Republican files for county judge; Greene for Pct. 4

Two Snyder businessmen — including the first to file as a Republican — have announced their intentions to run for county office.

See candidate announcements page 7A

The first man to file for office on the Republican ticket will be Greg Crawford, owner of Texas Real Estate & Appraisal. Crawford is running for county judge, an office currently held by Democrat Bobby Goodwin. Goodwin will be opposed by Marlin Terrell in the Democratic primary election on March 13.

Jack K. Greene Sr., owner-operator of Jack's Roadboring and Pipeline Construction, has announced he will run for precinct 4 county commissioner, opposing Jerry Gannaway. Both men will be on the Democratic ticket.

Others having declared their intentions — all as Democrats — are incumbent Tommy Pate and Don Tucker for precinct 2 county commissioner; incumbent Frances Billingsley for county clerk; Elois Pruitt for district clerk; Wanda Rushing for peace justice, precinct 1; and incumbent Rita Staton for county treasurer.

No one has yet filed for peace justice in precinct 2, held by R.C. Nixon of Hermleigh, or for the unexpired term of former county attorney Michael S. Line, which is held by Leland "Pete" Greene. The final day to file in the March 13 primary election is Jan. 2.

Freeport tax among Monday agenda items facing commissioners

Scurry County Commissioners are scheduled to discuss freeport exemption with Scurry County Appraisal District Chief Appraiser Ray Peveler in their 10 a.m. Monday meeting.

Peveler will also address the court concerning exemption of penalty and interest of certain Scurry County oil properties.

Scurry County Tax Assessor Rona Sikes is to attend the meeting to review personal property exemptions, and commissioners will discuss setting user fees for the eight community centers in the county. At 11 a.m., commissioners are expected to hear a resolution of the Hobbs ISD Board of Trustees. Finally, the court will consider a line item amendment for the Scurry County Group Medical Trust Fund.

The freeport exemption concerns the recently-passed amendment to the state constitution which allows entities "to exempt from ad valorem taxation goods, wares, merchandise and other tangible personal property that are imported into or acquired in Texas for assembling, storing, manufacturing, processing or fabrication and that are exported from Texas within 175 days after importation or acquisition."

A county, school district, junior college district or municipality may override the exemption and continue taxing the property by official action. To do so, governing bodies must take steps to override the exemption by April 1, however. The exemption will still be in effect for 1990 unless governing bodies, such as the commissioner's court, override it by Jan. 1.

The board will discuss whether the freeport exemption directly affects any business currently operating in the county, and how the exemption might be perceived by businesses seeking to locate to the county, among other topics.

Locknane conviction is upheld on appeal

An April 1988 conviction and 15-year penitentiary sentence imposed on a Snyder man for aggravated kidnapping has been upheld by the 11th Court of Appeals in Eastland.

An appeal for John Randel "Randy" Locknane, now 34, had claimed the trial court erred in refusing to allow the impeachment of the complaining witness by proof of prior inconsistent statements. The appeal was also based on the defendant's claim that the court erred when it instructed the jury on "criminal responsibility for the conduct of another."

Locknane was one of three defendants in the case, which involved the Oct. 27, 1987, gunpoint abduction of Lafayette T. Griffin from an eastern Snyder (see APPEAL, page 15A)

Doctor shows interest in coming to Cogdell

An El Paso obstetrician-gynecologist is expressing a strong interest in joining the Cogdell Memorial Hospital medical staff, administrator Tom Hochwalt reported to the hospital board Friday.

Declining to reveal the doctor's name because negotiations are still in the preliminary stage, Hochwalt said he "is a very distinguished-looking Hispanic" who is 56 years old and wants to relocate to a more rural setting.

The board re-affirmed the incentive package it okayed last July for physicians of different specialties, including provisions for the employment of an obstetrician-gynecologist, and authorized Hochwalt to begin negotiations on the basis of that package.

Incentives include a guaranteed annual cash income of $100,000 to $120,000, free office space and an office assistant's salary for a year, moving expenses, a medical malpractice insurance subsidy and other inducements.

Hochwalt said the hospital might have to offer more money because $120,000 "is low," according to industry standards. "The going rate for an OB-gynecologist is $180,000 to $240,000," he said.

The administrator said the physician expects to extend his career for only another seven to 10 years, but that would give the hospital time to find a replacement.

He said the doctor would probably generate $200,000 in income for the hospital in his first year and could be expected to produce $400,000 after the second year.

Hochwalt said the physician visited Snyder last Sunday and Monday, met with members of the medical staff and was given a tour of the city.

The hospital has been engaged in an extensive campaign to attract new doctors to its staff. An internist and a family practice physician are also being sought.

In district court...

7 enter plea of guilty

Seven criminal defendants entered guilty pleas in 132nd District Court last week, including four who had been charged with unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in the early Monday theft of a Texas Tech University student's car outside a Hermleigh convenience store. Receiving five-year probated sentences and $500 fines each were 20-year-old Brad Colburn and 23-year-old Danny R. Elder, both of Osceola, Ark., 21-year-old Beth A. Buckner of West Memphis, Ark., and 59-year-old Jim D. May of Modesto, Calif.

They had been charged with stealing a 1984 Nissan Pulsar belonging to Jimmy D. Brown, who was inside the Allsup's at Hermleigh when the car was taken at 12:34 a.m. Monday.

Elder, May and Buckner were arrested and the car was recovered 20 minutes later by city police at Huffman Ave. and U.S. 84 in northern Snyder.

Colburn was apprehended at 7 (see PLEAS, page 15A)

The SDN Column

By Roy McQueen

The feller on Deep Creek says, "In times like these, it helps to recall there have always been times like these."

Snyder has two elected representatives in the state legislature—and one of 'em is dead wrong. For the third time this year, the Texas Legislature has failed to pass sorely needed reforms in the workers' compensation system. And despite statesmanship efforts by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, 17 senators again stood firm in blocking meaningful reforms. Meanwhile all size businesses and their employees continue to suffer.

State Rep. David Counts of Knox City has been a leader in trying to pass reforms, but State Sen. Steve Carriker of Roby has sided with trial lawyers at the expense of the people he represents.

It's not the first time that Mr. Carriker has failed to represent his constituents. We overlooked his conspicuous absence in 1987 when Snyder was awarded the prison unit. Snyder's delegation was the only one without legislative support present. But we can no longer overlook his total disregard for the people of the 30th senatorial district. Carriker likely doesn't care since he will be fully vested in the state retirement program at the end of his present term. There's no secret he's interested in a state-wide race and he will need additional funding from the deep-pocketed trial lawyers. Also, after redistricting, we can only guess about the geographic future of the 30th district.

The senate's failure to pass comp reform means that the Texas economy will continue to suffer. It means that jobs will be lost—and jobs are the number one employee benefit.

Although the special session isn't over until Wednesday, leaders see little chance of a new bill.

Sen. Carriker has threatened to tell the district attorney about a constituent's offer of a $50,000 campaign contribution to anyone who would run against Carriker, saying it may be "bribery."

Come on, Senator—tell us about the $72,000 in contributions you've received from trial lawyers since 1987.

One of our elected reps is wrong—and Sen. Carriker should apologize to the people in the 30th senatorial district.

Q—Is the NAACP having a style show this year? If so, when?

A—Yes, the NAACP has scheduled its annual style show for 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 16, at the senior center.

Houston police officer shot

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston police officer was shot Saturday during a routine traffic stop, authorities said.

Officer J. C. Boswell is on a life support machine at Ben Taub Hospital with a severe head wound, said Houston Police Sgt. Bill Trumble.

Trumble said the shooting occurred shortly after 1 a.m. Saturday when Boswell and a second officer pulled over a vehicle on a routine traffic stop.

A man, who was not in a car, walked up on the officers and began "raising hell," Trumble said.

"The man was yelling and harassing the officers when he pulled a gun and shot Boswell at least one time in the head," Trumble said. "The second officer, who Trumble identified as officer Gaines, then shot the suspect, hitting him once in the left side."

The suspect was also taken to Ben Taub and is in poor condition, Trumble said.

Trumble says the shooting occurred at the intersection of Main and West Ridge.

In chain reaction, political ambitions halted by court

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A court ruling that halted an order for single-member district elections to the state's 13th Court of Appeals has set off a chain reaction toppling the judicial ambitions of several candidates in south Texas.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans on Tuesday stayed an order by U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela of Brownsville. Vela in November ordered single-member district elections of judges on the 13th Court of Appeals in Corpus Christi saying that at-large voting in the jurisdiction's 20 counties discriminated against Mexican-Americans in violation of the Federal Voting Rights Act.

Voters to choose successor to the late U.S. Rep Leland

HOUSTON (AP) — Voters in the 18th Congressional District returned to the polls Saturday for the second time in a month to choose a successor to the late U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland.

State Sen. Craig Washington and City Councilman Anthony Hall qualified for the runoff Nov. 7 when they emerged as the two top vote getters in a field of 11 candidates.

Leland was killed in a plane crash during a hunger relief mission to an Ethiopian refugee camp in August. Both men in the runoff are allies of the late congressman and are Democrats in a district that has been described as among the most staunchly Democrat in the nation.

Washington, 48, is an attorney and former law school instructor.

He has served in the Texas Senate since 1983 after a 10-year stint in the state House.

Hall, 45, also an attorney, gave up his Houston city council seat to run for the Leland vacancy.

Although Hall was favored in the November balloting,

Washington captured 41 percent of the vote to 34 percent for Hall.

The term expires in 1990.

A poll last week showed the race nearly deadlocked, with Hall ahead 41 percent to 38 percent with 21 percent of the voters undecided.

Drug-fighting money okayed

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas National Guard officials said Friday that $10.9 million in federal funds had been approved to support the state's drug interdiction program in 1990.

The program, which began in April, includes support of manpower and equipment to the U.S. Customs Service, U.S. Border Patrol and Texas Department of Public Safety.

Texas received the most funding of the 53 state and territorial plans approved, the Texas National Guard said.

Major General William Wilson, adjutant general of Texas, said Texas Guardsmen act in a support role to law enforcement agencies and have no power of arrest or seizure.

About 100 Army and Air Guardsmen have participated in Operation Guardian at ports of entry along the Mexican border and port of Houston.

Tiger team finds weapons plant not ready for trouble

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pantex, the country's final assembly plant for nuclear bombs and missile warheads, would be unable to respond effectively to emergencies involving releases of radioactive material, according to experts who inspected the Amarillo-area factory.

Appointed by Energy Secretary James D. Watkins, the "tiger team" of government and outside experts found significant health, safety and environmental deficiencies at the World War II-era plant.

In a memo accompanying the team's draft report, Watkins said the findings indicate workers lack adequate protection from emergency and routine exposures to radioactive releases. He said the situation must be corrected immediately.

While the team said it found no conditions that appeared "to pose a clear and present danger to safety and health ... it was clear the radiation safety department would be unable to respond effectively to emergencies involving a release of radioactive material."

