonds are then bought by speculators who sometimes hang on for years until a settlement is made, often for 50 to 70 cents on the dollar.

The Defaulted Bond Newsletter, at the cost of $195 a year, offers good information to anyone who owns municipal bonds. There's not only current information on problem bonds but also updated information on defaulted bonds. For the speculator, there's even a list of defaulted bonds with a complete description and price.

Tax-exempt municipal-bond investing can be very rewarding if properly done. Careful selection of the person and firm from whom you buy a bond goes a long way to ensure your satisfaction. You might also consider joining the more than 14,000 members of the Bond Investors association. Their address is 15327 N.W. 60th Ave., Suite 240, Miami Lakes, FL 33014 (800-852-0444).

Reagans now in California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Reagan and his wife say there are no movie parts in his future, but they both plan to keep busy in the home state that Reagan says is not so much a place as a way of life.

"I don't even use the word retirement," Reagan told reporters aboard the Air Force plane that flew him here Friday after the inauguration of President Bush.

The former president and first lady came back toward the reporters' seats early in their flight West and answered questions for about 20 minutes.

When the plane arrived at Los Angeles International Airport, the Reagans were greeted by an enthusiastic crowd and then driven to their new home in the fashionable Bel Air neighborhood by motorcade.

Their spokesman, Mark Weinberg, said they planned a private weekend and no announcements would be made about their activities.

"We're just moving into a new house," said Reagan. "We didn't get the job done over the holidays when we were there."

The Reagans slept a total of nine nights in the home around Christmas and just after New Year's Day.

"Obviously, we have to unpack," said Mrs. Reagan.

Reagan, a movie actor before he entered politics, was asked if he couldn't be tempted to re-enter films, even in a cameo part.

"No, there is kind of a lingering feeling that would look a little bit like trying to cash in on this job that I've had," he said.

But, a reporter asked, aside from making money, wouldn't it be appropriate to go back to what he did before politics?

"Well ..." said the former president.

"You don't go back," said his wife.

"No," he agreed.

Reagan said he plans to write a book and to speak out on behalf of such causes as a presidential line-item veto, a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution and repeal of the two-term limit for presidents.

Mrs. Reagan said she doesn't believe in retirement either and plans to finish a book she is writing and work on behalf of a drug abuse treatment center she is backing in the Los Angeles area.

Hurt pilot's name connected with Contra arms network

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The name of a San Antonio pilot injured in the crash of a DC-3 was on a list of flier recruits discovered in a plane piloted by an American that was shot down over Nicaragua in 1986 while covertly flying military supplies to the Contras.

Satellite descramblers, equipped with military-grade microchips were loaded on the plane that crashed here Wednesday.

Officials told the San Antonio Light the equipment was adaptable for military use and the government was investigating whether they were being shipped out of the country illegally.

"Our problem is the satellite descramblers have a microchip that render the descramblers useful for military purposes," U.S. Customs spokesman Charles Conroy said. "They can be used in missile guidance systems."

The cargo plane, apparently destined for Torreón in the Mexican state of Coahuila, crashed on the Laredo International Airport runway shortly after takeoff about 9 p.m. Wednesday, injuring the pilot and co-pilot.

Rick Block, 40, was recovering Friday from injuries at a Laredo hospital. A hospital spokesman said his condition was being withheld at his family's request.

The co-pilot, Juan Manuel Cutino Morales, 31, of Mazatlan, Sinaloa, was in the intensive care unit of San Antonio's St. Luke's Lutheran Hospital Friday where he was being treated for serious burns, officials said.

Conroy said Friday the government already had determined neither Block nor the co-pilot had a license, required by federal law, to ship the militarily sensitive electronic parts.

"These microchips fall under a licensing procedure set out by the U.S. Department of State to prevent the illegal exportation of military technology that could be used against this country," Conroy said. "They (the pilots) were not licensed to carry these things out of the country."

A conviction of exporting militarily sensitive equipment out of the United States is punishable by a maximum fine of $1 million or a 10-year prison term, Conroy said.

Block's name and parents' San Antonio phone number were discovered on documents aboard a C-123 downed in Nicaragua on Oct. 5, 1986.

The pilot, Eugene Hasenfus, was arrested, tried and convicted by the Sandinista government, but was later pardoned and released by President Daniel Ortega.

At the time The Light reported the story, Block's father, who asked not to be identified, said his son had nothing to do with Contra supply efforts and never flew with Air America, a defunct CIA-associated airline that flew missions in Southeast Asia and with which Hasenfus was connected.

Hasenfus, a private arms courier for the Contras who said he was paid by the CIA to ship arms to the Nicaraguan rebels, was the lone survivor of the crash.

The downing of the cargo plane filled with loaded guns and other arms exposed a private network of Americans aiding the Contras.

Conroy called the government's investigation into the crash in Laredo an "extensive one," and said the government would not say anything official about it "until some kind of action is taken. That can be anything from the seizure of the plane to some arrests or the issuing of indictments."

Laredo airport tower control operators on duty Wednesday night identified the plane as belonging to American Air Freight, but later in the evening, Chuck Taylor, general manager of the company, denied that it was American Air Freight aircraft.

"No, it's Mexican registered and belongs to a Mexican national," Taylor said.

Conroy confirmed Thursday that the plane was Mexican-owned, but would not elaborate, citing the ongoing investigation.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesmen in the San Antonio Flight Standards District Office said a team of investigators was in Laredo Friday to investigate the crash.

Officials at the Flight Service Station for the Laredo area, located in San Angelo, Texas, said the plane's operators had filed a flight plan, but the station supervisor would only say that it was bound for Mexico.

U.S. Customs agents were protecting the plane Friday, examining contents and questioning airport personnel and others.

Judge rules Moss should get salary

by The Associated Press
A state district judge ruled Friday that fired Sam Houston State basketball coach Gary Moss should continue receiving his salary and benefits pending the resolution of a lawsuit in which Moss charges the school and the NCAA violated his right to due process.

Moss, the first coach to be sanctioned by the NCAA after leaving the school at which the violations occurred, will continue to receive his $3,368 monthly salary as a result of Judge Bill McAdams' restraining order.

McAdams, who ruled from Huntsville, Texas in a conference call with the parties involved, also said that the NCAA cannot impose additional sanctions against Moss without prior warning or hearing.

"These guys at the NCAA have been getting away with this for a long time," said Philip Russ, Moss' attorney. "They don't think anyone's going to challenge them on it."

In the suit, Moss alleges that his rights were violated because he was fired without a hearing. The suit further charges that the NCAA illegally used its authority by coercing Sam Houston State to fire Moss.

Moss seeks reinstatement at his alma mater as coach and punitive damages against the NCAA, according to the suit filed Wednesday in Huntsville, where Sam Houston State is located.

Moss, in his second season at Sam Houston State, was fired Jan. 7 after the NCAA sanctioned him for violations it said he committed while coaching at West Texas State.

The NCAA's committee on infractions ruled that WTSU, where Moss was head coach from 1984-87, illegally recruited players and provided them with free airplane travel, cash and use of telephone credit cards.

The NCAA on Dec. 22 placed Moss on three years' probation, banned him from coaching in post-season tournaments this season and prohibited him from off-campus recruiting and speaking engagements during the 1989-90 academic year.

WTSU was hit with three years' probation and a ban on post-season play this season.

An NCAA rule passed in 1985 permits the Committee on Infractions to discipline a coach who has committed violations but is no longer at the school.

Moss' suit questions the legality of the rule and is asking the court to overturn his firing, Russ said.

Thompson's focus is back on hoops

WASHINGTON (AP) - After spending a hectic week of battling for something he thought was truly worthy of standing up - and walking out - for, Georgetown coach John Thompson can once again focus his energies on winning basketball games.

Thompson, citing the NCAA's willingness to re-evaluate controversial Proposition 42, said Friday he would end his boycott and return to the Hoyas bench. He was to be on the bench Saturday for Georgetown's Big East game against Connecticut.

"I came to the decision that it was in best interest of everybody that I go back with my team," he said. "...It's over as far as I'm concerned."

Thompson said last Friday that he would boycott NCAA-sanctioned events unless something was done about Prop 42, which would create stricter entrance requirements for freshmen. He created a national (see THOMPSON, page 7A)

Lose to 7th-ranked Andrews, 74-57...

Turnover-prone Tigers fall

Andrews' Mustangs outscored Snyder 12-2 in the final three minutes of the third quarter here Friday, then went on to wrap up a 74-57 victory in District 4-4A basketball play.

It was the second meeting between the teams in district play, and left Snyder at 3-3 in the 4-4A and 10-9 for the season.

The Tigers hope to change their fortunes on Tuesday, Jan. 24, when they travel to Sweetwater for their next outing.

The Tigers, who trailed most of the game, had pulled within two points, 33-31, when Jeff Franklin completed a three-point play with 5:38 left in the third quarter. Twenty seconds later, Gym Bice countered with a pair of free throws for the Mustangs, but Snyder's Tracy Braziel also added a single charity shot to keep the Tigers close. A turnover ruined a chance for Snyder to pull within a point moments afterward, and Mustang post Ara Baten tried to push the door closed on the Tigers when he converted a three-point play at the 3:47 mark, 38-32.

Braziel held off the seventh-ranked 'Stangs with two more free throws at 3:27, but Snyder would score only two more points in the quarter. Meanwhile, Andrews - using an edge in team speed and taking advantage of Tiger turnovers - began piling up the points.

Snyder managed only a handful of points from outside, freeing the Mustangs to collapse on the inside most of the time. But it was the turnovers - 27 unofficially - that hurt the most. "We had so many turnovers we didn't give ourselves a chance," said Scott. "We scored 57 points but when you have 27 turnovers, well... You've got to figure that if you cut those turnovers in half, you score about that many more points, anyway."

The Tigers also had trouble containing Andrews' senior playmaker Gym Bice, son of Mustang coach Frank Bice. The senior, adept at drawing the foul, led all scorers with 29 points. He hit 13 of 17 free throws. Baten dumped in 13 points, Scot Collins 12 and Damon Clay 12.

Snyder was led by Braziel's 24 points. Jeff Franklin scored 17. No other Tiger player had more than a half-dozen, however.

The win lifted Andrews to 20-3 overall and 5-1 in district play. Earlier in the evening, Andrews outlasted Snyder in junior varsity action, 57-52. Edward Rios scored 11 points for Snyder while Toby Goodwin hit 10 and Lee Hamilton scored nine.

The young Tigers suffered at the line, hitting just 14 of 27 free throws.

SHS ladies play well; lose game from stripe

ANDREWS - Snyder's Lady Tigers played well offensively and defensively here Friday but wouldn't take any charity and fell to Andrews, 49-45.

"This is probably one of the harder games we've played from start to finish," said Snyder coach Ken Housden. "We just came up a little short. We hit five of 12 from the free throw line in the first half and that was about the only thing we did wrong, but that (free throws) was what cost us the game."

Snyder managed just 15 points in 32 trips to the line for the game. Melody Pickering, a 5-9 senior, led the Tigers with 20 points and 10 rebounds. Anne Osborn scored 16 points and led on the boards with 13 rebounds. Evette Housden contributed with six assists and five points.

"This was probably Melody's best game, other than from the free throw line," said Housden of the senior, who was four of 11 from the stripe.

Andrews was led by Paula Jones, who scored 19 points. It was Jones' first game of the season after being academically ineligible for the first six-week period. Paulette Jones scored nine for the Lady Mustangs, now 10-11 for the season and 5-3 in district play.

Snyder, 9-11 and 3-5 now, will be at home on Tuesday, Jan. 24 to host Sweetwater.

