Paving project is 'first'

Major workover for park roadway

The repaving of the Towle Park Road, a project now underway and expected to be completed in approximately two weeks, is an historic "first" of sorts as it marks the first time the roadway's base has been reworked since its construction.

The park was opened in 1952, making the Towle Park Road approximately 37 years old.

County crews began the project Monday and had laid down a caliche surface by Friday to allow traffic in the park during the Memorial Day weekend.

Precinct 3 Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr., in whose precinct the park is located, said barricades would be replaced on Tuesday morning so that heavy equipment could be allowed back on site.

On Tuesday, commissioners are scheduled to consider bids for sealcoating rock to resurface the one-mile stretch.

The work will see the roadway retopped from its entrance at College Ave. to just west of the National Guard Armory. Only the main road through the park is being resurfaced.

In addition to the new paving, Gray noted the shoulder of the road will be widened to 10 ft. and topped with caliche, a change to accommodate walkers and runners who use the route for exercise.

This next week, crews are expected to complete packing the base. The road is expected to be opened each weekend and closed again during the week through the termination of the project.

An avenue has been left open for residents of the Towle Park area who use the road for entrance and exiting from their homes.

Other citizens are encouraged to use Houston Ave. and 42nd St. as alternate thoroughfares.

The cost of the project is being shared by all four county precincts.

Trustys preparing building for TDC

Three state penitentiary inmates and a Texas Department of Corrections supervisor from Huntsville are cleaning up and otherwise preparing the Industrial Building in northern Snyder for TDC officials who plan to begin occupying it in mid-June.

TDC warehouseman William Middleton said the work has gone well except that the sprinkler heads on the building's fire alarm system are defective and will have to be replaced this week before the water can be turned on.

The Scurry County Industrial Foundation gave the building, along the south side of U.S. 84, to the TDC as an incentive to build a prison here.

Warden Leslie Woods, assistant warden Charles Streetman and other TDC officers will use the building and its large front office area for about a month, until the new Price Daniel Unit is opened.

Middleton said the TDC will also start shipping foodstuffs and materials to be stored in the building as soon as he gets it ready.

The three trustys he has been supervising are all from Huntsville's Ellis II unit. Two are full-time yardmen, and the other is a yardman and general purpose worker.

In addition to cleaning up the offices and warehouse area, they are mowing grass and straightening up the appearance of the grounds.

Middleton said the crew has been making "good headway" since starting work last Tuesday and should have no trouble meeting the deadline for Woods and his staff to move in.

The inmates are being housed in the Scurry County Jail during the project.

Jobless estimate inches up locally

The up and down cycle for unemployment in Scurry County this year went "up" during April, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission.

The TEC listed the county's unemployment at 6.7 percent, up from March's figure of 5.9 percent.

The indication was that the number of persons employed declined while those actively seeking jobs went up.

The employment figure was 8,483 persons with jobs, compared to 8,504 the previous month.

Regarding those seeking employment through the TEC, the figure listed for April was 609 as compared to 535 one month earlier. The civilian labor force, comprised of both those with jobs and those seeking employment, was listed at 9,092 for the county, the highest it has been this year.

Employment figures were reported also for five other counties served through the Sweetwater regional TEC office. These include:

—Nolan County: unemployment figured at 7.8 percent with 7,305 persons employed and 622 seeking employment for a labor force of 7,927.

—Mitchell County: unemployment figured at 10.3 percent with 3,658 persons employed and 428 seeking employment for a labor force of 4,078.

Status of state paving due report from court

County Judge Bobby Goodwin will report on the city-county meeting last week with the Texas Highway Commission in regard to the state's paving of the land-fill road at a 10 a.m. Tuesday commissioners court meeting.

Goodwin, the four county commissioners and representatives of the city government made a formal request in a meeting last Wednesday in Austin for the state of the Price Daniel Unit, and assume maintenance of the paved county road north of there.

Other business in the meeting will include a report by Goodwin on his search for office space for the county to lease to the Texas Department of Human Services and the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, which is opening a new four-man office here.

Pct. 2 Commissioner Tommy Pate will discuss a project to build horse stalls on the southeast side of the county coliseum ag annex, and bids will be opened for the purchase of gravel to sealcoat county roads this

Requests to advertise for bids will be considered for the purchase of sealcoating asphalt and for the purchase of a used farm tractor to be used in Pct. 4 Commissioner Ted Billingsley's precinct.

A friend of ours noted the recent retirement of a doctor named Donald E. Campbell. The name might not ring a memory lane bell, but his picture on the front of Saturday Evening Post are unforgettable.

The kind and gentle doctor's face use to adorn many physician offices—right next to the familiar poster of the human anatomy.

It was the white-haired doctor who was the model for many of Norman Rockwell's illustrations. One was a classic entitled, "Before the Shot," in which the doctor prepares a shot for the bare-bottomed youngster as the boy suspiciously examined his framed medical degree.

Our friend reminded us that the illustration helped a patient feel a little kinder toward his doctor.

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

Dr. Campbell retired earlier this year on his 83rd birthday. He was the only doctor in Stockbridge, Ma., and he said he was quitting because he could no longer remember people's names.

When he started his practice over 50 years ago, he charged $2 for office calls and $3 for a house call. He often took his fee in vegetables, venison or cord wood. He acknowledged it was not the way to get rich "unless you mean rich in spirit."

We're already having trouble with names, but the banker won't let us retire. In 40 more years, we just hope we're aware we can't remember names.

Two bits

NEW YORK (AP) — Coin experts say some 1989 quarters could be worth hundreds of dollars because the U.S. Mint unwittingly struck an unknown number of them with no mint mark.

Readers of the Numismatic News, a weekly coin collector's publication based in Iola, Wis., sent in two 1989 quarters missing the mint mark. The New York Times reported today.

A spokesman for Stack's, a New York coin dealer, said the 1989 quarter could be worth $250 to $1,000, based on prices of other coins with similar errors.

House okays vote on prison bonds

AUSTIN (AP) — Midway through a marathon session scheduled until midnight Friday, the House tentatively approved legislation and a proposed constitutional amendment authorizing $400 million in bonds for prison construction.

House members also gave preliminary approval to a bill that would require state agencies and mass transit authorities to use natural gas-fueled vehicles.

Both votes were non-record and another vote is needed for final passage.

The bonds would be used for prison construction and programs as well as for state mental health and mental retardation facilities and the purchase of a building for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The proposed constitutional amendment, tentatively approved on a 141-2 vote, would authorize issuance of the general obligation bonds. The amendment, which has Senate approval, requires voter approval in November.

The bonds would pay for what lawmakers have called the most expansive overhaul ever of the Texas prison system. Plans include 11,000 new prison beds and creation of alternative sentencing programs and community corrections facilities.

Gov. Bill Clements repeatedly has declared an emergency under the Prison Management Act, allowing offenders to be released ahead of their scheduled parole dates because of prison crowding.

Texas is under a federal court order to keep the state prison population under 95 percent of capacity.

Counties have complained that state inmates awaiting transfer are backed up in county jails, costing local governments and resulting in local crowding problems.

Rep. Allen Hightower, D-Huntsville, architect of the House prison reform plan, said the reform plans would increase prison capacity from 39,000 to 61,000 beds.

"We're going to need the bonding authority ... just to say ahead of the curve" until the new diversionary programs and sentencing alternatives can begin working, Hightower said.

"If we don't build these (new prison beds) now, that jail overcrowding is going to get worse instead of better," Hightower said. Under the natural gas bill, which was amended to exclude school districts because of the cost, state agencies and mass transit authorities would be required to convert their fleets to using compressed natural gas.

State purchasers could allow exceptions for agencies without access to refueling stations and if the cost of converting the vehicles would be too high.

Supporters say natural gas burns cleaner than gasoline or diesel and would help reduce urban air pollution. They also say that increasing consumption of the fuel could create jobs and help the state's economy.

Lawmaker guilty on teen sex charge

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Rep. Donald Lukens was convicted Friday of having sex with a 16-year-old girl whose mother accused the congressman of fering a government job to buy her silence.

Hours after the verdict, one Ohio congressman called for Lukens' resignation, but an aide predicted he would seek reelection next year.

"I think he should do the gentlemanly thing and resign," said Rep. Chalmers Wylie, the senior Republican among Ohio's congressional delegation. Lukens also is a Republican.

A jury deliberated for 1½ hours before finding Lukens guilty of contributing to the delinquency and unruliness of a minor, stemming from an incident last Nov. 6. The misdemeanor carries a maximum sentence of 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Lukens stood still, his hands pressed on the defense table and his mouth slightly opened, as Franklin County Domestic Relations Judge Ronald Solove read the verdict.

The 58-year-old divorced congressman from Middletown was indicted Feb. 23, about three weeks after Columbus television station WSYX broadcast a secretly recorded videotape that appeared to show Lukens offering to find the girl's mother, Anna Coffman, a job. She had gone to the station to get help and agreed to the secret taping.

On the tape, the woman asked Lukens why he was "messing around" with her daughter, Rosie. Lukens replied, "Well, first of all, I didn't really know she was a teen-ager."

Toward the end of the tape, Lukens said, "Let me go back (to Washington) and see what there is part-time and ... (inaudible) ... I don't know what, uh, the government has, but I can check and find out."

A misdemeanor conviction does not automatically trigger an Ethics Committee investigation or bar a member from sitting in Congress. The committee does have the option of investigating such cases and recommending action such as censure.

Solove delayed sentencing pending the completion of a presentence investigation. Lukens faces a maximum sentence of 180 days in jail and a fine of $1,000.

Lukens declined to comment on the verdict before he left the courthouse through a private hallway and elevator. His chief of staff, William Jarrell, said he planned to make a statement next week about his personal and political future.

Beijing students continue protests

BELJING (AP) — Students on Tiananmen Square said today they will not give up their fight for democracy despite thinning ranks and the consolidation of power by old guard conservatives demanding an end to the protests.

There were more signs that the military, blocked so far by popular resistance, might move soon to end the students' two-week occupation of the square.

Servicemen were seen strolling in pairs this morning around the plaza, where about 15,000 students remained. Chinese and foreign sources said about 700 soldiers were bivouacked in a closed park across from the square.

The state-run media on Friday quoted Premier Li Peng as calling on soldiers to surround Beijing to conduct "a resolute struggle against the plots of a small minority."

Li declared martial law in the city on May 20 and ordered that the protests, the largest in the nation's history, be quelled.

But student leader Wu Dehua of Beijing University said today: "We will stay."

"The whole city, the whole country, the whole world is watching. We students are not here just for the people of this city but for the sake of history and all society," he said.

Student leaders said they were confident that they could again quickly mobilize hundreds of thousands of students and Beijing residents if there were clashes with authorities.

But the apparent victory of political hard-line leaders led by senior leader Deng Xiaoping and the reported ouster of liberal Communist Party chief Zhao Ziyang appeared to be severe blows to the student movement.

One Beijing Medical University student said, however, "students are not losing hope just because Zhao is sacked. Our belief is firm and cannot be moved."

Despite the brave front, student broadcasts urged students from other cities to return home to carry forth the democratic movement.

The streets of the capital were quiet Friday night, unlike past evenings when hundreds of thousands of residents turned out to support and protect the students.

There were long lines of students at the Beijing railway station waiting for trains to the provinces. Student broadcasts, quoting railway officials, said 26,000 left Beijing on Thursday and that the number of departures was growing.

The government has given students priority in getting tickets.

Although a few departing students admitted they were afraid of violence now that the conservatives appeared to be in control, most said they were leaving because they were tired of sleeping on concrete in squalid conditions for the past two weeks.

Ill youngster booted off baseball team

HOUSTON (AP) — A Little Leaguer with cerebral palsy, who had been kicked off his team, played in the last game of the season after the organization's national office intervened.

Tucker Church, a 15-year-old who was told this week he couldn't finish the season on his team of 9- and 10-year-olds, played Friday night after obtaining a doctor's note that he'd be safer playing on a team of younger boys.

Tucker was kicked off the team and his coach was forced to resign this week because another team competing for the same playoff spot complained about the player's presence on the younger team, the Sharpstown Pirates.

"I knowingly broke their rules so I resigned right away," said Coach Scott Davis. "But what this is really about is adults who cared too much about winning."

Davis said Tucker, who is 4-foot-9 and weighs 56 pounds, could not compete with boys his own age.

"I knew the age rule, but in my heart I just couldn't see this kid not play baseball," Davis said. "He loves it so much."

A Houston Little League administrator received a complaint from the playoff competitor and applied the age rule against Tucker Wednesday night.

But the Little League national office in Williamsport, Pa., was flooded with calls about the matter Friday and officials there ruled Tucker could play if he presented proof from a doctor that said he'd be safer on the younger team.

"They wanted to know what we were doing to this poor kid so I called the Texas state office and said we have to make this right," said Joe Losch, assistant to the president of Little League baseball.

