Rain — powerful rain dropped in some sections of Martin County again the past weekend. In Stanton approximately five-tenths of an inch was added to the more than previously recorded six and one-half inches in the past 33 days. In the Lubbock area, farmers are complaining now about too much damp weather. While down in East Texas, around the Gilmer-Texarkana-Tyler-Longview-Henderson area they are yelling drouth. That's a switch in the weather picture for a change. Palo Duro Canyon was flooded pretty badly Monday night. One lad was drowned there. Amarillo is just about 21 miles from the scene of the high water.

Some of the rainfall here Sunday night was accompanied by hail. J. C. Sale told us Monday morning that long, narrow strip of land caught the brunt of the hail offensive in his area of the county. He said the hailstones were larger than he had seen in a long time. The Woody Brothers place was reported damaged by some hail and our informants advised that the Badgett community was hit pretty hard. No hail was reported in other sections of the county.

We enjoyed watching young Randy Murdock, son of Police Chief and Mrs. Johnny Murdock, while his mother was shopping in Friendly Food Monday afternoon. Randy was all over the place — having the time of his life. When he spotted your writer in the vicinity of his mother's shopping cart he commanded: "That's my Mama's purse in there." Perhaps the instinct of good officers is somehow passed along to their boys because we didn't realize we might be under "suspicion" in Randy's eyes until he voiced the statement. We assured Randy we had no intentions of going about the shopping basket. The lad raced over to the milk counter and called to his mother, "Mama we need this." Mrs. Murdock was as busy putting back Randy's selections as she was making purchases. He is a real American lad and a very fine looking youngster too.

Congratulations are in order to an organization that consistently brings good publicity to our county. We refer to the Martin County Sheriff Posse. The riders have been clipping coupon honors left and right lately. The local posses claimed first place at the Big Spring Rodeo, copped, and that's a good word, first place at the Andrews County Junior Rodeo, and are off this week for Lamesa to ride in a parade and then will journey to other towns to help put our county on the map. Good luck to you and your fine posse members Sheriff Dan Saunders.

Most of the area radio station news reporters were still asleep at the mikes as far as the Stanton storm story was concerned at noon Wednesday. After all, it really doesn't matter much. With only four per cent of the American listening audience at their command, and with 15 stations in the Basin splitting up that small chunk of the national news melon, very few folks would have received the message anyway. Anyway you call the square, you can't beat the printed words along with a good, clean picture. Play It Leon!

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos Brantley and family were in El Paso last week. Mr. Brantley attended a business meeting and Mrs. Brantley and family vacationed.

Connally Puts Ax To Vital Bill

We in West Texas have seen the smiling face of John Connally, governor, telling the people "what a good job all of his yesmen have done in Austin."

Every college of junior variety in Texas with the exception of a half dozen have been put on the taxpayers back by gaining senior status under John's administration.

Every other bill in Texas wanted by the money spenders has been approved.

BUT JOHN VEOTED THE SCREW-WORM BILL! Why?

Dolph Briscoe Jr., co-chairman of the Texas Screwworm Eradication Committee, said unless the money is appropriated for the program later "there will be risked the loss of the investment the producers have already made in the program."

More than 100,000 livestock producers raised about $3 billion to support of the program, including $1 million last spring, under the assumption that the state would appropriate money also, Briscoe said in a news release.

The federal government matches money available for the program from private or state sources.

BELLS TOLL FOR BELVUE SIGN—The weather bells sounded finish to the big sign symbolic of oil production in the area and located on Motel Belvue Restaurant grounds late Tuesday night. The derrick type structure with the revolving beacon flasher at the top hit the soil with a dull, muffled thud. The windstorm had deprived highway travelers hunting for overnight accommodations and airplane pilots flying overhead of a monumental direction signaler with just one strong thrust of power. The sign will go back up soon. That's a promise from Mr. and Mrs. Roy Kelly, owners of Motel Belvue.

CASUALTY OF THE STORM—The huge 20-million pound capacity grain storage elevator under construction on the property of Raymond Straub's chemical company in the city limits of Stanton was heavily damaged by the near-hurricane force windstorm that hit the city just before midnight Tuesday. The big grain reservoir was caved in on the north side by the titanic wind blast. Straub estimated a two-week setback on the construction time table after the storm damage. The big grain elevator will be completed in late July. Construction work started on the big storage facility in January of this year.

Midnight Blow Rakes Small Area

A severe windstorm stealthily swooped down on Stanton at 11:45 p.m. Tuesday night and furious winds struck down a long familiar oil derrick sign near Motel Belvue Restaurant and caused other serious property damage.

