

These Things We Note

By ED PIEL

Temptation is an irresistible force at work on a moveable object.

I was reading an interesting article in U.S. News & World Report the other day . . . all about communal living. It seems that some of the group living that is going on today isn't working out as well as the participants had hoped. One of the things that has brought about the breaking up of several of these communes is washing the dishes. Seems with everyone busy doing their 'own thing' no one wanted to wash the dishes. Sounds like dinner time at our place.

Speaking of communal living, when we were out in Southwest Oregon, a group of kids came up from California and settled on some land about five miles out of town. We met several of these kids and always got along well with them. They had a lot of the townspeople shook up, what with their long hair and mod clothes, but there was never any trouble from this particular group . . . and it kind of caused me to change my thinking about long hair. I suppose, up till then, I had more or less held the prevailing opinion about the long-haired set . . . but after some long hard thinking on the subject have come to the conclusion that so what . . . what if they do wear 'out of sight clothes' and long hair . . . as long as they are doing 'their thing' without interrupting me in doing 'my thing' I feel they are within their rights to wear what they want. I think what has happened is that a small minority of long haired types have given the public a general impression that everyone who wears long hair is weird and have to be watched. While personally I don't like long hair I guess it's a case of to each his own. And maybe, some of these kids will grow up someday and come to realize that life in these United States is still the best anywhere and that opportunity is still here and that all of us have had to give up something, somewhere along the line to take advantage of all the opportunity that is available.

It's been a quiet week in Stanton . . . what with school being on vacation . . . no sports activities . . . it gets somewhat difficult to fill up a bunch of white space. But the pace should start picking up again this week. The Lion's are holding their beauty contest Friday night and the All-Sports Banquet is set for next Monday and the wind isn't blowing today . . . yet!

SIMPLE ADVICE—THAT MAY SAVE YOUR LIFE.

Chief of Proctology, Haverford General Hospital
Haverford, Pa.

The American Cancer Society predicts that cancer of the colon and rectum will strike 75,000 Americans this year—more than any other type of cancer encountered by men and women, except perhaps skin cancer. Some 46,000 persons die of colon and rectum cancer annually. Three out of four of these patients might have been saved by a routine proctoscopic examination, resulting in early diagnosis and prompt treatment.

Proctoscopy (or sigmoidoscopy) is an examination with a lighted tube inserted into the rectum and lower colon through which the physician can inspect the walls visually. Because potentially serious disease may be detected this way, the procedure is credited with helping to save more lives from cancer than any other step in the health check-up; it is particularly valuable for those over the age of 40.

Although certainly the most serious, cancer is not the only anorectal problem affecting Americans. In the mid-1960's, the Chief of the Mayo Clinic Proctology Department estimated that from 50 to 75 percent of all adults suffer one

HOME BUYER CLINIC

By Wm. J. McAuliffe, Jr., Executive Vice President American Land Title Association

Last-Minute Lien

The prudent purchase of a home in most cases is a favorable and satisfying investment even with today's real estate costs. But careful advance planning is highly desirable—whether you buy a single family home, condominium, town house, or other residence. Precautions before purchase are important because things you may not know about can threaten the security of your ownership.

Land title defects emphatically illustrate the great need to protect your interests when purchasing a home. An example is the last-minute lien.

In a representative case involving this particular last-minute defect, a home buyer completes his purchase and obtains what appears to be clear title to the real estate. But, unknown to the buyer, the government files a substantial tax lien against the seller on the day the home is sold. The lien—although officially filed of record—in this case was not entered on the public index until a day or so later, after closing of the transaction. By the time the situation is known to the home buyer, he faces a long and expensive legal battle.

Recorded liens—and many other land title defects—being evident and undetectable in a search of separately located public records—have been a source of home buyer difficulty for years. When Abe Lincoln was a boy, his family lost three farm homes because of land title defects.

Financial protection against land title defects is available through a title search and owner's title insurance.

Learning the facts on purchasing real estate in your community will better prepare you for a successful home buying adventure. For free guidelines on the subject, write American Land Title Association, 1828 I Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

What's better, faster, cheaper—and reduces erosion up to 95 percent?

It's mulch tillage, says Clyde W. Graham, state conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service in Temple. Sometimes called minimum tillage or no-till, mulch tillage is a new system of farming where residues from a previous crop are left on or near the surface throughout the cropping year.

Graham says the specific advantages are:

- less labor. Plowing and planting trips across the field are reduced.
- lower production costs. Many farmers report savings of $8 to $14 an acre.
- more moisture conservation.
- less soil erosion.
- possibility of double cropping in some areas.
- protection of seedlings from wind damage.
- more food and cover for wildlife.