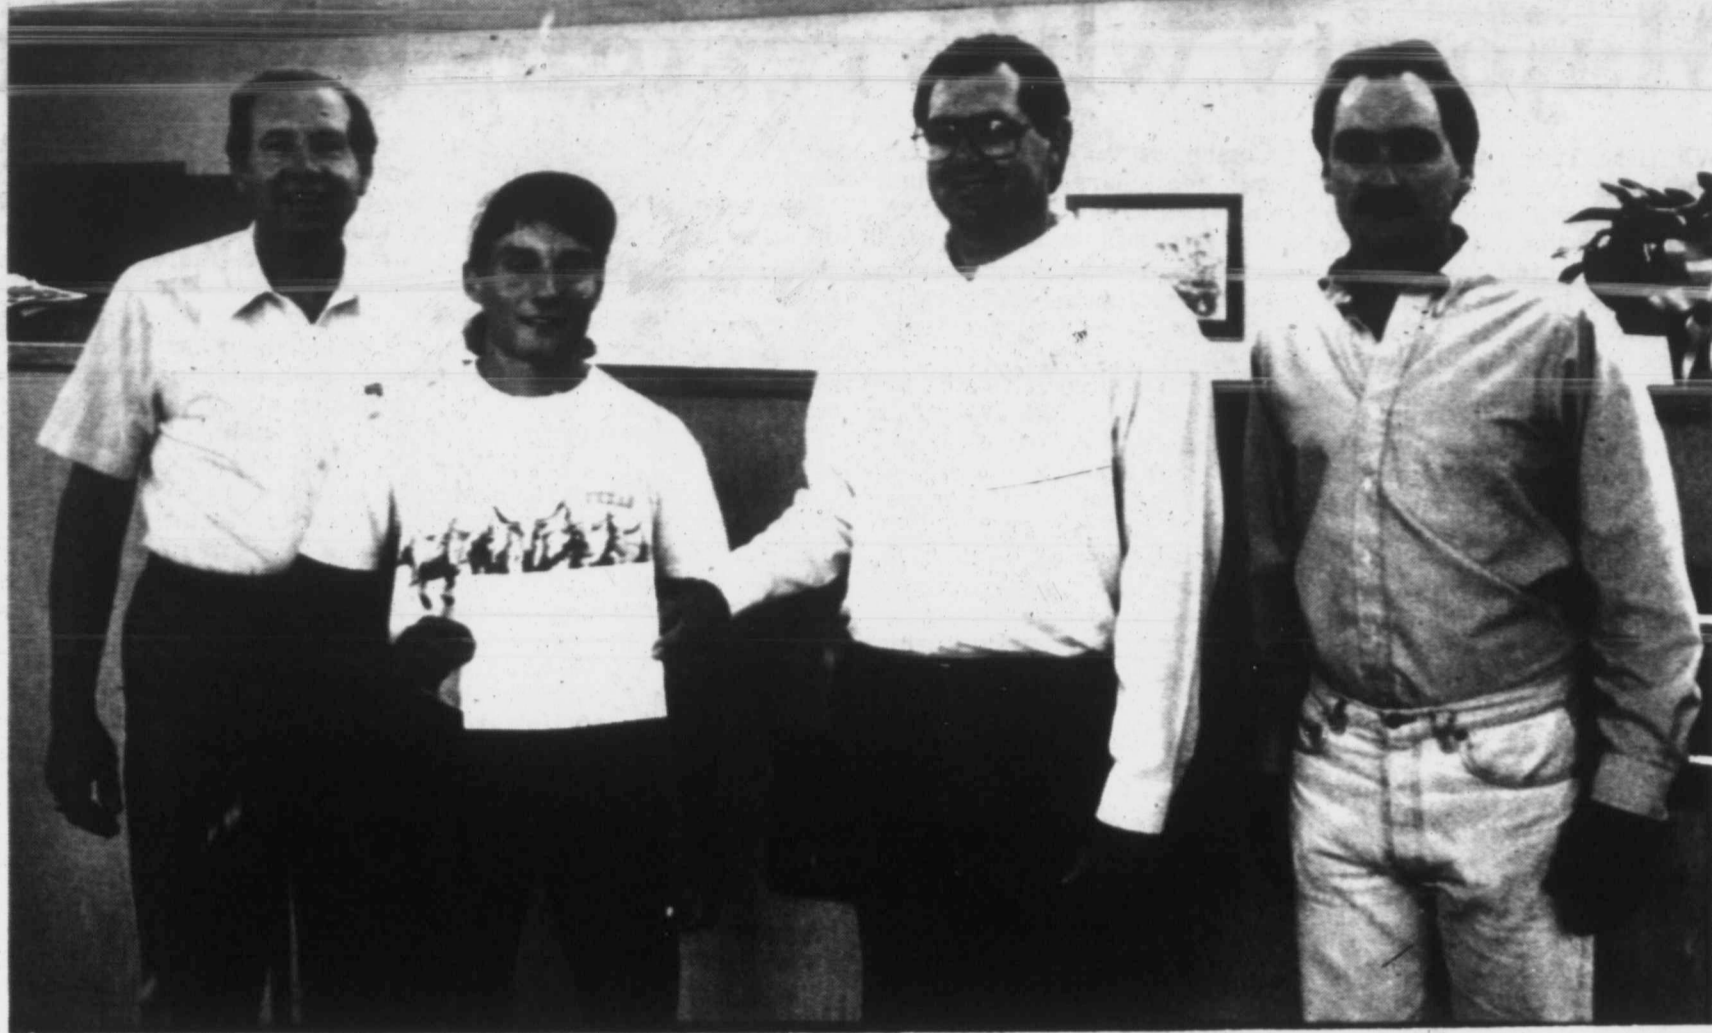

Tucker's letter came from Dr. Red Duke, a well-known Houston physician, but the teen was resigned to not playing Friday because Davis was not going to coach.

Sharpstown Little League president Leroy Simoneaux reversed the earlier ruling and allowed Davis to coach.

In the third inning Tucker entered the lineup and struck out in five pitches.

"I swung as hard as I could," said Tucker, who hits .167 and falls often. "I don't know what he threw me. I'm not sure I saw it."

Tucker's team lost 13-4 Friday night, ending their season. His teammates carried him off the field on their shoulders.

Ohio flooding...

Bridge collapse dumps two cars

CINCINNATI (AP) — A bridge collapsed minutes after an engineer recommended closing it, and the rain-swollen river below swept away at least two vehicles. Flooding elsewhere in Ohio left one child dead and hundreds out of their homes.

Police could not say how many people were in the cars, but all the occupants were feared dead in Friday's accident. No bodies or cars had been recovered by early today.

"The car in front of us just dropped straight down," said Sharon Boebinger, who was waiting to cross the bridge when it started collapsing. "I said, 'Oh my God.' I put it in reverse and backed up. I didn't feel the bridge shake at all. It just happened in an instant."

Lt. Col. Ramon Hoffbauer of the Hamilton County sheriff's office was asked if anyone could have survived the plunge.

"I wouldn't think so," he said. "The current is moving pretty fast. I can't tell you how fast, but the rescue crews didn't go into the water at all."

The American Red Cross said it got more than a dozen missing person calls, but Gary Miller, disaster services director, said none of the missing could be confirmed as river victims.

A visual search for the vehicles and victims was called off Friday and officials said divers likely would have to wait for the water to recede before going in.

The collapse of the one-lane, temporary bridge carrying U.S. 52 over the Great Miami River at Miamitown, 10 miles west of Cincinnati, occurred just 10 minutes after a Hamilton County engineer had given an order to close the span.

Widespread flooding in southwestern Ohio earlier Friday sent people scurrying to rooftops and high ground.

A couple and their 10-year-old son were stranded on the roof of their house all day until rescuers reached them by boat, the Butler County Sheriff's Department said.

Majority whip resigns to avoid ethics probe.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Tony Coelho, No. 3 Democrat in the House, will quit Congress rather than endure a protracted ethics investigation similar to the one that has driven Speaker Jim Wright to the brink of resignation, the House majority leader said today.

Coelho, the majority whip, has come under fire in recent weeks for a $100,000 junk bond investment in which he earned more than $6,000 without investing any money, and for other financial dealings.

Coelho will go into the private sector, Thomas Foley, D-Wash., said in a telephone interview after speaking with Coelho.

Coelho is confident he can rebut the charges that might come from any investigation, Foley said, but "in the interest of avoiding a long controversy which he feels could hurt the party and the House, he's decided to give up his whip post."

The Associated Press tried repeatedly to call Coelho's Washington home for comment but was told he was occupied. Coelho was expected to formally announce his decision to step down in a statement today. The resignation from his California House seat will be effective June 15, his 47th birthday, and Coelho will leave his leadership post as soon as the party can elect a successor, a source close to Coelho said.

Foley termed Coelho's departure as "a loss," adding: "In the current environment, realistically, there might be a long period of inquiry which he feels would be damaging to the party or to the House for which he has deep affection."

The source close to Coelho said late Friday: "He basically said he has devoted 25 years to public life, worked for social change and spent too much time trying to build the party up."

"He has been told by his attorneys he has no legal difficulties," the source said. "He just thinks enough is enough. He does not want to put his party through it."

Coelho's decision, first disclosed in an interview published in today's editions of The New York Times, further complicates Democratic efforts to regroup in the wake of the furor over Wright's ethical problems.

Foley is expected to become speaker if Wright resigns as expected next week.

Coelho told the Times he was taking the actions to avoid a protracted investigation of his personal finances.

Earlier this month, Coelho acknowledged that a California savings and loan executive set him up in a junk bond investment that netted him a $6,882 profit without him having to put up any of his own money.

However, Coelho had said that except for some reporting errors the 1986 deal was "totally above board" and he did nothing wrong.

Coelho has been a rising star in the House. The Californian was widely respected and liked by other Democrats for his work as the party's campaign committee chairman.

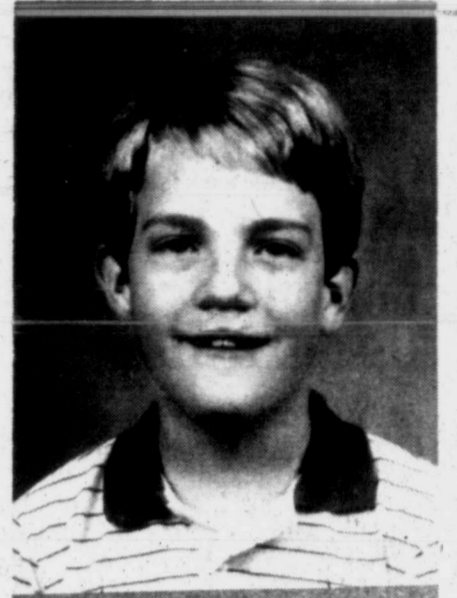

But some Democrats expressed concern privately over the possible political damage to the party if Coelho took on a more prominent role at a time when his business dealings were coming under close scrutiny on the heels of Wright's apparently unsuccessful campaign to fend off multiple ethics allegations.

His math and English scores were 21 and 22.

Kotrla, an accounting major at Tech, is also a member of Phi Eta Sigma and Lambda Sigma, the sophomore honor society. He served as treasurer for Phi Eta Sigma this academic year and has also been listed on the President's List at Tech for those students making a 4.0 during the spring semester.

Financial Focus

If you're looking for the most important rule of investing, diversification is high on the list. Whether you call it spreading your risk or not putting all your eggs in one basket, it means one thing—adding safety to your investment program.

Mutual funds have traditionally offered a simple way to diversify and guard against major setbacks without giving up the potential of future gains. Yet to put all your money into one mutual fund might not offer enough diversification to satisfy you.

If this is the case, consider three basic ways to use mutual funds with other investments for more diversification.

1. Buy a balanced fund. These funds, also called total-return funds, divide their portfolios between stocks and bonds. Generally the percentages are flexible enough to allow the fund managers the discretion of being top heavy in either stocks or bonds yet not so liberal as to allow them to chase after trends.

2. Buy certificates of deposit for guarantee of principal, and invest the interest in a common-stock mutual fund. Now, your only risk is the income because your original investment is returned to you when the CD matures. Plan this strategy on a five or 10 year program. This lets you select a mutual fund that has a consistent record of gains during that particular time frame.

One recent study hypothetically invested the 8 percent interest paid quarterly from a $100,000, 10-year CD into a conservative growth and income fund. That reinvested interest grew to $174,000 with the original $100,000 still intact.

3. Split your investment between U.S. Treasury zero-coupon bonds and a mutual fund. Again, none of your original principal is at risk. For example, in today's market with $100,000 to invest, you could purchase U.S. Treasury zeros for about $45,000 and place the remaining $55,000 in a high-quality mutual fund.

In 10 years, the zero-coupon bonds would mature at $100,000, your original total investment, and your mutual fund, compounding at a reasonable 12 percent, would be worth more than $170,000.

By using either U.S. Treasury zeros or certificates of deposit and holding the investment until maturity, your original principal is not at risk. You could lose everything in the mutual fund and still have your original investment.

There are numerous variations of these three risk-spreading techniques. The idea is to invest in such a way that over a period of time your original principal will be returned to you. Diversification can do this.

Snyder Cablevision Rewards Movie Lovers With Free Cable Service

If you know your Oscars, you're in for a month of free movies this summer, free, from Snyder Cablevision. It doesn't matter whether you now have cable or not. Everyone will have an equal chance to make his or her knowledge of good movies pay off.

"We're sending out thousands of entry forms to both customers and non-customers," said Rex Thackerson, general manager of Snyder Cablevision. "On the form is every movie our cable system will deliver this June. Just check off the Oscar winners, and you're a winner."

Between the basic cable programming, and the pay services, Snyder Cablevision's June schedule has almost 1000 movies listed in all, a typical monthly movie count according to Thackerson. And when you're looking for Academy Award winners, look beyond the obvious. "It's not just 'Best Picture' we're looking for," said Thackerson. "If a movie took an Oscar in any category, check it off."

Winners who don't already have cable will be rewarded for their recognition of Hollywood's finest with a month of free basic cable TV, including free installation.

If you now have basic cable, your winning entry will get you your choice of HBO, Cinemax or The Disney Channel, free for a month. Again, with no charge for installation for one of these premium channels.

In fact everybody who simply enters Snyder Cablevision's "Movie Lovers Giveaway" contest will be offered free installation of basic cable or of a pay service. According to Thackerson, "As long as people take a stab at it we'll hook them up free of charge. We're trying to get everybody participating."

Thackerson called attention to the fact that all entries do have to be postmarked by June 15 of this year. "We'll call each winner individually, and probably run a newspaper ad with all our winners listed."

"There's nothing to lose," says Thackerson. "And a month full of free movies to gain."

Unser wants fifth, not Mears' second

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - Wanna play numbers?

Al Unser would just as soon not have 2, but 5 would be OK. Two, as in two straight Indianapolis 500 victories by Rick Mears, a feat not accomplished since Unser in 1970-71; five, as in total Indy victories Unser would have if he wins Sunday.

"Really, I don't like to talk about numbers until I'm gone from racing," said Unser, who will turn 50 on Monday.

"You know, every race I run I want to win," he said. "I don't go into this race or any other race thinking, 'Gosh, I could set some record or other.' Winning the fifth one here would be neat. But winning at Michigan or Pocono or anywhere else is great, too."

Still, Indy is special, isn't it?

"Sure, I think Indy is the greatest race in the world," Unser said. "You win here and you'll always be an Indy winner. But each one means just as much as the last one. I'd be just as excited to win Sunday as I was in 1970."

He also won in 1971, 1978 and 1987.

He also is one of a handful of starters who will try to keep the record-setting, pole-winner Mears from winning the second straight year.