Most local resident were sound asleep when the second windstorm in less than 20 days picked the near midnight hour to strike the city. Strange enough, the path of the storm appeared to be almost a copy of the earlier blow that wrecked the concession stand on the high school campus and caused heavy damage to the roof and home economic rooms of Stanton High School.

The tower-type sign at Motel Belvue with the revolving beacon light on the top, a storied signal to pilots crossing Martin County since 1955, tumbled over and made a sound like a muffled explosion when it hit the ground. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Kelly, owners of the restaurant, heard the big derrick collapse. Alton Turner, a nearby resident, also heard the noise made when the big sign was blown from the five-foot concrete foundation.

Turner said: "It sounded like some sort of crash — a smothered explosion and then a heavy thud — and the light was not there seconds later when I looked out my window."

Brown's Texaco Service Station, open for all night business, caught a blast from the big blow when rolling debris struck a car parked in the driveway. The car belonged to John Short, station attendant.

Health And Safety Tips

From The American Medical Association

Fishing is one of America's most popular participating sports. Literally millions of men, women and children spend at least a day or two every summer sitting on the bank or floating about in a boat with the hope that a fish will take their bait.

Unless you are the vigorous type who wades through racing rapids or rows hard for miles, fishing is mild exercise for most of us. It's one of the best forms of therapy available to get out in the fresh air and sunshine, clear the cobwebs from the mind and recoup from a hard week at the office.

Fishing is good for body and spirit, but it has some built-in safety hazards. Most of them can be avoided.

The most common fishing accident is catching a barbed hook in the flesh, usually a finger or hand, but sometimes a leg or other part of the body. Lures and hooks left lying unprotected on a dock or in the bottom of the boat cause many of these accidents. Baiting a hook often leads to an accident.

The wise fisherman guards against hook accidents by shielding the hook. One simple way to do this is to stick a small cork over the barb. Lures should be stored in the tackle box until needed, and returned promptly to the box when removed from the leader. The band of your favorite fishing hat is, of course, a reasonably safe place to keep lures you intend to use later in the day.

Fly or bait casters are responsible for many hook accidents to their fellow fishermen. Particularly dangerous are the "siders," who cast with a side arm motion rather than overhead. Train yourself to look before each cast to make certain no one is in the way. This will also save lures from snagging on trees and bushes as you cast.

In removing a hook from the fish, hold the fish firmly under the gills, so that its head can't flop or wiggle. A freshly caught fish is slippery and hard to hold. Get a firm grip before dislodging the hook.

If, despite precautions, a hook becomes imbedded in your hand or finger, don't try to pull it out. Your physician will snip off the shank and push it through, thus causing less further damage to torn flesh. The doctor also will, if necessary, administer antibiotics and tetanus toxin. Hook wounds often lead to infection unless treated by a physician.

Fishing is fun. A fish hook through the hand can spoil the day. With care it can be avoided.

Pollster Bill Draws Veto By Connally

Governor Connally vetoed the controversial "anti-Belden Poll" bill.

The bill, by Senator W. T. Moore of Bryan, would have required commercial public opinion poll takers to tell the secretary of state where and how they got their information. Moore referred to the measure as "the anti-Belden Poll bill" when asking the Senate to approve it.

The House passed it 97-45 May 23 over protests that it resulted from Lt. Gov. Preston Smith's alleged grudge against the poll firm operated by Joe Belden of Dallas over surveys taken during the lieutenant governor's race.

The bill was amended in the Bible Comment—

Common Sense Is Needed In Christian Life

The Christian way of life and conduct, if one accepts and proposes to follow it, ought to be simply and easily defined. Is it not to love God with all the heart, strength and soul and mind, and to love one's neighbor as one's self?

Yet it is obvious in the pages of the New Testament and in the religious life of all times, including our own, that religious people have been deeply concerned about the problems of daily conduct. They have differed widely about questions of right and wrong and have often been harsh in their demands and judgments upon those whose ideas have not coincided with their own.

There are reasonable standards of moral judgment that would mark the proper conduct of a Christian while avoiding great extremes of undue Puritanism and undue license. They can be found in studying the words and example of Jesus in relation to matters of conduct.

So often, we are too inclined to relate the teachings of Jesus to the supreme matter of faith and life without paying sufficient attention to specific instances.

A striking instance concerns the Sabbath. It was made for man, Jesus said, and not man for the Sabbath. Thoughtful Christian history, punctilious observers carried to extremes observances of the letter of the Sabbath.

There are enough real sins and wrong to fight without creating artificial sins out of matters that are neither against God nor against one's fellow men.

Goodness needs always the strong

Philosopher Sees No Way To Avoid Spending More And More On Space Exploration

(Editor's note: The Martin County Philosopher on his grass farm on Mustang Draw reverses himself and comes out in favor of a trip to the moon, for others.)