"Farmers and researchers report that yields of mulch-tilled corn and grain sorghum are usually equal to or higher than yields from conventionally tilled fields," Graham says. "However, the system may lower soil temperatures, delaying seed germination in spring. But moisture con-hold trips across a field to a ting fertilizer in the ground minimum," Graham points have helped make the measure out. "With mulch tillage, practical. He also credits the chemicals are used to control perfection of new herbicides President. wide and 31 feet deep.

Farm Vehicles Temporarily Exempt From Regulations

Drivers of farm vehicles are temporarily exempt from compliance with new safety regulations established by the U.S. Department of Transportation's Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety for drivers involved in interstate commerce. Texas Commissioner of Agriculture John C. White says that considerable confusion has developed among farm vehicle drivers following adoption of the new safety standards, but that an amendment to the regulations adopted January 1st, 1971, exempts drivers of farm vehicles for a six-month period until July 1, 1971.

OUR SOIL * OUR STRENGTH MARTIN-HOWARD-MIDLAND SOIL CONSERVATION - SOIL CONSERVATION - DISTRICT NEWS

std. hd. MARTIN-HOWARD. What's better, faster, cheaper — and reduces erosion up to 95 percent?

It's mulch tillage, says Clyde W. Graham, state conservationist for the Soil Conservation Service in Temple. Sometimes called minimum tillage or no-till, mulch tillage is a new system of farming where residues from a previous crop are left on or near the surface throughout the cropping year.

Graham says the specific advantages are: —less labor. Plowing and planting trips across the field are reduced. —lower production costs. Many farmers report savings of $8 to $14 an acre. —more moisture conservation. —less soil erosion. —possibility of double cropping in some areas. —protection of seedlings from wind damage. —more food and cover for wildlife.

"Farmers and researchers report that yields of mulch-tilled corn and grain sorghum are usually equal to or higher than yields from conventionally tilled fields," Graham says. "However, the system may lower soil temperatures, delaying seed germination in the spring. But moisture conserved by the mulch usually offsets this delay later in the growing season. The system does not, of course, eliminate the need for other good farming practices, such as disease or insect control."

Here's how mulch tillage differs from conventional farming:

In one trip across a field, a farmer simultaneously prepares a seedbed, plants his seed, applies fertilizer, and adds herbicides for weed control while disturbing only a small portion of the soil surface. In conventional methods, 6 to 10 trips are often required to do the same job, and almost all surface soil is disturbed on each trip. And each soil disturbance destroys residue that might have been left on the surface for soil protection.

Graham said special farm equipment now on the market and new techniques for putting fertilizer in the ground have helped make the measure practical. He also credits the perfection of new herbicides which take the place of cultivation in controlling and preventing weeds with speeding up acceptance of the practice.

Older farm equipment can be adapted to mulch tillage. Or farmers may buy specially designed planters that cut through stubble-covered fields with minimum disturbance while preparing narrow, easy-to-close planting slits in the soil. Fertilizer can be knifed in with the seed or scattered on the surface.

Graham said the Soil Conservation Service has a new leaflet which explains how much and what kind of crop residue is most desirable for erosion control, and how to estimate the amount of residues from crop yields. While the publication talks mostly about corn, soybeans and small grain, the principles also apply to grain sorghum and other crops.

Single copies of "Mulch Tillage in Modern Farming," Leaflet No. 554, are available free from SCS offices.

Australia is the only continent lying entirely south of the Equator.

A growing number of Congressmen and Senators in Washington are dead set on drastically altering employer-employee relationships in U.S. agriculture. And they have a pretty good start.

Beginning in 1967, for the first time in history, users of over 500 man-days of farm labor in any calendar quarter became subject to a minimum wage law. The minimum has now progressed to $1.30 an hour, which is the top under present legislation.

In December of last year Congress passed the Occupational Safety and Health Act, and it applies to agriculture as to all other industry. It empowers the Secretary of Labor to lay down and enforce health and safety standards on farm machinery, chemicals, buildings and anything else he thinks might pose a health or safety hazard to farm workers. Violation of a "standard" could bring a $10,000 fine and six months imprisonment on a first offense. The penalty could be doubled for a second conviction.

But, according to J. D. Smith, Chairman of the Labor Committee of Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., these are just the beginning. In the mill now are bills which would (1) progressively raise the minimum wage in agriculture to $1.50 in 1971, $1.60 in 1972, $1.80 in 1973 and $2.00 in 1974, and (2) bring agricultural workers under the National Labor Relations Act, virtually assuring unionization of farm employees.