Unser will start between Mears, his teammate, and Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, another favorite.

The 33 starters will take the green flag at 11 a.m. EST before a crowd of about 400,000 and an international television audience.

"When you walk out of Gasoline Alley race morning, there is so much adrenaline pouring from the race fans there is no other feeling like it," Unser said.

Asked if he still gets excited heading into his 24th Indy 500, Unser said: "I'm usually pretty calm. The only person that ever said I was hyper was my wife, and I don't have one anymore."

The race payoff is expected to reach close to $6 million, with the winner likely to earn the first $1 million purse in racing history.

Two rows behind Unser will be his son, Al Jr. Those two, along with Mario and Michael Andretti, are the only father-son duos in Indy history.

The younger Unser, 27, has driven in six Indy races, with his best finish fourth in 1987. But he finished second in the Indy-car season-opener at Phoenix in April, then won the next race at Long Beach, Calif., a week later.

He comes into Sunday's event leading the season point standings.

Other possible winners include second-row starters Jim Crawford of Scotland and Mario Andretti, the 1969 winner.

Bobby Rahal, the 1986 champion, will start next to Unser Jr. in row three, with A.J. Foyt, the only other four-time winner, in the fourth of 11 three-car rows.

Lakers block Suns, 110-107

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - The Los Angeles Lakers say they play one game at a time.

Five more times the way they've been going in the playoffs and they'll be NBA champions for the third straight year.

Trailing by three points with a little over a minute to play Friday night, the Lakers scored eight straight points - all from the foul line - in beating the Phoenix Suns 110-107 to take a commanding 3-0 lead in the Western Conference finals.

The win was the 10th without a loss for the Lakers in the postseason, breaking the playoff record they set of nine straight victories seven years ago.

"It's not really a big concern of mine," Magic Johnson said of the winning streak. "It doesn't matter to me. We really don't even talk about it."

"We just did what we had to do, and we'll go out and do it again Sunday. We'll keep taking it one game at a time and keep working for our goal."

A victory Sunday would put the Lakers into the NBA finals against either Detroit or Chicago. A loss would probably just delay the inevitable. An NBA team has never come back to win a best-of-7 series after being down 0-3.

The Lakers, who last June became the first NBA team to win consecutive titles in 19 years, have now won 15 straight games, counting the regular season, and 12 consecutive playoff games, dating back to last year.

The Suns certainly had a chance to win Friday night. They trailed 93-83 with 7:14 remaining in the game after James Worthy scored eight of his 29 points in a span of 2:18, but surged back and held a 105-102 lead when Armon Gilliam put in a missed shot with 1:27 left.

Worthy made a pair of free throws with 1:04 to go and Thompson, a 68 percent foul shooter, made two with 38 seconds left to put the Lakers ahead for good.

Worthy scored 14 of his 29 points in the fourth quarter and also had 12 rebounds and three assists. Magic Johnson had 20 points, 11 assists and nine rebounds, and Michael Cooper came off the bench to add 16 points for the Lakers, including four 3-pointers.

Tom Chambers led the Suns with 26 points and eight rebounds. Kevin Johnson had 22 points and 13 assists, and Jeff Hornacek had 21 points and 11 rebounds for Phoenix.

Bulls ready for 'Bad Boys' as series goes to third game

CHICAGO (AP) - The worst of the Detroit Pistons' "bad boys" could be Rick Mahorn after he's had a bad game.

Chicago's Charles Davis, a teammate of Mahorn's for three years with the Washington Bullets, said he expected the Pistons power forward to be in a bad mood for Saturday's third game of the Eastern Conference semifinals.

"The thing with Rickey is that he's fine after a good game," Davis said. "But if he has a bad game, it's time to watch him."

Mahorn had a team-high 17 points in Game 1, but was held to one point and three rebounds in the second game, in which the Pistons evened the best-of-7 series 1-1.

Davis said Mahorn, Bill Laimbeer and Dennis Rodman are the only three Pistons who qualify as "bad boys."

"Laimbeer, he's just dirty," Davis said. "He gave Michael Jordan a push, he threw the ball at Bill Cartwright and gave Scottie Pippen an elbow walking off after the game."

"Then you've got Rodman and Ricky. With Ricky, as long as you say something back, you're OK. You just don't ever let him feel like he has the edge."

Bulls forward Horace Grant, who outrebounded the entire Detroit front line 20-16 in Game 2, said he has a theory about Detroit's intimidation methods.

"They seem to get frustrated if you don't retaliate when they try to get you to retaliate," Grant said. "That's why we keep telling ourselves to keep our poise. If we can do that, I think we have a good chance to win this series."

Davis said he isn't afraid to defend himself, but the price is too high in the NBA.

"My wife asked me what I would do if Bill Laimbeer punched me," Davis said. "When I paused and didn't answer quickly, she then asked, 'Is it worth $8,000 to you to throw a punch?' I have to say no. I need my money."

Davis' salary is about a tenth of Jordan's and a fourth of Pippen's $800,000.

Jordan, averaging 36.3 points in the playoffs, is feeling better after a bout with a flu-like illness that limited his energy level in Tuesday's game.

On Thursday, however, he was feeling so energetic that he bent a rim with a dunk, delaying practice for 30 minutes.

Aussie leading Atlanta Classic

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) - Wayne Grady said when he was growing up in Australia he was forced to look elsewhere for a golf hero.

"We were always told Australians couldn't play," Grady said Friday after taking the second-round lead in the Atlanta Classic with a 6-under-par 66.

With no Aussies to admire in the sport, Grady said he looked up to Gary Player, the South African who became the first foreign player to win the

Texas Aggies flatten BYU

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - Brigham Young coach Gary Pullins has a warning for Texas A&M coach Mark Johnson.

If the Aggies continue playing as they have in the NCAA Central Regional baseball playoffs, they're likely to end up as national champions.

"If they get to Omaha with the same enthusiasm they've shown here, they are destined to be national champions," Pullins said Friday. "They've got everything it takes."

The Aggies got a season-high 24 hits and used an 11-run second inning for a 25-4 victory Friday that eliminated Brigham Young from the playoffs.

The Aggies, who have scored 48 runs and 40 hits in two Central Region games, was to play South Alabama in Saturday's winners' bracket game.

In other games Friday, Nevada-Las Vegas benefited from an NCAA record-tying nine Jackson State errors for a 13-2 victory that eliminated the Cougars and South Alabama rallied for four seventh inning runs to beat Louisiana State 6-4.

The Aggies haven't been tested in the Central Region.

The Aggies have scored 83 runs in five tournament games this post-season. They scored 35 runs in three games to win the Southwest Conference tournament last week and they have 48 runs in the Central Region.

A&M's 24-hit attack was a season high, breaking their 20 hit total against Texas Tech in the regular season.

Mike Easley's three-run triple fueled A&M's 11-run second inning against the Cougars Friday.

Longhorns, Oklahoma State hold off smaller schools in tournament

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Before the NCAA Midwest Regional began, the coaches for Texas and Oklahoma State knew their smaller foes would be tough.

With the tournament's other big school, Southern California, beaten in the first round by a smaller one Friday, they may have been surprised at how tough.

The 18th-ranked Trojans fell 9-8 to Western Michigan's 13-hit barrage, while host Texas and Oklahoma State fought hard to win.

The 5th-ranked Longhorns beat New Orleans 2-0 despite a superb pitching performance by Matt Wiese. And 13th-ranked Oklahoma St. fended off Sam Houston State 6-5.

"It shows you that you can't take anybody lightly," said Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson. "I'm sure Oklahoma St. was as delighted with their win today as we were."

Wiese, 1-6, kept the Longhorns off the basepaths by allowing no hits in seven innings. But Texas sophomore pitcher Kirk Dressendorfer two-hit New Orleans to improve to 15-2, equalling his output of last season.

Oklahoma State staved off three comeback bids by Sam Houston State. The Cowboys needed Jeromy Burnitz' 8th inning home run to advance.

"There are a mentally tough bunch of kids in the Southland Conference," said Oklahoma State Coach Gary Ward. "There are some quality athletes in the league. We knew it wouldn't be easy."

Two teams could be knocked out of the double elimination tournament Saturday.

New Orleans and Sam Houston, both losers Friday, were to meet in the first game Saturday afternoon. Texas and USC were to follow in a game the Trojans had to win to continue in the tourney. Oklahoma St. played Western Michigan in the night game.

Fort Worth, Texas. "With Greg, golf has boomed in Australia," Grady said. "We got a couple of million dollar tournaments next year, which is amazing, really great."

Grady has been playing on the PGA Tour for four-plus seasons, never winning but posting a pair of second-place finishes - the Buick Open in 1985 and the Boston Classic two years ago.

Grady's 8-under-par 136 total for two rounds gave him a one-shot lead over five others - Ray Stewart of Canada, Larry Silveira, first-round leader Jay Don Blake, Mike Hulbert and Duffy Waldorf.

Bill mandates proficiency

GREETINGS—Recently Hugo Jaimes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Jaimes and a sixth grader at Central, took part in a class writing assignment in which he wrote to President George Bush. He received both a reply and a picture of Bush. Jaimes' teacher is Malcolm Crawford. (SDN Staff Photo)

AUSTIN (AP) — State college and university faculty members whose primary language is foreign would have to prove proficiency in spoken English to continue teaching, under a bill passed Friday by the Senate.

The Senate adopted the measure on a voice vote and sent the bill back to the House for consideration of changes in the legislation.

The bill would require that state higher education institutions establish short courses in English for faculty members whose first language is not English. Those faculty members would be required to complete the course and pass a spoken language test.

In other action Friday, the Senate approved a House amendment to a fair housing measure that tracks federal law, and sent the bill to the governor.

Supporters of the measure said the advantage of having a state fair housing law is that, without it, cities that do not adapt their own housing ordinances could face the loss of federal grant money. If a state law is enacted, cities could adopt it.

The Senate also adopted a measure that would increase disclosure requirements for political action committees and candidates. The bill goes back to the House for consideration of Senate amendments.

Common Cause, a political watchdog group, supports the bill, but said tougher campaign finance reform is needed.

"We urge the Legislature to seriously study and develop proposals for controlling large campaign contributions, skyrocketing campaign expenditures, and the influence of powerful and well-financed special interests," said Pam Fridrich, executive director of Common Cause of Texas.

The Senate sent to the governor a measure that would require the Texas Department of Human Services to provide medical care for a child born to a woman incarcerated in the state prison system if there is no other source of payment.

There will be approximately 95 births to women incarcerated in Texas Department of Corrections facilities in 1990 at a cost of about $78,000, according to a legislative bill analysis.

The Senate also sent to the governor bills that would require information on the identities of persons who are victims of a felony offense and home addresses and telephone numbers of former public agency or employees be kept confidential.

The Senate approved and returned to the House, with amendments, proposals that would:

— Make 48 changes to the property Tax Code, including a requirement that appraisal districts reappraise property at least every three years.

— Enhance the punishment for aggravated assault or deadly assault on certain law officers, jailers and guards, to a first-degree felony, punishable by up to life in prison.

— Authorize counties bordering Mexico to issue tax and revenue bonds for the construction of an international toll bridge and other improvements spanning the Rio Grande. Fourteen counties would qualify.

— Authorize the Texas Department of Health to regulate tanning facilities.

— Replaces current premiums tax on life, accident, and health companies with a flat rate tax, contingent upon the dismissal of court challenges against the current tax.

Lower tax on racing is dropped

AUSTIN (AP) — The sponsor of a plan to lower the state's take from race track wagers abandoned the idea Friday, but the Senate did approve a measure which would allow wagering on races televised to tracks across the state.

Sen. O.H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, said he might have lacked the votes — and faced gubernatorial opposition — on his proposal to cut the state's 5 percent share of pari-mutuel wagers.

"I'd have liked for it to have been otherwise, but if you don't have the votes there's no point," he said.

Harris, who did win passage of a racing bill Friday, said he feared the failure to lower the state's take could delay building of Kentucky Derby-style, Class 1 tracks in the Dallas-Fort Worth and San Antonio areas.

Under the current racing law, each dollar wagered is divided four ways: 82 cents goes back to winning bettors, 8 cents goes to the track operator, 5 cents goes to purses and 5 cents to the state.

Horsemen say the state's share is too large for a fledgling industry, particularly at the Class 1 tracks which could cost $70 million or more to build. They say more money is needed for purses to lure top-quality horses. Of the three areas where Class 1 tracks are authorized, only the Houston permit is being sought.

Harris had proposed reducing the 5 percent state share to a sliding scale, beginning at 1 percent and rising as attendance and betting "handle" increased at tracks.

Although he gave up on the plan this session, Harris said he would try again in a later session.

Gov. Bill Clements had voiced opposition on Thursday, saying he thought it was too soon to be tampering with the law. No Class 1 tracks have been licensed yet, and no pari-mutuel races have been run on the eight smaller tracks that did win permits.

The Senate voted 25-4 for Harris' bill to make a number of changes in the racing law, including authorization for "simulcasting" at Texas tracks.

Simulcasting is the practice of a track televising — and taking wagers on — races being run elsewhere in the state or country.

Racing backers said they thought the original law allowed simulcasting, but the bill sent to the House Friday specifically allows the Texas Racing Commission to approve rules for it.

Harris said the commission could allow betting on the televised races at horse and dog tracks whether they are conducting live races or not. Off-track betting wouldn't be allowed, however.

"Whatever they put on the screen up there" could be wagered on, he said, arguing that the practice is needed to lure high-quality racing to the state.

Wreck kills three teens

LIVINGSTON (AP) — Three teen-agers were killed and another was seriously injured near Livingston when a 17-year-old driver lost control of his car Friday night.

Reports of the youth's deaths boosted the number of people killed on Texas highways to the Memorial Day weekend to five, according to count being maintained by The Associated Press.

Larry Pate of Humble was killed when the 1988 Toyota he was driving veered off Farm Road 2457 about seven miles west of Livingston. Investigators said the car was traveling at a high rate of speed when it struck an embankment and landed in about seven feet up in a stand of trees.

Austin update

Colleges to merge

AUSTIN (AP) — Merging several South Texas colleges into the two largest state university systems will expand opportunities for young people across the region, Gov. Bill Clements said Friday.