Dear editor:

I wouldn't want to be in the position of the man who told the Queen of Spain she was nuts to spend her jewelry on Columbus' trip, that she had better spend it improving the lot of her own people, but the thought comes to mind as the politicians and scientists argue the value of spending billions to put a man on the moon.

In the first place, who's to say the man talking to the Queen wasn't right? I mean, I can't see any noticeable gain Spain has ever made by the discovery of America, and I'm not sure the average Spaniard is any happier living on a round world than he was on a flat one. On the other hand, of course, if she hadn't spent her jewelry on Columbus she might have spent it on an opera singers or a traveling tent show, and Spain would be in about the same place she is now anyway.

However, the discovery of America has turned out fairly well for us people now living here, and my position on sending a man to the moon is that it's all right with me so long as I'm not the man.

It's true that there may not be anything up there worth having, and I personally see little hope for an area where it never has rained, but it's something that can't be avoided, on account of the by-products. You never know what'll turn up.

I mean, exploring space is no longer a sporting event, like climbing a mountain. I read the other day that Russia is now working on a plan to launch atomic bombs into orbit, hundreds of them circling the globe in all directions, so that any time she decides to, she could throw a switch and let one descend on whatever target it happens to be passing over at the time, New York, Washington, this Martin County grass farm, Stanton, London, Cape Canaveral, etc. From a military standpoint, this sure would be launching them from a cave in Cuba, and you wouldn't have to eat lunch with Castro besides.

I guess if you get right down to it, I'd rather have a big national debt hanging over my head than a big Russian atomic bomb.

If it takes it, let's give our jewelry to keep exploring space. This is an excellent idea. I don't have any jewelry.

Yours faithfully,

J. A.

FBI Director To Be Chosen By President

The Senate has passed and sent to the House a bill requiring that future directors of the FBI be appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate.

There was no opposition. J. Edgar Hoover, who has served as director for 29 years, was appointed by former Atty. Gen. Harlan Fiske Stone when the FBI was in its infancy.

Senate Republican leader Everett Dirksen, author of the bill, said the agency has now grown to such size and spends so much money—14,000 employees and a $120,000,000 budget—that the director should be subject to Senate confirmation. The Judiciary Committee, which approved the bill unanimously, issued a report praising Hoover for his work and wishing him "many additional years of fruitful service."

The area in crops in the Soviet Union—500,000,000 acres—is about the same as in the United States and Canada combined, but production is about three-fourths that of the United States.

FRUIT SHERBET

6 cups sugar
6 bananas mashed
Juice of 6 lemons—strained
Juice of 6 oranges
Blend the above ingredients and add milk to fill the ice cream freezer. Freeze. Makes 1 gallon.

1/4 cup catsup
3 tbsps. prepared mustard

3 to 4 tpsps. melted butter
Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add milk gradually, egg yolks, butter and egg white. Cook as directed by your waffle iron instructions. Serve with maple syrup.

For Pecan Waffles, sprinkle pecans over the waffle batter and bake. Other variations are to serve with blueberry syrup or sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar and top with honey.

4 tpsps. brown sugar
1/2 cup catsup
2 tpsps. mustard
1 medium size onion, minced

Oakdale, Cal., Leader: "Three cases of serious mauling of people by power lawnmowers have appeared in the Leader in recent weeks. Loss of fingers, loss of toes, and other injuries are all too frequent when persons become careless, while using these convenient, but deadly machines. . . . Remember, those who have learned by bitter experience say, that the power mower should never be examined with the motor running."

Connally Plays Up To The Galleries

John Connally has signed two bills to liberalize married women's legal rights.

Married women can now enter into contracts, sue and be sued without court authority; and married women can chase their husbands out of the house and convey separate property without a husband's rejoinder.

Connally signed a bill last week that, if passed as a constitutional amendment, would allow a $150 million in bonds to be issued by the veterans land program.

Connally also signed a bill that would allow game wardens to arrest trespassers.

Connally signed a bill which will allow any guy with 18 years experience on one or more state courts to qualify for a retirement pension.

Connally signed a bill limiting maximum hours sheriffs or constables can work in certain counties.

Connally signed a bill relating to the offense of obtaining board or lodging by fraudulent representation and refusing to pay.

Connally signed a lot of bills. A lot of bills that will go into effect in August. Perhaps there will be many Texans and tourists who won't know what they have been arrested for until they get a copy of one of the news bills and read it.

Oh yes, the car insurance payments will advance about $5 a car next year too.

The car insurance premium hike will go good with five cent postage stamps and nearly a dollar a pound for five pound bags of sugar.