Earlier here Friday, Snyder whipped Andrews in junior varsity action 47-30 to post their 16th win in 17 outings. Freda Clay had 19 points for the young Lady Tigers and Robbie Braziel scored 16.

Snyder JV will also host Sweetwater on Tuesday.

Super Bowl XXIII... Team of the 80's wants more

MIAMI (AP) - They feign disinterest. They claim their place in history is of no concern. They insist they want to treat it like any other game on any other Sunday of the NFL season.

They lie. And, sometimes, the San Francisco 49ers slip. They admit that, yes, securing recognition as this decade's dynasty is important.

"I think we already are the Team of the '80s," All-Pro running back Roger Craig said. "But we can be one of the greatest teams in history. We can prove that here."

Of course, the Cincinnati Bengals don't want to provide that proof. They've already been 49ers fodder - San Francisco's first of two Super Bowl titles in this decade came over the Bengals, 26-21 in 1982. The other was over the Miami Dolphins in 1985.

"We didn't come down here on vacation," cornerback Eric Thomas said. "We're here to win the NFL championship. What the 49ers have done doesn't mean anything."

That's what many of the 49ers have been saying throughout Super Bowl week, which, for once, actually had some newsworthy items.

Naturally, the most disturbing incidents were riots in Overtown and Liberty City. They forced postponement of an NBA game but had no effect on any Super Bowl proceedings.

"We share the grief and sorrow over the developments in Overtown," Commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday. "A football game has little significance compared to that situation."

That situation most disturbed

President's son interested in purchasing the Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) - George W. Bush, the oldest son of President George Bush, is leading a group of businessmen emerging as the most likely candidate to buy majority interest in the Texas Rangers, a Dallas newspaper reported.

A letter of intent to purchase the Rangers is expected to be presented Tuesday during the major league ownership committee's meeting in Chicago, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

Among those reportedly involved in Bush's ownership group is Bengals receiver Eddie Brown, who grew up in Overtown and Liberty City.

"The people there just need things to do," he said. "That's the thing that could solve all of this. They closed up the Boys Club and the baskets are down in the parks so you can't play ball. There used to be jam sessions with local bands. The kids had things to do. They didn't talk much about drugs or stuff."

"If they had all those things, the violent stuff wouldn't enter their minds."

Bill Walsh apparently has retirement as 49ers coach on his mind. Walsh faced a blitz of questions about it this week, but remained non-committal - even after team owner Eddie DeBartolo Jr., said the odds of Walsh quitting as coach are "60-20."

"There are a great many decisions that have to be made after the season," Walsh said. "We will sit down and discuss all of them. Nothing has been determined or decided yet."

Injuries to key players also were focal points. Jerry Rice, the game's most dangerous receiver, reinjured his right ankle on Monday. He didn't work out again until Thursday, and did only limited work on Friday.

"I'll be fine," said Rice, who was hampered by a bad ankle for six weeks this season. "This (injury) has gotten so much more attention because of this game. But I was out there all year and I'll be out there Sunday."

David Fulcher, one of the defensive backs who must deal with Rice, bruised his left knee when he collided with linebacker Joe Kelly in practice on Thursday. But the Pro Bowl safety's participation in the game isn't in doubt.

"There is nothing to worry about," trainer Marvin Pollins said.

The 49ers are 7 1/2-point favorites.

"We've had enough adversity to never be overconfident again," Wilson said of the spread. "But we've also had enough success to know how to handle it all."

By handling the Bengals on Sunday, the championship - and the decade - will belong to them.

McCumber shares top spot as darkness delays Phoenix

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) - Mark McCumber took a share of the second-round lead in the Phoenix Open, then summed up the situation.

"A very bad day. It started in winds and ended in darkness," he said.

For Ben Crenshaw, it didn't even end.

He was among the 13 players stranded by darkness on the TPC Course at Scottsdale Friday night. They were scheduled to return at daylight Saturday to complete second-round play. The overnight delay marked the second consecutive day that play had been halted by darkness.

Crenshaw, the individual World Cup champion, had one hole to go and was seven under par for the tournament - only two off the 36-hole lead held by McCumber and Billy Glasson.

They were at 133, nine under par. Glasson shot a 68 in the worst of the winds and McCumber nursed home a 69 in the darkness, finishing moments before play was halted.

"The last two holes I couldn't see the greens," said McCumber, who partnered Crenshaw in the United States' World Cup victory in Australia.

"Very difficult," Glasson said, then provided an illustration of the wind strength.

Glasson said he hit a driver and 3-wood into the wind on the 470-yard eighth hole. The par-5 13th, at 576 yards but playing downwind, required only a driver and an 8-iron.

And it was too difficult for Steve Jones, who swept the first two titles of the season on the PGA Tour and was seeking a third consecutive victory here.

He struggled to a 79 and finished 36 holes at 147. Although the 36-hole cut to the low 70 scorers cannot be made until all players have completed two rounds, Jones seemed certain to be a casualty. It appeared a score of 142 or 143 would be required to make it.

Mark Calcavecchia, who said the conditions were "two or three shots harder than in the first round" had a 68 and was tied with Scott Hoch and Ted Schulz at 134.

a single stroke off the halfway lead. Schulz and Hoch each shot 68.

It was another two shots back to the group tied at 136: Paul Azinger, U.S. Open champ Curtis Strange, Masters title-holder Sandy Lyle, first-round leader Ken Green, Corey Pavin, Gary Hallberg, Jim Gallagher and Jim Carter.

Hallberg twice holed out fairway shots for eagle-2s in a round of 68. Azinger, Lyle and Carter also had 68s. Strange shot 70. Pavin and Gallagher matched par 71. Green went to a 73.

stir when he walked off the court just prior to Georgetown's game against Boston College last Saturday, and continued his protest by skipping the Hoyas' game against Providence on Wednesday.

"We have moved in the right direction as far as undoing this," Thompson said. "I have a sincere commitment that people are going to look at this in a reasonable way and move toward seeing that it does not happen. If I thought that there was no hope, it would be a whole different issue."

Thompson's decision came one day after he and Georgetown administrators met in Mission, Kan., with several NCAA officials to discuss Proposition 42. They mulled over the new rule for around five hours, and Thompson emerged from the meeting satisfied that his protest had not been for naught.

"I'm going to go back to doing what I do best - coaching basketball," he said.

Proposition 42, a bylaw of Proposition 48, would prohibit freshmen who fail to meet eligibility standards from receiving athletic scholarships or any other institutional aid in their first year of college, beginning in the 1990-91 academic year.

Reagan pays farewell visit to office in White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a soft "goodbye" to aides and reporters and a hand-holding stroll with his beloved Nancy, President Reagan bade farewell to the White House on Friday after eight tumultuous years at the pinnacle of American power. He told reporters it was a "time of tears" and that it was tough to say so long.

The Reagans left Andrews Air Force Base, Md., at 1:10 p.m. EST and flew home to California, both vowing to pursue objectives they battled for during the president's two terms.

The former first couple waved to a cheering crowd of about 2,000 at Andrews, and Reagan received a 21-gun salute as he reviewed a platoon from each of the five branches of the military service. Reagan did not address the crowd.

With their dog, Rex, the Reagans boarded the plane that in the previous eight years would have been designated Air Force One. A sign in the crowd read "So Long Gipper."

About an hour earlier Reagan stood by as George Bush took the presidential oath of office at the Capitol. Bush, who fought Reagan tirelessly for the Republican presidential nomination in 1980 before becoming his vice president, turned to Reagan after taking the presidential oath and said, "President Reagan, on behalf of the American people I thank you for the wonderful things you have done for America."

Reagan, asked while he was walking with Bush through the Rotunda of the Capitol if he felt a sense of relief, said, "No, but a great pride in what's happening."

Following the solemn swearing-in ceremonies and Bush's inaugural speech, Bush and his wife, Barbara, escorted the Reagans to the east side of the Capitol to a waiting helicopter, where they said their goodbyes with handshakes and kisses.

As the Reagans stood in the doorway of the Marine helicopter, Reagan turned and snapped a salute to Bush, who returned it.

Asked by a reporter for his final thoughts, Reagan said only, "Carry on."

The Bushes were joined by Vice President Dan Quayle and his wife, Marilyn, who waved goodbye to the Reagans before their helicopter lifted off and made a final sweep of the Mall and White House.

Old foes at home and abroad praised Reagan, the first president to serve eight years since Dwight D. Eisenhower gave up the office to John F. Kennedy in 1961.

He is, "according to all external indications, leaving office as a completely successful political figure," said Pravda, the official voice of the Soviet Union, the nation that Reagan denounced in 1983 as an "evil empire."

Reagan began his final day in office with a nostalgic visit to the Oval Office to make sure, according to his spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, that the presidential office was shipshape for his successor.

Grand jury slated for new hearings

DALLAS (AP) — A Dallas County grand jury will conduct new hearings on the fatal shootings of two police suspects earlier this decade although eight other cases will not be rescheduled, officials said.

In the two cases in which rehearings are being scheduled, previous grand juries declined to indict the officers involved.

According to The Dallas Morning News, the grand jury has scheduled a Jan. 30 hearing into the 1987 death of Larry J. Brice. He was fatally shot by three officers after a 19-minute car chase.

On Feb. 6, the grand jury will hear evidence in the 1980 death of Donald Ray Rodgers, who was shot by an officer after a fight over an arrest on prostitution charges, the newspaper said.

The grand jury had announced it October that it was going to review nine cases involving back wounds sustained by police suspects that had been outlined in a series of articles in The Dallas Morning News.

Officer Otis Kirk Griffith, who killed Rodgers, filed suit against newspaper after the series, contending that it libeled him and that he was "properly and justifiably defending his own life against the deadly attacks of a crazed, transvestite, male prostitute."

Fireball sighted across the middle of the United States

By The Associated Press

Authorities say a spectacular fireball that streaked across the central United States Friday night was a Soviet rocket body that had been launched in December and that officials had expected to re-enter the atmosphere.

The rocket was sighted in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Mississippi and Iowa, and a hundreds of witnesses called officials to say they had seen it blaze across the sky about 8:10 p.m. CST.

Some witnesses said the fireball had fiery tail 30 to 40 miles long.

Maj. Dick Adams, a spokesman for the North American Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs, Colo, said the U.S. Space Command identified the object as a Soviet-built rocket body that was launched sometime last year.

"It came down about 9 p.m. EST," Adams said. "There is no way to know as to what happened to it."

Adams said the space command tracks about 7,100 man-made objects and once they start to notice an object falling out of orbit they try to predict its reentry.

"This was no surprise," Adams said.

A unidentified spokesman in the Soviet Embassy in Washington, D.C., declined comment.

"I am hearing this information for the first time from you, so I could not say," the spokesman said.

Dugald Gillies, a Navy commander who is deputy director of public affairs for the U.S. Space Command near Colorado Springs, said sighting reports correlated "with what we were tracking."

He said the flood of sightings came because weather over much of the country was clear and ideal for sky watching.

Officials manning FAA, National Weather Service and military bureaus and bases across the midwest and southwest were swamped with calls from the curious.

A dispatcher at the Throckmorton County, Texas, sheriff's department said her West Texas office there had received notice from the Texas Department of Public Safety indicating that the rocket would touch down in either Throckmorton, Shackelford or Stephens counties. But she added that her office had received no such reports.

A resident of Pope County, Ark., reported seeing debris hit the ground northeast of Hector in Central Arkansas.

Officials from the Pope County sheriff's office were on their way to check the report.

Richard Mize, a reporter for the Wichita Falls (Texas) Times and Record-News, said the blazing moved slowly across the sky, much slower than objects he had seen in meteorite showers.