"Education is the cornerstone, literally the cornerstone, of our growth and advancement. It's at the core of economic development, of job creation and of a brighter future for all our people," Clements said.

"Texas must leave no stone unturned in creating an educational system that properly prepares our young people for the years ahead," he said.

Clements on Friday signed into law the bill that will merge Pan American University and Pan American at Brownsville into the University of Texas System.

At a special ceremony, he again signed legislation approved earlier that will merge the University System of South Texas into the Texas A&M system. That bill applied to Corpus Christi State, Texas A&I and Laredo State.

"Clearly, these are watershed measures that will enhance quality education in South Texas. These bills symbolize our commitment to our youth and to their well-being," Clements said.

Want higher speed limit

AUSTIN (AP) — Lawmakers passed a resolution Friday urging Congress to allow states to increase the speed limit to 65 mph on four-lane state highways.

Currently, federal law permits states to adopt a 65-mph limit on all interstate highways, except portions in urban, high-traffic areas.

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, has proposed expanding that speed limit to divided four-lane state highways.

The Texas Senate passed on voice vote a resolution requesting Congress approve Combest's proposal. The Texas House has already approved the resolution.

Cruise ship gambling

AUSTIN (AP) — The Senate on Friday tentatively approved a bill that would allow cruise ships that offer on-board gambling to forego a stop at a foreign port.

Sen. Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena, said the bill is "crucial to Galveston" for economic development. "We are critically in need of it in Galveston."

Brooks, dean of the Senate, said, "I put this on a personal basis. This is something I need, this is something my people need."

The Senate gave preliminary approval on voice vote, but because of an earlier 19-9 test vote, Brooks realized he did not have enough support to suspend rules and gain final passage Friday. He can try again before the Legislature adjourns Monday at midnight.

Currently, a cruise ship sails from Port Isabel, near Brownsville, and stops at a Mexican port less than 50 miles away to comply with the law.

The bill would eliminate the requirement that a ship sailing to or from a Texas port make a foreign port stop in order for on-board gambling to be allowed outside of state waters.

With overnight cruises from Galveston and Corpus Christi, "we'll be able to produce a great deal of additional revenue" for state and local businesses, Brooks said.

In Russia...

Full-time congress approved

MOSCOW (AP) — Communist maverick Boris N. Yeltsin, who won by a landslide in the popular vote for the new Soviet congress, was defeated today in his bid for election to its smaller, full-time legislature.

Yeltsin, running for a seat in the Supreme Soviet, garnered a majority of the votes of his fellow deputies, but ran last out of 12 candidates vying for 11 seats designated for the Russian federation. Deputy Yuri A. Osipyan, chairman of the commission that counted the ballots overnight, said Yeltsin received 1,185 votes in the Congress of People's Deputies, with 961 members of the national congress voting against him.

The deputies voted Friday night from a ballot of 600 candidates — all members of the congress — to fill the 542-member Supreme Soviet.

Vitaly I. Vorotnikov, the only member of the ruling Communist Party Politburo to stand as a candidate, also met with stiff opposition, with 761 deputies voting against him. His 1,388 votes, however, were enough for him to outpoll Yeltsin and be elected.

Other party chieftains and top bureaucrats also faced considerable opposition from fellow legislators, but they were elected.

During 12½ hours of debate on Friday, deputies traded accusations that old guard officials stacked the candidate list in a bid to retain power, and two groups of reformers quarreled.

Osipyan said before the vote that the congress faced a "huge number of possible variations" that could lead to runoff or repeat elections to fill the slates from some Soviet republics. They could slow the congress even further.

The congress still has to select a vice president and hear a report by President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

A contest for the vice presidency was possible. Yeltsin had indicated he would not turn down a nomination and the current vice president, Anatoly Lukyanov, was likely to be nominated.

On statement...

Clements defends aide

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says no legislator complained to him about an alleged racist comment by his top criminal justice aide, which a newspaper Friday reported had angered some lawmakers.

The Dallas Morning News said the lawmakers were upset over comments — about a bill to expand the pool of potential jurors — that was attributed to Rider Scott, Clements' general counsel and a former Dallas prosecutor.

Scott denied making the statements.

"He denies that. I have talked to him about this," Clements said. "No legislators told me any such thing. I read about this in the paper, but no one's told me that."

According to The Morning News report, lawmakers said the remark was made earlier this month in a meeting between Scott, his assistant Knox Fitzpatrick and Rep. Rick Crawford, R-Amarillo.

Crawford sponsored the bill that would allow counties to summon potential jurors from driver's license records instead of the registered voter list.

Clements signed the measure last week, and said Friday he hadn't discussed it with Scott and hadn't considered vetoing it. "We never even discussed it," he said.

Crawford declined to comment about the meeting. The Morning News reported that "at least two associates" said Crawford told them Scott had said he "didn't want any more minorities in Dallas and Houston to serve on juries." The associates said Crawford was upset about the statement.

Scott, asked if he made a comment regarding more minorities being added to jury pools, said, "The conversation with Rick was prior to safeguards being placed on the bill which were adequate, which involved approval by the judges and commissioners courts," the newspaper reported.

Scott said safeguards subsequently placed in the bill provide for county commissioners and state district judges to find a need for a larger jury pool before making a switch from voter registration to driver's license lists.

Sen. Craig Washington, D-Houston, Senate sponsor of the bill, said Crawford came to him after the meeting and that "he was very, very upset. He told me it had been related to him in a conversation."

Fitzpatrick also denied a statement was made at the meeting with Crawford about including minorities in jury pools. While a number of concerns were raised about the bill, "from the perspective you're asking about, that's outrageous," he told The Morning News.

Washington said he hasn't talked to Scott about the situation. "Whenever I'm in his presence, he seems to feel uncomfortable and leaves," the senator said. Washington said that when the bill was signed into law, he decided not to object.

Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, confirmed that Crawford also related the conversation to him.

"I wouldn't have any reason to doubt Crawford or any reason to doubt Rider. I wasn't there," said McFarland.

He said he has not asked Scott about the comment, nor did he talk to him about any opposition he might have had to the jury pool bill.

"I had no such fears, at all," McFarland said. "I viewed the bill as an opportunity to involve a broader cross-section of people."

Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Should someone who has helped you in the past require assistance today, be the first to volunteer. Don't try to hide behind excuses if it is inconvenient.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Follow what your logical instincts dictate today instead of being swayed by another who may try to convince you that your thinking is wrong. This person might be only protecting interest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Even though you feel certain you are right, adjusting your thinking and cooperating with another will net you more in return than insisting things have to be your way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It might not be as easy as you think to find a willing assistant to take care of a chore for you that you should be attending to yourself. If you don't do it, it's not apt to get done.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It could put a strain on your pocketbook later if you fail to attend to something potentially profitable today just because you'd rather goof off and do something frivolous.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A watchful eye and a firm grip on the reins pertaining to those in your charge are necessary requirements today. A lack of discipline could turn your household into something rather chaotic.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your entire schedule could get all fouled up today if you fail to take care of problems as they arise. This is not a day to attempt to brush things under the rug.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If you think before you spend today you won't end up with a lot of unnecessary useless articles. Besides, thoughtful shopping will save you money.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Self-indulgent pursuits aren't likely to bring you the enjoyment you anticipate today. However, you will find gratification in doing little things for those you love.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Trying to ignore an unpleasant matter will not resolve anything for you today. Face up to the facts regardless of how disagreeable they are and begin to work things out.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Do not be too liberal with information about your present financial position today. An acquaintanceship with ulterior motives might try to use what you say in an unflattering way.

Korean police block rally

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government deployed 7,000 riot police in central Seoul today to block a protest by dissidents calling for the fall of President Roh Tae-woo. Troopers arrested more than 500 people.

Hundreds of troopers in green combat fatigues with shields blocked off the park where the rally was to be held. Others guarded main streets, subway

AIDS education defeated

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposal directing state colleges and universities to institute AIDS education programs fell in the House Friday, after five lawmakers objected to the measure.

The proposal by Rep. Debra Danburg, D-Houston, was removed from the consent calendar after objections by Republican Reps. A.R. "Augie" Ovard, Dallas; Troy Fraser, Big Spring; Talmadge Heflin, Houston; Dick Waterfield, Canadian; and Kim Brimer, Arlington. Waterfield later withdrew his objection.

Because the consent calendar is reserved for non-controversial measures, legislation can be removed from it through such objections, so the House did not get to vote on the proposal.

"If college students don't already know about AIDS, then they just haven't been listening and they haven't been looking," said Ovard, who added that he thinks AIDS information should stress the illegality of sodomy in Texas.

"I think people should always be made aware of what's lawful and what's unlawful," Ovard said. "If we renege on telling them that, and make excuses for that, then we're missing the real point."

Heflin said he was against the proposal because "we've given enough directive in that area this session. We don't need to give any more."

stations and government buildings to prevent protests.

Several hundred people tried to stage protests or march downtown after being blocked from assembling at the rally site. Bands of radical students who tried to march in the center of the city were dragged away by police after they laid down in the middle of the road.

Troopers stopped and questioned people, searched bags and took away suspects for further questioning. Police officials said more than 500 people were arrested.

It was the second Saturday in a row that the government blocked a protest in Seoul with a massive show of police strength. Few people responded to widespread appeals by dissidents to take part in the protests.

Dissidents and radical students have little public support because of their violent tactics and extremist views. Opposition to the dissidents has increased since seven riot troopers were killed by radical students earlier this month.

The United National Democratic Movement, the main dissident alliance which called for protests in Seoul and 10 other cities, had predicted up to 100,000 people would demonstrate nationwide. The only other reported protest involved about 2,000 people in the southern city of Kwangju.

About 300 radical students continued a hunger protest for a second day at Myongdong Roman Catholic Cathedral in the city center today to demand the fall of Roh and a government admission that police killed a radical student. Riot police ringed the cathedral but made no move to stop the protest.

Some of the hunger strikers bit their fingers to draw blood, with which they wrote anti-government slogans.

About 500 students were blocked by riot police when they attempted to march out of Yonsei University in western Seoul. Students pushed and hit police with sticks, but were not able to break through lines of troopers with interlocked shields.

Restaurant burglarized

Police are investigating an early Saturday break-in at the Whataburger Restaurant at 4612 College Ave. during which the culprits apparently abandoned the scene before stealing anything.

A witness called the police station at 2:37 a.m. to say that he had seen two men breaking into the building by kicking out a door glass.

Officers went to the scene and called a Whataburger manager, who said after an inspection that nothing appeared to have been taken.

The policemen said one of the burglars had apparently cut himself because bloodstains were found on the broken glass.

An unsuccessful attempt had been made to enter the restaurant office inside, the officers said.

Damages were estimated at $700.

Church break-in has guilty plea

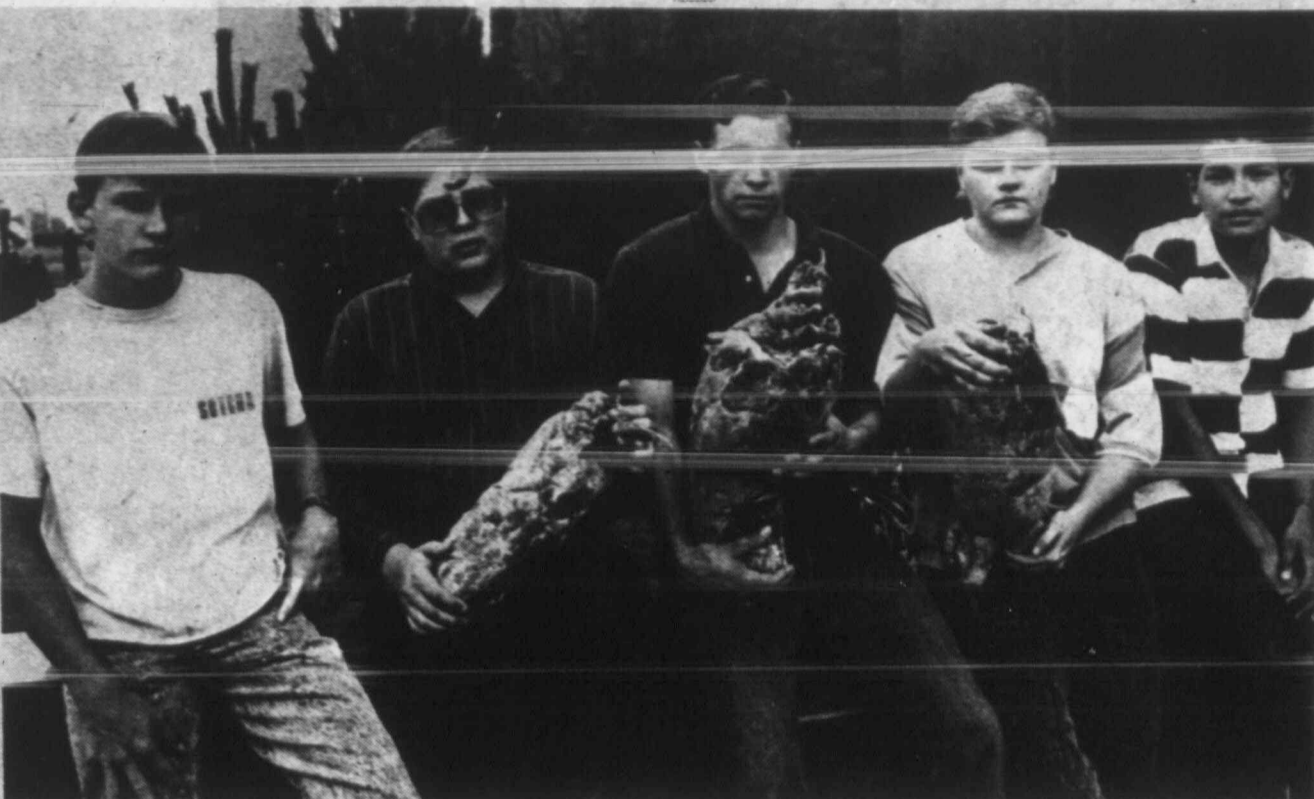

A 17-year-old Ira youth pleaded guilty to a May 3 burglary at Ira Baptist Church and received an eight-year probation sentence.

Robert Vineyard entered the plea in 132nd District Court and was ordered to pay $205 in restitution.