What was that old double-play combination in major league baseball? Tinkers to Evers to Chance wasn't it?

How about Kennedy to Johnson to Connally — just to modernize the New Frontier philosophy?

mail, he said. ZIP Codes taken from return addresses on incoming mail should be used.

"The ZIP Code is literally the last word in mail addressing," Mr. Foreman said. "It should follow the city and state in addresses."

He cited this example of the proper use of ZIP Code:
S. J. Foreman
Postmaster,
U. S. Post Office,
Lenorah, Texas, 79749.

The new ZIP Code plan, Mr. Foreman said, for the first time will permit the Post Office Department to short-cut repeated addressing.

"The address on mail must often be read as many as eight or ten times by postal employees, to get it to the proper destination," Mr. Foreman said. "Each handling slows the process of mail dispatch and adds to the opportunity for human error."

"With ZIP Code, a clerk needs only to glance at the code to know immediately to what national area, state and post office the letter is destined, and to speed it on its way, cutting up to 24 hours off the time between deposit and delivery."

Mr. Foreman said that when ZIP Code is in full swing, the United States will have "the most modern system of mail distribution and delivery in existence."

Chamber Chatter

By MAURVNE VARNADORE

A bulletin from the office of your Chamber of Commerce directed to the civic-minded citizens of the community.

"A good Chamber of Commerce (and we do have a good Chamber) is like a good father, and the relationship which exists between a Chamber and the community it serves is very much like the relationship existing between father and son. To any man who says to me 'Name six big things the Chamber has done,' I would like to say to him, 'Name six big things in your life your father did for you.'"

"A moment's reflection is sufficient to show it is virtually impossible to pick out six outstanding things because, during the entire relationship between that man and his father, there were many, many things done each day and each week during his entire life which helped mold him into the man he is today. It is not the big, outstanding things which a father does for his son, it is the many, many things he does for his son on a day to day basis.

"Although I have not made any extensive or conclusive study of this, I believe any man who can point to six outstanding things which his father did for him, on further reflection, might find these were the only six occasions on which a true father and son relationship existed. In such a case I would say, the complete job had not been done.

"And, so in Chamber work, I believe it is not the one big industry that he been brought into town or the one big civic project ostentatiously accomplished which is a yardstick of the effectiveness of a good Chamber. Rather it is the day to day effort which a good Chamber expends in serving the community which in a final analysis is a true measure of the real worth of a Chamber of Commerce."

So it goes here in the local Chamber office. Your directors and committee men are constantly and diligently at work on small day to day efforts that may never be recognized as such but in the overall picture they blend in to make a thriving community exist in what of this can be summed up in five little words: "Little things mean a lot."

Bye, now.

KNOW YOUR INSECT ENEMY TOMATO HORNWORM

This large, horned worm is perhaps the best known and most obvious tomato pest. It has a ravenous appetite to match its size. In the early spring, farmers and gardeners often plow or dig up the winter stage of the tomato hornworm, a brown, hard-shelled pupa about 2 inches long. These pupae produce the large grayish or brownish moths with dark and white mottled markings that are frequently seen flying at dusk. Their wingspread is between 4 and 5 inches.

Although these moths don't damage tomatoes, they deposit greenish-yellow eggs singly beneath tomato leaves, from which perpetually-hungry larvae hatch in about 1 week. In less than a month these worms will be 3 to 4 inches long, and plump from devouring tomatoes. The distinctive horn on the posterior end is black. Color of the worm itself ranges from green to brown with eight white V-shaped stripes on the body.

When tomato hornworms attack nearby-ripe plantings, pesticide applications often cannot be made because of residue problems. However, a new insecticide now is being used to control this pest successfully.

It is a carbamate called Sevin that is safer to use than many previously-available pesticides such as DDT. According to entomologists, Sevin may be used up to and including the day of harvest to stop the hard-to-kill tomato hornworms, without exceeding the residue tolerance. It also controls the tomato fruitworm.

Entomologists recommend fall plowing to destroy hornworm pupae, thus reducing spring populations and making chemical control easier. In small home gardens, hand removal may be practical.

Summertime Means Patio Living...

When you have a big, shady patio such as Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Reid, Summer brings new, outdoor activities for family and friends and draws a June salute to Martin County and its City of Stanton. Frank Davis of The Reporter-Telegram saw this recent get-together, from the first exuberant jump on the trampoline to the quiet closeness around the ice cream table at evening time.

HOSTESS—Mrs. Stanley Reid, standing center, makes "rounds" to see that all have been served. Such informal parties, sometimes involving as many as 50 persons, frequently take place, and "everyone helps by bringing part of the food," she said.