In its report released Wednesday, the team said the radiation protection program was generally inadequate "as evidenced by extensive non-compliance" with Energy Department regulations.

Yet the plant's contractor, and DOE offices in Amarillo and Albuquerque, N.M., have been aware of the situation for several years "but little has been achieved to correct it," the report said.

Although Watkins said the plant has a strong "safety culture ... little evidence exists that a comparable environmental culture is evolving. This must be corrected."

The report said Pantex is not adequately monitoring its impact on the underlying Ogallala aquifer, practically the only source of usable water for Texas' largest irrigated farming region.

As of August, 11 of the plant's 29 underground storage tank systems had been leak-tested and five were either leaking or had leaking pipes. Those systems have been replaced and testing continues on the remaining systems.

"If the failure rate continues to be as high as in the first 11 tank systems tested, there could be substantive ongoing releases to the subsurface environment," the report said.

The plant's protocols for assessing possible contamination of the air, soil and groundwater also do not meet industry standards and it does not have an environmental monitoring plan, said the team, which was at Pantex most of October.

In 1866, Tennessee became the first state to be readmitted to the Union after seceding during the Civil War.

Thank You. Thank You. Thank You.

Two important words that can never be over-used.

Your Contributions Will Support These Scurry County Agencies In 1990

United Way

—Boys Club: The Boys Club of Snyder continues to be a gathering spot for youngsters ages 7-18, a role it has filled since 1955. With a total operating budget of just over $37,000, United Way continues to be its primary means of support.

—Snyder Child Day Care Center: During the year, the parents of 131 children gained affordable day care through the center, which bases its rates on ability to pay. Each month, an average of 57 were served while 20 more had their names placed on the waiting list. Those served included 58 white youngsters, 41 Hispanic, 29 blacks and 3 East Indians.

—Noah Project: The incidence of family violence is a growing trend in our society. In spite of this need, the local shelter is faced with cutbacks in both state and federal funding. This past year, 305 "hotline" calls were answered, 51 adult females were offered a temporary home and 109 children were sheltered.

—West Texas Girl Scout Council: The Scurry County involvement included 166 girls and 48 adult leaders during 1988.

—Buffalo Trail Council of Boy Scouts: For the year just ended, the council's Boy Scouting activity involved 181 youth. In Snyder, there is one Boy Scout troop, six Cub Scout packs and four units of the new Tiger Cubs.

—Oil Patch Foster Parents: This group of foster parents asks for United Way funds, mainly to help with the purchase of Christmas gifts and to buy needed clothing items for the children. An average of 25 are under care.

—Red Cross: In addition to its nationwide programs, CPR-first aid and swimming classes are offered here.

—Salvation Army: The individual with no where else to turn can receive one-time, emergency help from local Salvation Army volunteers.

Greg Crawford ...for county judge

Greg Crawford has announced his candidacy for election to the office of county judge and will run on the Republican ticket.

Crawford is the owner of Texas Real Estate & Appraisal, which has been operating from Scurry County for the past 11 years. He is certified by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development, registered by the state of Texas, licensed by the Texas Real Estate Commission and designated Master Senior Appraiser by the National Association of Master Appraisers.

Crawford is a native of the county, and a graduate of Snyder High School and Western Texas College. He and his wife, Sandra, are members of the First Presbyterian Church. They have three children—Jacob, Seth and Lacey.

Crawford noted he has actively pursued education and experience to enhance his qualifications as a businessman. He said he was motivated to run for county judge because, "I believe that an elected official should be accountable to the public for personal as well as public decisions. I am willing to accept this responsibility of public trust and know that I am the best man for the job. I want to be your county judge."

Jack K. Greene Sr. ...for pct. 4 commissioner

Jack K. Greene Sr. has announced his candidacy as a Democrat for precinct 4 county commissioner.

Hermleigh native Jerry Gannaway has also declared his intentions to run for the position. The office is currently held by Ted Billingsley, who has not formerly indicated if he will seek the post again.

Greene, owner and operator of Jack's Roadboring & Pipeline Construction Co. for the past 30 years, is a native of Snyder. He attended Snyder High School before spending two years in the Navy near the end of World War II.

Upon returning from the service, Greene worked in the production department of Montex Drilling Co. for three years. He was then employed by Mobil Oil at the Sacroc unit here.

In 1958 he went into business for himself, forming Jack's Roadboring.

"I believe in a progressive Scurry County," Greene said. "I feel like my experience through my business in the construction industry will help me to serve the community better."

"One of the things that concerns me is a lack of cooperation between the precincts," he added. "We need more cooperation to survive the depressed economy. I believe we have to restructure our business so that we can live within our means. We have to have cooperation in curbing our expenditures to correspond with what the people of this county can afford."

Greene is the current president of the Snyder Wheels Club.

He and his wife, Bettie Lee, have four children — Jack K. Greene Jr., Larry Greene and Jerry Don Greene, who are employed at Jack's Roadboring, and Karen Herrley, of Paris, Texas.

Communists appear headed for minority

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — New Premier Marian Calfa says half of the new government he will propose may include people with no ties to the Communist Party, making the ruling Communists a minority for the first time in four decades.

Calfa's announcement, in a nationally televised address, was a huge concession to opposition leaders who have set a Sunday deadline for the leadership to name a new government that satisfies their demands.

Opposition leaders held their first formal talks Friday with the Communists and four other legal political parties and planned to continue the pivotal discussions today.

The opposition says it will call a nationwide strike on Monday unless a new government is formed that breaks the Communist grip on power. Pro-democracy activists are demanding an interim government that will set free elections for next year and pave the way for a parliamentary democracy.

Calfa, the Communist chosen to form a compromise government after Premier Ladislav Adamec resigned in frustration on Thursday, said on national television that "roughly one half of the new government could be composed of experts with no political affiliation."

The other half of the Cabinet seats would go to the Communists and members of the four other political parties, according to government spokesman Marcel Jansen.

A statement issued early today by the main opposition group, Civic Forum, said Friday's talks brought together "representatives of all the decisive political forces" and that they parted "united in the hope" they could help Calfa form a government to be sworn in Sunday.

"This should be a government of national understanding," the statement said.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA

Recently, after hundreds of thousands of Czechs took to the streets of the capital city of Prague demanding reform, the ruling Communist Party Politburo and Secretariat were forced out. Now little-known reformer Karel Urbanek has replaced hard-liner Milos Jakes as party leader.

The Czechoslovak state came into existence with dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian empire after World War I. In 1939 it was seized by Nazi Germany, then liberated in May 1945 by the Soviet Red Army and U.S. forces. In 1948 all non-Communist ministers resigned, and the Communists took firm control.

In 1968, a reform movement led by Alexander Dubcek was crushed by a Soviet-led invasion of Warsaw Pact forces. Tens of thousands of reformers were forced out of the Communist Party in a violent purge as hard-liners took control of all major government posts.

In 1987, Politburo member Milos Jakes — who led the purge — took over as party leader, vowing to resist perestroika. On Nov. 17, police used violence to break up a major demonstration in Prague. However, it soon became apparent that Jakes had gone too far and the demonstrations were turning into a popular uprising. Within 72 hours the Communist Party ousted Jakes in an attempt to insure it would have the major voice in any reform government.

Now the newly appointed Communist premier, Ladislav Adamec, has opened unprecedented talks with leaders of opposition groups, which, until only a few weeks ago, were considered illegal organizations.

President Bush hits campaign trail for GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is back in the snowy capital today after spending two days on the campaign trail in a three-state swing to drum up support for Republican Senate candidates and reverse GOP political fortunes.

Bush stumped Friday for Rep. Tom Tauke in Des Moines, the last stop in two days of appearances that included fundraising events for Senate candidates Hank Brown in Colorado and Phil Gramm in Texas.

Iowa Republicans hoped Bush's appearance would give Tauke an early boost in his underdog bid to unseat first-term Democratic Sen. Thomas Harkin.

Bush canceled plans to spend the weekend at the Camp David presidential retreat in the Maryland countryside when a snowstorm swept the region Friday. He opted to stay at the White House instead.

NFL roundup... Cleveland's offense 'anemic'

By The Associated Press
Maybe Marty Schottenheimer was right all along. When the Cleveland Browns scored only 304 points, lowest total for any NFL playoff team last season, owner Art Modell decided the problem was Schottenheimer's insistence that he run the offense by himself. That would not work for the Browns, Modell decided, and by the way, neither would Schottenheimer.

Cleveland's coaching staff was overhauled, with Bud Carson hired as head man and three offensive specialists brought in as aides, while Schottenheimer shuffled off to Kansas City. The plan seemed to work early, as the Browns scored 89 points in their first two games. Lately, though, the attack has turned anemic, with Cleveland managing only 20 points in the last three games, an average of less than a touchdown per game, and the lowest three-game total in the team's 44-year history.

The Browns remain in the thick of the AFC Central race, though, a half-game behind first-place Houston, and a half-game in front of Cincinnati. Sunday, Cleveland tries to break out of its offensive coma against the Colts at Indianapolis. Schottenheimer, meanwhile, has Kansas City thinking playoffs with two wins and a tie in its last three games. In other games Sunday, Dallas plays at Philadelphia in the Bounty Bowl, Atlanta is at Minnesota, Detroit at Chicago, New Orleans at Buffalo, Pittsburgh at the New York Jets, San Diego at Washington, Seattle at Cincinnati, Tampa Bay at Houston, the New York Giants at Denver, Phoenix at the Los Angeles Raiders and New England at Miami. San Francisco plays the Rams at Los Angeles Monday night.