A large quantity of sound equipment, including the church's public address system, was stolen in the break-in.

Collision reported

A 1981 Oldsmobile driven by Carl L. Stewart of 2408 28th St. was in collision with a 1983 Chevrolet driven by Travis R. Henderson of 2805 1/2 23rd St. at 12:01 a.m. Saturday in the 1600 Block of 25th St.

FOOD FOR THE FUTURE — Roe Patterson, Charles Irwin, David Jennings, Mike Butts and Raul Garcia Jr. were among the Snyder High School biology students who dug up several buffalo gourd tubers, or roots, which are being studied as a possible food source for Third World countries. The items were found south of Snyder along the Big Spring Hwy. (SDN Staff Photo)

PAW—Sixth grade students at Central Elementary, the "I Can School," did an activity called PAW which stands for Positive Attitude Week during one week in May. Each day during that week students took part in various positive activities. An example is giving flowers to a friend. Through these special activities, the sixth graders showed their friends that they cared about them. Through PAW, students learn that if they do not like themselves then they don't have to be stuck with themselves because they can change. Sixth graders sitting in front of the PAW sign are from left, Keisha Jackson, Adrian Salazar, Christina Wagner, Gabriel Castillon and Veronica Sanchez. (SDN Staff Photo)

Scurry County Folks...

By Shirley A. Gorman

For more than 30 years, Marlin Terrell was the agency manager for Farm Bureau in Scurry County. On May 1, he officially retired and he says he and wife Joritta now plan to travel. He may also get in a game of dominoes every now and then.

The Terrells have lived in Snyder since 1966 and say they plan to remain here because "this is where our roots are."

Terrell said they were always pleased with the local school system and have thought of Snyder "as a caring community."

"It has a lot going for it," he said. "Anyone who wants to can fit into the community real fast."

Terrell was born and reared in Collin County and he farmed there in the 1950s before going to work for Farm Bureau. He notes he was a FB member for about eight years before he began selling insurance for them.

As a boy, Terrell said he grew up on a cotton farm in Collins County and it was then that he decided, "I'd had all of cotton farming that I cared to have."

Terrell said he became an insurance agent for Farm Bureau through the advice of a brother-in-law who was an agent himself. In 1959, he worked as a part-time agent for 10 months and farmed on the side.

At that time, he decided he liked selling insurance and could make a living at it. He sold his farm and he and his family moved to Iowa Park, where he worked as an agency manager from Jan. 1, 1960 to 1963.

From there they moved to Brownfield where they remained for two years. Snyder was the next and last move Terrell and his family made.

In 1959, when he first became an agent for Farm Bureau, Terrell was sent to Waco for a training program which taught him how to sell. He also received lots of "on the job" training. He took tests in Waco and Dallas in order to earn his license, which must be renewed annually.

Today, he noted, agents must earn credits of study before they can get a license and they need to have continuing education credits in order to renew it.

Throughout the years, Terrell has won many awards offered by Farm Bureau. He has won numerous all-star trips which are awarded to agents for their success during the first one to four months of each year. All-star trips were to various points in the United States.

In 1985, the Scurry Farm Bureau was cited for having sold $3,000,000 in life insurance. In 1988, he joined the Round Table of Farm Bureau insurance agents. Also in 1988, he was the leading agent in District 5 which includes Scurry County and 12 more counties.

On March 22 of this year, Terrell and his wife enjoyed a trip to Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, which he had won recently. Terrell also won other trips to London and a cruise to the Caribbean. He and his wife also took part in a trip to Russia and Poland, which, though not a prize, was arranged by Farm Bureau.

When Terrell became a Farm Bureau agent, he said there were 600 families registered. At his retirement, some 1,400 families were listed as members.

After he came to Snyder, Terrell said he bought two farms, one in Scurry County and the other in Fisher County. He operates both farms himself and produces grain, hay and beef cattle, about 50 head.

When Terrell was a new agent "learning the ropes," he often spent two to three nights a week meeting with clients since he often had to wait until after regular working hours in order to talk to both the husband and the wife together.

He sold life, fire and casualty insurance mainly in Scurry County but he was licensed to sell throughout the state of Texas.

While agency manager for Farm Bureau in Scurry County, Terrell usually worked with one or two career agents who "learned by experience" how to sell inurance. The office also employed two secretaries.

Terrell explained that the FB office operates under a board of directors and he said that "he has operated under some fine boards and people" and "that he couldn't have done what he did throughout these past 30 years if they had not been behind him."

He said he always enjoyed the work and that his years as an agent never felt like it was "just a job." When he retired he received a hat and boots from Farm Bureau.

The Terrells will celebrate their 40th anniversary in June. She was a chief lab technician at Cogdell Memorial Hospital for 14 years, retiring seven years ago.

They are members of the First Presbyterian Church and Terrell has served as a church elder since he was 21 years old.

The Terrells have two children. Gary, former county attorney for Scurry County, is now in private practice with the Lubbock law firm of McWhorter, Cobb and Johnson. A daughter, Judy Summer, and her family live in Greenwood. She is a registered nurse at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Death of the dinosaurs

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A University of Rochester professor believes he has found evidence that a meteor struck the earth 66 million years ago, causing the extinction of the dinosaurs and other species.

Scientists have long debated the cause that wiped out the mighty beasts. Some speculate a meteor hit the earth, while others say volcanic activity or climatic changes led to the demise of the dinosaurs.

Geologist Asish Basu believes a meteor hit India, causing extensive volcanic activity. He bases his conclusion on rocks from central India which exhibit features suggesting they withstood a large impact, such as a meteor.

PLANS TO TRAVEL—Marlin Terrell recently retired after serving as the agency manager for the Farm Bureau office in Snyder for more than 30

Town and Country

Shopping by television can be seductive. It can also be hazardous to your economic health.

The trick to being a smart arm-chair shopper is to come to the television set prepared, listen carefully and think before you flash your credit card.

Home shopping television shows are proliferating. The living room is no longer a safe haven for impulse or compulsive shoppers. It is now a dangerous place for those with a yearning for cubic zirconia jewelry, gadgets, interior decorating items and clothing.

Cable networks and target marketing have worked together to develop the television shopping frenzy. Credit cards have further promoted television shopping.

Products offered on television shopping networks and programs generally are discretionary items for most household. They are probably not big bargains nor are they major ripoffs. A purchase should still be based on need and affordability. People may be persuaded to purchase more items than if they were shopping in the local community.

Know your merchandise. With television shopping, you cannot feel or hold or examine a product before you buy. Know your prices. If you know the type of item you want and know when this type of item will be offered on the shopping show, you can shop more intelligently.

Listen for key words in the promotion of various products. A 14k gold-filled item is not the same as one of 14k gold. "Faux pearls" are just another way of saying "fake pearls." "Almost like" is used to get you to think an item is the same as the product mentioned as a comparative item, probably a more expensive brand.

Most television shopping programs list a retail price for comparison purposes. It is highly unlikely that you would ever pay that price in a retail store. In one survey, Better Business Bureau staff from 17 bureaus compared savings claims. They found that of 1,818 examinations in retail stores, the home shopping service products were available in only 14 percent of the cases.

The BBB survey also found that for 2,555 comparisons of shopping service prices with store prices, actual store selling prices were lower than the shopping service's actual "claimed retail prices" in 96 percent of the cases and lower than the shopping service's actual selling prices in 37 percent of the cases.

Television shopping is a convenient way to purchase items, but it may be a more convenient way to overextend your budget.

AUGUST PLANS — Mr. and Mrs. Jack P. Lawrence of Sweetwater announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Ann-G, to Wayne Chowning, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Brewer Jr. of Graham. The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Grimmer of Snyder and a graduate of Southwestern Oklahoma University. The prospective groom attended Western Texas College and is employed with Lawrence IGA in Snyder. Vows are planned Aug. 12 at the First United Methodist Church in Sweetwater. what would happen if East had doubled five hearts? West would lead a heart, and the ace would win in dummy. Declarer could then draw three rounds of trump before playing clubs. The contract would easily make.

In fact, even though it's easy to say that West should not lead the ace of diamonds after South's cue-bid, that is the only lead that gives declarer a chance to be careless. That's part of the joy of bridge. Or is it anguish?

Two wrongs make a right

By James Jacoby

I sometimes wonder: Is making mistakes at the bridge table contagious? Notice that after North had raised to four spades, some cue-bidding took place. First South bid five diamonds. Shouldn't West think that showed a void? Then North showed the ace of hearts, providing East with an easy opportunity for making a lead-directing double, but of course he passed. Finally South settled in six spades. So West led the ace of diamonds.

Declarer ruffed, quickly drew three rounds of trumps, and then played the queen of clubs. When East showed out, declarer inwardly cursed his luck, but eventually had to lose three tricks and the contract. Declarer can easily guarantee his contract if he plays only the ace and queen of spades, retaining the king in his hand, and then plays the club queen. East can ruff, but declarer will be able to ruff out the club jack in the West hand and get back to his hand with that spade king to take the rest of the clubs and make his contract. And

Double-ring vows join Williams, Baker

GRAPEVINE — Delia Jo Williams and Steve Baker were united in marriage at 1 p.m. May 6 at the Marina Del Rey Clubhouse in Grapevine. Judge Sandy Prindle of Ft. Worth performed the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Garland D. Williams, of Snyder and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Baker of Hamlin.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of white batiste designed and created by her mother. The fitted bodice dropped below the waist and formed a point in the front. The tea-length, full skirt featured tucks and double nylon lace ruffles at the hem. Lace motifs detailed with tiny seed pearls decorated the neckline. Short sleeves featured tucks and lace ruffles to match the skirt.

The headpiece was a halo of tiny, white silk flowers accented with a white satin bow in back. White lace gloves, a gift from her sister, accented her attire. She carried a bouquet of blue and white carnations accented by blue dahlias, fern, and blue and white satin ribbon streamers.

In keeping with tradition, the bride carried a yellow silk handkerchief belonging to the groom's maternal great-grandmother for something old. Her dress was new and a zircon birthstone necklace was borrowed from her mother. She wore a blue garter and birth year pennies in her shoes.

A caladium plant accented by blue carnations decorated the altar area. White tapers completed the decor.

Musical selections were provided by Nash.

Serving as maid of honor was Debbie Hamilton of Grapevine. She wore a blue print tea-length dress and carried a bouquet of blue and white carnations. She wore a blue ribbon bow in her hair.

Doug Akins of Henderson served as best man. Ushers were Sterling Williams of Snyder, brother of the bride, and Neil Baker of Hamlin, brother of the groom. Cissi Williams, sister-in-law of the bride, registered guests.

A reception followed the ceremony. The bride's cake, a gift from the maid of honor, featured blue carnations and was topped with double wedding bells. Cheryle Clayton of Burkburnett, sister of the groom, served the cake and Teresa Brown of Snyder, sister of the bride, served punch.

Grace Tyler of Flowermound served brownies, cookies, candy kisses and mints at the groom's table.

A Snyder High School graduate, the bride attended

MR. AND MRS. STEVE BAKER

Western Texas College and TSTI in Sweetwater. She is employed at Information Retrieval Methods in Carrollton as a computer-scanner operator. The groom attended the University of Texas at Arlington and TSTI in Sweetwater. He is employed with MARC in Irving as a computer programmer/analyst. The couple will reside in Hurst.

JUNE WEDDING — Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Webb of Ira announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Stacy Elaine Sisson of Snyder, to Jeffrey Clay Benningfield of Snyder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Benningfield of Clairemont. The couple plans a June 10 wedding in Snyder. (Private Photo)

Mexicali features 85 Chinese cafes

MEXICALI, Mexico (AP) — When visitors come to Mexicali they don't have to look far to find typical regional food, because Mexicali has 85 Chinese restaurants.

A Mexican restaurant may fail, but a Chinese restaurant never goes out of business, a local saying goes.

"Among a Mexican taco, American hamburger and Chinese food in Mexicali, I'll take this," says Ernesto Marroquin, a Mexicali resident for 20 years, emerging from a Chinese restaurant.

The Chinese, who settled this hot, arid valley before any large population of Mexicans arrived, "have been well-received and welcome," says Julio Yee, owner of Restaurant Hunan. "The people here live in harmony."

In Mexicali, 100 miles east of Tijuana and across the border from Calexico, Calif., Chinese food is more visible than anywhere else in Mexico.

"Here the typical food is Chinese food," says Yee.

In Mexico City, however, good Chinese food is so scarce that when rumors spread of a Chinese cook quitting China's embassy, residents scurried to learn whether he had opened a restaurant.

In Mexicali, the success of the Chinese restaurants may be because of the city's location and political status. The border here is a duty-free zone, so products can be imported without paying tariffs. That allows restaurateurs to obtain needed foodstuffs from the United States or the Orient.

For instance, Yee said he imports bamboo shoots and up to 20 varieties of high-quality mushrooms not available in Mexico. He also imports interior decorations — carved Chinese designs, paper lampshades and ornate room dividers.

Yee is a third-generation Chinese-Mexican. He says his grandfather arrived in the area in the late 19th century — when many Chinese came as coolie labor in cotton fields — and later founded a Chinese restaurant.

In the early part of this century, American landowners brought in Chinese. Few Mexicans lived in the area, but Chinese workers were plentiful because they had worked on the great U.S. railroad construction projects.

Despite some racial incidents in the 1930s, the Chinese stayed on and became a major commercial force. Besides restaurants, they also own jewelry shops, shoe and clothing stores.

At least 12,500 Chinese live in Mexicali, including the offspring of Chinese-Mexican marriages, local officials say. Mexicali, the capital of the state of Baja California Norte, has 350,000 residents.

"They have contributed a different, exotic culture," says Antonio Mesa, director of the Mexicali branch of the Colegio de la Frontera, which studies border issues.

Nearly everyone in Mexicali confesses an affinity for Chinese cuisine, which Mesa describes as "inexpensive and nutritious."

Julian Torres Hurtado says he has eaten in Chinese restaurants elsewhere in Mexico, but the food in Mexicali is the best.

HEAT LOAD IS HIGHER

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Even though the auto industry began down-sizing in 1976, engine performance requirements stayed high and operating temperature rose.

In addition, pressurized cooling systems, emission control devices and the growing use of power options pushed the heat load on oil even higher. With short trips, stop-and-go driving and pulling boats and trailers, oil can oxidize and turn as thick as grease.