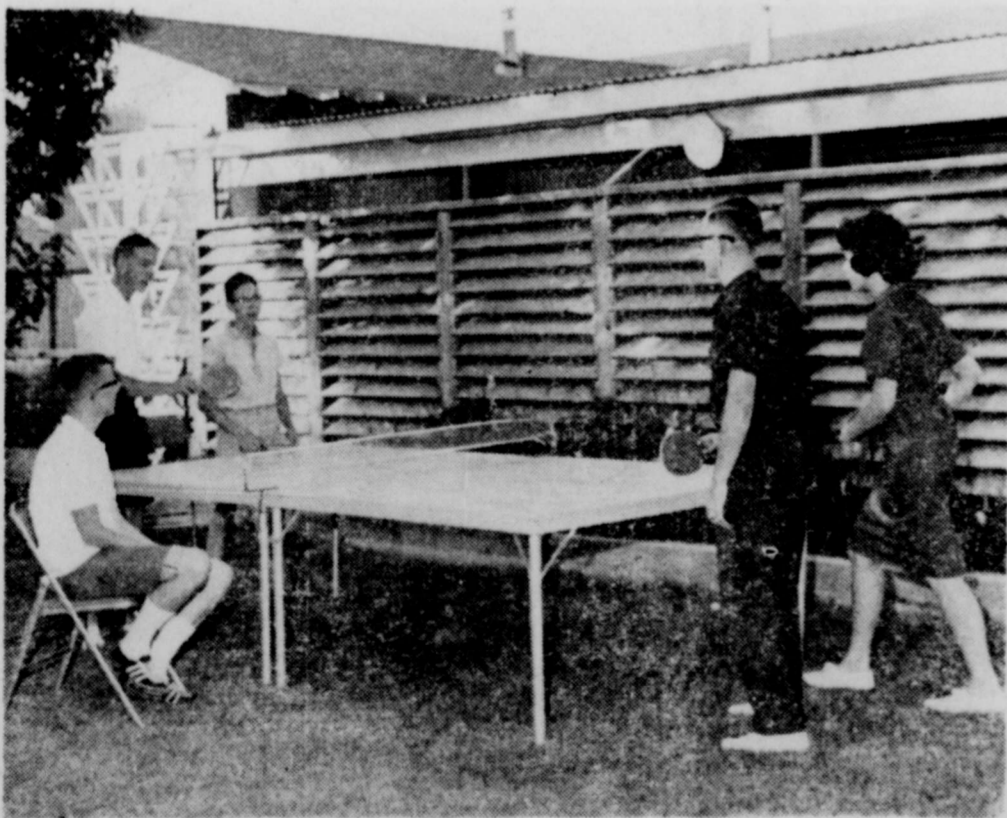

WHO'S TOO OLD?—Mrs. Floyd Smith confirms the notion "grown folks enjoy outdoor games as much as youngster" by joining her son, Smitty, for a go on the trampoline. The patio, shaded by Chinese elms and fruit trees, also has room for basketball, tetherball and ping-pong.

COFFEE BREAK—P. M. Bristow visits with the hostess, Mrs. Stanley Reid. The Bristows and Reids are members of the Stanton Couples' Club, which meets on the third Saturday of each month. Other members are Mr. and Mrs. Leo Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robnett, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Long, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Gates and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Latimer. The Reid home is a favorite meeting place not only for the club, but also for Sunday School, 4-H and Home Demonstration groups.

THINKER—Little Jeff Robnett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Robnett, is trying to decide whether to throw the ping-pong ball he found, or balance it on his head. He threw it.

BOY IN FLIGHT—Fourteen-year-old Gary Reid performs a somersault on the trampoline, as friends wait their turns.

MEET THE CHEF—Stanley Reid adds sauce to meat simmering on the barbecue grill, the one piece of equipment almost essential for patio living.

