Police seek clues in hanging

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Police labored to learn how and why an Irving mortgage company employee, who had been reported missing, was bound and hanged in an Irving motel room.

"It's apparently not a robbery. We just don't know what we have," Lt. John Neeley said Thursday, adding that officers are investigating the death of Craig Coburn as a murder.

The body of Coburn, 34, was found in the business district motel about 11:30 a.m. Wednesday, Neeley said. His mouth had been taped shut.

Coburn, an employee of Lomas Mortgage USA in Dallas, had been hanged from a belt attached to a decorative grate at the top of a wall, Neeley said. He was clad in underwear and a T-shirt. His other clothes were in the room.

But the Dallas County medical examiner said an autopsy had not "yielded the cause and manner of death," and that additional tests would be performed.

Police ruled out robbery as a motive because Coburn's wallet and jewelry had not been taken, and no motive had been established, Neeley said.

Coburn was reported missing Tuesday night by his wife, Nita Coburn, said Dallas police spokeswoman Vicki Hawkins.

The couple moved to Dallas in April after their wedding in Grand Junction, Colo., where they both grew up.

Ms. Coburn told police her husband left for work about 5 a.m. Tuesday. Then, he abruptly left his office about 8:30 a.m. and never came back. He did not contact her and no one saw him, which was unusual, she said in the report.

A person answering the phone at Lomas Mortgage referred questions about Coburn to company officials, who declined to give comment.

Mike Radosevich of Grand Junction, who was an usher in the couple's wedding, said the Coburn's relatives told him Coburn left his briefcase open on his desk, along with work papers and a half-full cup of coffee.

Radosevich said Coburn's co-workers thought he had left to eat breakfast.

Neeley said Coburn apparently checked into the motel shortly after he left work. Coburn's body was found the next morning by the motel manager.

Bill Lene, a field investigator for the Dallas County medical examiner said, "death may have occurred while he was hanging, but from some other cause," and that tests for drugs, alcohol and toxic substances will be performed.

Radosevich said Coburn's relatives told him everything had seemed fine with the couple, except that Coburn had been working a lot lately.

Fears mount that strike could dampen investments

REYNOSA, Mexico (AP) — A three-week old labor dispute that has closed U.S.-owned assembly plants could discourage investment along the border, observers in Mexico and the United States say.

"There's a lot more riding on this than just a labor contract," Linda Brown, a spokeswoman for the McAllen Economic Development Corp., said late Thursday.

In Mexico, the National Council of Foreign Commerce, a private business group in Monterrey, called on President Carlos Salinas de Gortari to intervene before the strike discouraged new investment.

"This conflict is affecting Mexico's image and putting in risk the consideration of foreign investors who bring their capital to Mexico," Guillermo Diaz de la Garza, the council's director general, said in a statement.

Tamaulipas Gov. Americo Villarreal held a marathon round of meetings with plant managers, rival union factions and business leaders Thursday trying to resolve the stalemate.

The strike is rooted in a power struggle between two competing union leaders. It has closed 15 plants, idled 2,000 workers and is costing the plants about $500,000 a day in lost production.

At least two plants have threatened to pull out of Mexico.

"U.S. industries that have projects planned have put them on hold and are watching the situation very closely," Ms. Brown said in a telephone interview.

The battle pits the head of the local union, Abel Hernandez, against the Mexican Labor Federation, or CTM.

The CTM is the nation's most largest and most powerful labor organization and is a pillar of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party.

After Hernandez pulled the local union out of the CTM, the local CTM leader, Rafael Morales, called the strike on July 25 and declared himself head of the local.

Plant managers have refused to sign contracts with Morales, whom they accuse of corruption.

At least 800 workers of the 2,000 affected by the strike rebelled against Morales on Tuesday, ripping down the strike flags, returning to work and locking themselves inside their plants.

The workers have vowed to remain inside the plants until the dispute is solved.

Despite police guards, there were some isolated incidents late Thursday in which rock-throwers broke plant windows, Brown said.

Man cleans up corrupt Mexican jail

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico (AP) — The foundation has been laid for a church at the CeReSo prison, and new warden Gabriel Nahas Ayub says it is the groundwork for his ongoing cleanup of a jail that was rife with corruption.

Ayub was put in charge of the prison last month after a federal raid revealed that Juarez drug kingpin Gilberto "El Grenas" Ontiveros was continuing his illegal activities from his prison cell. During the raid, authorities found cellular phones, drugs and alcohol in Ontiveros' remodeled cell.

The former warden, Gen. Hector Camarena Ibarra, is at the center of the investigation and authorities allege he collected $2,000 a week to ignore the activities of Ontiveros and other inmates. Camarena remains free, after securing an "amparo," a Mexican court order blocking his arrest.