Today, such oxidation rarely occurs because of chemical additives which improve the performance of the engine oil.

WINNER OF THE GOLD — Anne Osborn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Osborn, was recently presented with a 1989 Paderewski Gold Medal. She has entered the National Piano Playing Auditions for 10 years with a national program of 10 selections each year. Osborn earned superior and superior-plus ratings throughout her auditions which are sponsored by the National Guild of Piano Teachers. She is a student of Barbara Tune.

No egg on the face

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — For many students at the University of Rochester, a year of studying culminates with an egg — not on their faces, they hope.

Engineering students square off every spring in a contest involving the delicate object. This year's rules asked the students to launch eggs, fly them in the air as long as possible and then have them make a landing without breaking. The exercise is designed to put student engineering skills and ingenuity to the test.

One of the participants, Rich Gangemi, says, "It's more enjoyable than a written test, because you're actually building something."

CHOKING

When choking on food or an object, and if alone, quickly lie across a bed, chair, or table with the head lower than your chest — gravity will then work to help dislodge the object. When in an upright position, gravity tends to keep the object stuck in the throat — despite slaps on the back or the Heimlich treatment — whereas in the upside-down position, gravity works to dislodge the obstruction.

SPRAY DATES SET FOR PECAN TREES
From observations made throughout Scurry County, the control sprays for the pecan nut casebearer should be applied from May 29 through June 3.

The adult pecan nut casebearer is a gray moth about 1/2-inch long. These moths fly at night and spend the day in concealment. The casebearer moth deposits from 50 to 150 eggs on the tips of developing nutlets. These eggs are barely visible by the naked eye and are greenish white when first laid.

The first generation larvae hatch in four to five days and migrate below to feed on buds. Nut penetration follows a day or two of this outside activity. This is the critical stage of control.

When young worms are working over a cluster of pecans, they deposit waste material in pellets around the entrance holes. When this frass is observed, control becomes difficult. Chemical sprays will not penetrate the nut to kill burrowing worms. Complete clusters can be destroyed by one developing casebearer larvae.

Insecticides recommended for casebearer control include Zolone, Guthion, Malathion, and Sevin. Homeowners may want to include a fungicide such as Benomyl for scab control and NZN should be added for growth and control of rosette.

A good mixture for the homeowner would be four tablespoons of Zolone, three tablespoons of Benomyl, and six teaspoons of NZN for three gallons of water.

The most important part of this mixture of course is the insecticide for the control of the pecan nut casebearer. The other ingredients can be added at the discretion of the homeowner.

It is critical to treat this pest at the right time. Early or late treatment will not control the pest.

'60s fashions back in style

NEW YORK (AP) — Make-up is out and '60s fashions are in, according to a poll on teen preferences.

Nearly 25 percent of the teens identify styles of the '60s — miniskirts, bell bottoms and anything tie-dyed — as the trendiest clothes this year, and nearly 30 percent list jeans — faded, washed out or ripped — as the hottest single item.

Baggy, over-sized clothing is also very popular, with cardigans and anything leather among the leaders.

The '60s also influence accessories, with peace signs and happy faces in the fore.

The survey was sponsored by Sunkist Soft Drinks Inc. and included thousands of teenagers at 250 high schools in 45 states.

Why the '60s, a decade of love-ins and flower children, campus sit-ins and political violence?

"Because our parents say that really was a great period," says Chris David Frank, a senior at Lake Brantley H.S. in Altamonte Springs, Fla. Frank was one of five students in New York to represent a cross-section of students from the survey.

Others were Chad DiNenna, Westlake H.S., Westlake Village, Calif.; Marie Schloss, Grandview H.S., Grandview, Wash.; Amy Klepsch, Morton H.S., Hammond Ind., and Nicol Bradford, Eisenhower H.S. in Houston.

By the way, nearly 70 percent of teens surveyed consider their parents cool or wise, and 36 percent admire their parents more than any other adult.

He's carved out a 'perfect' life

CRITTENDEN, Ky. (AP) — In a colonial cottage on a wooded hillside in Crittenden, David Monhollen lives and works as a wood carver.

Soon after he and his family moved into the house, he put a bench in the back woods so they could sit and watch the deer and raccoons.

At 44, Monhollen has carved out a life that's very much the way he wants it — carving wood in the natural setting that feeds his soul — and making enough money to provide for his family.

His wildlife carvings range from rough-hewn ducks to a pheasant of such exquisite detail that each of the 2,000 feathers is separately carved. The pieces sell for $1,000 to about $50,000 each.

Monhollen's carving began when he was 8, when a man showed his Scout troop how to sharpen their pocket knives and carve a neckerchief slide.

From there, he taught himself.

Monhollen grew up, went to Vietnam, graduated from college, got a sales job, married and had a son and daughter. But he never stopped carving.

"I'd get home from work and not even bother to change clothes — I'd carve at the kitchen table. I ruined more three-piece suits," he says.

"All the time, I was trying to figure out how to carve full-time."

Eight years ago, the need to carve had become so overwhelming that he quit his job and took up his hobby.

Monhollen's detour through the world of sales and business has taught him how to market his creations. He generally targets a corporate clientele. His carvings are in corporate lobbies, board rooms and professional offices around the country. He also has private clients.

Generally, Monhollen carves to suit a client's interest or an image he wants to project. Eagles are popular with company presidents.

Once Monhollen has a commission, he goes into the field to observe the animal he will carve, studying the habits and behavior, the shades and coloring, to capture it in wood.

At some point, the carving takes shape in his mind. "I see the work done — how it's supposed to be — in my mind's eye. Then I'm ready to start."

He works up to 6½ days a week, 14 hours a day.

His life has come full circle. Now it is Monhollen who speaks to Scouts and school kids about being a wood carver.

"I'm happy," he says.

NEW YORK (AP) — Spicer's Wheat Snacks come in four flavors: natural, chocolate, barbecue, and sour cream and onion. They contain no artificial ingredients, preservatives or cholesterol and are low in sodium.

By Donny Brown

The word from Carlsbad this past Tuesday, if time can't be made to stand still, at least you can slow it down a whole bunch.

That was the indication as Stefania Follini of Italy emerged from her self-imposed 130 days in some nook of the caverns called Lost Cave.

She had been staying in a "timeless" environment to allow the smart guys to study the effect of long periods of isolation on an individual.

Stuff like the possible loss of calcium or an enhanced ability to concentrate are some of the speculations which researchers will be looking at when they get to eyeball Miss Follini after the fact.

What got our attention, however, was her sense of time. Her immediate reaction once told that her 130 days were up was that it was too early. Her best guesstimate for the time spent below was 80 days tops.

Just for fun, we calculated it on a percentage basis. While the world above ground was registering 130 days—an earthly phenomenon we are stuck with due to the rising and setting of the sun—her mental clock counted only approximately 60 percent of that.

SDN Opinion Page

Columns-Cartoons-Look Back-Letters-Quotables

Put another way, that's like eating your cake and still having 40 percent of it left when you're finished.

What a maaaaa-velous concept. Consider also that it is not necessarily the logical assumption.

Anyone who ever sat through a 45-minute presentation which bored them to the point of numbness knows that your environment can affect the way you perceive time.

Figure also that staying in a windowless cave with only your computer screen to keep you company is not exactly a day at the circus.

So, in the absence of fun and games, excitement and romance or fear and loathing, why didn't her 130-day stretch in solitary seem longer?

Equally interesting was her sleeping patterns. Most of us plug away day after day with eight hours of rest offset by 16 hours of more or less wide awake attention.

Miss Follini developed the habit of sleeping for stretches of up to 10 hours, then staying awake for 20 to 25.

That means a "day" for her might comprise 35 hours. Two such days would pass during almost a three-day stretch for those of us constantly reminded that the clock is still running.

The Gyro Gearloose assumption from all of this is too obvious not to mention. We are aged as much by how we perceive time as we are by the biological process of growing older.

The organism called the "human bean" has a pre-programmed bail-out designed to keep things moderately fresh.

In other words, no person and no thing lives forever.

So, what does humankind do? It invents innumerable gadgets which measure to the inth-degree the too-fleeting seconds we do have. Added to this, our collective obsession with being "on time."

At some point, enough has to be enough.

The move toward early retirement must be reaction to this.

A fellow we know who paid his dues before finally calling it quits put it this way. He pulled out his little pocket calendar—the one which marked all of the things he had to do that month and year—and he threw it on the desk. "I'm tired of being run by this thing," he said.

William Faulkner put it another way. "That Christ was not crucified," he wrote, "he was worn away by the minute clicking of little wheels."

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

She was a pixie, a vixen, with a tumbling mass of thick dark hair, soulful brown eyes and a quirky grin. She was half a dozen crazy people all rolled into one. There was nothing, but nothing she wouldn't do to get a laugh.

And oh, how she laughed.

Her name was Gilda, and it was appropriate, because she belonged to a gilded group of young comic geniuses the like of which the world has never seen, before or since, all together in one group. Their names now spark recognition as individual talents, but together—Chevy Chase, Dan Ackroyd, Bill Murray, Steve Martin, John Belushi, Jane Curtain, and Gilda Radner—those "Not Ready for Prime Time Players" redefined comedy for a generation.

Not that their shtick was completely original. They borrowed the whole mish-mash idea of comedy skits from the likes of previous greats such as Ernie Kovacs, Sid Caesar and Milton Berle. Even the idea of live comedy was borrowed. But for us baby boomers too young to remember television in its golden years before taping and editing took over, the satire of "Saturday Night Live" became a springboard for the rest of the week.

We never knew what to expect. It seems that the writers instinctively knew when to let natural talent alone, and worked skits around the persona of each comic, even allowing themselves to be made fun of one night, when Chevy Chase led the cameras backstage to "watch the writers, hard at work on next week's show"—It was an opium den.

Through Gilda we met the likes of Rosanne-Rosanna-Danna, the strident feminist who couldn't seem to decide which cause to espouse, or the half-deaf newstime editorial commentator who always misunderstood the issue under discussion.

GILDA: "We should have more violins on TV and less of those game shows. I'm sick and tired of it. We need more violins."

CHEVY: "No, no. That's VIOLENCE, not VIOLINS."

GILDA: "Oh. There's a difference."

CHEVY: "Yes."

GILDA: "Never mind."

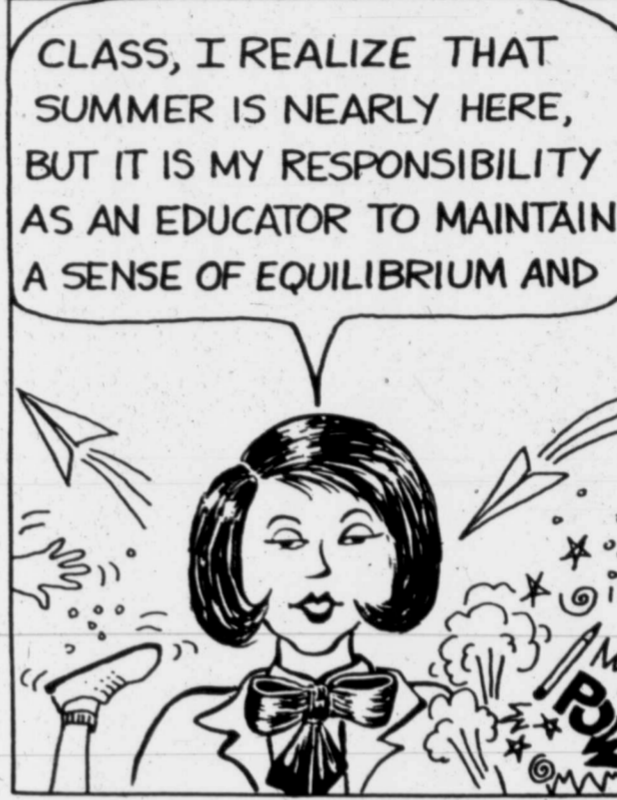

With Dan Ackroyd she was the quintessential female nerd. ("That's so funny I forgot to ly-augh.")

The trouble was, they were all too good. Just too darn good. One by one they were lured away by the promise of big-time movie bucks and the less strenuous schedule than the killer required to do live TV every week.

Gilda took all her different hilarious selves and did a one-woman show on Broadway for a while, and made a few movies, where she met her husband, comic actor Gene Wilder. Then she seemed to mysteriously drop out of sight for a few years until last year when she graced the cover of "Life" magazine and this time, it wasn't very funny. Gilda had ovarian cancer.

Every woman's nightmare, ovarian cancer cannot be detected by pap smear, and its only symptoms not only are sometimes masked by other "female problems," but sometimes don't even appear until the illness has progressed beyond the point of no return.

But the article wasn't about death—it was about life. Gilda had involved herself in a cancer patient support group in New York City called the "Wellness Community." According to Dr. Harold Benjamin, the center's director, "Gilda wants people to know that when you have cancer, you don't have to be alone. Cancer doesn't have to be fatal. This is about people together, learning to fight for recovery." And how Gilda fought. She wrote a book about her battle called "It's Always Something," and she even made fun of her illness as a guest on the Garry Shandling Show. Laughter was Gilda's greatest weapon. According to Joel Siegal, movie critic for "Good Morning America," Gilda once told him that she wanted her tombstone to read, "Program Interrupted Due to Technical Difficulty." "I want people passing by my grave to get a good laugh," she said. Last Saturday, in her sleep, Gilda finally surrendered. She was 41. In a way, she won the greatest battle of all, because in her brief stay on this planet, she taught the world three of life's most precious lessons: that life's greatest tragedy would be to leave it without having made a difference with it, no matter how small. We can all make a difference in our own little worlds—if in no other way, then by giving courage to others...that it's always better to fight...and that it's always, always best to laugh. Goodnight, Gilda. Sleep well. We'll miss you.

SDN Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to tell the man in the pickup that hit the dog in front of Watson Packers on the Lamesa Highway Thursday night, May 25, at 9:05 p.m. that decent people stop to see if there is anything they can do for the animal and then try to locate the owner. The dog was still alive.

You are an accident looking for a place to happen. The large dog was on the shoulder of the road when you hit it. Your brake lights never came on. It could very well have been a child.

Terry Butler
Rt. 1, Box 68
Snyder, Tx., 79549.