The Launching Pad

By NEAL ESTES

IN FRANK TOLBERT'S column in THE DALLAS NEWS a story about HENDRICK'S LAKE in Panola County, was significant to us. TOLBERT wrote that the small lake in East Texas, between Carthage and Longview, was supposed to have been the scene of some buried treasure. The legend relates that approximately $2 million in silver bars was dumped into the lake in 1816 by a party headed by NICHOLAS (HOT HORSE) TRAMMEL. TRAMMEL was the fellow for whom the TRAMMEL TRACE was named. This was a trail for running "hot horses" and other stolen goods from south-eastern Texas to Arkansas. The renowned Galveston private, JEAN LAFITTE captured and plundered a Spanish frigate, the Santa Rosa, in the early Spring of 1816, his last and mightiest treasure haul. LAFITTE then sent his most trusted lieutenant, TRAMMEL, up the Trace, bound for St. Louis to market the silver bars. At HENDRICK'S LAKE, the "fence" is supposed to have been intercepted by Spanish cavalry. According to the yarn he dumped the silver into the lake to keep the Spanish from getting it. It's a mystery why TRAMMEL didn't return and get the bars. The legend says he didn't. Many people have been interesting in trying to recover the treasure. A resident of the town of Tatum, near the lake, once worked out a plan to drain the lake, but high water and the rainy weather forced him to abandon his plans. A Houston oilman organized an extensive search for the loot one year, but nothing was found. When your editor owned the newspaper in Carthage, Texas, we once joined SHERIFF CORBETT AKINS and a small group of local Panola County residents to try for the recovery of the silver bars. But to be perfectly frank about it, your scribe had little faith that any treasure would be recovered. We went along with the idea more to get away from the newspaper office in Carthage and to be with our friends than for any other purpose. Several divers helped our party try for the pirate's dumped silver and we had a gang of machinery, cables, a huge platform to work from constructed, and a lot of other gadgets but no success was forthcoming. The lake is small a mirror-like, long patch of water in heavy forest. If any of our readers would like to make the trek to HENDRICK'S LAKE to search for the silver bars, we might advise them to wait until deer season opens in East Texas. Along the edges of the lake a lot of big, red deer, come down to drink. We never failed to bag one in the area when we used to hunt in there with SHERIFF AKIN.

WE would be unethical if we did not acknowledge the splendid tribute paid to the staff of THE STANTON REPORTER at the dedication ceremony held Saturday evening at SHELBURNE FIELD by COMMISSIONER FLOYD WALKER. Thank you a thousand times FLOYD for your recognition. We consider the Summer baseball program for LITTLE LEAGUERS and PEE WEE LEAGUERS as the best possible project for character building and teachings of good sportsmanship and fair play on the field and off. We are glad to have a part in the baseball activities by running complete box scores of games, the standings, and other stories of vital interest to the players and the men who are supervising and serving in other aspects of league life.

IT'S nice to see sons get close to their dads. It is equally nice for dads to be associated as much as possible with their sons in the out-of-school months. Better understandings are built up and strength is added to the natural fibre of blood ties when a dad spends a part of each day with his boy or boys. It is also gratifying to a father to have his son grow tall enough in every respect to—shall we say—trail along. This week your editor was impressed by visits to the office of SHERIFF DAN SAUNDERS and his eldest son, DAVID. And when we went down to STANLEY REID'S barber shop we found GARY there with his dad, working in the shoeshine slot. It's good to see these dads and many others, so interested in the youth of tomorrow.

MRS. RAY KELLY telephoned us at 12:20 a.m. Wednesday to advise about the destruction, by the wind, of the MOTEL BELVUE'S renowned beacon sign. The KELLYS were up when the high velocity windstorm launched its thirty-five minute offensive in the city limits of Stanton. We talked later Wednesday morning with RAY. He informed us that the sign would be re-erected as soon as possible. The derrick-type sign was the highest in town. We could see the revolving light from our front yard. It was visible at night for most of the city's residents to view. Pilots have told us they used the bouncing beacon for a directional guide. That sign told the world there was a Stanton. We are glad it is going to be put up again.

MOST of the local residents slept through the night's windy nightmare, but a few late goers-to-bed, were up for the weather show. ALTON TURNER told us that he made a trip or so outside to glance skyward and while out on one trip observed the CLAUD NOWLINS inspecting their outside yard light. JOHN SHORT sought refuge behind the Texaco station walls when strange things started rolling through the driveway. MRS. BROWN, wife of the service station owner, told us at about one a.m. Wednesday morning at the station, that they had been up watching the clouds and waiting the windy offensive out since hearing a report of a possible windstorm on some tv station's ten o'clock news. DUB WEATHERFORD, night city patrolman, found a safe place to protect his police car from the storm's fury. Then after the wind faded and the rain started, he went back to patrolling the highway. The elements threatened until 4 a.m. Wednesday morning. We spotted lights on in many sections of the city at that time and then the early risers learned of the night windstorm. The morning radio stations we tuned in on missed the Stanton storm story. Some of the announcers talked about the weather in Washington and Oregon, but none sounded the Stanton scoop. It was a real wet, windy night for the editor—I had the story all by myself—there was no sunshine around—none at all.

THE storm pictures you will see on page one of this issue of the "OLE RELIABLE" were made early Wednesday morning—processed at an engraving plant in Midland—and returned to Stanton by special messenger. That's what it takes to get photos in the paper on the same day the story breaks. We really went all-out to give our readers exclusive pics on the early morning windstorm. Regardless of how important our windstorm strike was to other people—right here in Martin County—we were vitally concerned. Little things make the local news along with the big stuff too. Example: One of our friends and subscribers, AARON DONELSON, who resides just north of town, lost his rain gauge in the blow.