Groveton wins again

Corrigan-Camden, Panhandle eliminated

By The Associated Press
Forget about knocking off Groveton in its steamroller journey toward the Class 2A state football championship, nobody seems able to even slow the Indians down. Behind the 255 yards and three touchdowns of Rodney Thomas, the leading rusher in Class 2A, Groveton defeated defending state champion Corrigan-Camden 35-0 Friday night for the Region III championship. Groveton improved its record to 14-0, while Corrigan-Camden finished the season at 12-2, with both losses coming by lopsided margins to Groveton. The Indians' foe in the 2A semifinals is Schulenburg, which ran its record to 13-1 by beating Manor, 48-20, Friday night. Meeting in the other semifinal will be two other 14-0 teams — West Texas High and Lorena. West Texas High eliminated Panhandle, 14-7, and Lorena ousted McGregor, 17-13. In other high school playoff action Friday night, Gladewater beat Daingerfield 40-6 and Need-ville beat Sweeny 28-13 in Class 3A; Sudan beat Wheeler 21-9, Coolidge beat Frost 40-7 and Thorndale beat Bartlett 21-7 in 1A; and Jayton avenged its only loss of the year by thrashing previously unbeaten Guthrie 53-8 in a six-man football semifinal game. Sudan fought back from an early 3-0 deficit to ring up its 14th straight victory of the season, in a game played in 38-degree temperatures. Hornets quarterback Kyle Maxfield threw touchdown passes of 10 and 13 yards to fullback Jarod Bellar, then set up the clinching TD with a 28-yard pass to Bellar to the Wheeler 1. Sudan's lead was an uncomfortable 14-9 until Maxfield's 1-yard run for the score. All quarterfinal games in Class 5A and 4A were scheduled for Saturday. Thomas had scoring runs of 28, 46 and two yards, scoring in each of the last three quarters. Thomas now has 2,544 rushing yards on 241 carries for a 10.5 average. Quarterback Gerald Farley engineered the Indians' potent ground attack for 411 yards total offense — all but 18 of them on the veer option. Farley had 63 yards on seven carries, including 51 on a second quarter touchdown run on which he came to a complete stop, faked to Thomas and cut upfield untouched. Thomas had runs of 38 and 36 yards that set up Allen Robins' 16-yard touchdown run on Groveton's opening 88-yard touchdown drive that required only four plays. Groveton held Corrigan-Camden to 131 yards total offense. The Indians kept in check highly touted running backs Undra Holman and Kevin Morris. Morris had 2,198 yards and Holman 1,643 yards coming in. But Holman was held to 76 yards on 22 carries, while Morris, playing with a sore leg, started at defensive safety and didn't carry the ball until late in the second half. He had eight carries for a negative six yards. The Indians have averaged 47.5 points and 405 yards rushing in their 14 victories. Groveton has been held under 30 points only once — a 22-14 victory over Grapeland.

Area natives coach arena football club

By PHIL RIDDLE
SDN Sports Editor
A pair of Snyder natives have made their mark in the relatively new Arena Football League as coaches of the Detroit Drive. Jerry Trice and Tim Marcum, former Snyder residents, comprise the staff of coaches for the motor-city team.

Detroit and the Chicago Bruisers, the top two teams in the three year-old, six-team league, just finished a European stint in which the Drive powered over Chicago, 41-13, in Paris and 43-14 in London in front of crowds numbering almost 17,000.

Arena football is played by the same basic rules as outdoor football with a few modifications.

The Arenaball field of play is just 50 yards long and the kick-off comes from the goal line of the kicking team.

Eight players are on the gridiron per team as opposed to the 11 man-teams in the "normal" version of the game.

Only the quarterback, kicker and one defensive specialist may come out of the game, specializing in just offense or defense, and the rosters are limited to 17 players.

Nets behind the end zone keep the football in play on high passes and errant kicks and no punts are allowed.

The Arena Football regular season schedule runs from July through August with the play-offs following.

Trice, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Trice of Snyder, is a former coach at Ranger Junior College.

He received his bachelor's degree in physical education at McMurry College in Abilene and his master's from Texas Tech. He is the golf instructor at San Antonio Jay High School.

His coaching career began at Ranger High School and took him to Brownfield, Lubbock Dunbar, San Antonio MacArthur and Ranger Junior College.

Trice and his wife Debby, who accompanied him on the trip to Europe, reside in San Antonio. Marcum coached at Ranger Junior College, also, after 10 years as a high school football and track coach in various Texas schools.

From Ranger he was hired to coach the defensive secondary at Rice University where he stayed four years.

His next job was with the San Antonio Gunslingers of the now-defunct United States Football League where he coached the linebackers before becoming the club's defensive co-ordinator in 1985.

Marcum now lives full-time in Michigan where he also publishes Michigan Football, a pre-season publication dedicated to high school and collegiate football in that state.

Matadors nip Snyder

By PHIL RIDDLE

SDN Sports Editor

The Tigers of Snyder High School lost a close first round contest in the Lamesa basketball tournament to Lubbock Estacado Friday night.

The 64-62 final score provided fans with a white-knuckle finish as the Tigers, behind by two, stole the ball and headed downcourt.

The inbound pass from under the Matadors' bucket was tipped back out of bounds by EHS and the Tigers moved to halfcourt.

The ball was put in play with just two seconds left but Snyder couldn't make the shot fall.

"We had too many turnovers," said Tigers cage coach Larry Scott.

"We turned the ball over 25 times and that kept the ball out of our hands for scoring. They had 26 field goals to our 21 because we kept giving them the ball," he said.

The two squads fought to a 17-17 tie at the end of a quarter and the lead was just two, 35-33 in favor of Estacado at the half.

The Mats outscored SHS by four, 18-14, in the third period but the Tigers came back and won the fourth stanza 15-11.

Tracy Braziel was the high scorer for Snyder pulling down 24 points on eight baskets from the floor and a seven of 11 performance from the free-throw line.

Lee Hamilton also finished the game in double figures pouring in 14 points on five hoops and three of six free shots.

The Tigers shot a combined 17-25 from the line for a .680 percentage.

Snyder was to face Big Spring at 11 a.m. Saturday. A win in that tilt would have put them in the consolation game at 4:30 p.m. A loss would have sent the Tigers home.

The Snyder junior varsity and freshmen boys were to have played in Big Spring's tournament this weekend but the event was cancelled because of the Steers' post-season football participation.

Coach holds night workout after 'pitiful' victory Friday

By The Associated Press

Like many other schools, LSU held a late-night practice.

Only this one wasn't the opening workout but rather five games into the season.

Coach Dale Brown was so upset by the ninth-ranked Tigers' 82-57 victory over Division II Los Angeles State on Friday night that he ordered a postgame workout in a basement gym at LSU's Pete Maravich Assembly Center.

Brown even skipped the postgame news conference.

"Coach Brown asked me to tell you he thought it was a pitiful exhibition," assistant coach Johnny Jones told newsmen. "Our guys did not get up for this team and we gave a very sluggish effort. We did not execute offensively and we didn't stop anybody on defense."

In other games involving Top 25 teams, it was No. 16 Memphis State 78, No. 24 Oregon State 72; No. 7 Illinois 93, Indiana State 59 and No. 14 Indiana 96, South Alabama 67.

Sophomore 7-footer Stanley Roberts had 24 points and 18 rebounds for LSU and freshman Shaquille O'Neal, another 7-footer, had 22 points and 11 rebounds. But All-American sophomore guard Chris Jackson was held to a career-low 11 points, 20 below his average.

Jackson was 4-of-13 in field goal attempts, 1-for-7 from 3-

'89 winter baseball meetings break up after week's deals

NEW YORK (AP) — Several major league teams straggled out of the winter meetings with visions of free agents and trades still dancing in their heads.

There wasn't any dealing in Nashville, Tenn., on Friday, just a few more talks before heading home for the holidays.

Meanwhile, free agent infielder Tom Brookens left the New York Yankees to sign with the Cleveland Indians, and Oakland designated hitter Ken Phelps, San Francisco catcher Terry Kennedy and Philadelphia pitcher Ken Howell all re-signed.

Before Christmas, big-ticket free agents Robin Yount and Mark Davis are expected to decide where they will play in 1990. Both are expected to join Joe Carter, Kirby Puckett and Mark Langston in the $3 million-a-year club. The Yankees were one of the last teams out of Nashville, and in hot pursuit of Davis.

Yount has narrowed his choice between Milwaukee and California, although a few other teams have offers on the table, too.

Milwaukee owner Bud Selig said Friday he's still optimistic the team can sign Yount, the American League MVP. Selig said he talked briefly on Friday with Larry Yount, Yount's brother and agent.

"We had a good constructive conversation and we'll talk again over the weekend or early next week," said Selig, who negotiates with the Younts directly.

"All I can say is we have an ongoing dialogue."

The California Angels, Los Angeles Dodgers and Chicago Cubs are reportedly among several other teams interested in signing Yount. The Brewers have reportedly offered a three-year, $9.3 million contract.

"If you're going to be in the business, you have to be optimistic or you wouldn't make it day-to-day. Time will tell. I've made no predictions and I will make none today," Selig told a Milwaukee TV station.

Selig said there was no connection between his recently revealed plan to sell his automobile dealership and the escalating salaries that baseball players are now commanding from owners. But he admitted that the events of the past two weeks, when huge salaries have run rampant, have been "dismaying."

The Angels, for instance, signed Langston to a five-year, $16 million contract. During the meetings, nearly $74 million was handed out to free agents.

"We are headed for payrolls in baseball that are going to be unbelievable," Selig said.

If the Angels sign Yount, the New York Mets would be interested in acquiring center fielder Devon White.

Davis, who won the National League Cy Young Award with 44 saves for San Diego, also wants in the area of $3 million a year and is talking to the Yankees, Philadelphia Phillies and Angels.

The Padres signed reliever Craig Lefferts for $5.35 million on Thursday and told him they were out of the running for Davis.

In addition to Yount and Davis, Hubie Brooks is still available on the free-agent market. Los Angeles and Detroit are chasing Brooks.

Brookens, 36, spent nine years with the Detroit Tigers and went to the Yankees on March 23 in exchange for Charles Hudson. He has played third base, shortstop, second base and, on some occasions, in the outfield.

WTC rodeo coach featured in article

Bob Doty, Western Texas College rodeo coach, is the subject of a feature story in the December issue of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association (NIRA) News.

Doty was elected national faculty president of the NIRA this year and is serving his fourth consecutive year as faculty director for the Southwest Region of the NIRA.

Molly McAuliffe, a senior student at Montana State University, is the NIRA national student president.

Half the members of the organization's governing board are students at half are faculty.

Doty has been in charge of the WTC rodeo team since 1979.

The men's team has qualified for the College National Finals Rodeo every year since 1980.

The women's team has qualified twice.

The Western Texas men won the national championship in 1986.

At the end of the 1989 fall season the men stand in first place in the Southwest Region while the women hold down second place.

The men are ranked fifth nationally and the women are eighth.

"You have to be a tough competitor to win," the article quotes Doty. "I don't think you have to be smarter, you just have to work harder."

He believes that giving rodeo scholarships has helped emphasize getting a quality education while rodeoing, the article states.

He cites the rising cost of insurance as a major problem.

In addition to his work with the rodeo teams, Doty teaches agriculture courses at the college.

He is a graduate of Abilene Christian University and received his master's degree from Sam Houston State University.

Texas senators will return Monday to an empty House

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Senate will return Monday to an empty House.

After a day of chaos, during which lawmakers failed again to break a workers' compensation deadlock, the House and Senate couldn't even agree Friday night whether to continue the special session that wasn't scheduled to end until Wednesday.

Gov. Bill Clements, who called the second special session on workers' comp, blamed the stalemate on trial lawyers who oppose a House-approved, business-backed bill. "Texans deserve better," he said.

Here is a rundown of the events that left the Legislature in limbo:

— The House adopted a workers' comp plan Thursday, then adjourned Friday. That left an unamendable workers' comp bill in the Senate's lap.

— The Senate rejected the House plan, 17-14, and passed a resolution to send it back to a conference committee for further negotiations.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said he will call his members back into session only if 17 senators pledge to support a plan that House negotiators OK.