To the editor,

I've been thinking it would be nice to have a new car. One of the car dealerships recently ran an ad offering a factory rebate that could be used as downpayment. My budget can't stand the monthly payments, but why should I pass up this deal on a downpayment?

Not to worry, I did not rush out to buy a new car. This is the logic our city government is using to justify the widening of 37th St. from Crockett to College Ave. The Texas Highway Department has the funds for the construction. All the city has to do is acquire the right-of-way, move utilities, and this includes several fire hydrants.

If we can't fund raises for city employees, where is the money coming from for this project? If we have a surplus of money, why not rebuild 30th St. from Ave. E to El Paso? We could build some streets with drainage in the part of town everyone calls "the flats." A covered wagon would be buried to the axle on some of these "streets" and the standing water provides a breeding place Rolls-Royce has followed a pattern in naming its cars with the prefix Silver since the beginning of the century when the Silver Ghost was introduced. The style of naming models has continued through Silver Dawn, Silver Wraith, Silver Cloud and Silver Shadow. Now, the Silver Spur and Silver Spirit carry on the tradition.

Vets learn on plastic, animal lives are saved

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — Plastic bones that can be drilled, pinned and wired just like the real things are saving dogs' lives and improving teaching at the University of Illinois veterinary school.

The lifelike models of major canine bones allow students to learn how to handle special instruments and manipulate broken bones as they are repaired.

Use of these limbs saves the lives of up to 100 dogs a year at the school — animals who would have been destroyed after surgery, says Dr. Ann Johnson, who teaches orthopedic surgery at the College of Veterinary Medicine.

"Society now demands that we not use living animals in laboratories for practice surgery if we don't have to," says Johnson. "But, society also demands that our vets be well trained."

The simulated dog bones accomplish both purposes, she says. The models were purchased with a $2,000 grant from the Save The Animals Fund in California and will be used to train about 160 vet students a year.

"The use of a plastic bone that is identical to the real thing is ideal in the classroom," says Tom Porro, production supervisor at Pacific Research of Vashon, Wash.

He says his company supplies a half-dozen veterinary colleges with leg bones under the brand name Sawbones. They cost $15 to $20 each and are cast in molds made from real bones.

Johnson says the models buy extra time for teaching. "I can stop them and take time to ask them what they are doing without jeopardizing a dog in surgery," she says. "The main thing they have to learn is to use the equipment, and the best way is right on the bone with no muscle in the way."

The college spent about $12,000 to set up its bone model laboratory, with equipment ranging from $35 electric drills from the hardware store to a $700 bender to shape metal plates that are put over fractures.

It also uses supermarket chickens and foam rubber models to teach students how to suture and how to make incisions, and it uses cardboard mailing tubes and wooden dowels to teach the fundamentals of pinning a broken bone.

Johnson says she is glad the bone models eliminated the need to use and destroy real animals. "You get awfully tired of seeing 12 dogs put to sleep every time you do a lab," she says.

Ward Howland, executive director of the Anti-Cruelty Society of Chicago, says groups like his applaud changes that reduce the number of animals used for research and training.

"This is a major step in giving schools an alternative to the real thing, so they can teach with models but still do a good job," says Howland. "These students will make mistakes and learn how to do it right before they deal with a real animal."

Johnson says a survey of students shows they were not opposed to using the bone models, but they still want real surgical experience before graduating.

The seniors have that opportunity. "They scrub into surgery with me and help if a client animal comes in with a fracture."

FROM THE PRESIDENT. By Richard Nixon.

In the aftermath of the Watergate burglary arrest, Richard Nixon became convinced that he should guard his White House papers more carefully than ever.

As a result, he created a "Special File" to hide from view any memoranda which might be sensitive either politically or personally. After 14 years of exhausting every legal means available to keep these documents concealed, he finally agreed to the release of more than three million special files through the National Archives. "From the President" is the first collection of these hidden papers and a revealing look at the workings of the Oval Office during the Nixon years.

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A while back you mentioned a new drug that cures gout. Can you please reprint the information?

DEAR READER: Gout is a form of arthritis caused by a buildup of uric acid crystals within joints. Uric acid is a normal product of body metabolism.

Gout is incurable, but it is treatable, using a drug called allopurinol, which blocks the formation of excess uric acid and diminishes the possibility of gouty arthritis.

The medicine is available by prescription and should only be used under medical supervision. Although it is usually effective, it has side effects in some patients. These include rash, fever, chills, jaundice and a fall-off in the number of circulating white blood cells.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A few years ago I had a stroke. While in the hospital I was given eight aspirin a day. My doctor (now deceased) said I should take two aspirin per day for the rest of my life, yet I've read that aspirin increases the risk of stroke and brain aneurysm. I'll trust your judgment.

DEAR READER: Thank you for the compliment, but you should find a new local doctor, too.

Since aspirin was discovered to slow blood coagulation and thereby reduce the risk of thrombotic (blood-clot) strokes, doctors have recommended its use for certain stroke patients. (Tests weren't conducted on female stroke patients.) However, the dose of aspirin has varied. Presently, one baby aspirin (the equivalent of one-quarter adult aspirin) is considered to be sufficient for most patients.

Unfortunately, aspirin has statistically been associated with a type of non-thrombotic, small brain-hemorrhage that causes stroke. This association is lessened by the currently accepted low dose. Aspirin does not cause an aneurysm of brain arteries. This is a weakness in the walls of the blood vessels, which can sometimes bleed; the tendency is inherited.

Therefore, aspirin therapy is probably appropriate for you. However, you will need less of the drug than was originally suggested. Ask your new doctor to advise you.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Could you tell me if red clover combination (herbal food) is good for arthritis? I am a diabetic and wonder if it would be wise to take them.

DEAR READER: To my knowledge, red clover combination is not an appropriate treatment for arthritis because no scientific study has shown it to be effective. Better treatments are available, including aspirin, acetaminophen and a variety of prescription medicines.

In the past few months, three different periodicals carried three news stories that seemed, on first reading, to be unrelated. I wonder. Perhaps I'm getting paranoid, but see if you agree that these facts may be telling us something about the medical profession as a whole.

The first was a short squib in Medical Economics. The headline read: "New doctors are shunning primary care." Last spring, only 73 percent of the family practice slots and 82 percent of the pediatric positions were filled in the National Residency Matching Program, down almost 10 percent from 1987. The matching program places doctors-in-training into appropriate residency programs. The experts hypothesized that a major reason for this shortfall was that young physicians, with heavy debt from medical school, were picking high-paying specialties, such as orthopedics, emergency medicine and obstetrics/gynecology, rather than primary care, which pays modestly in comparison. Although this year's figures are not yet in, the trend is expected to continue.

The second article appeared in the Jan. 30 U.S. News & World Report. The author, Steven Findlay, reported on wide, national variations in the number and type of procedures doctors perform. The criteria for many operations vary from one geographical region of the country to another. For example, orthopedic specialists in Boston were twice as likely to put in artificial hips than were their colleagues in New Haven, even though their patients were demographically similar. Conversely, New Haven surgeons carried out coronary bypass surgery twice as frequently as did Boston doctors.

In another study reported by U.S. News, urologists in Maine were studied with respect to their pattern of performing prostatectomies, a procedure to remove part of the prostate gland in men to alleviate painful, irregular urination. The researchers discovered that, rather than experiencing an improvement in life expectancy, a substantial proportion of patients were actually more likely to die in the first year after surgery, because of complications of the procedure. As a result of publicity from this study, 35 percent fewer prostatectomies are being carried out in Maine than was the case nine years ago.

Working with insurance carriers nationwide, Value Health Sciences, a private watchdog organization, is attempting to define appropriate criteria for various procedures, including bypass surgery for heart disease, cataract extraction and back operations.

Predictably, physicians and surgeons are far from thrilled at the prospect of having non-M.D.s look over their shoulders and make decisions that have, in the past, been the doctors' prerogative. This concern is understandable. As guidelines are formulated for surgical operations, it won't be long before general medical practices are monitored and scrutinized, critics claim.

Dr. Paul Ellwood, director of InterStudy, a Minneapolis think tank, has boldly envisioned a vast computer network linking every doctor's office with a data bank that will provide updated standards for the diagnosis and treatment of common diseases. Those doctors who deviate from the expected pattern could be penalized or punished. This high level of control does not appeal to M.D.s and, indeed, such a scheme would revolutionize medical practice.

The third article was printed in the Feb. 27 Medical World News. It reported on a study showing that Medicare beneficiaries seldom pay any attention to whether their doctors are participating physicians in the program; that is, whether their doctors accept assignment of Medicare benefits. Apparently, most patients simply find a doctor with whom they're comfortable, regardless of whether the practitioner is a doctor who participates. This doesn't mean that Medicare patients are paying more for services: About 75 percent of all doctors accept Medicare assignment on a claim-by-claim basis. When local authorities threatened mandatory assignment laws, as in New York state, almost 50 percent of medical residents said they would practice in another state.

Here, then, are the "unrelated" facts: Fewer doctors are entering primary care, many of those who do would choose to practice in communities with less government regulation, and 21st century office care could be reduced to computerized, cookbook medicine.

If these observations are related, the future of office-based, primary care medicine is gloomy for patients who may be increasingly hard-pressed to find family doctors, because new graduates may be thronging to the specialties, especially those specialties that are minimally regulated. I'm not sure the American public wants this to happen, but the handwriting is certainly on the wall.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,
I am writing to express my gratitude and to commend the generosity and hardwork of Bill Parker, president of West Texas State Bank. Mr. Parker has only lived in our community three years, yet he has touched the lives of many young people. He gives both time and money to many programs both academic and athletic. He was instrumental in the establishment of the annual West Texas Bank Scholarships given to graduating seniors.

Mr. Parker's enthusiasm for soccer has led to the involvement of several teenage boys who have not been included previously. He has coached, chauffeured, fed, clothed, counseled and nurtured TEAM Snyder for six seasons. Even though he has three sons of his own, he has managed to be a father figure to some of these boys. Talk about the "Big Brother" program — in Snyder it could be called the "Bill Parker" program. Bill also supports the Little Dribblers, Little League and the Snyder Soccer Association. Wherever young boys are involved, you will find Bill Parker's support and influence.

This year, Mr. Parker added another area to his list of endowments that he and the West Texas State Bank are sponsoring. In June, four students will be traveling to Washington, D.C., and New York City with the student group from Snyder Junior High with the assistance of Mr. Parker and his bank.

I would like to publicly acknowledge my appreciation to Bill Parker for his assistance with the 1989 student trip to Washington, D.C. Four young people will long remember the fact that this experience was made possible by Mr. Parker.

Thanks, Mr. Parker, for your support and faith in the young people of Snyder

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I became aware that a fellow employee was stealing small amounts from the company. She foolishly told a few people about it, and even bragged about it.

Abby, I did something I now regret. I typed an anonymous note tipping off the front office. They must have looked into the matter and discovered it was true, because that employee was suddenly terminated.

Many of the employees are upset — not because that employee stole, but because they suspected that a fellow employee turned her in. Did I do something wrong? I can't believe it's OK to steal just because this is a large and prosperous company that can afford the loss. Let me add, the employee who stole was by no means hard up.

My biggest concern now is being found out. I told no one, but I've been a nervous wreck ever since. I can't sleep; I can't eat. And I keep wondering if this is God's way of punishing me for snitching. Maybe I've been watching too much television, but I keep thinking that my typewriter can be traced as the one on which that anonymous note was written.

Believe me, I will never again turn anyone in, even if I witness a murder! Please help me. I am worried sick over this. I'll look for your answer in the paper.

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY CONSCIENCE: Relax. The chances that anyone will trace the anonymous note back to your typewriter are extremely remote. (I doubt if the "front office" is even interested in knowing who tipped them off.)

Although I am not keen on "turning thieves in" anonymously, I think you are suffering needlessly. And by the way, anyone who witnesses a crime and remains silent is aiding the criminal.

Now, lighten up, and forgive yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter took her 15-year-old son to the dentist for a routine checkup. The boy has beautiful teeth — no fillings. The dentist informed her that it was time to contact an oral surgeon to have all four wisdom teeth pulled. My daughter asked why. The dentist told her it was standard procedure to pull the wisdom teeth of children ages 15 or 16 to prevent possible future problems. A conversation with two other dentists confirmed that practice. My own dentist agreed, and said they always pull all four teeth at once.

Abby, if medical doctors routinely removed tonsils and appendixes of 4- and 5-year-olds to prevent future problems, there would be quite an uproar. But the practice of pulling healthy teeth appears to be quite acceptable. What do your experts say?

CHARLOTTE IN SALEM, ORE.

DEAR CHARLOTTE: My experts say: Unless the jaw is too small or the teeth are too large to accommodate the wisdom teeth, there is no reason to extract them. If your daughter is still skeptical, she should consult another dentist.

DEAR ABBY: I've read those words ("Dear Abby") many times, but I never thought I'd be writing them. This is such a peculiar and unexpected problem that I hardly know how to write it.

Our daughter is nearing the end of her 30s. She's been divorced for six years, has an excellent job, a good social life and a wonderful personality. She has never had a child.

Our problem is, she has announced that she wants to bear a child while she is still able — married or not. We can understand her feelings, as she has always loved children, but we are deeply saddened to think that our grandchild will grow up without a father.

What are your feelings about her plan?

HER LOVING PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: It's possible for a single parent to raise a child — and successfully. Many do. However, I would not recommend deliberately having a child out of wedlock.

DEAR ABBY: Something has been haunting me for a long time and I need to get it out of my system and settled once and for all. When I was 15 years old, I fell in love with a man who was 45. I will call him Scorpio. My parents refused to let me be with him, so we parted. As fate would have it, I fell in love again when I was 19, but that marriage lasted only six years, and we divorced.

Following my divorce, I met another man I'll call Pisces, but I kept seeing Scorpio every chance I got because I couldn't get him out of my mind. So here I was, divorced and dating the Pisces, but still in love with the Scorpio.

The Scorpio knew I was dating the Pisces, but the Pisces didn't know about the Scorpio until last Easter when the Pisces stayed too long, and Scorpio showed up early at my house.