FARM REVIEW AND FORECAST

A new wrinkle has been added in the battle to eradicate screwworms from the Southwest. Screwworm flies reared and sexually sterilized in a plant near Mission are now fed prior to being released from airplanes over large portions of the five-state eradication area.

Entomologists have found that feeding gives the flies a better chance for survival after being released and results in larger numbers of vigorous flies available for the program.

A small paper cup containing a cotton ball and corn syrup is placed inside each carton at the same time the box is filled with sterilized pupae. After the flies have emerged, they can feed until they are released.

Experts list these advantages to fly-feeding:

(1) More flies are alive at release time, since cartons can be held an extra day giving pupae more time to emerge.

(2) Flies live longer after release and are better able to find shelter and food in nature.

(3) Fewer flies are lost during periods when unfavorable weather does not permit aerial release and flies may have to be held for several days.

(4) Also during cold weather, it is possible to hold the flies until they are ready to mate, while otherwise many probably would not survive that long in nature.

Eradication officials are so pleased with the results of fly-feeding tests they are exploring means to completely mechanize the operation. They feel the initial expense could be paid off within a few months through savings in man-hours and reduced loss of sterile flies.

The wheat program for 1964 under provisions of existing law are reviewed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in response to questions that have arisen since the referendum of May 21.

Price support will be available to producers who plant within the acreage allotments which have been established for the 1964 wheat crop. Allotments were announced in April. The national support price will be 50 percent of parity. (The present parity price is $2.51 per bushel.)

There will be no marketing quota penalties for planting in excess of acreage allotments. However, the statute provides that producers who overplant their allotments will receive "history" credit only in the amount of their allotments.

Farmers who have Conservation Reserve contracts agreed to plant within their farm acreage allotments, and this means that the 1964 Conservation Reserve payment for the farm is dependent on compliance with the wheat acreage allotment.

Wheat that was grown in excess of marketing quotas in the past will be subject to the original penalty provisions until July 1, 1964. After that date, stored excess wheat may be released without penalty. The amount of such wheat in storage on farms and in warehouses is estimated at 45 million bushels. This could be increased from the 1963 crop, which is subject to marketing quotas, and excess wheat from this crop may be stored by the producer to avoid payment of the penalty. On the other hand, underplanting or underproduction of 1963-crop wheat could result in the early release of excess wheat that had been stored from previous crops to avoid payment of penalty.

Cotton's need for moisture is greatest during the square, bloom, and young boll states, says Wayne Keese, extension agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

The rate of water use by cotton plants varies through the growing season and intelligent irrigation is based on the periods of greatest need, says the engineer. The plants use very little water for the first few weeks after emergence but beginning with the appearance of the first square the rate of water use increases steadily. When the first blooms appear, the water requirement again increases rapidly and the maximum rate of water use occurs at the peak bloom stage which is usually three to three and one-half months after planting, says Keese.

Shedding of fruit by cotton has been found to be associated with low soil moisture during the early bloom and fruiting stage and therefore an adequate supply is needed for high yields.

Keese explains. Excessive high moisture levels should also be avoided especially after the first bolls appear. This moisture can cause late vegetative growth which probably will not increase lint yields and can be undesirable if machine picking is planned.

Keese warns not to wait until all the available moisture has been used before irrigating the crop. Normally, irrigation should be started when 50 to 60 percent of the available moisture in the root zone is depleted. He recommends regular examinations of the soil in the root zone to determine the amount of soil moisture remaining. A soil auger or a sharp-shooter can be used to obtain the soil sample and the rooting depth of the crop can also be checked as the season progresses.

Don't overlook the importance of soil fertility in successful cotton irrigation as optimum yields are produced when soil fertility and soil moisture are balanced, says Keese. See your local county agricultural agent for more information on cotton irrigation and while there get a copy of B-896, "Texas Guide for Growing Irrigated Cotton."