The situation was so bleak, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said, that the Texas workers' comp system may have to collapse before lawmakers can find a solution.

"I think we're very close to that actually," he said.

The state's largest worker's comp insurer recently said it would no longer provide such insurance.

The Legislature has been deadlocked since January over fixing the system.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, was visibly frustrated Friday and said he wasn't sure "whether or not we need to continue returning to Austin to beat our heads into the side of this granite wall."

The battle has pitted business groups against trial lawyers, who represent injured workers and labor organizations.

Business lobbyists, Clements, Hobby and Lewis all support the House plan.

But critics in the Senate say the plan would reduce benefits to most injured workers and place employees at a disadvantage when going to court in disputed claims. In addition, they say business lobbyists have misled the interests they represent, selling a plan that won't reduce insurance premiums.

"The business people of Texas need to understand that they have lost millions of dollars because of the political strategy of some hired lobbyists," Parker said.

But state Rep. Richard Smith, the House's comp leader, said the problem would have been fair to workers and employers.

"The Senate has said they want to keep the system we got and it's a bicameral body and there's not anything we can do. Until they're ready to change ... we're not going to get anything," he said.

Workers' comp was originally devised as a no-fault insurance system in which the worker would receive benefits for on-the-job injuries, and the employer would be protected from further legal action.

But a $450,000 study showed the $3 billion dollar per year system had become an entitlement program for attorneys and doctors.

Proposal said to soften stance

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Large dairy farms lacking waste management permits would be given an indefinite grace period under a proposal that would soften the Texas Water Commission's stance on dairy polluters.

The three-member commission, which in September recommended fines totaling nearly $500,000 against nine dairy farms in violation of pollution laws, is scheduled to review the staff proposal Tuesday.

The proposal would not relax the state's anti-pollution dairy regulations, but would soften its hard-line stance toward dairies which begin operating without the state's permission.

It would require dairy operators to register with the regulatory agency within a few weeks after start-up, and keep animal waste and wastewater from running off their property.

Waste management permits are issued after operators demonstrate that they can adequately contain waste.

The plan would allow dairies without state permits to continue operating without the risk of heavy fines during the long process of obtaining a permit.

Dairy and agriculture officials endorsed the plan Friday.

"I think it would be great to allow them some time," said Erath County extension agent Joe Pope of Stephenville.

The agency has targeted dairy pollution in Erath County, the state's top milk producer, about 60 miles southwest of Fort Worth.

The leader of an Erath County citizens group formed this year to fight dairy pollution, however, said he saw the proposal as a concession to the dairy industry.

Financial Focus

Stock market forecasting is a hazardous occupation, but that's what money managers are paid to do.

Ron Clark, a money manager with Putnam Fund Distributors Inc., one of the oldest and largest mutual-fund management companies, envisions a Dow Jones Average of 5000 in five years. The Dow consists of 30 of the largest, most widely traded blue-chip companies.

In a recent interview with Mutual Fund News Service, Clark explained his optimism with a simple earnings projection of Dow Jones Industrial companies. Dow earnings are currently about $240 per share. If they follow the historical growth average of 7 percent a year, Dow earnings will reach roughly $335 per share by 1994.

The current price/earnings ratio of the Dow is about 12. If, however, the ratio rose to only 15, the midlevel of the postwar period, the Dow would reach 5000, about double today's level.

"So, what sounds far-fetched is, in fact, quite reasonable," says Clark. "And if it happens, investors who do as well as the Dow would double their money in five years."

Clark is not alone in his enthusiasm. Jeffery Shames, head of equity investing for Massachusetts Financial Services, sees the Dow's earnings at $270 per share by 1999 even after allowing for a substantial correction of future-earnings estimates. At a 12 price/earnings ratio, the index would be 3200. These estimates allow for considerable slowing down in the economy.

Keep in mind that these money managers are talking about earnings growth in the Dow Jones Industrial Averages. Mutual Fund News Service reports that Shames' growth estimates for selected sectors outside the Dow to be anywhere from 15 percent to 25 percent annually. This suggests that for investors willing to assume greater risks, there is the possibility of some major gains in the next few years.

Since the 1987 crash, however, there has been some skepticism over the market as a whole. It is not unreasonable to assume that the bullish outlook of these two money managers will be questioned by more cautious investors.

Those who believe in company earnings and their effect on the stock market, however, will find a lot of confidence here. In the last 25 years, prices as a whole have quadrupled. "And when you remember that since 1965 the Dow Jones average has only gone up from 1000 to 2500," says Clark, "it's clear that stocks are one of the few cheap items left."

Veterans Affairs to move office

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Affairs Department, in an attempt to consolidate its seven regional medical offices nationwide into four, plans to close a center in Dallas and create a Sunbelt headquarters in Jackson, Miss., officials said Friday.

Several other cities would also be affected by the restructuring — which requires congressional approval, officials said.

VA spokesman Don Smith said regional medical offices would also be closed in Albany, N.Y., Durham, N.C., Gainesville, Fla., and St. Louis.

Ann Arbor, Mich., and San Francisco would keep their medical center headquarters, with Ann Arbor serving the Midwest and San Francisco the West, while another new center would be established in Baltimore to serve the Northeast, Smith said.

Such offices on the regional level serve as a layer of administration between the VA's local and district facilities and its Washington headquarters.

Smith said Veterans Secretary

Edward J. Derwinski hopes to have the plan in place by May 1990. Derwinski also wants to close the VA's 27 district medical offices around in the country, including one in Waco.

While Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, a Mississippi Democrat who heads the House Veterans Affairs Committee, called the reorganization a smart move, others on Capitol Hill were more skeptical.

A spokesman for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said the Texas Democrat would want "much stronger assurances than he's gotten that this will not make it harder for Texas veterans to receive the medical care they earned in service to their country."

Rep. John Bryant, a Dallas Democrat, said it makes no sense to move the southern regional office from Dallas, with its access to the rest of the country through Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, to Jackson. He said the plan would not reduce costs as the total number of employees would remain the same.

Slated December 19...

Reindeer Romp time for fun draws near

The second annual Reindeer Romp, which last December saw some 75 persons participate, is planned for Tuesday, Dec. 19. All joggers and walkers are invited to attend.

Those participating will meet at 6:30 p.m. on Dec. 19 at the pavilion in Towle Park. Those who wish may bring along toys and/or canned goods to be given to the Goodfellows and Toys for Tots projects. A sleigh has been placed at West Texas State Bank already for the collection of these items as well.

The route for walkers will be about two miles and the jogging route will be about five miles. The routes will be announced later. Anyone who does not wish to cover the entire distance may drop out at any time. Refreshments will be served at the end of the romp.

In the event of bad weather, the romp will be re-scheduled for Dec. 21.

The romp is an informal affair, its promoters emphasize, designed to give people the opportunity to walk or jog with a group and see some of the holiday decorations in residential areas. There is no charge to enter but those taking part are encouraged to wear festive attire and are urged to carry flashlights for safety's sake. Bicycles and unsupervised children will not be permitted for this outing.

The walking or jogging is also good exercise, and getting out with a group makes exercising more fun, Lee Burke, one of the romp's originators, said.

Bekky Butler, who is helping to organize the romp, added that this activity was created to promote health and physical fitness which many may regard as a special Christmas gift to family and friends.

For more information call Burke at Western Texas College, Leslie or Bekky Butler, or Wanda Hudgins.

Comedian speaks out 1 more time

NEW YORK (AP) — A politician has unleashed comedian Jackie Mason again, despite the fallout Mason caused during the New York mayoral race.

Mason met with Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., in a very public lunch Friday that Mason said was aimed at creating a higher profile for Specter, though his reelection campaign isn't until 1992.

Specter said he and Mason had met last year in Washington for lunch — "I still have the receipt in my pocket," the senator cracked — and they have stayed in touch since then.

Mutinious Filipino soldiers surrender

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Mutinous soldiers holding a southern air base surrendered today, ending the sixth and bloodiest attempt to topple President Corazon Aquino.

Mrs. Aquino announced the surrender of about 400 troops holding the Mactan Air Base at Cebu City, 350 miles south of Manila. It was the last stronghold of rebels who on Dec. 1 launched their coup attempt.

"Mactan airport in Cebu is now back to normal operations after the rebel group surrendered to government troops ... this morning," Mrs. Aquino said in a statement.

"This is good news for our people who have overwhelmingly demonstrated their abhorrence for the violence espoused by the mutineers," she said, referring Friday to a demonstration in Manila in support of her government.

Some of the rebel soldiers who had held the base began leaving for Mindanao island, where they were mutineers based.

The rest of the soldiers who had occupied Mactan marched back to their barracks inside the air base on Cebu island, witnesses said. Loyal forces began clearing the base of booby traps that had been placed by the mutinous soldiers.

There were no details of the surrender terms, but Brig. Gen. Renato Palma, government regional military chief, said he did not want to charge the mutinous troops.

"Here in Mactan, not a single shot was fired, so they have not caused anything ... that will call for serious repercussion," Palma told reporters. "I think that is a very good mitigating circumstance. In other words, we did not fight."

Participants in past coups usually received little or no punishment, and in one instance were left off with only 30 push-ups.

At least 83 people were killed and more than 580 wounded in the coup attempt. It was the most serious effort yet to oust Mrs. Aquino, who was swept into office in February 1986 by a "people power" revolution that forced Ferdinand E. Marcos into exile after 20 years in power.

East Germans elect Gysi as new leader

EAST BERLIN (AP) — East Germany's Communists gave in to the forces of reform Saturday and elected Gregor Gysi, a lawyer for the pro-democracy opposition, as their new leader.

After his nomination, Gysi called for "a full break with failed Stalinism."

At a historic party congress, the Communists also voted to change the party's name but to retain the entity that has ruled East Germany for four decades.

Party spokeswoman Brigitte Zimmermann, briefing reporters on the closed session of the emergency congress, said earlier that Gysi was the only candidate to become the party's third leader in less than two months. His election was announced later by the official news agency ADN.

In a statement, the party congress also apologized to the East German people because the former leadership "has led our country into this crisis threatening its existence."

The statement said the party wants to move to a democratic socialism "beyond Stalinist pseudo-socialism and the rule of profits," the official news agency ADN reported.

ADN said all delegates except one voted for the communique, and six abstained.

Gysi, 41, a bespectacled, blunt-talking intellectual, has backed sweeping political and economic reforms and has acted as lawyer for the opposition group New Forum. He was a member of the interim party leadership and is heading a committee investigating corruption under the ousted leadership.

"We need a full break with failed Stalinism," Gysi told party delegates Friday night. He said past leaders had enjoyed "frightening" privileges while the country plunged into a deep political and economic crisis.

The Communists have lost much of their control over society in recent weeks and have granted historic concessions to the opposition, including opening the Berlin Wall and other borders, in a desperate effort to remain in power.