The Texas Department of Public Safety said it had placed two "trained observers" on a rooftop to search the skies for further objects, the Times Record-News said.

"It just appeared all of a sudden out of the south and fell straight due north and it left a

Thank You

Perhaps you sent a lovely card, or sat quietly in a chair.
Perhaps you sent a funeral spray,
If so we saw it there.
Perhaps you spoke the kindest words,
as any friend could say.
Perhaps you were not there at all,
Just thought of us that day.
Whatever you did say to console our hearts,
We Thank You so much whatever the part.

A special thanks to Father Joe Augustus, The Guadaluponas, The Garcia Family, Mr. & Mrs. Parks, and all others who brought food & flowers.

The Family of Angela Escobedo

Thank You

To each and everyone of you who showed concern, sent flowers, telephoned, or visited when Lewis was in the Hospital. Lewis is home now and doing well.

A little work, partying mark Bush's first day

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush got an early start today on wrapping up the $25 million extravaganza marking his inauguration as the nation's 41st president, opening the White House grounds to the public and leading about 15 people on a tour of his new home.

"This is the people's house and it does seem appropriate on this first day that we welcome as many as we can," Bush said after spending his first night at the White House.

The doors opened at 8 a.m. to about 400 people who had waited through the night outside in temperatures that dropped to the 20s.

It was the first "open house" at the White House in 80 years, and organizers had expressed concern that the crowd touring the building would be more restrained than when Andrew Jackson invited celebrators into the White House at his first inauguration in 1829 and they all but trashed the place.

Those allowed inside went through the usual security checks, and once they got in the presidential mansion, they were jovial but still shivering from the cold they had endured.

First Lady Barbara Bush joked about how early the tourists had to come to be the ones selected for the personalized tour, saying, "They saw us come in last night."

The Bushes had spent Friday night stopping in at each of the galas held to celebrate the inauguration, and had not gotten back to the White House until 12:45 a.m.

Asked about her first night in the new home, Mrs. Bush said it was comfortable, but "too short."

As Bush took office, Reagan became the first president since another Republican, Dwight D. Eisenhower, who held office from 1953 to 1961, to serve two full terms and the first president in 60 years to turn the White House over to a successor of his own party.

"My friends, we have work to do," Bush said in his 20-minute speech. "We have more will than wallet, but will is what we need."

He asked Americans to help him steer the nation on a course of "high moral principle," to battle the domestic scourges of homelessness, drug addiction and crime, and tyranny and terrorism abroad.

Republican Bush told Democratic congressional leaders that his would be "the age of the offered hand." To the world, he said, the hand could be "a reluctant fist ... strong" and could "be used with great effect."

With his oath Bush, 64, the fourth oldest man to be sworn in as president, crowned an odyssey of government service, personal setback and triumph. It took him from the privileged home of an Eastern financier and senator to aerial combat in the Pacific, from sweaty work and heady gambles in the Texas oil fields to diplomacy in China, from political defeat to presidential landslide.

Moments before Bush took the WTC looks to 1,100-plus count rostrum on the Capitol's West Portico, Dan Quayle, the 41-year-old former senator from Indiana, was sworn in as the new vice president by Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor.

With the heralding of trumpets, Bush was introduced one last time as "the vice president of the United States." He paused for a word with his 87-year-old mother, Dorothy, and then shook hands with Reagan.

Then, as an estimated 200,000 people looked on from the Capitol grounds, Bush, in navy pinstriped business suit, placed his left hand upon two Bibles, one used by George Washington, one by his own family, and recited his oath:

"I, George Herbert Walker Bush, do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States, and will to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Like all his predecessors, he added: "So help me God."

He began his address with a tribute to the departing Reagan, "who has earned a lasting place in our hearts and in our history."

But Reagan left behind some major challenges for the new president, particularly the massive national debt, $2.6 trillion, and spending and trade deficits running $150 billion each per year. Bush barely touched upon those issues.

"We have a deficit to bring down," he acknowledged. "We will make the hard choices, looking at what we have and perhaps allocating it differently, making our decisions based on honest need and prudent safety."

"And then we will do the wisest thing of all: we will turn to the only resource we have that in times of need always grows: the goodness and courage of the American people."

Bush said Republicans and Democrats have often been too mistrustful, an attitude he traced back to the Vietnam war. "The final lesson of Vietnam is that no great nation can long afford to be sundered by a memory," he said.

With that Bush symbolically extended his hand to the speaker of the House, Jim Wright of Texas, and to the majority leader of the Senate, George Mitchell of Maine.

Wright returned the gesture; Mitchell sat passively. Later the leaders met with Bush and watched as he signed papers formally nominating his Cabinet.

Bush drew his greatest applause when he spoke of the drug issue, saying "we as a society must rise up united and express our intolerance ... There is much to be done and to be said, but take my word: This scourge will stop."

Bush's brief parade forays from the security of the new presidential limousine, once at the foot of Capitol Hill and again upon his arrival at the White

Transient kills two officers

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — A transient grabbed a policeman's gun, shot him to death and mortally wounded another officer before police killed the man in a 30-second fusillade as a terrified student television crew recorded the violence.

The homeless man, identified as Dale Randy Connors, 35, was being questioned by Officer Gene Simpson, 45.

House, recalled a similar gesture by Jimmy Carter in 1976, when the Democrat walked most of the route. For Bush, it seemed to symbolize his inaugural promise to usher in an "age of the offered hand."

At the White House, the Bushes took their seats in an enclosed reviewing stand to watch more than 200 marching units, including those from schools and colleges in every state, pay their salute. His adopted Texas produced an especially large contingent, and son George Bush Jr. donned a white 10-gallon hat as the University of Texas Longhorn Band strutted by.

The hours-long parade, with famed test pilot Chuck Yeager and comedian Bob Hope as grand marshalls, featured 12,000 marchers, 457 horses, and 70 floats, including one with a Navy TBM Avenger torpedo bomber, a duplicate of the plane Bush flew in World War II.

Later, the couple would dance the night away at 11 invitation-only inaugural balls, and on Saturday they planned to personally open the White House doors for a public reception.

Report: Demos may scuttle plan

AUSTIN (AP) — Opposition from some top House and Senate Democrats could scuttle Gov. Bill Clements' proposed bond referendum for funding $300 million in prison construction, a newspaper reported Friday.

Several key legislators recently expressed concern about using bonds to pay for 11,000 new state prison beds.

Clements last week declared the prison bond authorization issue an emergency in hope the Legislature would ask voters in May to approve the bonds.

But the Houston Chronicle said Friday that the naming of a special subcommittee by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Rep. Jim Rudd, D-Brownfield, has raised speculation that an effort is under way to stave off the authorization of additional state bonds.

"They (bond opponents) figure if they bring up enough questions about this, they'll get Gib (Lewis) to back off on his support," an unnamed legislative source told the newspaper.

House Speaker Lewis and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby have said they'll support the governor's push for the bonding procedure, though they also have some reservations.

Rudd is among legislative leaders who consider use of state bonds to finance projects and programs a form of deficit financing. He has said there may not be enough votes in the House to send the bond issue to voters.

"All we're doing is postponing, having a longer pay with interest," Rudd said. It's not a savings for the state. It's just not facing up to realities."

Rider Scott, Clements' prison adviser, said most of the prison alternatives that will be examined by the House subcommittee are in legislative recommendations by Clements.

"We need to consider these alternatives, but we also need to build. Without additional construction, we will quickly revert to the situation we find ourselves in now — having almost 8,000 felons confined to county jails," Scott said.

Scientists using nature to fight bugs in citrus groves

WESLACO, Texas (AP) — Scientists released hundreds of parasitic insects in a grapefruit grove Friday as part of a continuing biological assault on the destructive citrus blackfly, a pest researchers suspect has flourished because pesticides killed most of its natural enemies.

The blackfly threatens to cause millions of dollars in damage to the $70 million Texas citrus industry, which is concentrated on about 30,000 acres in the Lower Rio Grande Valley, said Ray Prewett, executive director of Texas Citrus Mutual, a growers organization based in McAllen. Production in heavily infested groves can drop by 50 percent, said Vic French, an entomologist with the Texas A&I University Citrus Center in Weslaco. But instead of using more chemicals to fight them, scientists have chosen two types of tiny parasitic bugs that deposit their eggs in the blackflies and eventually kill them.

Strong pesticides could prove to be counterproductive in the case of the blackfly, French said, because they would kill the parasites that keep the blackfly population in check.

Yet researchers still are not sure why the blackfly has become a problem in the Valley's citrus groves in the past two years, French said.

"It could very well be a situation where the pesticides killed, took out, the parasites that fed on the black fly," he said. "It could also be related to our 1983 freeze."

A freeze that devastated the Texas citrus industry that year also may have killed off the parasites that attacked the blackfly, he said.

Blackflies, known scientifically as Aleurocanthus woglumi, are about 1-20-inch long, and secrete a substance on the leaves and fruit that promotes the growth of a sooty-black fungus. The fungus impedes photosynthesis and affects the coloration and size of the fruit.

Leaves in an infested grove the scientists visited Friday were covered with the black fungus, as was much of the fruit.

The fruit remained green, although it should have turned yellow by this late stage of the season. Because of the unattractive color, Prewett said its only marketable use would be for juice, which brings less than half the income for growers that fresh fruit brings.

Plane engine falls off just after takeoff

CHICAGO (AP) — A Boeing 737 jetliner "lunged" and lurched after one of its engines fell off shortly after takeoff Friday, but the pilot safely landed the plane and none of the 32 people aboard were injured, officials said.

Piedmont Airlines Flight 1480, with 27 passengers and five crew members aboard, took off from O'Hare International Airport at 7:35 a.m. for a non-stop flight to Charlotte, N.C., officials said.

"At approximately 1,000 feet, or just moments after takeoff, the right engine separated from the aircraft and landed on airport property," said Dave Shipley, spokesman for Arlington, Va.-based USAir Inc., which owns Piedmont.

"I was scared to death," said passenger Dante Pacioni, 56, a private pilot who had a view of the wing that lost the engine.

The plane "lunged to the left" when the engine broke away, he said, but the pilot maintained control and guided the craft back to an emergency landing at O'Hare.

Elsewhere, a wing panel fell from an Eastern Airlines Boeing 757 near Birmingham, Ala., Thursday night. In Buena Vista, Colo., a commuter pilot glided his twin-engine plane through a mountain pass to safely land in a cornfield Friday after both engines failed.

In Chicago, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mort Edelstein said the 737's engine landed in a nearby field.

"The engines are designed to detach if there is severe movement (such as vibrations) happening," said David Jimenez, a spokesman for Boeing Commercial Airplanes in Seattle.

The FAA and the National Transportation Safety Board were investigating the accident.

Scurry County Folks...

Even though Sam Walker doesn't like rattlesnakes, he has been hunting them for the past four years.

On the Friday afternoon this interview was conducted, Walker had 11 diamondback rattlers securely locked in a metal container which was then locked up in a shed behind his home.

Walker, lives eight miles south of Snyder on the Big Spring Highway, usually hunts with a couple of friends.

They include Pete Hester, who first introduced him to rattlesnake hunting, and Steve Babcock. He said he hunts for the snakes in various places. Sometimes he asks ranchers for permission to hunt for dens on their land and other times people just tell him where the rattlesnake dens can be found.

Sometimes he said he gets lucky and can find a profitable den of snakes and other times it is just a matter of "searching and hoping you find something."

He said it is possible to hunt alone but he called it "spooky" and said he prefers to have people with him.