Disgusting Decision

The SUPREME COURT of this great nation has once again caused a pall of sorrow to fall throughout the borders of the 50 sovereign states in ruling prayer and Bible reading unconstitutional in public schools. The question or case, was brought to the Court by an admitted Atheist. A non-believer. Has it reached the point in the United States where everything solid and sacred we of another generation learned in our homes, our schools, and in our churches, must be struck down by nine little men? This country has endured for 180 years and many justices have served on our great Supreme Court. We have had the same constitution all along, and none of the previous courts have rendered the salmon pink rulings as has the present membership. Why are the nine justices serving there now any smarter than the distinguished judges of the past? These manipulators are bending the constitution and striking at the very roots of liberty and freedom when they continue to make decisions as they did in the Bible reading case. THE NEXT THING WE KNOW THE SUPREME COURT WILL DECLARE GOD ALMIGHTY ILLEGAL unless this tireless tearing up of the constitution is not brought to an abrupt end. That end must necessarily be brought about by the people—at the ballot box—as soon as possible. The people, by a constitutional amendment, passed by three-fourth of the states, can curb the power of the Supreme Court. And the people, at the ballot box, can put an end and write finis to the political fortunes of those men who would stand silently by with hands uplifted in mental and moral surrender to the Supreme Court. We can chase from Washington the bridge of freedom bandits who meekly stand up before their Creator and foolishly mouth "we can't do anything about it." The heck we can't. I can, you can, and we can make the offices available to real red-blooded Americans who will spend less time talking with the Russian dictator and less time in getting their pictures in the society sections of Washington newspapers, and less time in barbecuing goats for foreign bums deep in the heart of Texas.

We Salute Six Flags Over Texas

By VIRGINIA HOUSE

We were among thousands who strolled beneath the Texas sun at Six Flags Over Texas Saturday. Jay Dee and I took our son, Reggie, and my three nephews, Brad, Denneth, and Garry Hull, through a trip of the fabulous presentation of history of the Lone Star State. The tremendous advance interest indicates that this season will be highly successful and will see more tourists from across the United States visiting Texas and Six Flags than ever before.

Gracious days of the Confederacy came alive under the banner of the Stars and Bars while a snappy Confederate drill team stepped sprightly to the tune of Dixie. Under spreading trees, a picturesque Southern street winds toward the Butterfield Stage Coach ride. We rode the stage, and boarded the barge for Skull Island where treasurers were supposed to have been buried by the late Jean Lafitte. Caddo Canoes journeyed through waters linked by authentic Indian villages. Exciting for the children and grownups. Danger lurked all around as one casts off with La Salle to explore the uncharted La-Vaca River. As you rounded the river's bend, your long-boat was sighted from a Spanish fort and narrowly escapes its savage cannonade. Ahead are other terrors in the swampy wasteland. Indian ambushes, alligators and fierce animals line the shore, edged with tropical plants and a mysterious cave adds excitement to your adventure. It's fiesta time and the enchantment of the holiday spirit greets you as you tour gay Mexico.

Climb aboard the Cha-Cha-Choo-Choo, Ferro Carril Fiesta Train and ride through a panorama of delightful animation, music and gardens. And while resting beneath the shade of a Manzanita tree, your are serenaded by musicians who strum guitar from a nearby plaza. There's a real thrill for all who visit Don Pedro in his unusual home, the Casa Magnifica, where your senses deceive you. And nearby in the big trading post, friendly Tejas Indians do ancient tribal dances, of rain, hunting and war. Throughout the Indian hunt, trees are strung with skins from wild animals and teepees dot the grounds. Gunplay is a constant threat as you stroll the streets of the Lone State State of Texas. Bank robberies, and shoot-outs erupt without a moment's warning. To escape the fast-paced action, tenderfoots retreat to the Crazy Horse saloon to enjoy a colorful stage show, indeed one of the most outstanding attractions on the agenda. In the saloon, we sipped a Dr. Pepper, and with other visitors joined the cast in singing "Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet with the Blue Ribbon on It."

We were intrigued with one of the signs on one of the old buildings in the Texas area, "Ketchum, Cheatum, and Wynne" — Lawyers. After leaving the Texas area, we went over to the depot where we boarded the General Sam Houston for an excursion around Six Flags.

An adventure in metallic sounds and low fidelity music is an attraction for guests who visit the Six Flags arcade during the 1963 season. The arcade, one of the new attractions, is patterned after the penny arcade that was popular entertainment feature at the turn of the century. All the machines in the arcade are real antiques which have been restored to original condition. New attractions are the 190-foot tall Sky Hook and the romantic Merry Go Round, which dominate the new six-acre oil boom town section of Six Flags. You can see the skylines of Dallas and Fort Worth from the new Sky Hook. The Boom Town is patterned after the exciting days of wild-cattling days of the oil industry in Texas. As you tour the immaculately clean grounds, you walk through avenues lined by plantings of roses in exotic shades, bright red geraniums, colorful marigolds, brilliant foliage and tropical plants . . . a major contribution toward the success that Six Flags Over Texas enjoys stems from the hundreds of college and high school students that make up the staff at the huge historical amusement park. We and all Texas salute Angus G. Wynne, Jr., president of Six Flags Over Texas. We salute him for his foresight in assembling the greatest panorama of Texas history ever put together in one location covering 115 acres of ground.