The remarkable changes mirror developments in Czechoslovakia, where Communists are poised to name the first government dominated by non-Communists. These reforms follow similar changes in Poland and Hungary, which took up Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev's call to loosen restrictions and make economic reforms.

Gysi, in his address to the congress, urged "free competition" in society. He called for a younger, less bureaucratic leadership oriented toward "grass-roots democracy" and building a "new democratic socialist party."

a.m. Monday in the Willow Park Inn parking lot east of town by a county sheriff's deputy who said Colburn was believed to have taken Brown's car and given it to the other defendants.

The four were traveling in two cars, and one of them had broken down on 84 near the convenience store, where it was abandoned, the officer said.

Other pleas entered before District Judge Gene L. Dulaney included one in connection with a Nov. 13 UUMV offense by Don R. Constancio, 18, of 1600 27th St., who was assessed a five-year probated sentence and a $500 fine.

The two-year probated term of 25-year-old Rudy O. Martinez of 1000 13th St. for a felony DWI offense was revoked and he was ordered to serve 210 days in the county because he had been arrested for DWI again on Oct. 15, according to court records.

Johnny L. Alvarez, 37, of 2011 11th St. pleaded guilty to DWI, having been arrested on Sept. 24, and was given two years' probation and a $750 fine.

"We are faced with the task of mounting an election campaign that will be difficult and which we have not known before," he said. "We should start with a new party without any signs of dissolution. We should not get demoralized."

The Communists already have agreed with the opposition on May 6 as a possible date for the country's first free elections.

Gysi said that the capitalist system in Western societies was not "something one cannot learn from."

He said the crisis in East Germany could only be solved if the country found a "third way, beyond Stalinist socialism and the power of transnational monopolies."

He called the idea of German reunification, backed by many anti-government demonstrators and the West German govern-

Accidents are minor

Police investigated two minor accidents Friday, the first at 4:30 p.m. in the 3000 Block of El Paso Ave., where a brick mailbox structure was hit by a car.

A 1977 Ford LTD driven by Raymond A. Evans of 3105 38th Place heavily damaged a mailbox holder owned by Dan Howell of 3007 El Paso, an officer said.

A 1988 Ford F-150 pickup driven by Robert Orna of 306 32nd St. was in collision with a 1987 Chevrolet S-10 pickup driven by Justin C. Pinkerton of 708 25th St. at 9:20 p.m. in the Sonic Drive in parking lot off College Ave.

residence.

In affirming the results of the trial, which was presided over by District Judge Gene Dulaney, the appellate court said the trial court correctly refused to allow Griffin to testify about allegedly inconsistent statements he had made to a woman because the proper groundwork had not been laid for such testimony.

Locknane's appeal said the jury should not have been instructed on his criminal responsibility for the conduct of others because conspiracy had not been alleged in the indictment.

However, the Eastland court's opinion, written by Justice Bob Dickenson, said a jury may be charged concerning the law on parties and conspiracy even through conspiracy is not alleged in the indictment.

The United States and Canada signed a treaty in 1932 to develop the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Astro-Graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Dec. 10, 1989

Generally speaking the year ahead should be a much happier and fulfilling one for you than this past year. Good things could happen for you in several key areas.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're aware of the fact you've been neglecting certain responsibilities and this has not gone unnoticed by someone else. You'd better do what's expected of you before you're called to task. Sagittarius, treat yourself to a birthday gift. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions for the year ahead by mailing $1.25 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today's social activities should be fun, but there are indications you might take them a little too seriously. Be nice to everyone, even if you don't want to be there.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Comparing your status and resources against those of your peers is not a good game for you to play today. It could cause you to dislike someone because of what this person has.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Kidding others may seem like an innocent lark to you today, but be careful at whom you aim your barbs. One of your targets might take your joshing seriously.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Financial matters are rather "iffy" today. However, it looks like you'll do OK unless you allow someone erratic to influence your thinking.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Indecisiveness could be your undoing today, so don't prolong important decisions. If you do, you may have to make a snap judgment and it might not turn out too well.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today you might want to do a lot for others and end up frustrating yourself because you can't accomplish it all. Take pride in the fact that you tried to help.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) The demands of a self-serving friend could annoy you more than usual today. Normally you can tolerate or, at least, cope, but not today.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Should you get involved in something competitive today, don't do any coasting. If you relax for even a minute, the competition will slip past you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Subdue inclinations today to contradict others just for the heck of it. Companies won't appreciate your company if they think you're acting a bit too superior.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Joint ventures could be problematical today, especially if you're involved in an arrangement where the greater portion of the liability falls on you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your mate won't want you making all the decisions today, nor will you want decisions made for you. For the sake of harmony, it's best both parties respect the other's wishes.

Dec. 11, 1989

Constructive developments could be in the offing in the year ahead that might enable you to open a second avenue of income. There's a chance it may eventually equal your present source.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Slant your judgment today toward methods that were previously successful, especially if you have to make an important decision where the alternatives appear to be of equal value. # Scurry County Folks

By Shirley A. Gorman

Pat Reynolds does not think of herself as handicapped, nor does she want anyone else to, either. In spite of wearing a leg brace, a lasting reminder that polio once threatened not only her mobility but her life as well, she can do just about anything she wants to — except maybe snow ski, run, or climb trees.

Today, married and the mother of two grown sons, she serves as the secretary for the First United Methodist Church, a position which she has held for the past four years. She and her family moved here from Cross Plains. Charles Reynolds is a Scurry County deputy, and sons, Daman and Tommy, are 22 and 19, respectively.

Reynolds grew up in Fort Worth during the time of the big polio scare which swept the country. Reynolds was diagnosed with all three types of polio which is an acute illness caused by a poliovirus infection. She said doctors did not expect her to live because she also had bulbar polio (considered fatal) which is an infection of the brain stem which causes weakness of the muscles required for swallowing, talking, and facial expressions. (Editor's Note: See sidebar on page 2B.)

Neither the then three-year-old nor her family had any indication of the ordeal to come. Reynolds had been healthy and active all of her life and climbing, especially trees, was one of her specialties.

But that all came to an abrupt end when she contracted polio. Neither she nor her family had had any warning. Suddenly, the young Reynolds was stricken and neither her's nor her family's lives would ever be the same again. One day in 1949 an aunt took her to town and when Reynolds complained that her legs hurt her aunt carried her for the rest of the day.

A visit to a doctor proved futile at first because she said her parents were told that she only had a cold and should take baby aspirin.

However, the next morning Reynolds said she was unable to walk at all so her parents took her to the hospital where they were given the grim diagnosis that their only daughter was not expected to live, much less walk again.

Reynolds attributes her recovery to her "praying family," a gentle father who practied "tough love" when it was so desperately needed; and most of all to a benevolent God who has always protected her.

One of Reynolds' grandmothers, who is now bedridden, then worked in the cafeteria for the Fort Worth School system, and when she heard the news, Reynolds said she left her job and went into the girls restroom where she prayed for hours.

"Everyone knew what she was doing and no one went into the restroom during that whole time," Reynolds said.

She said she remembers being wrapped in hot cloths and being placed in a Drinker Respirator or "iron lung" where she stayed for months before she was able to use a wheelchair. Sister Kenny's treatment, the application of hot, moist packs to the affected muscles, was the standard treatment when Reynolds was stricken.

It is hard for Reynolds to remember those early months since she was so young, but she said she stayed in the "iron lung" for about six months and for the first few weeks she was too paralyzed to do anything but only open and close her eyes.

She does have a fond memory though of spending Christmas at the hospital and being visited by Santa Claus, Roy Rogers, Dale Evans, and Gene Autry who gave her and the other sick children in the hospital $5 apiece.

Several months later her mobility was somewhat restored when doctors covered her body with braces, from her neck to her legs, placed her on crutches and sent her home.

"My father played a very big role in what I am today," Reynolds said. "The doctors told him that he could keep me an invalid or help me reach my potential." He chose the latter and he had to develop a "tough love" philosophy in order to make it work, but it was worth it because Reynolds said that she grew up never believing for one moment that she was handicapped or different in any way from her peers or that she couldn't do anything she set her mind to do. Of course, she realized that running and climbing trees were no longer possible, but just about everything else was.

Reynolds said that never in her life had she needed the determination that her father had always tried to instill in her more than she did when she returned home after long months in the hospital.

The first test for both father and daughter came almost immediately as Reynolds said she was determined that she was going to climb down the steps in her yard.

She fell the first time. "My See SCURRY, Page 2B

NOT HANDICAPPED—Pat Reynolds of Snyder, wife of Scurry County Deputy Charles Reynolds and secretary at First United Methodist Church for the past four years, will be the first to say she is not handicapped even though polio contracted as a child dictates that she must wear a leg brace and cannot participate in active sports. In the photo at right, Reynolds, who is about five years old, is pictured with the braces which she had to wear on both legs at one time. She credits her recovery to prayers, a loving father, and a benevolent God who she said always sustains her through the rough times. (SDN Staff Photo) father was going to help me at first and yet when he saw that I was unhurt he just let me be," she said.

Reynolds pushed the crutches back up the steps, crawled after them and again tried to walk down the steps by herself. But she fell a second time. Again her father just stood by silently, watching her, hurting inside because of what he knew he had to do to help his only daughter.

Reynolds again pushed the crutches back up the steps, crawled to the top and once more tried to walk down. She made it on the third attempt and she said her father came running to her and they shared a tearful reunion as they hugged and kissed.

"I'm glad my father was that way," she said. "I've never forgotten his support during that rough time or the sacrifices he made for me."

Reynolds also remembers getting help from her mother and other family members but it was her father who encouraged her the most and helped her reach her potential.

Reynolds recalls that her father only spanked her twice. Once right after he had had the family car repainted, she said she climbed up on it, braces and all, and walked all over the car scratching the new paint job. She thought it would be fun but she said her dad did not see it that way.

Another time, she said she tried to smoke outside and accidentally caught a tree on fire. He spanked her because he thought she was playing with matches, but she said she never told him the complete truth until she was 23 years old and was expecting her second child.

"My father was a kind, gentle man but when he said 'no' he meant no and that was usually it. He was a strong influence in my life," Reynolds said, adding that she and her husband have raised their sons with the same philosophy.

"Obedience was never optional when I was growing up and that is the way we reared our sons," she said. "Responsibility was instilled in me and a lot was expected of me and that is the philosophy I use with my own sons."

Reynolds described another incident when she was determined to do something that seemed impossible at first. In order to reach the top of a big chest of drawers she said she emptied all the drawers and tried to climb them just like steps, but only succeeded in pulling everything on top of her.

As Reynolds and her four brothers were growing up, she said her father never made any distinction between her and them. "I was expected to do my part and I did and because I was the oldest I 'mothered' my brothers."

Reynolds also said that her brothers never thought of her as handicapped either, until one day the youngest was watching a program on handicapped children and just at that moment Reynolds passed in front of the TV set and she said that is when it dawned on him that she was handicapped.