Snakes can be found just about anywhere but snake dens or rat holes are the most likely spots to find the rattlesnakes, he said.

Once a den has been discovered, Walker said it is sprayed with gasoline and when the snakes begin to surface looking for fresh air he said they catch them with a long pole called a snake catcher. The snakes are placed in a container with a secure lid because they can escape easily if precautions are not taken, he said.

Sometimes other types of snakes and mice, rats and lizards also occupy a den, but Walker said he is only interested in catching the rattlesnakes.

Once the snakes start exiting a den, he said they can come out from one or more openings. He said snakes occupying a den can be numbered anywhere from 1-250 with 50 being the most he has trapped from one den. The newer dens, especially if they have not been hunted before, will yield more snakes.

Mainly Walker said he finds diamondbacks but occasionally some prairie rattlers can be found in this area. He said the diamondbacks are not as mean or aggressive as the prairie rattlers except for the small diamondbacks which have only one button and are hard to hear. He said the prairie rattlers are "mad all the time" and they will try to bite you.

However, Walker make it clear he never loses sight that both snakes pose a danger.

While Walker has never been bitten by a rattlesnake, he does take precautions such as wearing snake boots. He also carries suction cups for bite wounds and recently acquired a stun gun which is supposed to be very effective in snake bite cases. The probes of the stun gun are inserted into the snake bite wound and the resulting shock neutralizes the snake venom. Supposedly within 15 minutes the victim is no longer in pain.

Another thing Walker said he has never done is touch a snake. He handles them very carefully with a snake handler and keeps them securely locked up until he sells them.

Rattlesnakes usually bring from $3 to $3.50 a pound but in 1988 some buyers paid as much as $9 a pound. Buyers can be found in Sweetwater, Abilene, Lubbock and Snyder, he said.

Walker said he is already beginning to trap snakes for the 1989 roundup in Sweetwater. He has a pit which he also uses to keep his snakes until he is ready to sell them.

Walker said there isn't much to keeping snakes as long as they are watered. He said they can go without food for months, but after a few days without water they get to looking "worse and worse" he said.

He said he kept one snake two years and for the first 10 months it never ate anything. When it began to look "worse and worse" he said he mentioned it to Hester who asked him if he was watering the snake. At first Walker said he was incredulous but later after he began to water the snake it "perked up."

Snakes also stored in a container also need some type of light for warmth he said.

The 11 snakes he caught recently averaged about three to four feet in length.

Walker, who is the welding instructor at Western Texas College, hunts in his spare time. But he said it is something that can be done throughout the year. He said in the spring he can hunt every afternoon for a while if he has the time. He said the best times are in the fall when snakes

Afternoon vows join couple

CLYDE — Margie Celeste Anderson became the bride of Joel Wayne Griffin Jr. in an afternoon ceremony Jan. 1 at the Cherry Heights Baptist Church. Rev. Randal Hatfield, pastor of the church, officiated the double-ring vows.

The bride is the daughter of Margaret Garner of Clyde and J.D. Townsend of Shallowater. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel W. Griffin Sr. of Snyder.

Pianist Judy Hicks of Clyde played traditional wedding selections as guests were seated. Dorothy Reynolds sang "He Was There All the Time" and Julia Griffin, sister of the groom, sang "Above All Else," "God, a Woman, and a Man," and "He Has Chosen You for Me."

Given in marriage by the groom's father, the bride wore a winter white long-sleeved silk blouse with covered buttons and a winter white pleated skirt. Pearl hose and lizard pumps accented her attire.

A garland of peach baby's-breath, ivory baby roses and peach and gold streamers adorned her hair. She carried a nosegay of three long-stemmed Sonia roses and baby's-breath with peach and off-white streamers. She also carried a small, white leather Bible, a gift from the matron of honor.

Mrs. Richard Allen of Cross Plains served as matron of honor. She wore a silk blouse in peach and an ivory skirt. She carried a long-stemmed Sonia rose accented with baby's-breath and ivory ribbon streamers.

James Reynolds of Cross Plains, cousin of the groom, served as best man. Richard Allen was usher.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the fellowship hall of the church. The bride's table was covered with a floor-length peach cloth with lace accents. A floral arrangement of peach silk irises and daisies centered the table. Crystal candelabra holding peach tapers flanked the arrangement.

The three-tiered bridal cake was decorated with peach roses and was topped with a heart, white and peach silk flowers, and two entwined gold bands. Mrs. Elton Dickerson of Clyde served the cake and Lori Cherry of Baird served punch.

Assisting with the reception were Mrs. Richard Allen, Mrs. James Reynolds, Mrs. Troy Stone, and Sandy Cherry.

The groom is a Snyder High School graduate and is employed by Air-Tech Industries of Abilene. The couple will reside on the home ranch near Baird.

Succession plan makes easy transition

CLEVELAND (AP) — Every owner of a small business should have a succession plan, says Bert Zahn.

Zahn, a National City Corp. vice president, says this is needed to provide a smooth transition when he or she retires or dies unexpectedly.

He says the first step is to establish a schedule for passing control of the business into another person's hands. The next step is to select a successor, usually the second in command or a trusted manager. The third step is to prepare a successor report which is updated regularly and serves as a "how to" manual for the next leader.

REVIEW FINANCES FOR '89 PLANNING

If it's January, it must be time for new year's resolutions. Lose weight. Balance the checkbook. Visit your mother. Plan your funeral.

Plan your funeral? Considering what would happen to your family if you or any other wage-earner should die suddenly should be a normal part of an annual review of the family's finances.

January is an ideal time to go through "financial contingency day."

The purpose is simply to review all aspects of your family finances, update needed information and set goals for the coming year.

Its side benefits are helping you get records organized for tax purposes and having ready the financial information you'd need in case of a death, accident or major family crisis.

Several items to consider on a financial contingency agenda include:

—Write out a net worth statement. That means listing the value of all your assets, and listing all your debts. The difference between the two is your net worth.

—Plan your financial goals for the next year. Those could include such things as reducing your debt load, saving a certain amount in a college fund for the children, or financing a new car.

—Establish a household budget or revise last year's to reflect new financial goals and/or changes in the family's economic status. If one spouse is going back to work, going from part-time to full-time employment or retiring, for example, it will have a great impact on income and expenses.

—Check with your lawyer to have a will drawn up or to see that existing wills are up-to-date. Review how assets and property will be handled in case of a death.

—Prepare or review a letter of last instruction. The letter informs survivors of financial matters needing immediate attention and also describes what funeral plans, if any, you have made.

—Re-calculate survivor's income and expenses in case of a death of a wage-earner. Make out a tentative budget for survivors and list all sources of income they can depend upon.

Younger couples are often especially reluctant to go through this process, although they may need it most.

Young families often have higher debt load, more dependents and are less likely to have substantial resources to carry survivors through until they can get back on their feet financially. That makes some planning all the more important.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED — Mr. and Mrs. Gene Blessingame of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Pete Andrews of Loraine announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their children, Carla Teaff of Sweetwater and Carl Andrews of Loraine. The couple plans a Feb. 11 ceremony in the Loraine Lions Club. They will make their home southeast of Loraine. The bride-elect is employed by Myers Rent-N-Own of Sweetwater. The prospective groom is employed by Mitchell County, Precinct 4. (Private Photo) are going back to their dens or in the spring when they are getting ready to leave their dens.

Usually he hunts rattlesnakes about once a month - but sometimes - as often as two to three times a month.

Walker said that after that first snake hunt four years ago he couldn't "sleep for three days." But later he thought about it and decided that it would be something "interesting to do" and he said he likes the extra spending money which the snakes bring.

"It's fun to catch them because you never know what you'll find," he said.

Walker said his wife Linda doesn't exactly share his interest in snakes but sometimes she will go out with him to help catch snakes on the highways. One time last year he said they found about 25 snakes along the highway. He said one theory proposed was that there were so many snakes because they were part of a snake migration which is supposed to happen only about every 20 years or so.

Mainly though he said his wife doesn't object to his hobby as long he doesn't bring the snakes into their home. Walker's two sons, Kevin and Varin, have also occasionally hunted snakes.

Walker's other interest is a fishing resort in Canada which he owns along with Max Stephens. He said it has no electricity or telephones and he likes to work there in the summers.

Walker has lived in Scurry County since 1971 when he accepted his present position at WTC. He graduated from the Amarillo School of Vocational Arts and he is originally of Boise City, Okla.

Men show high cholesterol levels

NEW YORK (AP) — Health statistics show that one in four American men have a high blood cholesterol level (240 milligrams or more), which may increase their risk of heart disease.

Medical experts say men can achieve a "desirable" level of less than 200 milligrams by consuming less fat and cholesterol. Each 1 percent reduction in cholesterol, say experts, causes a 2 percent reduction in risk of heart attack — one of the leading causes of death among adult men. Nutritionist Barbara Beck of Dannon Yogurt suggests men lower fat and cholesterol intake by limiting meat, fish or poultry to 5 to 7 ounces per day, choosing only lean cuts of red meat and eating fish and skinless poultry more often.

She also recommends eating low-fat dairy products such as low-fat yogurt as an alternative to ice cream, or as a substitute for mayonnaise and sour cream in salad dressings and dips or on baked potatoes.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM RANCE BRUNSON

Grimes, Brunson wed in country ceremony

CLAIREMONT — Bobbi Lynn Grimes of Clairemont and William Rance Brunson of Bronte were united in marriage at 6 p.m. Dec. 31 at the Poverty Ridge Ranch owned by Manuel Davis. Rev. Gerald Aalbers, pastor of First Baptist Church of Jayton, performed the double-ring vows.

The bride's mother is Margie Hart of Clairemont. Parents of the groom are Anne Brunson of Snyder and the late Hiedel Brunson of Bronte.

Vows were exchanged with a country theme in a barn with bales of hay completing the decor.

Songs chosen for the occasion were "In the Garden" and "Forever and Ever Amen." An old, country waltz served as the wedding march.

Given in marriage by her mother, the bride was escorted by Von Hammack, her brother.

The bride was attired in an apricot gown of satin and chiffon bordered by white lace and trimmed with apricot ribbon. The fitted bodice featured a sweetheart neckline and three-quarter flounced sleeves.

A headpiece of porcelain roses held a waist-length veil of apricot tulle. The bridal bouquet of apricot and peach roses was trimmed with baby's-breath and ivory, apricot and emerald streamers. It was also carried by the bride's best friend at her own wedding.

Nicole Brunson, daughter of the groom, served as maid of honor. Sidney Kent Brunson, brother of the groom, was his best man.

Kattie Lynn Hart of Clairemont and Crystal Ann Robison of Post, nieces of the bride, were flower girls.

Myra Hart of Shallowater, the bride's niece, and Marcie Foster of Clairemont registered guests.

Heather Bell of Colorado City and DeVonne Hammack of Girard, nieces of the bride, passed rice roses to guests.

A barbeque and barn dance was held following the ceremony. The bride's table was covered in emerald satin and lace with candle accents of apricot and emerald. The three-tiered bridal cake was covered in white icing with accents of apricot roses and apricot and emerald trim. White Grecian pillars separated the tiers.

Lisa Robison of Post, Jane Hart of Hale Center, and Jenie Bell, sisters of the bride, served.

The couple will make their home in Snyder where the groom is employed with Sun Oil Co.

The bride attended TSTI and served in the Navy. She also taught and competed in ballroom dance while living in Virginia Beach, Virginia.

Pictures can lie

Today, you might win a court case by showing a photo in which a "no parking" sign has been removed and absolutely no one could tell, says Goldblatt. This is done with image manipulation, which is done electronically and cannot be detected. The old way which involved the photographic strip method was noticeable to the naked eye.

