These Things We Note

By ED PIEL

Conscience is a mother-in-law whose visit never ends.

It seems that last week we tried to make some singers out of some gentlemen who claim that they are not musically inclined. It happened in the story of the Lions Club beauty contest, we had Billy Reagor singing and also said Paige Elland and Chuck Elmore were singing and playing the guitar. We're not true!

Actually doing the singing was Mrs. Billy Reagor with Larry Adams and Bill Pardue playing the guitar. Paige Elland and Chuck Elmore were the chairmen of the event.

Our apologies to those involved.

Took the kids up to see and hear "The Carpenters" last weekend in Lubbock and while there noticed one of the pictures showing at a theater was "Bigfoot." It supposedly shows actual pictures of this legendary creature that roams the woods of Northern California, Oregon and Washington.

It brought to mind an experience we had while out in Oregon. At the time we were working at the Myrtle Point Herald, a weekly located in Southwest Oregon.

It was during the worst snowstorm ever to hit that part of the state that we were sitting in the office watching the snow build up out front when the telephone rang. On the other end of the line was a man, whose name escapes me now, wishing to speak to the editor. Telling him that I had that dubious distinction he proceeded to inform me of the large footprints that he had found up on one of the hills near his home.

He described the prints to be about 24 inches long and about 12 inches wide and seven feet apart. Naturally, being in the land of "Bigfoot," this was the first thought we had. He then suggested that we come up and look for ourselves as he had covered up the tracks with boxes to keep the falling snow from covering them up.

Well, after rounding up some friends and a four wheel drive vehicle we proceeded up the trail to Sky Line Ranch. The ranch is located up in the mountains and we had quite a time getting there.

After walking the last three miles through three-foot snow drifts we finally arrived at the scene.

Now, what we saw and I'm not saying what they were... only that they did indeed resemble a human footprint and that they were almost two feet in length and about 12 inches in width. They came out of a group of trees and led across an open field and then disappeared into another stand of timber. I had my camera along and took pictures of the prints and printed them in the paper. This led to phone calls from all over the country and three television interviews on the tracks.

To this day I'm not sure what made the prints that I saw. We discussed several possibilities but none of the animals of that region could possibly have made them. To think it might have been a prank was also ruled out due to the remoteness of the area and the fact of the snow storm.

Personally, I think they were the prints of "Bigfoot," for he has reportedly been seen several times in the region. Anyhow, it gave us an eerie feeling to be standing up there in the middle of what can be called a wilderness area and gazing at those tracks, each of us wondering silently just what kind of creature could have made them.

Philosopher Has Some Misgivings About Saving Cities To Retain Civilization

Editor's note: The Martin County Philosopher on his grass farm on Mustang reviews the plight of the cities this week, without being much help.

Dear editor:

A bunch of big-city mayors toured New York the other day, according to an article I found in a newspaper which somebody threw out of his car in violation of the Environmental Act of 1970, to see if the reports of the dire plight of the country's biggest cities are true, and they came away shaking their heads.

According to them, dope, crime, poverty, over-crowding, slums, massive traffic jams, smog, electrical shortages, and a municipal financial crisis beyond imagining have just about done in the city.

In fact, the Mayor of Boston, shaking his head the hardest, said the plight of New York is so bad it could be "the first sign of the collapse of our entire civilization."

Wouldn't you know, right when my car has blown a gasket, the refrigerator has conked out, I've got an ingrown toenail and two boards have broken through on my front porch, civilization has to collapse. When it rains it pours.

Now I never have gotten up in the morning believing that if New York collapse today me and civilization will too, but, if it's true I guess the country ought to pitch in and try to save the place, even if critics have, dinosaur-like, grown so big they can't be fed enough to stay alive.

But there are some catches. Say we do try to save New York, somebody tells Congress that civilization exists there and is about to collapse, and money is poured in.

Then, what's to keep Boston from entering the same plea? And we save her, and then Los Angeles gets in on a good thing, claiming it can meet the same terms, and then Philadelphia and Chicago and on down to lesser cities, all saying they're about to kill civilization too, maybe including Lenora and Tarzan? It'd take billions and billions of dollars.

Then when all the cities and towns are saved and we figure civilization is secure, some farmer is going to come up with the notion, which I know I've read somewhere, that civilization begins and ends with the plow. The cost would never end.

Obviously, civilization was a splendid theory, but it won't work. It costs too much money.

Yours faithfully,
 J. A.

Additives Increase Feed Utilization In Pig Production

The use of additives in swine rations has enabled producers to increase feed utilization and the growth rate of pigs in addition to making today's production systems possible by controlling disease.

But, advises County Agent Reager, the use of additives is under real pressure and the final outcome rests largely with swine producers. All feeds containing antibiotics or additives must be labeled, showing the number of days the material or materials must be withdrawn before the hogs are sold for slaughter.

Producers, says the county agent, should carefully read the warnings on the tag attached to each bag of feed or on the invoices that accompany each load of bulk feed. Then, make sure all feeding recommendations are closely followed.