"I have always felt most of my life that God has placed me in a safe, protective bubble and that is why I survived not only polio and the ensuing paralysis, but a broken home at the age of 11," she said.

After her father remarried, she learned to live with a step-mother who she said also never thought of her as handicapped and sometimes had to stop and remind herself that her step-daughter could not do some household chores.

From the time she turned six,

Reynolds said she began to undergo surgeries on her feet. One even had to have a second operation. In time, the full body braces came off and were replaced with a brace for the right leg and a half brace for the left leg.

By age 8, she only had to wear a brace on her right leg and that is how it remains today.

When polio first struck Reynolds, she said she was so paralyzed that she could not do anything but blink her eyes. She later attended a Fort Worth school for the handicapped, but when the family moved to Houston she said her father decided that it was time that she started to go to regular public schools.

"I was scared at first and didn't want to go, but my dad insisted and I am glad he did. I have always had the ability to just fit right in no matter where I am and that is just what happened," she said.

While in school, she said her peers never thought of her as being handicapped. "They accepted me as I was and they never tried to make me feel different," she said.

She was elected freshman class favorite and in her senior year was included in the final run-off for most popular.

Reynolds remained in public school, finished high school, and attended one year at Howard Payne in Brownwood.

She quit college to raise a family. One of her aunts had been sure that Reynolds would not be able to have children, but she proved them wrong. The only apparent complication was a 26-hour labor with her first child, but the second labor only lasted three hours.

Reynolds was married at 19. She said her father had known her husband-to-be for six years, but she had never met him until she moved back to her hometown.

"We knew each other four months and then we got married," she said. "Everyone was surprised, including his mother, who never thought our marriage would last simply because we had not known each other for very long," she laughed. "But here we are still together after 23 years."

"My dad had known Charles for years and really liked him so he was very pleased when we got married," she added.

Reynolds loves taking care of her home and her job and when she has free time she likes to read.

Polio curtailed in U.S. through vaccination plans

(Editor's Note: The following information was taken from Encyclopedia Americana and Collier's Encyclopedia.)

Polio, also called poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis, is an acute illness caused by poliovirus infection and usually attacks children and young adults. In its severest form, complete or partial muscle paralysis can result because it involves the central nervous system, principally the spinal cord.

Complete bed rest in the pre-paralytic stage is often prescribed. Patients have also been placed in a Drinker Respirator or "iron lung."

Another treatment, named after Sister Kinney, involved applying hot, moist packs to the affected muscles.

Before vaccines were introduced, polio was one of the most feared of the communicable diseases. But with extensive vaccination campaigns which began in the mid 1950s and continued through the 1960s, polio was almost wiped out in modern countries.

The Salk-killed virus vaccine was administered in the U.S. during an intense campaign carried out from 1954-56. The Public Health Service in the U. S. accepted the Sabin Oral Vaccine in 1960.

However, polio still exists in underdeveloped, Third World nations. Future control of the disease will depend mainly upon immunizations being carried out on a global scale and a renewal of vigilance where the vaccine is presently available.

Three types of polioviruses exist and are classified with the family of picornaviruses because of size.

Encyclopedia Americana refers to the types by numbers, 1, 2, and 3. Collier's Encyclopedia divides the polio virus into three main immunological types, Lansing, Leon, and Brunhilde.

Bulbar polio is considered "fatal" because it is an infection of the brain stem and causes weakness of the muscles required for swallowing, talking, and facial expressions.

Rare condor born in San Diego park

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — The world's first captive-bred California condor was born recently at the San Diego Wild Animal Park. It is one of 28 California condors now in existence.

Zookeepers, who plan to release the hatchling into a protected natural habitat later, feed it a diet of mice and raw egg yolks. In an effort to minimize human influence on the young bird, they use a hand puppet made up to look like an adult condor for the feedings.

The condor is part of the vulture family.

One thing he did know: If West originally held the queen and two other clubs, he had thrown a diamond from only two. Declarer cashed dummy's diamond ace and got off lead with the spade queen. West took three spade tricks while South threw the 7-8-Q of diamonds. West then had to lead away from the queen of clubs, and declarer made the last two tricks for his contract.

Declarer wins by a nose

East and West had done what every good partnership should do — they had discussed what third hand should play in defending against no-trump when he cannot play higher than the dummy. Their agreement was that third hand should give count — that is, play low from three or five cards, and play high from a doubleton or a four-card holding. Consequently, when East followed with the two of spades, West knew that East held either three little spades or a singleton. When declarer played a heart at trick two, West won the ace and played back a second spade, knowing there was a good chance that the declarer would have to play his ace. And so it was.

Do you think declarer must now go set? It seems so, but South had a good nose for the location of cards. He played two more hearts and came to his hand with the ace of clubs. Then he cashed the fourth heart. West threw the six of diamonds, East threw the

Couple united in outdoor ceremony

Rebecca Sue Graham and Christopher Allen McKay exchanged wedding vows Oct. 22 at the entrance of Towle Memorial Park. Bill Looney, associate minister of 37th Street Church of Christ, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Graham of Hermleigh and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hall Sr., of Snyder and Mrs. E.P. Smith of Forney.

The groom is the son of Mrs. Dorothy McKay of Princeton and the late Chester McKay.

The bride was driven to the ceremony in an antique 1936 Chevrolet pickup belonging to her grandfather, Clarence Hall Sr. A decorated parking space awaited the bride and her father.

Fresh red roses and bows were attached to white chairs forming a white lace path to a lavishly trimmed arch. The arch was highlighted with fresh red roses and English ivy. The arch was accompanied by two coordinating baskets of fresh flowers.

Nuptial selections included "God Give us Christian Homes," "Father Hear the Prayer We Offer," "To Love Someone More Deeply," "Lord Make Your People One," and "A Common Love." The acapella musical selections were provided by Mr. and Mrs. Ross Preston and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Mussleman.

The bride's mother chose a satin tea-length dress of turquoise satin. She wore a fresh red rose corsage and was escorted by the bride's grandfather, Clarence Hall Sr. The bride's grandmother was presented a long tapered rose as she exited.

Entering with her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride was attired in a candlelight tea-length gown which was hand sewn by her mother. The fitted bodice was made of satin and Chantilly lace. The gown featured a high neckline with a rounded shoulder-length collar.

The back of the bodice was a V-shaped inset styled with 11 dainty satin bows, detailed with one large satin bow at the dropped-waist. The fingertip sleeves were satin overlaid with lace. The bride chose candlelight satin shoes to match her gown.

The bridal attire was complemented by a bridal headpiece of fresh white roses and bridal tulle. Satin ribbons were entwined to complete the design. The cascading bridal bouquet was composed of red and white roses, baby's breath and greenery, finished with red and white satin ribbons tied in love knots. The bouquet was fashioned after the "Bekki" design by Jill Mead.

Following tradition, the bride carried a handkerchief belonging to her grandmother, Mrs. LaVada Hall. Her gown was new and she borrowed a petticoat from Kim Ratliff. Her garter was blue and she wore birth pennies, given to her from her grandmother's penny collection, in her satin shoes.

Krystal Graham of Hermleigh served her sister as maid of honor. She wore a red dropped-waist satin dress fashioned with a big bow attached to the front left of the waist. The skirt was styled with a full gather. She carried a single, fresh red rose tied with red and ecru ribbon. Her hairpiece was accented with red ribbons.

Cynthia Norman of Abilene, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. Her red dress was made identical to the maid of honor's dress. She carried a single red rose accented with red ribbons.

Marci Kruger was the flower girl. Her dress was made identical to the other attendants' dresses. She carried a white wicker basket with an arrangement of red rose petals. The basket was decorated with red rosebuds and ribbons. Her escort was Jason Hall, cousin of the bride. He was attired in a black, double-breasted suit with a red cummerbund and bow tie. A fresh red rose boutonniere completed his attire.

Josh Hall, cousin of the bride, was the ring bearer. He was dressed identical to the escort of the flower girl, and he carried a satin pillow covered with lace and trimmed with satin ribbon.

The groom was attired in a black suit with a candlelight cummerbund and bow tie. His boutonniere was a single fresh red rose. Serving the groom as best man was Richard Graham, brother of the bride. Paul Norman of Abilene, cousin of the bride, was the groomsman. Both male attendants wore black suits with red cummerbunds and bow ties. Fresh red rose boutonnieres completed their attire.

The registry table was draped with a floor-length lace cloth, overlaid in red satin. The bridal book was white satin with a feather pen. A candelabra with burning votive candles was flanked with English ivy and fresh red roses. A large satin bow completed the decor of the registry table. Monica Chandler presided over the registry table. She was dressed identical to the female attendants.

Following the outdoor wedding ceremony, the bride and groom were chauffeured in an antique pickup to the wedding reception in the Majestic Room of Reta's Cake Shop. The bride's table was covered with a white tablecloth overlaid in lace. The table was draped with a floor-length tablecloth. The bridal bouquet served as the centerpiece. A special blend of red fruit punch was served from a Fostoria Crystal punchbowl. Appointments for the table were of silver.

The nine-tiered wedding cake was baked in a variety of six flavors including vanilla, chocolate, strawberry, pineapple, spice and banana. It was frosted with a whipped butter frosting. The confection was assembled on a single pole connecting the cakes in the center.

There were four satellite cakes accenting the main cake. The cake was decorated with a detailed dainty ruffled and delicate design. Fresh red roses, greenery and baby's breath completed the decoration. The confection was baked by the bride's mother and decorated by Sandra Hall, the bride's aunt.

Entertainment for the reception was provided by John and Charlotte Howard. A selection of love songs were included in both the piano and vocal entertainment. All flowers for the ceremony and the reception were designed for the couple by Jill Mead and Donna Gavin of Private Collections as a special gift to the bride and groom.

The couple departed for their honeymoon in a decorated wheelbarrow. They were then showered with rice and chauffeured to the Willow Park Inn in the antique pickup. The honeymoon at the Willow Park Inn was given to the couple by friends, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Ratliff.

The groom attended school in McKinney and is now active in the National Guard. He is presently stationed at Fort Dix, N.J.

The bride is a 1988 Snyder High School graduate. She is presently employed at Reta's Cake Shop. The couple plans to make a home in Snyder.

Couple reveals plans

Beth and Dru Murray announce the approaching marriage of their mother, Freda, to Obie Kelly Jr., of Post.

Stephens, Thompson...

Couple weds in afternoon ceremony

Tobi Monette Stephens and Rickey Lynn Thompson were united in marriage Sept. 2 at 4 p.m. at East Side Church of Christ. Darnell Boyd, uncle of the bride and minister of Lomita Church of Christ, officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Milton and Pat Stephens and the groom is the son of Glenn and Louise Thompson.

Candlelight illuminated a stained glass window which was flanked by two candelabra featuring tapers and two featuring votives and greenery.

Todd Stephens of Washington, D.C., brother of the bride, lit candles.