COW'S PERFORMANCE AND NUTRITION

The way a cow is handled during the winter will have an influence on her calf's future and next year's calf crop.

The cow's reproductive performance and the health and weaning weight of her calf are greatly influenced by her nutritional status throughout the year.

If a cow is allowed to calve in poor or thin body condition, the odds are against her to maintain a 12-month calving interval.

Cattle are usually fed hay during the winter, but if not enough energy is supplied by that hay, additional grains should be supplied.

Producers should have their hay tested to obtain the real protein content. This enables them to feed cattle without over- or under-feeding.

Producers also should make allowances for weather conditions. As temperatures drop and wind and rain increases, nutritional needs of cattle increase as much as 20 percent.

A dry pregnant cow can usually live on 20 pounds of average quality hay per day during the winter. But if hay quality is poor or the weather is cold and wet, an additional 2 to 3 pounds of a 20 percent protein supplement should be fed daily.

A cow nursing a calf needs about 5 to 6 pounds of a 20 percent protein supplement with about 22 pounds of hay per winter day. If weather conditions are bad, the supplement should be increased to 7 to 8 pounds per day.

bidding without peeking at the West or South cards. When South arrives at four spades, West leads the heart king and then the ace. What is your discard?

This kind of problem is more likely to be solved when it is presented as a sort of riddle than when it is confronted in the actual heat of card battle. However, if you follow the tip, you will think twice before simply shedding a club or a diamond. As a defender you need to make four tricks. Where are they? Your side has taken two heart tricks but is not likely to get anything in spades or diamonds. Furthermore, you may need to take club tricks quickly, since dummy's diamonds might allow South to discard club losers. The winning play is what every player worth his salt dreams about — East must trump his partner's ace and lead back a club.

For the late Helen Sobel, one of the great women players of all time, this play was routine when she held the East cards many years ago. But let me hasten to add that you should really carefully consider the alternatives before you rush to trump your partner's ace.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books. © 1989, NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.

Changes could be in the offing in the year ahead for your social life. Acquaintances of little constructive value are likely to be replaced by new friends who are loyal and helpful.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Do not make any major decisions hastily today that pertain to your career. If you guess wrong, they could lead you down a blind alley. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you to understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) A great deal could depend upon the way you handle yourself today when others make requests of you. If you are uncooperative, it could set a negative tone for their future actions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Be on your best behavior in social situations today. Guard against saying or doing anything that could give one who likes to put others down a chance to knock you to your friends.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Things that are of importance to you might not be of equal priority to your mate today. Don't set up a schedule that could cause clashes or a traffic jam.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you try to sell others on ideas or concepts today that you're not completely sold on yourself, your sales efforts could later come back to haunt you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) New projects should be started very cautiously today. Don't impulsively gear up to get something rolling without first knowing all of the costs involved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) There is a chance you might be kinder and more considerate of outsiders today than you will be with members of your own family. This could create resentment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Try to envision the outcome of results optimistically today. If you go in with a negative attitude, you'll be half whipped before you begin.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Give a wide berth today to a friend who has a unique faculty for complicating her life. She might try to draw you into something testy of which you needn't be part.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're likely to be in the spotlight today whether you desire it or not. Unfortunately, there may be a jealous observer who will be hoping you fall flat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though you'll feel strongly about your views, it may be best to keep them to yourself today, especially if you have to deal with someone who sees life from another perspective.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) In order for a joint venture to succeed at this time, it's imperative that the people with whom you're involved are exactly what they represent themselves to be.

Your Birthday

Jan. 23, 1989

Constructive contacts can be made in the year ahead through your organizational affiliations. Strive to participate in involvements that will enable you to display your talents to others.

ARIES (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your judgment in critical matters might not be up to par today, so be careful about making decisions that affect others as well as yourself. Talk things over first with the parties involved. Major changes are ahead for Aquarius in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In order to expedite a situation today, you might make some lavish promises to gain the support of others. Don't forget, if they produce, you'll have to up the ante later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Opportunities could slip through your fingers today, especially those of a financial nature if you treat today's events indifferently. Take serious matters seriously.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An important matter should be guided by your own hand today. If you leave it up to associates, the results could be far beneath your expectations.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Good ideas will count for little today if you fail to take positive measures to implement them. The secret to your success is to be both a thinker and a doer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Guard against tendencies today to expect more from developments than actual conditions warrant. Your balloon could burst if you build your hopes upon unrealistic premises.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In career involvements today your objectives aren't apt to be achieved if you rely more upon Lady Luck than you do upon hard work and your own abilities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your logic should be given precedence over your hunches or intuition today. If it doesn't compute in your mind, chances are it won't work if you try it in the real world.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Just because something is well packaged, it doesn't necessarily make it a real bargain. Be careful today or else you might be taken in by the glitter and overlook the value.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) People who are fond of you might be inclined to tell you what you'd like to hear today instead of rendering a frank opinion. Keep this in mind if you feel a need to seek advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Abide by common sense health habits today because you may have to deal with strong temptations to overindulge in some manner. Without proper self-discipline, there's a possibility you could stray.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) It could turn out to be a costly adventure for you today if you take as gospel the suggestions of an adviser, who you know from experience tends to exaggerate the worth of financial enterprises.

Darman says Bush firm against taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush's choice to be budget director shut the door on the prospect of tax increases to balance the budget a week after he suggested a number of revenue raisers.

Richard Darman, nominated by Bush to be director of the Office of Management and Budget, insisted during five hours of testimony Thursday that Bush was not wavering in his "read-my-lips" stand against tax increases.

Darman, who served as a White House aide and deputy Treasury secretary during the Reagan administration, was questioned at length about such things as higher gasoline taxes, boosts in levies on cigarettes and alcohol, taxing employee-provided fringe benefits and taxing a larger proportion of Social Security benefits for high-income beneficiaries.

In written responses provided to the Senate Governmental Affairs committee last week, Darman had suggested these various proposals, which would raise billions of dollars in new revenues, could be described as "user fees" or "benefit reductions" rather than taxes.

Democrats seized on Darman's written response as the first signal that the new administration might be receptive to revenue increases. Many Democrats in Congress believe Bush will eventually be forced to propose higher taxes to pay for the increases in education, day care and the environment which he is expected to seek.

Darman said Thursday, however:

"The president meant no new taxes as it would ordinarily be understood by ordinary Americans. I think the burden of that is the duck test — if it looks like a duck, it's a duck."

Darman, who repeatedly used the fowl analogy during the hearing, was presented by Sen. John

Glenn, D-Ohio, the committee chairman, with a mock trophy featuring three rubber ducks and the label: "If it quacks, it's a tax."

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said he believed Darman had left Bush with some "wiggle room" room on the tax issue despite Darman's protestations that Bush's feet were set in concrete.

Darman did carve out some exceptions that he said would not qualify as a tax, in part because the revenues raised would be relatively small.

One of those items, requiring state and local government workers to pay for Medicare coverage, would bring in an additional $2 billion next year. That idea was in Reagan's final budget and Bush has supported it in the past, Darman said.

Glenn predicted that Darman's nomination would clear the panel on Monday and be easily approved by the full Senate later in the week.

Suspect's trial set Monday

SAN DIEGO, Texas (AP) — A judge has set the trial for the second of 10 South Texas men charged with kidnapping and gang raping a 19-year-old woman for Monday after reconsidering a Feb. 6 postponement of the case.

District Judge Ricardo H. Garcia Thursday rescinded a decision to postpone the case.

Chew, 28, is one of 10 men accused in the kidnapping and gang rape of a San Diego woman last March. Chew is being tried for aggravated kidnapping, but still faces trial on other charges.

Jury selection had begun Tuesday in Garcia's 229th District Court in Duval County, but defense attorney Jaime Garza sought a continuance Wednesday because certain key defense witnesses had not been located.

The case was postponed by Garcia until Feb. 6. But defense attorneys said Thursday they wanted the jurors on the panel selected this week to remain on call for the case.

The judge disagreed with the idea and rescinded the postponement, calling for a Monday trial date for the case.

Chew, a Mexican national, has been in the Duval County Jail since March 31 in lieu of bonds totaling $70,000.

He was indicted last April on sexual assault and aggravated kidnapping charges, following the 19-year-old woman's report that she was abducted and raped by 20 or more men. Chew also was indicted in October in connection with an escape from the jail. He will be tried separately on the sexual assault charges.

The woman told authorities she was abducted on the night of March 26 and taken to a ranch north of town where an illegal cockfight was being held. She said she was raped and sodomized repeatedly by 20 or more men there and at two other locations.

A total of 10 men and a 14-year-old youth were charged in the case.

The first of the men to be tried, Orlando Garza, 24, was convicted here last Sept. 27 of sexual assault. A jury sentenced him to 20 years in prison.

The woman said she was abducted when she walked home in the dark from a family barbecue to check on her two children, who were staying with her mother because they had been ill.

Runcie waits for Waite's release two years later

LONDON (AP) — The archbishop of Canterbury Friday prayed for the safe release of his envoy, Terry Waite, whose fate remains a mystery two years after he left his Lebanon hotel to negotiate the release of foreign hostages.

"To observe a second anniversary is a disappointment, but we remain ever hopeful of his return," the Church of England's spiritual leader, Robert Runcie, said in a nationally broadcast sermon from a London church.

He also prayed for the release of all others "unjustly imprisoned" in Lebanon, where 15 foreigners are held hostage, including nine Americans.

Waite, 49, the policeman's son who became the personal emissary of Runcie, was last seen leaving the Riviera Hotel in Moslem west Beirut on Jan. 20, 1987, to meet with Shiite Moslem kidnappers. He told his Druse bodyguards he did not want them to escort him to the clandestine meeting.

Sources said Waite was driven to the home of a Shiite physician, where he apparently was to make contact with Islamic Jihad, a Shiite faction holding American hostages. The fate Waite often feared became reality: he was taken hostage.

No group has claimed to hold Waite or two other British hostages, journalist John McCarthy and teacher Brian Keenan, and no photographs or videotapes have been released to prove they are alive.

Britain's ambassador in Beirut, Allan Ramsay, said the men are probably being held in "deplorable conditions, deprived of freedom and most human contact."

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

(When it comes to sports information, we'll never blind anyone with our brilliance. However, we do have extensive training in bullfeather baffling. Soooooo...)

What'ya think about the big game this Sunday, guys? Hey, 49ers and Bengals, again! The old repeataroo of '81's "Sup Bowl 16". What a game! What a finale! A score of 26-21 and the ONLY Super Bowl in this decade with less than a 10 point difference. Action packed!

And whose coming back? The Man himself, the Big, the best money quarterback in the game today. Joe Montana. The man is a phenomenon. He has a beautiful wife, he raises horses and he's on a comeback at age 32. And that's with a bad back.

Hey, I know his hair looks a little funny coming out of the back of his helmet, but he's got class. He's got style. He's got almost a 60 percent passing completion record this season. He's got wideout Jerry Rice. I mean, that greedy sucker has grabbed in five TDs in the last two playoff games.

But, hey! Don't let me put down the "Boom." Mr. Esiason. Who can complain and excusez-moi. I mean, 3,572 yards passing for Cincy this year. That's almost 600 more than Joe baby, and I think Joe baby is great. But, 28 TDs for the Boomer and Joe's only got 18.

I know, I know. You're thinking there was some bench time for Joe, and you're right. And you're also thinking the running game took up some of that passing slack.

How about that 49er running game? You're talking balance. I mean, what's running back Roger Craig? Only a 1,500 yard season kind of guy, not counting his nine TDs.