Needless to say I felt terrible about it because I knew I wasn't being fair to either one of them. I finally told the Pisces that I couldn't see him any more — it was over. I really didn't want to end it with the Pisces, but I didn't want to lose the Scorpio either. Well, to make a long story short, I married my Scorpio five months ago.

Last week I saw in the newspaper that my Pisces took out a marriage license to marry a 24-year-old girl! Now I can't get the Pisces out of my mind. I want to write to him and tell him I still have feelings for him, and also that I wish him well in his marriage. Half of me says to write to him and the other half of me says not to. What should I do?

CAPRICORN

DEAR CAPRICORN: Listen to the half of you with the brains in it, and don't write to Pisces. Stay out of his life and concentrate on making your marriage with Scorpio work.

DEAR ABBY: Our son, age 33, is getting married for the third time. His fiancée has never been married and is planning a large church wedding.

Our son's first wedding was a traditional church wedding with all the trimmings, showers, gifts, etc.

The second time he married a young woman who had been married before, so it was much smaller, but most of our friends and relatives sent them wedding gifts anyway.

Now I feel very awkward sending wedding invitations to our friends and relatives a third time. I am also afraid the bride-to-be will wonder why there will not be a wedding shower from my son's friends and relatives.

Abby, how do people feel about this? We honestly don't know what to do, but we've been through all this twice already.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH

DEAR ENOUGH: Your signature expresses my feelings, too, but it's unfair for a first-time bride to miss out on gifts because she's No. 3.

Skip the shower, but go ahead and invite those friends and relatives you want, and whatever they choose to do about a gift will be up to them.

DEAR ABBY: I have an unusual problem. With planning, budgeting, saving and setting priorities, my husband and I manage quite well on one paycheck. (He is in the military.) We own a nice mobile home that goes along on our frequent moves. We have managed to furnish it nicely and have finally worked our way up to owning two automobiles as well as starting a savings account.

The problem is that friends and relatives (especially) who do not budget, save or pinch pennies, think that we are far better off than we really are, and therefore, should lend or give them money!

My husband's family are the worst offenders. Mom, Dad, and assorted sisters, brothers, aunts, uncles, etc., are constantly asking for anything from $10 to $1,000 — or more.

How do we make these people understand that we do not have a money tree — that we appear prosperous because we have planned, saved and budgeted our money? How can we make them understand this without putting all our personal business on public record?

DEFENDING THE FUNDS

DEAR DEFENDING: You do not have to justify declining to lend or give money to anyone. Use the Nancy Reagan technique: Just say no!

Wedding bells? Wedding bills! Who pays for what and everything else you need to know if you're planning a wedding can be found in Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address, plus check or money order for $2.89 ($3.39 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A while back you mentioned a new drug that cures gout. Can you please reprint the information?

DEAR READER: Gout is a form of arthritis caused by a buildup of uric acid crystals within joints. Uric acid is a normal product of body metabolism.

Gout is incurable, but it is treatable, using a drug called allopurinol, which blocks the formation of excess uric acid and diminishes the possibility of gouty arthritis.

The medicine is available by prescription and should only be used under medical supervision. Although it is usually effective, it has side effects in some patients. These include rash, fever, chills, jaundice and a fall-off in the number of circulating white blood cells.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A few years ago I had a stroke. While in the hospital I was given eight aspirin a day. My doctor (now deceased) said I should take two aspirin per day for the rest of my life, yet I've read that aspirin increases the risk of stroke and brain aneurysm. I'll trust your judgment.

DEAR READER: Thank you for the compliment, but you should find a new local doctor, too.

Since aspirin was discovered to slow blood coagulation and thereby reduce the risk of thrombotic (blood-clot) strokes, doctors have recommended its use for certain stroke patients. (Tests weren't conducted on female stroke patients.) However, the dose of aspirin has varied. Presently, one baby aspirin (the equivalent of one-quarter adult aspirin) is considered to be sufficient for most patients.

Unfortunately, aspirin has statistically been associated with a type of non-thrombotic, small brain-hemorrhage that causes stroke. This association is lessened by the currently accepted low dose. Aspirin does not cause an aneurysm of brain arteries. This is a weakness in the walls of the blood vessels, which can sometimes bleed; and tendency is inherited.

Therefore, aspirin therapy is probably appropriate for you. However, you will need less of the drug than was originally suggested. Ask your new doctor to advise you.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Could you tell me if red clover combination (herbal food) is good for arthritis? I am a diabetic and wonder if it would be wise to take them.

DEAR READER: To my knowledge, red clover combination is not an appropriate treatment for arthritis because no scientific study has shown it to be effective. Better treatments are available, including aspirin, acetaminophen and a variety of prescription medicines.

In the past few months, three different periodicals carried three news stories that seemed, on first reading, to be unrelated. I wonder. Perhaps I'm getting paranoid, but see if you agree that these facts may be telling us something about the medical profession as a whole.

The first was a short squib in Medical Economics. The headline read: "New doctors are shunning primary care." Last spring, only 73 percent of the family practice slots and 82 percent of the pediatric positions were filled in the National Residency Matching Program, down almost 10 percent from 1987. The matching program places doctors-in-training into appropriate residency programs. The experts hypothesized that a major reason for this shortfall was that young physicians, with heavy debt from medical school, were picking high-paying specialties, such as orthopedics, emergency medicine and obstetrics/gynecology, rather than primary care, which pays modestly in comparison. Although this year's figures are not yet in, the trend is expected to continue.

The second article appeared in the Jan. 30 U.S. News & World Report. The author, Steven Findlay, reported on wide national variations in the number and type of procedures doctors perform. The criteria for many operations vary from one geographical region of the country to another. For example, orthopedic specialists in Boston were twice as likely to put in artificial hips than were their colleagues in New Haven, even though their patients were demographically similar. Conversely, New Haven surgeons carried out coronary bypass surgery twice as frequently as did Boston doctors.

In another study reported by U.S. News, urologists in Maine were studied with respect to their pattern of performing prostatectomies, a procedure to remove part of the prostate gland in men to alleviate painful, irregular urination. The researchers discovered that, rather than experiencing an improvement in life expectancy, a substantial proportion of patients were actually more likely to die in the first year after surgery, because of complications of the procedure. As a result of publicity from this study, 35 percent fewer prostatectomies are being carried out in Maine than was the case nine years ago.

Working with insurance carriers nationwide, Value Health Sciences, a private watchdog organization, is attempting to define appropriate criteria for various procedures, including bypass surgery for heart disease, cataract extraction and back operations.

Predictably, physicians and surgeons are far from thrilled at the prospect of having non-M.D.s look over their shoulders and make decisions that have, in the past, been the doctors' prerogative. This concern is understandable. As guidelines are formulated for surgical operations, it won't be long before general medical practices are monitored and scrutinized, critics claim.

Dr. Paul Ellwood, director of InterStudy, a Minneapolis think tank, has boldly envisioned a vast computer network linking every doctor's office with a data bank that will provide updated standards for the diagnosis and treatment of common diseases. Those doctors who deviate from the expected pattern could be penalized or punished. This high level of control does not appeal to M.D.s and, indeed, such a scheme would revolutionize medical practice.

The third article was printed in the Feb. 27 Medical World News. It reported on a study showing that Medicare beneficiaries seldom pay any attention to whether their doctors are participating physicians in the program; that is, whether their doctors accept assignment of Medicare benefits. Apparently, most patients simply find a doctor with whom they're comfortable, regardless of whether the practitioner is a doctor who participates. This doesn't mean that Medicare patients are paying more for services: About 75 percent of all doctors accept Medicare assignment on a claim-by-claim basis. When local authorities threatened mandatory assignment laws, as in New York state, almost 50 percent of medical residents said they would practice in another state.

Here, then, are the "unrelated" facts: Fewer doctors are entering primary care, many of those who do would choose to practice in communities with less government regulation, and 21st century office care could be reduced to computerized, cookbook medicine.

If these observations are related, the future of office-based, primary care medicine is gloomy for patients who may be increasingly hard-pressed to find family doctors, because new graduates may be flocking to the specialties, especially those specialties that are minimally regulated. I'm not sure the American public wants this to happen, but the handwriting is certainly on the wall.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,
I am writing to express my gratitude and to commend the generosity and hardwork of Bill Parker, president of West Texas State Bank. Mr. Parker has only lived in our community three years, yet he has touched the lives of many young people. He gives both time and money to many programs both academic and athletic. He was instrumental in the establishment of the annual West Texas Bank Scholarships given to graduating seniors.

Mr. Parker's enthusiasm for soccer has led to the involvement of several teenage boys who have not been included previously. He has coached, chauffeured, fed, clothed, counseled and nurtured TEAM Snyder for six seasons. Even though he has three sons of his own, he has managed to be a father figure to some of these boys. Talk about the "Big Brother" program — in Snyder it could be called the "Bill Parker" program. Bill also supports the Little Dribblers, Little League and the Snyder Soccer Association. Wherever young boys are involved, you will find Bill Parker's support and influence.

This year, Mr. Parker added another area to his list of endowments that he and the West Texas State Bank are sponsoring. In June, four students will be traveling to Washington, D.C., and New York City with the student group from Snyder Junior High with the assistance of Mr. Parker and his bank.

I would like to publicly acknowledge my appreciation to Bill Parker for his assistance with the 1989 student trip to Washington, D.C. Four young people will long remember the fact that this experience was made possible by Mr. Parker.

Thanks, Mr. Parker, for your support and faith in the young people of Snyder

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Recently I became aware that a fellow employee was stealing small amounts from the company. She foolishly told a few people about it, and even bragged about it.

Abby, I did something I now regret. I typed an anonymous note tipping off the front office. They must have looked into the matter and discovered it was true, because that employee was suddenly terminated.

Many of the employees are upset — not because that employee stole, but because they suspected that a fellow employee turned her in. Did I do something wrong? I can't believe it's OK to steal just because this is a large and prosperous company that can afford the loss. Let me add, the employee who stole was by no means hard up.

My biggest concern now is being found out. I told no one, but I've been a nervous wreck ever since. I can't sleep; I can't eat. And I keep wondering if this is God's way of punishing me for snitching. Maybe I've been watching too much television, but I keep thinking that my typewriter can be traced as the one on which that anonymous note was written.

Believe me, I will never again turn anyone in, even if I witness a murder! Please help me. I am worried sick over this. I'll look for your answer in the paper.

GUILTY CONSCIENCE

DEAR GUILTY CONSCIENCE: Relax. The chances that anyone will trace the anonymous note back to your typewriter are extremely remote. (I doubt if the "front office" is even interested in knowing who tipped them off.)

Although I am not keen on "turning thieves in" anonymously, I think you are suffering needlessly. And by the way, anyone who witnesses a crime and remains silent is aiding the criminal.

Now, lighten up, and forgive yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My daughter took her 15-year-old son to the dentist for a routine checkup. The boy has beautiful teeth — no fillings. The dentist informed her that it was time to contact an oral surgeon to have all four wisdom teeth pulled. My daughter asked why. The dentist told her it was standard procedure to pull the wisdom teeth of children ages 15 or 16 to prevent possible future problems. A conversation with two other dentists confirmed that practice. My own dentist agreed, and said they always pull all four teeth at once.

Abby, if medical doctors routinely removed tonsils and appendixes of 4- and 5-year-olds to prevent future problems, there would be quite an uproar. But the practice of pulling healthy teeth appears to be quite acceptable. What do your experts say?

CHARLOTTE IN SALEM, ORE.

DEAR CHARLOTTE: My experts say: Unless the jaw is too small or the teeth are too large to accommodate the wisdom teeth, there is no reason to extract them. If your daughter is still skeptical, she should consult another dentist.

DEAR ABBY: I've read those words ("Dear Abby") many times, but I never thought I'd be writing them. This is such a peculiar and unexpected problem that I hardly know how to word it.

Our daughter is nearing the end of her 30s. She's been divorced for six years, has an excellent job, a good social life and a wonderful personality. She has never had a child.

Our problem is, she has announced that she wants to bear a child while she is still able — married or not. We can understand her feelings, as she has always loved children, but we are deeply saddened to think that our grandchild will grow up without a father.

What are your feelings about her plan?

HER LOVING PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: It's possible for a single parent to raise a child — and successfully. Many do. However, I would not recommend deliberately having a child out of wedlock.

DEAR ABBY: Something has been haunting me for a long time and I need to get it out of my system and settled once and for all. When I was 15 years old, I fell in love with a man who was 45. I will call him Scorpio. My parents refused to let me be with him, so we parted. As fate would have it, I fell in love again when I was 19, but that marriage lasted only six years, and we divorced.

Following my divorce, I met another man I'll call Pisces, but I kept seeing Scorpio every chance I got because I couldn't get him out of my mind. So here I was, divorced and dating the Pisces, but still in love with the Scorpio.

The Scorpio knew I was dating the Pisces, but the Pisces didn't know about the Scorpio until last Easter when the Pisces stayed too long, and Scorpio showed up early at my house.

Needless to say I felt terrible about it because I knew I wasn't being fair to either one of them. I finally told the Pisces that I couldn't see him any more — it was over. I really didn't want to end it with the Pisces, but I didn't want to lose the Scorpio either. Well, to make a long story short, I married my Scorpio five months ago.

Last week I saw in the newspaper that my Pisces took out a marriage license to marry a 24-year-old girl! Now I can't get the Pisces out of my mind. I want to write to him and tell him I still have feelings for him, and also that I wish him well in his marriage. Half of me says to write to him and the other half of me says not to. What should I do?

CAPRICORN

DEAR CAPRICORN: Listen to the half of you with the brains in it, and don't write to Pisces. Stay out of his life and concentrate on making your marriage with Scorpio work.

DEAR ABBY: Our son, age 33, is getting married for the third time. His fiancé has never been married and is planning a large church wedding.

Our son's first wedding was a traditional church wedding with all the trimmings, showers, gifts, etc.

The second time he married a young woman who had been married before, so it was much smaller, but most of our friends and relatives sent them wedding gifts anyway.

Now I feel very awkward sending wedding invitations to our friends and relatives a third time. I am also

If we can't justify it financially, how about the volume of traffic? That can't be done either. A state survey revealed there was not enough traffic for the state to maintain the signal at 37th and Ave. V or for an arrow on the signal to turn onto College from 37th.

What happens to real estate values along this section of 37th St.? They will surely decline. Lower values mean less tax revenue!