Acapella recordings from Abilene Christian University and Harding College included "Move," "Twelfth of Never," "Wedding Song," "Sunrise, Sunset," and "A Time For Us."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown fashioned of white bridal satin with Victorian sleeves and soft sheering to the wrist. The Queen Anne neckline, bodice and chapel-length train were accented with re-embroidered lace and hand-sewn pearls and iridescents.

The gown featured an empire waist culminating in a deep V-shape, accented with strung pearls. The fingertip-length veil was adorned with scattered pearls and rolled edges. It was attached to a headband of woven multi-strands of pearls with a drop pearl in the center of the forehead.

The bridal bouquet featured Sonora roses, gladioli blooms, stephanotis, spider mums, white buttons and greenery. White, emerald and coral streamers were tied in love knots.

Stephanie Weaver of Lubbock served as maid of honor. Patt Pitner and Gwen Thompson, sister-in-law of the groom, were bridesmaids. They were attired in dresses fashioned of emerald green iridescent taffeta. The tea-length dresses featured Victorian sleeves. The bodices were fitted, culminating in an empire waist and a gathered, full skirt. The dresses featured a scooped neckline in the front and back. Light green hose and emerald pumps accented the attire. The bridesmaids carried nosegays of gladioli blooms, spider mums, white buttons and emerald and white streamers.

Alicia Fogle of Austin, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a tea-length bubble dress of emerald green iridescent taffeta. A halo of ribbon and baby's breath completed her attire.

Tyler Thompson, nephew of the groom, served as ring bearer. He wore a black tuxedo with tails. An emerald bow tie and cummerbund completed his outfit.

Eddie Thompson served his brother as best man. Groomsmen were Trevlyn Pitner and Terry Stephens, brother of the bride. The groomsmen each wore a black Pierre Cardin tuxedo with a black bow tie and cummerbund. They wore white, wing-tip shirts.

The groom was attired in a full dress black tuxedo by Pierre Cardin. He wore a white shirt with a black bow tie and cummerbund.

Deana Pitcock of Lubbock registered guests. The registry table was covered with an iridescent green cloth overlaid with an ivory crochet runner. A western theme miniature bride and groom completed the table decor.

A reception was held in the multi-purpose building of the church following the ceremony. The bride's table was covered in an ivory embroidered tablecloth over a satin ivory skirt. A silver candelabrum with four votive candles decorated the table which also featured mock champagne served from a cut crystal punch bowl, belonging to the groom's aunt, Louise Parks. Silver appointments complemented the decor.

The two-tiered wedding cake was surrounded by four smaller satellite cakes. The cakes were frosted in white and topped with fresh flowers including gladioli blooms, spider mums, white buttons and greenery.

Cousins of the bride attended the bride's table. They were Denise Meharg of Borger, Denita Bynum of Granbury, Susan Wetzel of Andrews and Dana Murfee of Lubbock.

The groom's table was covered with a dark brown, floor-length cloth. A crocheted doily graced the center of the table. A bronze horse and rider by Dr. Robert Taylor, owned by Louise Parks, aunt of the groom, served as centerpiece for the table.

A gold coffee service and flatware accented the table which featured a double-horseshoe chocolate cake. The horseshoes were accented with gold leaves, and the confection was fashioned by Reta Graham. The groom's cousins, Donna Isaacs and Debbi Parks, both of Fluvanna, served at the groom's table.

The bride is a graduate of Snyder High School and Western Texas College. She also attended Texas Tech University. The groom, also an SHS graduate, attended Western Texas College. Both are employed in Snyder where they make their home following a honeymoon trip to Abilene.

Town and Country Topics By Kathryn Roberts Extension Agent

RETAIL MEAT COUNTERS TRIMMING THE FAT
 Grocery store meat departments are cutting back on beef. Not on selection, but on fat.

There have been great changes in the retail beef cases. The movement began with producer-funded research into consumer attitudes about beef and what could be done to bring the consumer back to the beef counter. The result was the lean beef movement that has included "quarter-inch trim" programs by retail grocery chains.

More than 40 percent of the beef cuts sold have no outside fat. The National Market Basket Survey showed that most cuts have no more than one-eighth inch outside fat.

However, up to now most of the credit for the closely trimmed beef goes to the retailer. There is as yet, no pressure on packers and little pressure on cattle feeders to provide leaner beef to the retail store.

The packers are selling mostly boxed beef to retailers with up to one inch of fat. This is because the retailers don't want to pay the packer extra for the closely trimmed beef. Without the pressure on the packers, they, in turn, don't pressure the cattle feeders.

The genetics are out there to produce the "ideal" beef animal that is both choice and lean enough to be yield grade 1 or 2, but will not be the norm until the packers put pressure on the feeders.

Another innovation is an energy saving idea called "hot-fat trimming." This process allows packers to remove external fat from the carcass while it is still warm. The advantages are that it takes less labor to pull the fat off the warm carcass and takes less energy to heat the already-warm fat for rendering.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture removed the remaining obstacle to this new process on April 9 when officials allowed packing plants to quality grade beef without requiring them to use yield grades too.

Previous rulings made grading beef voluntary, but if a packer used one measurement, they had to use both.

Although many consumers have already noticed changes in the beef case, they may see more as industry innovations make leaner beef more profitable.

FALL TEMPERATURES IDEAL FOR STOCKING FINGERLINGS

Cooler fall temperatures mark the season to begin stocking catfish fingerlings in farm ponds.

The fingerlings are in good supply this year. The early cool weather is ideal for stocking catfish fingerlings.

Catfish can do well in small stock watering tanks. They may be stocked at the rate of 100 to 1,000 per acre, depending on the management level planned.

If possible, have fingerlings delivered by the dealer. Small quantities may be transported in plastic bags filled with water and oxygen. Avoid rapid changes in water temperature to prevent temperature shock to fish.

Four-to-six-inch long fingerlings are the most economical to stock. However, eight-to-ten-inch fingerlings reach eating size quickly if bass are present in the pond.

Capping spending makes winning elections difficult

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (AP) — Placing limits on how much congressional candidates can spend on campaigning will make it next to impossible for any newcomers to win elective seats, according to Lynda Powell.

Powell, a University of Rochester political scientist, says:

"If you cap spending on congressional races you entrench incumbency even more, because about the only way to unseat an incumbent is to outspend him."

"Certainly, the amount of money spent on some campaigns seems ridiculous, but at least the current system gives new candidates a chance to win office."

Newton builds vessels of space age material

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — Bore a hole in the hull of John Newton's sailboat. Fill it with water and heel it 'til the sails skirt the waves. Go ahead, it won't sink.

Newton builds self-righting vessels out of lighter-than-water, Space Age materials.

The Cat Ketch Yachts he builds in his Port Arthur, Texas, factory are the latest products in a rich three-decade of boat building that began in 1957 in Hong Kong, where he produced the successful Grand Banks Trawlers. Now he is setting new standards in sailboat safety.

His 36- to 52-foot sailing yachts are designed by well-known marine architects and have been gathering attention on the boat show circuit this year as sailors look to combine safe, convenient travel with speed.

And while the yachts are built to be safe and easily sailed, they also feature a comfortable and attractive design and they handle well in gusts, as demonstrated during a recent sail through Newport Harbor.

Newton recently sought outside confirmation of the vessels' capabilities from Underwriters Laboratories Inc. The exam was a breeze compared to the rigorous tests Newton and his 25 employees had already put their design to, but the UL seal of approval should pay off at the boat shows where boating enthusiasts once refused to even stop at Newton's slip after they saw a sign proclaiming the yachts were unsinkable.

"On the face of it, no one would believe it," Newton says.

"We were getting all sorts of weird, rude comments," says his wife, Deidre, who works with her husband to sell the boats. "Like: 'Yeah, that's what they said about the Titanic.' Or worse."

Positive flotation is common in dinghies and lifeboats, but only a handful of large boat makers, such as Kanter yachts in Canada and the European Etap boats, offer it in larger craft.

It's a standard feature on the more than 100 sporty Sparhawk and more traditional Herreshoff yachts Newton has sold in the past five years. The boats are built with lighter-than-water materials below the waterline.

Neal Mahan, a supervisor at UL, only tested Newton's boats for level flotation. And while the yachts far surpassed the minimum requirements, they also impressed their examiner.

"You can flood it, you can take a hit, you can probably cut it in half and it will still float," Mahan says.

The hulls of Newton's vessels are created out of Airex, a foam used to form the shells of fighter planes. The bulkheads and other spaces below the hull are filled with another Coast Guard-approved foam that also floats.

The materials do not make the boats more susceptible to break up in a collision. Airex is somewhat flexible, and if one of the yachts strikes an object head-on it must break through 3 feet of hull before the vessel takes on water.

We've been through the "Now" generation and the "Me" generation. Coming up is the "Pay Me" generation, soon to be followed, no doubt, by the "Pay Me Now" generation.

I recall a conversation once in which I suggested to one of the kids that he mow the lawn while he could still find the lawnmower. He responded by sticking out his hand and saying something like "What'd ya give me?"

That's pretty standard stuff among teenagers today, but in complete contrast to 20-25 years earlier, I remember saying something similar to my dad, which resulted in my mowing the lawn for three weeks straight instead of alternating with my brother. I got the point.

I'm not blaming the kid, understand. It's the parent who has the power of control in these things. And maybe we've let it get out of hand a little bit.

and bicycles and transistor radios for perfect school attendance during November. When we attempt to raise money, we frequently reward the person who collected the most with a trip or a gift.

It's something that's always been done. The stakes are just a lot higher, that's all. Things have progressed a long way from when we used to get those little stick-on gold stars for perfect attendance.

But I don't remember ever anything quite like what a health clinic in Denver is doing — paying teenagers $1 a day to not get pregnant. Seems our system of rewards has gotten out of hand.

Of more than 20 girls in the program over the past two years, only two have gotten pregnant. The program as it is presently set up is for girls of low income and who have already gotten pregnant by age 16. Of the 13 girls currently involved, 12 have had one child.

I can't argue with the results of the program, but it's a little bit frightening. Paying someone, that is, to act responsibly. Fortunately, the program isn't limited to cash alone. There are group talk sessions included. Education.

Education is probably our biggest asset, but sadly, one that has been underused.

Students are taught math, English and science, and these courses of study are certainly necessary. But other necessary courses on topics such as drugs, sex and finances — which all deal with responsibility — continue to take a back seat.

The subject of sex education has of course been a controversial one and it's not the purpose of rehashing the pros and cons of it here. Safe to say, however, that it's a subject that won't go away and that can't be ignored. Education has to come from somewhere, be it in the classroom under the guidance of a teacher or in the living room with understanding parents.

Or maybe we could just pay teenagers a buck a day to abstain. And a buck not to take drugs, and a buck to do their homework, and a buck...

"It's an exhilarating time to be alive," said my brother, Brad, when I called him recently.