But let's don't forget the Bengals' "Attack Offense." I know, some guys call it a gimmick with the no-huddle. But gimmick this. The Bengals led the league in points per game and yards per game. Hey, baby. The regular season ended and they had 6,000-plus combined net yards. That's 16 games. That's 378 yards a CON-test.

While we're comparing, Cincy wracked up 448 points this year. The Niners had 369, 3-6-9, that's more than an 11 touchdown difference.

But, I can hear you saying it. The Bengals play in the American Football Conference. They're AFC and the 49ers are NFC and the NFC has won the last four Super Bowls.

Hey, AFC this. The Bengals have the best offensive line in the country. Huge guys. I mean, they average 280 pounds and 6 ft. 5 inches tall, for crying out loud. Is that a bunch of gorillas or what?

So, here's how I see it. We'll figure the Bengals will be the underdogs. Maybe not big underdogs, but the second pick never the less.

And we love underdogs. And the Boomer's got all those quarterback stats. And he's younger than Montana. And Montana's getting all the press.

We're gonna call it Bengals. And we'll flip-flop that score from 1981. Make it 26 Bengals, 21 49ers.

No, wait a minute. Miami's Joe Robbie Stadium—who the heck is that guy, anyway—is real dirt and grass. Cincinnati has artificial turf where they come from.

Okay, okay, We'll still go with the Bengals, but call it by two-26-24.

(In actual fact, the writer of the above column has not watched an entire football game involving either team all season. The entire list of information was derived from a four-page information sheet, with comments, from NEA Sports. And who says sports writing is tough?)

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

Well, it was a typical country weekend out here at Camp Springs. Saturday morning the pastures, hills, and valleys were lightly dusted with snow, pale pink in the sunrise. There's something about a snowfall, however slight, that leaves a morning breathless.

I tried to stand out back, drinking in the view, but to be perfectly frank, that wind whipping around the corner of the house was icy, and I dang near froze my tail off. (You can only romanticize country living if you don't actually live in it.) I went scampering back into the house and took a cup of hot chocolate to bed.

Saturday afternoon we had a death in the family that was personally devastating to me. That's right—the VCR broke. I'd rented two movies, a PG for the whole family, and an old Bette Davis flick, "Dark Victory." From a friend, we'd borrowed "The Quick and the Dead," a Western starring Sam Elliot that I thought Kent would like.

There's never a convenient time for the VCR to break down, but a WEEKEND! That's TRAGIC. See, in the country, (unless you have a satellite dish, which we don't, and won't, if I have anything to say about it), you only get a couple of TV stations that come in clearly; network stations, of course. Have you NOTICED what they show on TV on Saturday nights? I mean, the "Golden Girls" is only a half-hour long, then you've got all those other hours in which to watch your IQ quietly drop 20 points.

There's nothing more miserable than renting movies—some of which are hard to find—and then not getting to watch them. You have to take them back unwatched. And paid for. I don't want to talk about it anymore. It's too sad.

We hardly had time to recover from the shock of the dead VCR when our big black came limping in with his hind foot all cut up. The kids depend on him heavily for 4-H horse shows, and we never know when he's going to mess around and lame himself. Had to fly in to the vet's to get combiotic and shot needles and antiseptic dressing and whatnot. Keep him penned up, which he hates. He pouted and refused to eat.

The next day, our pretty young sorrel got out into the sudan pasture and ate off untold numbers of seed heads, which is a bit rich for a horse's diet. He came in sick and wouldn't eat. When a horse gets colic, he can die from it. Fortunately, he had a mild case, but he was listless and laid around all day. These kinds of things can kill a husband with fretting. Kent spent Sunday taking down a stall fence that had practically blown down in the last dust storm. Afterwards, the horses poked around like a couple of nosey old ladies. They each have their own feed troughs now, and Gebu took twice as long to finish his cubes, luxuriating in them, turning his butt to the trough, munching with his eyes half closed. Big treat—not having to gobble down your food before your stallmate gets it.

We bandaged up Sox's foot good and tight and turned him out with the others. He was so excited he left his dinner half-eaten. Being kept up, to him, is punishment for something he didn't do. He can't wait to bust out of the joint.

Afterwards, Kent dug a trench past a gate, so that if it ever, EVER rains again good and strong, the excess water will be funneled off, instead of standing nasty in the lots. I hung around watching him toil while evening crept up on us and the sudan patch turned to burnished gold. A blue heron flew overhead in solitary splendor, and I'm here to tell you, there are few sights more marvelous.

Wispary mare's tail clouds set off a miniature rainbow Kent called a "sundog." Supposed to mean rain, he said. If you stood very still, you could watch the clouds stream past a moody half-moon, heading east.

Darkness gathered, the safety light clicked on, and Kent shot a few baskets with our son, out by the hay barn. Our dog, who loves all balls, thought they were doing it for his benefit, and barked the whole time in delight. Eventually we all got cold and headed in to the house for some home-made chicken and noodles. Time to gear down for a school day.

Everything that had seemed so aggravating 24 hours before now didn't seem so bad. There's something about a country weekend that makes even your problems seem mellow.

This note is from all the Brownie Girl Scouts in East Elementary Troop 192. Just a note to say thank you to all the local businesses that helped make our "sock-hop" a big success.

Thanks a bunch to Everybody's Thriftway, Lawrence IGA, Furr's, Perry's, Showcase Video, Thompson Ditching Service, Kmart and Domino's Pizza for all the donations we received.

When the conversion is completed, the building will house a 70 ft. by 84 ft. recreation area as well as three main assembly areas, 13 Sunday school classrooms and kitchen facilities.

MONDAY January 16

Scurry County commissioners Monday passed a resolution to support the Cogdell Memorial Hospital board in its "solicitation of interest" in providing medical services to the Texas Department of Corrections.

The BEST test, a requirement for employment with the Texas Department of Corrections, will be offered locally this Friday and will be the first in a series of BEST test dates here, it was reported Monday. It is expected the employment exam may be given as often as once per month.

Those interested in taking the test are advised to first go to the local Texas Employment Commission office to receive an appointment slip.

A 22-year-old criminal suspect was deemed incompetent to stand trial Monday morning in 132nd District Court and he was ordered to undergo treatment at a state hospital for a period of from 60 days to 18 months.

A 12-member jury was seated to adjudge the competency of Ernesto Roberto Aguilar, 22, of 706 26th St.

TUESDAY January 17

During 1989, the City of Snyder is expected to pay a lower rate to the Colorado River Municipal Water District for the water it receives, changing from the 1988 actual rate of 53.4 cents per 1,000 gallons to a projected figure of 46.7 cents, it was reported Tuesday.

The 46.7 cents is still only "projected" since it is based on a prediction for water usage provided by the city staff.

Henry Cisneros, mayor of San Antonio, was announced Tuesday as the speaker for the 1989 Snyder Chamber of Commerce banquet.

The event will be held in Scurry County Coliseum March 25—a Saturday.

WEDNESDAY January 18

As classes began Wednesday morning, some 960 students were enrolled at Western Texas College and college officials were predicting a final count in excess of 1,100.

Citing that a school district has both the "right and the duty to discipline students," District Judge Gene Dulaney Wednesday upheld the expulsion of a 19-year-old Snyder High School senior.

The student was expelled Dec. 8 by high school officials after telling an instructor the previous day he would like to "whip his ass," a threat deemed a "verbal assault" by administrators and the reason cited for the expulsion.

THURSDAY January 19

Bids to lay water and sewer lines to the Texas Department of Corrections prison site came in sufficiently low Thursday that city officials are now hoping the project may be built for some $400,000 less than initially projected and two months sooner.

With more than $500,000 in "contingency funds" built in, the current projection for the work is set at approximately $2.3 million. Last May, Snyder voters approved the sale of revenue bonds totaling $2.7 million.

The time frame for the work is 120 days or approximately four months, a period which will put completion in line with the end of construction of the Price Daniel Unit.

FRIDAY January 20

The BEST test, a requirement for employment with the Texas Department of Corrections, was offered for the first time Friday on the campus of Western Texas College to 40 applicants.

It is now expected the BEST test will be offered here again both in February and March.

Bids on the Texas Department of Corrections' industrial building at the Price Daniel Unit here, scheduled for opening Thursday, will be delayed for about two weeks as additional advertising requirements are met, it was reported Friday.

Bids on the 39,000-square-foot building were originally scheduled to be opened in Huntsville.

Aides defends Clements' choices

AUSTIN (AP) — Aides to Gov. Bill Clements are defending his most recent appointments to the University of Texas System Board of Regents after a state senator said the latest nominees were a slight to South Texas and Hispanics.

Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi said Thursday that Clements had "left us with a board of regents which has no Hispanic member. There are no blacks, no women; simply put, there are no minorities at all on the board."

Earlier this week, Clements named as new members of the nine-person panel: former GOP congressman Tom Loeffler, former state GOP chairman Chester Upham Jr. and Houston lawyer Robert Cruikshank.

Among those replaced was Mario Yzaguirre of Brownsville, the board's only Hispanic member.

Truan, chairman of the Senate Hispanic Caucus, said the Republican governor's action showed a lack of recognition of the needs of South Texas

Smoking linked to heart problems for first time

CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers reported Friday they have the first evidence directly linking smoking and heart disease, but tobacco industry officials rejected the claim, saying the illness can be tied to a number of causes.

The study's authors say smokers were three times more likely than non-smokers to have angina, or chest pains, and painless periods of inadequate blood flow to the heart.

An editorial accompanying the research in the Journal of the American Medical Association said the study was the long-sought "smoking gun" showing a link between smoking and heart ailments.

Gary Miller, a spokesman for the tobacco industry's Washington-based Tobacco Institute, disputed that, saying, "This is not really enough evidence to make such a claim."

Miller noted the study involved only two dozen smokers. Forty-one non-smokers also participated.

The study, based at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, was conducted by attaching a monitor to patients' hearts. The patients, all of whom had been diagnosed as having heart disease, wore the monitors for 24 hours while they went about their daily routines.

In tests from October 1984 to December 1987, the monitors showed 975 ischemic episodes, or periods of inadequate blood flow, 8 percent of which were accompanied by chest pains, the report said. The median number of episodes over 24 hours was three for smokers, one for non-smokers.

Dr. Andrew Selwyn, a co-author of the report and a Harvard Medical School associate professor, said ischemic episodes damage the heart temporarily and can lead to heart attacks.

But the short-term effects are "reversible and very treatable," the cardiologist said. "That's what makes it useful to show (the study) to patients and say 'Look, you haven't damaged your heart yet, so stop smoking now,'" he said.

"This is a solid piece of evidence you can show patients before they actually have a heart attack," Selwyn said. "I hope it's ammunition that doctors use to show patients as often as possible."

The Tobacco Institute spokesman, however, said "anything can cause these ischemic episodes. Caffeine, excitement can cause them."

The study showed that the episodes lasted longer among smokers, whose median episode lasted 24 minutes compared with 2 minutes for non-smokers.

Both frequency and duration increased as the number of cigarettes increased, the study said.

The accompanying editorial said research on smoking and heart disease until now has been based on indirect evidence.

What had been lacking was direct evidence, a "smoking gun" linking the two, wrote Dr. Peter F. Cohn of the Health Sciences Center of the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

residents. "Governor Clements has given us a board with no representation at all by anyone who resides in South Texas, the region of the state which historically has been the most severely deprived in the allocation of educational resources," Truan said.

The senator also noted that the appointments came at a time when the UT system is considering a merger with Pan American University, in Edinburg, and the state is trying to expand higher education in South Texas.