In the 30 days Ayub has been in charge, he has replaced 18 of the prison's 130 employees, according to the El Paso Herald-Post. On Tuesday, he fired two males and one female guard who he said were forcing female inmates to have sex with male inmates willing to pay.

Ayub, 48, has been in charge of federal prisons in all of Chihuahua state since 1986.

the weak no-trump opener has little in high cards, he can bid at the two-level to show a five-card major and will have a good chance of escaping without being penalized. Many times, even when the opening weak no-trump is facing a bland worthless dummy, the defenders' high cards are evenly divided so that neither opponent can double. Despite these advantages, occasionally the weak no-trumper must pay the price for skating on thin ice — as in today's deal.

South signed off in two spades after the no-trump opening. East didn't have very much, but he did have support for any suit his partner might want to bid. He also had two aces, sure defensive tricks against the two-spade contract. And he knew partner had to have some cards, since the opponents had stopped at a part-score contract. So he doubled. West was happy to pass.

Declarer might have escaped for down one by taking a diamond finesse to get rid of a heart loser, but he had no assurance that the diamond queen was with West. He took his medicine, down two, -500, and made a mental note to discuss with his partner the advisability of playing weak no-trumps.

The down side of weak no-trumps

By James Jacoby

Many players like weak no-trump openings. If the opponents must defend against one no-trump, they are given no information as to declarer's long suits. Also, with balanced hands of 11-13 points or slightly more, the opponents have difficulty getting into the bidding. Even when the partner of

Worker's comp surfaces again

AUSTIN (AP) — Workers' compensation — the issue that state officials could not resolve in regular and special legislative sessions — has crept back to the forefront.

An interim Senate committee today begins looking at how workers' comp insurance rates are set.

And on Thursday, a Dallas insurer accused a group of large insurance companies of manipulating the market to drive up employer-paid workers' comp premiums.

Those charges came two days after the insurance industry warned that the state workers' comp system was on the verge of collapse and asked for a 34.9 percent increase in premium rates.

Sen. John Montford, D-

Lubbock, chairman of the committee studying comp rates, said when he first heard of the proposed 34.9 percent increase, "that almost caused me a coronary." He described the proposal as excessive.

Montford said he wasn't familiar with the charge by Standard Financial Indemnity Corp. — that large insurers were behind skyrocketing costs — but added, "We'd love to hear from them."

Gerald Dorsey, general counsel for Standard Financial Indemnity, said the large insurers have run the Texas Workers' Compensation Assigned Risk Pool into a record deficit.

Dorsey termed the risk pool "a cesspool" for employers who cannot purchase policies on the open market.

He said the primary causes of the Texas workers' compensation insurance mess are "gross irresponsibility" in the workers' compensation system, combined with "monopolistic conspiracy among the insurance companies servicing the assigned risk pool policyholders."

Richard Geiger, Texas attorney for the National Council on Compensation Insurance, which is composed of carriers writing workers' comp policies, rejected Dorsey's argument.

"You have to take Mr. Dorsey's comments in light of the fact that he is a litigant in a lawsuit that claims the carriers have conspired to keep him out of the market," Geiger said.

In a suit pending in Hidalgo County, Dorsey's firm alleges the 10 companies writing policies for employers in the risk pool are guilty of anti-trust violations.

State lawmakers have wrestled all year with the workers' comp system, which has been criticized for expensive premiums and inadequate benefits for injured workers.

Gov. Bill Clements said he will call the Legislature back into another special legislative session this fall to reform the workers' comp system.

Clements on Thursday did not comment on Dorsey's claim, but said, "I think that all of these various news releases by the interested parties on all the sides of this particular complicated issue will be very helpful when we have that special session in November."

Dorsey said the dramatic misfortunes of the risk pool show that the large carriers have forced more employers to pay higher premiums while squeezing out smaller insurers.

LBJ reunion...

Aides are planning for 25th anniversary

AUSTIN (AP) — Former aides to President Lyndon Johnson hope a staff reunion being planned for next year will bring together for the first time American, Vietnamese and other officials to discuss the war that so battered his administration.

The observation, scheduled for April and May, will mark the 25th anniversary of Johnson's 1965 inauguration as president.

Organizers hope the gathering, slated for both Washington, D.C., and Austin, will be the largest reunion ever of a presidential administration.

Sponsored by the Lyndon Baines Johnson Foundation, the events are scheduled for April 6-7 in Washington, D.C., and May 3-5 in Austin, said Robert Hardesty, a former Johnson aide.