The withdrawal is made necessary since some antibiotics and growth stimulants are deposited in the animal's body tissue. The withdrawal periods allow ample time for the excretion of these materials to the point that body tissue or meat will not contain levels above those accepted by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, explains Reager.

The county agent also notes that the FDA has increased its surveillance of drug residue in meat and that producers should make doubly sure the pork they produce has been fed in accordance with tagged recommendations.

This information comes from Dr. Wm. Thomas, extension swine specialist. He is working closely with FIA officials on the problem.

4-H Conducts Candy Sale

Martin County 4-H Club members will join with other 4-H Club members over the state of Texas in a State Wide Candy Sales Campaign.

The primary purpose of the campaign is to construct a state 4-H educational center on Lake Brownwood. Since Texas is one of the few States that does not have a state 4-H training center, it was felt that the current 4-H membership would want to have a part in helping raise the funds needed to construct the facilities.

The approximate value of this facility will be one million dollars. So you can see 4-H members will have to sell a lot of candy.

Please continue to support 4-H Club members by buying some good chocolate candy.

Questionnaires On Way To Farmers

During the last half of May, some 22,000 Texas farmers will receive at their mailboxes a most important questionnaire from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service in Austin.

County Agent Billy Reagar says it will be the annual acreage survey and that many farmers in Martin County will be included in the 22,000. The information derived from the replies will be the basis for the official estimates of crop acreage for the State of Texas and for each county.

Cary D. Palmer, State Statistician for the Texas Reporting Service, emphasizes the importance of getting back just as many of the 22,000 questionnaires as possible so that each county will be well represented. Accurate estimates are of great importance to farmers in planning production and marketings and Generally, the new rules say payments are not to be reduced if a farmer can convince the County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service Committee and a representative of the State ASCS Committee that he has made an honest, conscientious effort to plant and produce a cotton crop and has been prevented from doing so by the elements.

County ASCS offices have now been instructed that "A reduction of the price support payment will not be required if (a) the crop is not planted because of adverse weather conditions in an area designated by the Secretary as a disaster area, or (b) a standing crop is entirely lost due to a sudden, violent natural disaster such as a hurricane, tornado, hailstorm, sandstorm, or flood."

Other conditions which must be met under the new directive to prevent payment loss are (1) the disaster must continue through or occur after the end of the "normal planting season," (2) the producer must request "prevented planting or failed acreage" credit in sufficient time for a representative of the County office to visit the farm to confirm evidence of the natural disaster, and this must be done before crop remains, if any, are disturbed, and (3)

The Staue of Liberty was erected in 1886. The northernmost point of the U. S. is located in Minnesota.

The county agent urges all farmers in the county who receive the questionnaire to fill it out accurately and completely and return it as soon as possible to the Reporting Service.

Food production depends primarily upon arable land, and the United States is letting its soil slip through its fingers at a rate not generally realized. —Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Original regulations of the 1971 cotton program decreed that farmers who lost cotton crops after the normal cotton planting season would lose a third of their cotton payments if the same land was replanted to another crop for harvest or if they chose to use the "failed acreage" as set-aside. Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. and other producer spokesmen objected to this provision on the grounds that producers should not be penalized for hailstorms, sandstorms, drought or other phenomena over which they have no control. And the ruling is now being softened by new regulations which permit the payment reduction to be waived in certain cases.

Cora Edwards Grandson Called King of Hurdles In New Mexico

2-24—CORA EDWARDS — Kenneth Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leston Edwards, Hobbs, N.M. and grandson of Mrs. Cora Edwards, Stanton, is right back where he started the 1971 New Mexico high school track season's best in the 120-yard season — king of the hurdles.

The lean Hobbs senior, in one brilliant weekend, eclipsed both high hurdles and the 180-yard lows with a pair of times that make him a definite threat to the state records in each event.
 Edward ripped off a 14.1 clocking in the 120-yard high at the Lovington Invitational, knocking four-tenths of a second off the season's previous reported best of 14.6 by Lovington's Stan Speegle and a tenth of a second off Edwards' career best in the event.
 And at the same meet he sliced two-tenths of a second off the year's best mark in the 180-yard lows, which Edwards also held. His time Saturday was 19.3, compared with his previous best of 19.5.
 Judging from the performance of Edwards Saturday in Lovington easily could set new state records in both hurdles events. The state record in the 120-yard high is 13.9, set in the 1967 state meet by Silver City's Rick Tipton.

 And the 180-yard low hurdles record is 19.0, set in the 1966 state meet by Carlsbad's Paul Gibson and by Larry Parker of Gadsden in the 1964 meet.
 Edwards led a strong assault by New Mexico's prep thin-clads against last week's Associated Press list of the season's top track marks.
 A total of 10 of last week's 18 best track marks were either tied or beaten.
 Kenneth is also a member of the Mile Relay team which holds the State record.