"It takes someone who really knows the problems confronting young Hispanics struggling to get a college education to relate that experience to someone who has never lived south of the affluent enclaves of San Antonio's north side," Truan said.

Clements wasn't available for comment. He was in Washington, D.C., attending President-elect George Bush's inaugural ceremonies.

A spokesman for the governor, deputy press secretary Jay Rosser, defended the most recent appointments and denied that Clements' isn't concerned about South Texas.

"UT is a statewide system. The governor's appointees reflect geographic diversity," he said.

Rosser also noted that Clements had appointed regent Sam Barshop, a San Antonio resident, in 1987, and said the governor has appointed Hispanics to numerous offices, including the Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Asked about the Truan charges, University of Texas System Chancellor Hans Mark said, "In order to be a good representative, it's not necessary that you actually ... be a woman, or be black, or Hispanic or anything else. I don't think that's a necessary condition."

"I think the three people who were selected by the governor are excellent. We look forward to working with them. Remember that we don't choose the people, we work with them," he said.

Last-day interior moves helpful

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interior Secretary Donald P. Hodel, in his last full day on the job, on Thursday lowered the rates oil companies pay for drilling on federal land and recommended opening the vast Alaska wildlife refuge to oil exploration.

The moves are aimed at boosting the nation's sagging oil production, spokesmen for the Interior Department said in telephone interviews Thursday.

Hodel's decision to cut the rental fees for drilling on federal land by up to two-thirds could

Fan Cries 'Foul' When Asked To Move in Crowded Theater

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old single male who frequently goes to movies alone. Sometimes, if the theater is quite filled, an usher will ask me if I would mind moving to another seat in order to accommodate a couple who want to sit together. This always happens just as the opening credits start to roll and the theater is dark.

I never refuse. The usher will then escort me to another seat, which means I have to carry my coat, popcorn and maybe a soft drink as I try to avoid stepping on some toes.

Abby, I always manage to get to the theater early to get a seat of my choice. Invariably the seat I am moved to is inferior for various reasons. (It's usually to the far left or right, and I like to sit in the middle section.)

Please tell me if it is theater etiquette for an usher to ask someone to move? They are always courteous, but that doesn't make up for giving up a good seat for one that's not as good.

Should I flatly refuse to move? What would you do?

IN THE DARK

DEAR IN: Much would depend on the circumstances. I would move in order to let an adult sit with his or her child, or to accommodate a physically disabled person who needs an aisle seat. But I would decline to move to an inferior location to accommodate an able-bodied couple who want to sit together. (They should manage to get to the theater early — as you do — to ensure sitting together.)

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 29-year-old single male who frequently goes to movies alone. Sometimes, if the theater is quite filled, an usher will ask me if I would mind moving to another seat in order to accommodate a couple who want to sit together. This always happens just as the opening credits start to roll and the theater is dark.

I never refuse. The usher will then escort me to another seat, which means I have to carry my coat, popcorn and maybe a soft drink as I try to avoid stepping on some toes.

Abby, I always manage to get to the theater early to get a seat of my choice. Invariably the seat I am moved to is inferior for various reasons. (It's usually to the far left or right, and I like to sit in the middle section.)

Please tell me if it is theater etiquette for an usher to ask someone to move? They are always courteous, but that doesn't make up for giving up a good seat for one that's not as good.

Should I flatly refuse to move? What would you do?

SAVANNAH COP

DEAR COP: When my children were in grade school, the police department sent officers into their classrooms to teach the children that the police officers were their friends. If Savannah doesn't have such a program, it should have.

DEAR ABBY: My 16-year-old daughter attends one of three public high schools in Sacramento specifically designed to serve the needs of expectant or new parents. There are 83 girls and two boys presently enrolled at her school.

Since many of these teen-age moms will continue to live at home, the principal of "Kelly's" school asked me to write something for their newspaper from a grandmother's point of view. I thought you might like to share the enclosed message with the rest of the nation, some of whom may be facing similar circumstances.

A GRANDMOTHER AT 83

AN OPEN LETTER TO MY DAUGHTER:

Soon, my darling daughter, you are going to become a mother yourself and we will add another family member to our household. Now is the time to discuss some of the drastic changes about to take place in your lifestyle. Since you have chosen to remain at home, it is important that you have a clear understanding of what will be expected of you after the birth of your child.

You will be playing a dual role, and it may be difficult for you. On one hand, you will be my CHILD, my responsibility. You will be expected to honor the same rules and regulations as your brothers and sisters. This includes doing your chores, cleaning your room, honoring your curfew and being respectful to your parents. If you are disobedient or uncooperative, you will be disciplined in the usual manner.

On the other hand, however, you will be a MOTHER, and your child will be your responsibility alone. When he needs tending to, tend to him. This means that if you are gossiping on the phone with a friend and the baby begins to cry, you will have to hang up and take care of his needs. You cannot ignore his wails (it would be too nerve-wracking for the other family members), and you cannot pass the task to one of us (it's not our responsibility). "Get the baby, Mom — I'm on the phone" will not be tolerated. Also, don't expect a built-in baby sitter on a moment's notice.

In exchange, I promise to try not to interfere with your child-rearing decisions unless you are endangering the baby by neglect or abuse. If I slip and give some unsolicited advice, simply lift an eyebrow and give me "The Look," and I will shut up.

Now, don't panic. It's not that I won't help at all. Naturally, I will be thrilled with my new grandchild and will gladly spend countless hours with him (or her), but only when it's convenient for me, or prearranged, or an emergency. Also, I will answer any questions you may have, or show you how to do something when you ask for my assistance. And I won't mind baby-sitting if you ask ahead of time and I have made no plans. In other words, I will be there to help you, but from a distance. You are just one step away from adulthood, and now it is my job as your mother to step back and let you test your wings.

I love you, and I'm looking forward to watching you raise your child. I'll bet you will be a terrific mom!

AIDS funding facing tough fight ahead

AUSTIN (AP) — A full-fledged legislative fight over the state's role in combating AIDS is on the horizon as lawmakers will consider a whole range of issues from funding to anti-discrimination measures.

"It's going to be a very tough battle," said the Rev. Chris Steele of Houston, an Episcopal priest who headed a task force on AIDS that drew up 120 recommendations for the Legislature to consider.

She said state Sen. Carl Parker's remarks earlier this week that funding AIDS programs was like "pouring money down a rathole" is indicative of the struggle that lies ahead.

Lawmakers already have attacked several task force recommendations. But Ms. Steele, who gave the opening prayer for the Senate when the session convened Jan. 10, said she is ready to lobby hard on behalf of the task force's work.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said the state should focus its attention on diseases that can be controlled, such as diabetes, instead of AIDS.

"He set himself up for a real challenge. I'm assured by other members of the Senate that he is not representative," said Ms. Steele.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who often has spoken of the need for increased health spending, was nearly non-committal when asked how much money is needed to fund AIDS programs. "I'm sure we need a great deal more than we can afford," is all he would say.

Texas is one of the most tight-fisted of big states in attacking the problem.

The state has the fourth-largest AIDS population, but is 13th in funding. More than 5,300 Texans have been diagnosed as having acquired immune deficiency syndrome and that number is expected to grow to 45,000 by 1992.

The Texas Department of Health has requested $49.2 million for the two-year budget cycle for AIDS programs. The budget under consideration would allocate current levels of spending — $3.4 million in education and counseling and another $3 million for the drug AZT, which is used to treat some AIDS patients.

The major recommendations of the AIDS task force include passage of a law prohibiting discrimination of AIDS victims; increased coordination between community-based services; and stepped up education and awareness programs in the public school system.

"Anti-discrimination is the centerpiece of any effort that will encourage people who think they may have the virus to avail themselves to the health care services that they need," Ms. Steele said.

She said the controversy stirred by Parker may be just a preview of tougher battles.

"I'm disappointed that this should be the first rattle out of the box," she said.

Plano NAACP chapter angered by girl's arrest

PLANO, Texas (AP) — Leaders of the Plano chapter of the NAACP — angered by the classroom arrest of a 15-year-old black student — want a citizens police review board created.

In meetings Thursday with Plano police Capt. Tom Ashley and school board President Allan Bird, Howard Breckenridge, president of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and six other leaders criticized the Jan. 11 arrest and follow-up investigation.

The girl was charged with assaulting a police officer after allegedly scuffling with officer Mark McClendon at Clark High School. The officer was giving a lecture on drug abuse when he apparently called on the girl by the wrong name and an argument followed.

Police said McClendon had to use a neck hold to restrain the girl. "There is no justice in police policing themselves," Breckenridge said. "By creating a citizens review board, police won't be so quick to overreact when they see minorities. I believe the Police Department is just not sensitive to blacks."

"There's nothing about AIDS that is good, there's no way its going to be politically popular," she said, but she believes once legislators are educated about the epidemic they will respond with compassion.

"The politician who is willing to vanguard a humane response to AIDS is tomorrow's hero. I think we have more heroes down the road than we've had in the past," she said.

Twins are born 12 days apart

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Premature twins have been born 12 days apart through a rare medical procedure that allowed the second infant to develop more fully before delivery, doctors say.

On Jan. 5, Norma Landez gave birth to Aaron Jacob, who was more than two months premature and weighed only 2 pounds, 6 ounces and had to be placed on a respirator.

But his brother, Joshua David, was still protected in his mother's womb in an intact fluid-filled membrane.

Doctors at Humana Women's Hospital used surgery and medication to prevent Joshua David's birth for another 12 days so that his lungs could develop so he would not have to be placed on a respirator when he was born Tuesday.

"To have one baby and still be pregnant sounds like a (National) Enquirer headline," Mrs. Landez, a chemist at Kelly Air Force Base, said Thursday. "I could tell he was growing more quickly."

The infants were doing well, although they were expected to remain in the hospital another week or two until they weighed at least 4 pounds, 8 ounces each.

Dr. Mark Paine, Landez's obstetrician, said the success of the procedure should encourage other physicians to try the technique.

"The main advantage is adding time for the second baby to grow more mature," he said.

Paine said the procedure was being used more frequently in Europe where the separation between births of one twin and another had been delayed as long as five weeks.

"We have seen a few hours go by between first birth and the second, but we have never seen days go by — and I've been practicing for 20 years," said Dr. Melvin Baden, the newborn specialist caring for the twins.

The boys were not due until March 25.

What is the cure for colon fungus?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My brother has been diagnosed with colon fungus. The doctor gave him a tube of cream to use but it has not done any good. Is this the best medicine for this ailment?

DEAR READER: I doubt it. Yeast infections of the bowel are best treated with medicine, such as Nystatin, taken in liquid form. The cream may be useful when applied topically to the anus, which can become quite sore and irritated from bowel yeast infection.

However, any real cure will probably occur only if your brother is given a systemic anti-fungus drug that acts to kill the yeast inside his body. He should ask his doctor about this or obtain a second opinion from a gastroenterologist.

I suggest the option of a second opinion because yeast infection of the colon is unusual in healthy persons. Since antibiotics kill bacteria that normally inhibit yeast present in the bowel, prolonged use of these medicines can upset the delicate balance of the bowel flora (micro-organisms within the intestine.) If your brother has recently taken antibiotics, he can easily replenish some of his intestinal bacteria by eating yogurt or Lactinex, a compound that provides harmless bacteria.

On the other hand, your brother could have diabetes. This and other metabolic diseases are associated with overgrowth of intestinal yeasts. Therefore, I believe that he needs a second opinion as to why he developed a yeast infection in the first place.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Seven years ago my husband was put on Lopressor for angina. He retired five years ago, has had no pain, but the doctor wants to keep him on the medicine. He's always cold and has little energy. What are his options?