Harry Middleton, director of the LBJ Library at the University of Texas, is chairman of the activities. As part of the Austin program, the library plans to host a daylong symposium on the Vietnam War. Former defense secretary Robert McNamara will be invited, said Harry McPherson, chairman of the symposium. McPherson, a special counsel to Johnson and now a lawyer in Washington, also hopes members of the North Vietnamese, Chinese and Soviet governments will participate. He said he is inviting officials of America's adversaries in the war through journalist and author Stanley Karnow.

Agency seeks record penalty against firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration is accusing an Austin firm of improperly labeling and packaging hazardous materials shipped on a passenger jet and is seeking a record $240,000 in penalties.

"We consider this a very serious incident," said FAA spokesman John Leyden. "The fact this is the largest fine we've ever asked for in a hazardous materials case is proof of that."

FAA said Thursday that a shipment of chemicals by Textile Treatments International resulted in a cargo-hold fire that forced the pilot to order an emergency evacuation upon landing in Nashville, Tenn. Several passengers and flight crew members were injured.

Hugh Lowe, an attorney representing TTI, said the company would contest the proposed fines and was preparing a response.

"There are a lot of paths of remedies available and we'll feel our way through that thicket," he said. "Do I think $240,000 is excessive? Yes."

Leyden said the firm's options include paying the fine or a hearing before an administrative law judge at the Department of Transportation. Should the company refuse to pay, government attorneys could file suit in federal court.

According to FAA, the small Austin firm violated federal rules on both labeling and packaging of hazardous chemicals used for "stone-washing" fabric. Included was five gallons of a hydrogen peroxide solution which is banned from passenger and cargo-only flights.

A TTI executive offered the materials for transportation aboard an American Airlines passenger flight from Austin to Dallas on Feb. 2, 1988, and then to Nashville the following day, also on an American flight, FAA said.

Running water added to 2nd home

SOCORRO, Texas (AP) — The giant metal barrel and plastic buckets that Maria Luisa Cisneros depended on for her family's survival have been set aside.
Mrs. Cisneros became the second lower valley colonias resident to receive running water since the Lower Valley Water District Authority agreed in January to purchase city-owned water lines in an effort to get water flowing to the standard rural subdivisions of El Paso.

Water was hooked up to Mrs. Cisneros' mobile home Wednesday afternoon.
"We bathed," Mrs. Cisneros said Thursday.
A third house began receiving running water Thursday afternoon and a home that is under construction is scheduled to be hooked up today.

Mrs. Cisneros and her husband, Carlos, borrowed the $1,200 needed to start the service from a friend. Cisneros repairs cars for a living and has been unable to work full time because of his poor health. Mrs. Cisneros works in an

El Paso factory.
Before Wednesday, the Cisneros family either caught rain water with a huge metal barrel or filled the barrel with water from a neighbor's spigot. Mrs. Cisneros said she paid her neighbor $10 to $20 a month, depending on the heat.

Members of the El Paso Inter-religious Sponsoring Organization said in a news conference last week that colonias' residents should not be required to pay connection fees in lump sums.

Dr. Gott
Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband had surgery four years ago for an enlarged prostate. A small cancer was removed, although the doctor said that was not the primary cause for the surgery. A small dot remained that they could not remove, and the doctor said to "just wait and see." Is there really nothing to be done about it — just wait for it to break through and kill?

DEAR READER: I've always felt uncomfortable about not treating small areas of prostatic cancer. In fact, I've written in previous columns that such areas should be treated with hormones to retard cancerous growth and spread.

However, several urologists have written to reassure me that prostatic cancer is: 1) usually slow-growing, 2) does not spread for years, and 3) does not need hormone treatment unless it grows.

The customary procedure nowadays is to "wait and see." If a man has prostate surgery because of blockage due to glandular overgrowth and a small cancer is discovered fortuitously, most urologists would evaluate the patient with annual rectal exams and, possibly, bone scans. Therefore, your doctor's approach is probably correct.

However, some types of prostatic cancer are far from indolent; these highly malignant cells will readily invade surrounding tissue or spread to bone. Such a dangerous situation is usually apparent to the surgeon at the time of operation. In these cases, aggressive efforts are made to remove as much tumor as possible and follow up with hormone treatment, chemotherapy or radiation therapy.

From your description, I conclude that your husband's surgeon quite properly left a "dot" of prostatic cancer in the belief that he could, during future checkups, determine if the remaining malignancy should be treated.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "The Prostate Gland." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 with their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My specialist wants to put me on a new experimental drug called Voltaren for arthritis. What are the side effects of this drug?