The bill raising the farm minimum wage, by Congressman John Dent (D-Pa.),

Chairman of the General Subcommittee on Labor, is cosponsored by almost all the majority members of the full Labor Committee. Also, House Speaker Carl Albert has announced the support of the House Democratic Leadership.

Hearings on the bill are slated for April 20 and 22, and Smith says PCG will present a statement in opposition. PCG will also have a hand in development of the statement to be presented by the National Council of Agricultural Employers, of which PCG is a charter member. Ed Dean, PCG Field Service Director, is a member of the NCAE board of directors.

"Not only does the bill raise the minimum wage for farm labor," Dean said, "it would repeal the farmer's overtime exemption along with the exemption of other seasonal industry workers, including gins, oil mills and compresses."

Several bills have been introduced to delete the agricultural exemption of the National Labor Relations Act. Probably the most comprehensive, and potentially the most damaging to agriculture, is entitled "Farm Workers' Bill of Rights." In addition to bringing agriculture under the NLRA, if passed this legislation would make secondary boycotts a legal union tool in agriculture; would make workmens compensation and unemployment insurance compulsory on farms, and establish farm worker labor standards, farm worker manpower training programs and a National Advisory Council on Agricultural Labor.

Martin County Farm News

must be defeated if at all possible, Smith says. But he also told a meeting of the PCG Board recently "It is no longer practical for agriculture to take a simple 'no' position on all legislation that affects our labor situation. There is increasing evidence that we can no longer hope to remain totally exempt from the labor laws that have long applied to other industry, and our best chance now may be in having an influence on the kind or kinds of laws that are passed for agriculture."

The NCAE is working with Secretary of Labor James Hodgson toward an amendment to the NLRA which would establish a separate Agricultural Labor Relations Board, and provide protection against secondary boycotts and strikes at critical periods such as planting and harvest time.

The PCG Board has adopted a position in support of the NCAE in its efforts to guide any farm labor legislation to the inclusion of provisions "for the protection of the farmer, his employees, consumers, and agriculture's ability to produce food and fiber supplies to meet the needs of the nation and the world."

Commissioner White says that according to the amendment, farm vehicle drivers must be 18 years old, rather than 21 as required in the general safety standards, and that other provisions of the regulations — including written examinations, road tests and physical examinations — will not apply. White pointed out, however, that farm vehicle drivers are defined as persons who are at least 18 years old, are driving a vehicle controlled and operated by a farmer and are being used to transport produce from the farm or supplies to the farm. In addition, the vehicle being driven must have a gross weight, including load, of 10,000 pounds or less and is not used in the operations of a for-hire carrier.

Commissioner White advised all farm vehicle drivers to be aware of the exemption deadline of July 1, 1971, at which time a determination will be made as to the permanent interpretation of the regulations as they apply to farm vehicle drivers. The present interpretation is based on the crossing of state lines by farm vehicles.

Tax Man Sam Sez:

Who must file? You do, if you have more than $1700 income ($400 if you are self-employed). If you are married and filing a joint return, $2300. If one spouse is over 65 years of age it goes up to $2900 and if both husband and wife are over 65 you can have up to $3500 without filing. This year you can elect to have IRS compute your tax for you up to $20,000 income from salary and wages (even if you have retirement income credit). If you have to file, you had better start now—April 15 is at hand.

YOUR amazing BODY

Your body knows its own parts so well that it instantly recognizes "foreign" materials and tries to get rid of them. When the foreign object is a splinter, this protective "attitude" is beneficial, but when the object is a donated heart or kidney, it can endanger life itself.

Not only living hearts and kidneys, but also "fake" organs—made of plastics, metals, and other materials—are thrown off by the body. Because some artificial materials trigger less violent reactions than others, or are recognized more slowly as foreign, the search for better and better materials is one of modern medicine's most urgent tasks.

To find the "ideal" suture material (a suture is a "thread" doctors use to sew up an incision or a wound) scientists sought one that would not cause a rejection response as conventional animal gut sometimes does; that would be absorbed by the body and not have to be removed; and that would not be absorbed during the first 15 days after use. The result: DEXON, the first synthetic absorbable suture which not only has greater tensile strength than animal gut—but is absorbed without irritation of the tissues at a predictable and uniform rate—remaining strong during the critical 15-day wound-healing period!

And we go out of our way to find it. Hopefully, before you do. We keep our telephone cables under air pressure to protect them from water, and we're constantly checking for leaks. We're testing your telephone line regularly to discover any potential problem before it occurs. But if you do notice trouble on your line before we do, just give us a call. We'll fix it... at no extra charge to you. We may be the only phone company in town, but we try not to act like it.