DEAR READER: Angina is heart muscle cramp due to poor oxygen supply to cardiac muscle. It is helped by a variety of drugs, such as nitroglycerine, beta-blockers and calcium-channel blockers. Lopressor (Metoprolol), a beta-blocker, is one such drug. It acts to reduce the work of the beating heart and to lower blood pressure. Lassitude and a feeling of being cold are common side effects of Lopressor.

However, these symptoms can also be caused by arteriosclerosis, the very arterial blockage that is associated with angina. Therefore, I do not know whether your husband is experiencing symptoms from his disease or from the medication. His doctor can figure this out, however, and that's where your husband should seek help.

Evidently the Lopressor is preventing angina, inasmuch as your husband is pain-free. Nevertheless, he may need an adjustment in his dose of Lopressor. Or, as an alternative, the doctor may choose to use another drug, such as nitroglycerine, in place of the Lopressor. This is the sort of therapeutic decision best made by the patient and the doctor working together.

Group tries to curb poverty

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Investing in America's youth, through child-care development and education programs and not in more welfare programs, could help reduce the number of chronically impoverished Americans, the head of an effort to reduce persistent poverty says.

James Gibson, director of the Equal Opportunity Program of the Rockefeller Foundation, which is looking into the problem, said that the country's chronic poor more than tripled between 1970 and 1980 and that the majority of those were minorities.

Because minority groups are steadily growing, the problem of persistent poverty needs to be rectified because those groups will need to enter the job market by the next decade in order to meet the country's labor demands, he said.

"If we ever grow to accept that some people could and should remain permanently in circumstances that put them in the lower permanent class, then we change the character of society, then we remove the basis of optimism and that, in turn, means we get the potential for civil strife that could be ultimately destructive," Gibson said.

The Rockefeller Foundation is expected to spend about $100 million over the next five years to find out why and try to erase some of the causes of persistent poverty by examining people in six ethnically and racially diverse cities.

Those involved in the study have gathered this week in San Antonio, which along with Denver, Boston, Washington D.C., Oakland and Cleveland, are being studied.

Gibson said San Antonio historically has been a low-income city and is worse off than the others. He said Boston and Washington, because of current economic vitality, are better off than the other six cities.

Programs in Oakland, Washington and Denver were among the first funded and are farther along in their research of the poverty problem, Gibson said.

He also said that stressing education at a young age is essential to erasing some of the poverty problems, but that it should not stop there.

"Investment in the young is something that we'll see more and more tangible manifestation of in the society," Gibson said.

What's ahead in the New Year?

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

Tastes change.

Writing in Art and Antique magazine, author Hugh Kenner described the then-contemporary reactions to the 1913 International Exhibition of Modern Art, a collection of 1,200 works shown at the Armory of the 69th Regiment in New York City. "Not mad but leaning effrontery," wrote Kenyon Cox, artist, of Matisse. The whole show was "heart rending and sickening." Ganguin was no creator; no "decorator tainted with insanity." Cezanne simply "incompetent." To have looked at the show, thought artist Cox, was "to have passed through a pathological museum where a layman has no right to go." He feared lest people form a craving for this kind of thing, as for any other "poisonous drug." Picasso and the post-impressionists were vilified because they chose, in their art, to present subjects other than landscapes, sunsets and fully attired ladies with parasols.

Today, these artists are considered to be brilliant, far-sighted, creative revolutionaries whose works command fortunes and are eagerly sought for museums. Yet few of these geniuses enjoyed recognition, popularity and success during their lifetimes.

Our diets, too, have changed. Yorkshire pudding, the pastry made with roast-beef drippings, is rapidly going the way of heavy cream, egg custard and hard sauce. Cholesterol-conscious consumers are turning to lighter foods. Mom (with her hang-ups) and apple pie (with its cholesterol) may not be as American today as diet-conscious stepmothers and low-fat yogurt.

The slide rule has become a curioity, having been replaced by calculators and computers. Many people no longer possess the skills to balance their checkbooks without using electronic devices.

The diagnosis and treatment of illness have also been altered by new technology. Magnetic resonance imaging and computed tomography permit doctors to view the interior of the living body with a clarity that would have astonished practitioners a generation ago. Modern vaccines and antibiotics prevent and cure diseases that were scourges in years past. However, in some respects, physicians have become slaves to the very machines and tests that were, within recent memory, simply tools.

Will we, like the art critics almost a century ago, change our beliefs about what is beautiful and desirable? Will cream sauces and slide rules someday achieve ascendancy, as our perceptions again mutate in that most glorified of human peculiarities: the cycle of styles? Will tomorrow's doctors relearn to rely on their eyes, ears and hands, instead of robotic medicine? Perhaps. Time will tell.

Some things never change, though. New Year's resolutions, for instance. People continue to make lists of resolutions — hopeful little behavioral promises — at the start of each year. In the holiday spirit of going from the sublime to the ridiculous, I herewith submit my own list of New Year's resolutions.

- Brush after meals.
- Ignore ring-around-the-collar.
- Try a little tenderness.
- Take out the garbage.
- Buy American.
- Write a fan letter to Jessica Hahn.
- Save the whales.
- Hold my head up high when I walk through a storm. Carry coals to Newcastle. Know when to say when. Decide whether alcoholism is a disease.

Answer a fan letter from the American Chiropractic Association. Chart a collision course with destiny.

Buckle up. Say I'm sorry when I'm not. Reach out and touch someone. Serve Prince spaghetti on Sunday night.

Be kind to my web-footed friends. Read a diet book without laughing. Say no to anabolic steroids.

To be, rather than not to be. Signal for a fair catch.

Follow the yellow brick road.

There. Now that that's done, I can sit back and see what the New Year will bring.

Convicted man waits for court ruling

LOVELADY, Texas (AP) — In his white uniform, in a room bound by metal bars, convicted police killer Randall Dale Adams describes the seemingly endless waiting game he plays.

It's a game he's accustomed to after more than 12 years in state prison, mostly at the Eastham Unit, a sprawling prison farm in East Texas sometimes called America's toughest.

But even after a judge ruled in his favor last month in a request for a new trial and the movie "The Thin Blue Line" questioned his guilt in the 1976 fatal shooting of Dallas police officer Robert Wood, Adams, now 40, doesn't expect his waiting to end soon.

"I'm still at Eastham" is the refrain of his conversation.

"Don't think 13 years is the ending to it, because it's not," said Adams, who has been serving a life sentence since his death sentence was commuted in 1980. "This is the beginning of the end, but it's taken 13 years to get back to square one."

At a Dallas hearing in December, state District Judge Larry Baraka ruled that Adams did not receive a fair trial. The judge recommended he be granted a new one or set free.

At that hearing the key witness against Adams changed his story and testified that Adams didn't commit the murder and wasn't even in the car Wood stopped just before he was gunned down. But David Ray Harris, now on Death Row for another killing, stopped short of saying he pulled the trigger himself in Wood's slaying.

Baraka's recommendation is now before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which could take as long as two years to act upon it, attorneys say.

Adams and his lawyer also are working on alternative plans for his release.

One option is a pardon. Adams and his Houston attorney, Randy Schaffer, are trying to enlist Baraka and other Dallas officials to ask the state Board of Pardons and Paroles for a pardon recommendation, which would be forwarded to the governor.

Then there is parole. Adams has been denied parole eight times, most recently on Jan. 10, according to state records.

Parole board spokeswoman Karin Armstrong said Adams' case would next be up for official review in December. But, she said, as early as March his case could get special reviews, which the board is conducting more often because of prison crowding.

Baraka said he plans to write to the six-member board asking that Adams be granted parole.

"Listening to the evidence, there's reasonable evidence to believe the man's not guilty or didn't get a fair trial," the judge said. "As far as I'm concerned, it's all done—over."

Baraka said it isn't his place to ask that Adams be pardoned.

But if Adams is granted a new trial, Baraka said he doubts the state would pursue the case because so many witnesses have changed their stories.

Using evidence from the Errol Morris film "The Thin Blue Line" and a Fox television documentary, Schaffer tried last month to discredit Harris and other state witnesses including Wood's partner, officer Teresa Turko. She gave conflicting descriptions of the gunman's car when Wood was killed. Three people who claimed to be witnesses to the shooting also had their testimony scrutinized.

Adams contends prosecutors wanted to convict him instead of Harris because Harris was only 16 at the time and, if convicted as a juvenile, would have been released at 18. Adams was 27.

Adams says he doesn't know why Harris came forth to clear him. He speculates that because Harris is on Death Row, he may be trying to clear his conscience.

"It would be nice for me and my family to believe that he really cares and wants to undo the wrongs he did us," Adams said. "I don't know if that's really true or not."

Adams believes his chances for release now are better than ever, and he credits "The Thin Blue Line."

"I hope he (Morris) wins an Oscar," said Adams, who has seen the film four times. "I believe he will for best documentary."

Adams says he reaps no financial rewards from the movie, that his only benefit was use of evidence Morris uncovered.

The film has attracted worldwide attention to Adams' case, prompting many letters and frequent requests for interviews.

Although he is "well-known" in the Eastham Unit, Adams says he tries to draw a line between his private life and the publicity by putting his court proceedings out of mind.

"Yes, I have to leave that aside at most times," Adams said. "I can't just sit at my house (cell) and think of this all day long."

He says he believes his family — his mother and two sisters in Ohio, a brother in Florida and another brother whose whereabouts are unknown — also try to put the ordeal aside to live their own lives.

Nostalgic final hours in the White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan paid a last, sentimental visit to the Oval Office Friday, dropped off a handwritten note wishing George Bush well, then left the White House with the words, "Keep the faith."

His comment came in response to reporters who asked if he had any final thoughts for the American people.

Earlier, softly calling out "goodbye" and waving to a small knot of staff members and journalists, Reagan walked for one last time down the colonnade that connects his West Wing office to the executive mansion.

Reagan visited the office he'd used as the nation's 40th president to check that all was in order and to leave the note for his successor, said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

As their final social event in the executive mansion, Reagan and his wife Nancy then treated Bush and his wife Barbara, Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn, and the members of the congressional inaugural escort committee to coffee and pastries in the Blue Room of the executive residence.

Fitzwater, who was present in the Oval Office, said Reagan was greeted by his national security adviser Lt. Gen. Colin Powell.

"The world is quiet today, Mr. President," Powell told the president.

Fitzwater said the last piece of paper Reagan signed was a letter to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, thanking her for staunch support over the years.

On their last morning in the residence, the first couple spent a few quiet moments together in the private quarters, walking hand-in-hand down its long central hallway and spending a few moments in the Yellow Oval Room, where the windows overlook the Washington and Jefferson Memorials, said Mrs. Reagan's spokeswoman, Elaine Crispin.

As a present to Mrs. Bush, Mrs. Reagan left a large, long-stem orchid plant in the presidential bedroom, Mrs. Crispin said.

As the Reagans, Bushes and Quayles posed for pictures on the north porch of the White House, Bush was asked if he had any thoughts for Reagan on the president's last day in office. Only, Bush replied, "to wish him the very best as he leaves this job he did so well."

On the eve of his departure from the White House, Reagan expressed his confidence in both the nation and his successor, calling Bush "the man who should be in this office replacing me."

Before departing for Capitol Hill, the president and first lady also bade a private farewell to the household staff in the residence.

After Bush's swearing-in, the Reagans travel by helicopter from Capitol Hill to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, from where they will fly to Los Angeles.

On the eve of his inaugural, Bush and Reagan met privately for about 10 minutes in the Oval Office, reminiscing about their eight years together. Then the pair went next door to the Roosevelt Room to bid farewell to about 80 senior members of the White House staff, Fitzwater said.