DEAR READER: Voltaren is a new non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drug (NSAID) that is useful in reducing the pain, stiffness and swelling of arthritis. It is given as 150 milligrams a day, in divided doses. Side effects include abdominal pain, cramps, indigestion, gas, peptic ulcer and slight abnormalities in blood tests of liver function.

Voltaren is usually very effective. It is not experimental. It is now the world's most frequently prescribed NSAID.

Actress likes keeping busy

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Jennifer Tilly, the fast-talking ditty gambler's girlfriend in the movie "Let It Ride," says she likes being one of Hollywood's busiest actresses, but would prefer some meatier roles.

Miss Tilly, sister of actress Meg Tilly, said she was on location for the movie when the trade paper Daily Variety named her Hollywood's busiest actress, with 11 films to her credit in the last three years.

"I knew I worked a lot, but I was really surprised I was the busiest," she said in a recent interview. "Of course that kind of statistic is pretty misleading. I do a lot of small character parts while some other actresses with bigger roles work on them a year or more."

"I don't think Meryl Streep called to complain that she wasn't on the list."

Limited trawl lines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Wildlife Federation is asking a federal judge to reconsider his decision allowing shrimpers to limit their trawls, rather than equipping their nets with devices that protect endangered sea turtles.
In an appeal filed in U.S. District Court on Thursday, the federation said the temporary rules on restricted tow times "will kill numerous threatened and endangered sea turtles." The federation contends the turtle excluder devices are necessary to protect endangered sea turtles from extinction.

On Monday, U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Hogan refused to disturb an interim step instituted by the Commerce Department allowing shrimpers to limit their trawls to 105 minutes, rather than having to use the devices known as TEDs.

Hogan, however, said he would not rule on the merits of the 105-minute requirement pending a final rule from Commerce Secretary Robert Mospbacher, due out in September.

Mospbacher began requiring shrimpers to limit their trawls on Aug. 8, after Hogan ruled the Commerce Department must act to protect endangered sea turtles.

In 1533, Atahualpa, the last Incan king of Peru, was murdered on the orders of Spanish conqueror Francisco Pizarro.

Credentials for doctors said hard to verify

BOSTON (AP) — Consumers looking for a reputable physician often turn to the Yellow Pages, but researchers say verifying the credentials advertised can be all but impossible.

Confirming a doctor's education, specialty training, certification and other background is frequently beyond the average citizen's grasp, according to an article published Thursday in The New England Journal of Medicine.

"It's very difficult in most communities in this country for patients to get important facts about physicians they'd like to consult," said Dr. Arnold S. Relman, the journal's editor in chief.

The problem is that no straightforward directory is available to the public and those who consult professional listings often find them indecipherable.

"While trying to ascertain how physicians' credentials corresponded to those they listed ... we encountered a veritable obstacle course of inconsistent and illogical policies that effectively deny information to the consumer," wrote Drs. Julia M. Reade and Richard M. Ratzan, who conducted the informal survey.

"In conclusion, obtaining access to complete, up-to-date, and verified information about physicians is all but impossible."

Like many consumers, Reade and Ratzan started their research by thumbing through the Yellow Pages.

They found Southern New England Telephone Co.'s listings were not routinely corroborated and included a warning suggesting additional consultation with a local medical association.

The Hartford (Conn.) County Medical Association, which receives about 20,000 similar inquiries annually, answered many of the researchers' questions.

But the process is rarely that simple, they reported.

"Many medical associations are too small, or are unwilling, to commit the time and manpower needed to provide rigorous verification, and they accept at face value whatever information the physician supplies," according to the researchers.

Reade is a psychiatrist at Massachusetts General Hospital, Ratzan an associate professor at the University of Connecticut School of Medicine.

Because physicians supply much of their own background information, Relman said, patients may face medical fraud. Doctors who need periodic recertification in their specialties may skip the exams or, if they fail to pass, not report the results, he said.

To protect consumers "organized medicine must ... take the initiative and see that standardized directories about physicians be provided and readily accessible to the public," said Relman, who for more than a decade has pushed for an accessible consumer directory.

"If I were sick and needed an operation I would want to know a lot about the surgeon who was going to operate on me," Relman said. "But if you're a lay person and don't have access to professional sources of information it's rather difficult."

Tenacious consumers can track down the American Medical Association's directory, but the guide uses complicated numerical and letter codes in verifying information about a physician's year and state of licensure, medical school and specialty-board certification.

Beyond that, no information is provided on advanced training.

"Thus, there is no way to distinguish between the self-styled cardiologist with board certification in internal medicine alone and the cardiologist who has board certification in that sub-specialty," the doctors said.

The researchers studied several other compendiums, including how-to manuals spawned in the 1970s by the consumer movement, but found similar gaps and obstacles in each case.