Though I've only seen my brother once in the past five years, I've never called him before during that time. He called me once, to congratulate me on the sale of my book, and toasted me over the phone, which was, I thought, a very classy thing to do. (What can I say? Class just runs all through our family.)

It's not easy to keep in touch when you live half a world apart. My brother, you see, lives in West Germany.

"You just can't imagine the looks on the faces of the East Germans as they arrive in the West by train," he told me. "Tears of joy stream down their faces as they hold up their babies to the window and say, 'In their lifetime, my children can know freedom.'"

According to "Newsweek" magazine, thousands of smiling people sang the old German folk song, "Such a Beautiful Day Should Last Forever" as the gates to the Berlin Wall swung open for the first time in 28 years. As the streets swelled into one joyous party celebration, bars emptied out, and soldiers were doused with champagne.

For those of us who remember crouching beneath our desks at school in practice for what we should do in case the Bomb was ever dropped in our area, and marveling at the latest model fall-out shelters at the State Fair every year, the crumbling of the Berlin Wall brings about an exhilaration in our spirits that is more symbolic than literal. We rejoice with this divided nation, as families torn asunder by political dogma and totalitarian force are reunited, but our joy transcends the basic. Germans can travel back and forth within their divided city now without being shot or mangled by killer dogs. We are happy for them. But, on a deeper level, our spirits soar with new hope as we see Communist structures everywhere riddled by corruption crumble under the weight of their own falling systems.

The Russian people, in particular, have an ancient history based on fear of foreign ways. First the czars, and later the dictators, maintained control by keeping their nation isolated in ignorance and poverty, funneling its vast natural resources into incredible riches for the ruling class. It worked for centuries.

But a tiny invention which debuted at the World's Fair 50 years ago did for the Soviet people what hundreds of imprisoned dissidents had not been able to do: it opened up for them the world which, they could see with their own eyes, did not jive with the lies they'd been fed by the regime through controlled history texts and dogmatic newspapers. They could see, not just amazing personal wealth in Capitalist nations, but freedom in action. True, most of the Soviets who were able to afford television saw only governmentally controlled broadcasts, but there were enough on border countries and those with access to satellite dishes to spread the word.

Someone once asked John Lennon if he thought the Beatles had spawned a generation of revolutionaries. He said that the rock band didn't START anything, but simply rode the waves of rebellion which would have come anyway. They both arrived in

Bush has trouble getting handle on Soviet leader, AP writer concludes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The bounce isn't there anymore. Mikhail Gorbachev doesn't light up a room simply by entering it. Often unpredictable in the past, the Soviet leader did not challenge President Bush at the Malta summit with dazzling new proposals.

The closest he came was proposing that nuclear-armed warships be included in arms control negotiations. But Gorbachev had telegraphed the initiative through the media before he sat down with Bush, and the administration had decided to resist even tinkering with the U.S. Navy before the president left Washington.

Gorbachev also showed Bush a map illustrating how the Soviet Union was ringed by American military might. The Soviets had used the tactic of negotiating with pictures before, and the gambit did not produce U.S. concessions.

Gorbachev pulled no rabbits

AP analysis

out of a hat, offered no massive withdrawal of Soviet forces, extended no invitation to banish nuclear weapons.

As a result, the president was not placed in the position of having to cope with an ingenious and inventive adversary by meeting him halfway.

The relief on the American side was as obvious as the choppy weather. Bush had all the time he needed to lay out a dozen mild suggestions to improve U.S. relations with Moscow. He was not forced to come up with a quick reply to dramatic and unexpected propositions from the Soviet side.

Still it wasn't all sweetness and light, as Bush remarked at the end.

The hundreds of reporters who dutifully filed from Malta the gushing accounts of an improved superpower relationship provided to them by anonymous U.S. "sources," are balancing the record now that they are back home with the negative side of Bush's first rendezvous with Gorbachev.

It turns out, for instance, that the Soviet leader has no intention of complying with a U.S. demand that he force the ouster of President Najibullah in Afghanistan.

It also turned out that the Soviets have not shelved their opposition to the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative. The dispute over "Star Wars" is still an obstacle to concluding a treaty to trim bombers, missiles and submarines in time for the Bush-Gorbachev summit meeting in Washington next June.

Two other problems surfaced even before the summit adjourned.

Gorbachev told Bush he did not know how Soviet arms are getting to leftist rebels in El Salvador. And he is determined to have negotiators cap submarine-launched cruise missiles.

He also seems graver, which is understandable considering the uphill task he has undertaken to reconstruct the Soviet economy and to maneuver around the dazzling changes that are sweeping Eastern Europe.

"He gave me the impression of a man sure of himself, in control, not ebullient, nor the quiet of worry," said a senior U.S. official who was at the table with Bush aboard the Maxim Gorky.

From time to time everyone forgets where he or she leaves the car keys, or the car. But can you imagine forgetting how to drive?

Whether it's an aged aunt, grandparent, or our own parents, many of us have had some experience with older people who experience failing mental abilities. I am surprised how many people still equate this loss with old age.

Thirty years of research on aging tells us that when memory loss interferes with daily living, it is not normal but the result of some underlying disease. Identifying the disease isn't always easy but it is extremely important for the person with this problem to have a medical evaluation. For some, the illness can be treated and the memory loss and confusion clear up. For others, the cause is a progressive brain disease, such as Alzheimer's disease.

Although there is no cure for Alzheimer's disease yet, that doesn't mean there is no treatment. Good medical care from someone who knows the range of problems Alzheimer's patients have can help patients live as normal a life as possible and make the job of caring for them much easier on their families.

We estimate that 4 million people in this country may now have Alzheimer's disease, about 10 percent of the population over age 65. Although uncommon in people in their 50s and 60s current studies indicate that by their ninth decade at least one of every four people will become afflicted. The economic burden is at least $80 billion a year — enough to bankrupt a small nation.

Because many disorders mimic Alzheimer's, it is difficult to diagnose. In fact, diagnosis can only be made with 100 percent certainty by examining brain tissue after a patient dies. Nonetheless, specialists at major medical centers now have an array of tests offering reliable diagnosis more than 90 percent of the time, compared with 60 percent to 80 percent accuracy just 10 years ago.

On the federal level, the National Institute on Aging funds 15 Alzheimer's Disease Research Centers. And the U.S. Administration on Aging and the Veterans Administration support long-term care centers, important sources of research and training for those who deal with dementia and other illnesses of aging.

On the state level, Arkansas, Florida, Kentucky, New Jersey, New York, California, Illinois, Maryland, Oklahoma and Virginia now support specialized Alzheimer's disease diagnosis and treatment centers.

No one knows for sure what causes Alzheimer's disease. We do know from tissue examined under a microscope that certain brain cells stop working and die. Among the experimental treatments being explored are those looking at ways to stop or reverse brain cell death. One especially exciting area involves use of substances produced in the brain that help nerve cells thrive. This may hold promise for treating neurological diseases and brain damage from injury.

Many important research advances have occurred in the past year. For example, an abnormal protein that accumulates in the Alzheimer brain has been found in the skin and other organs, one more clue that this is not simply a disease of the brain, and a possible step toward a simple test for it.

Another area that is of practical value involves patient care. While average survival ranges between six and 10 years, some Alzheimer's patients live more than 20 years. As the disease progresses, the need for continuous care puts great stress on caregivers. Studies of patients and their caregivers are teaching us how families cope and helping to prepare health professionals and policymakers to meet their needs.

In the meantime, organizations like the national, non-profit Alzheimer's Association offer patients and families services ranging from support groups to information on the disease and referrals to community services. And every state and community in the United States has a government agency on aging to assist older people. Over half the states have task forces or commissions to study the problem of Alzheimer's in their state. Many offer Alzheimer's Disease Resource Centers, some with toll-free numbers. States with large ethnic populations like California, the District of Columbia, New York, Florida and Texas have educational programs tailored to minority caregivers' needs.

Public/private partnerships are also springing up to meet the needs of caregivers. One example is the Administration on Aging, which is working with the Alzheimer's Association and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to implement dementia day care and short-term respite services. Workplace programs are being developed by private groups.

More information on the Alzheimer's Association is available by calling 1-800-621-0379 (in Illinois, call 1-800-572-6037). Information on research is available from the Public Information Office of the NIA, at 301-496-1752.

Experienced Travelers Nip Cat Problems in the Bud

DEAR ABBY: A while back a reader signed "Cat Lover in Maine" asked for some tips on traveling cross-country in a vehicle with her cats. All she needs are some catnip, a large box with air holes cut into it, some pillows, toys for the cats and a familiar cat blanket. Add the catnip to the toys. It will put them in a state of euphoria, and they will travel well.

LULU SHERNAC,
LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR ABBY: On motor trips, our cats drove us crazy. Our vet told us to put the cats in a pillowcase and tie the top. The cats could breathe, but they couldn't get out. The vet said that for some reason this tranquilized the cats. Ours drove several hundred miles with no problem.

LOUISE WILLIAMS, HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Cat Lover in Maine": I've used tranquilizers for short trips like airplane flights, but I would never keep a cat tranquilized for a cross-country trip in a car. There is a safe, natural substitute that works for some cats. I listened to Andromeda scream for a day and a half, then, in desperation, I stopped and bought some catnip and tossed some into her box. She took a couple of sniffs, rolled over on her back and started purring. I didn't hear another meow out of her until I pulled into the driveway of our new home.

MARY HELM, TUSTIN, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Some tips for "Cat Lover in Maine": Refrain from feeding the cats for about eight hours before the trip. Also, limit water. (None is better.) Put the cats' favorite blankets, pillows and toys in the kennel or cage where the cats will be sleeping. Do not allow the cats to roam around free in the vehicle. If it's a large motor home, you will have a terrible time trying to find them.

CINDY MC NAUGHTEN,
DOVER, PA.

DEAR ABBY: First of all, "Cat Lover in Maine" should either buy — or ask a vet for — a cardboard cat carrier with air holes in it. The cat will feel more secure in a small, dark carrier than he will looking out the window of a speeding vehicle. Also, cats roaming free in the car will climb on your shoulders, wedge themselves between your foot and the brake pedal, or squeeze out of the tiniest opening in the car window, and in a matter of seconds, it can diverge out the window and get killed on the highway. So, steel yourself, and keep the cat in the carrier if it's at all possible.

Our cat howled for three hours straight on the first day of our trip and then slept for the remainder of the day. On the second day, he howled for only half an hour, then he settled down. If you can endure the first day, you'll be home free. Be sure to put the carrier somewhere in the car where the cat can see you and hear your voice. This will reassure him. And if you place the carrier on the floor of the car, be sure that no fumes or heat will blow directly on your cat, or you will have one sick pet.

If you stop for meals, never leave the cat locked in a hot car, especially in the sun.

Finally, get all your cat's inoculations before you start out for your trip — especially the feline leukemia vaccination. A pet moving to a new state is especially vulnerable to new germs. Be assured that the cat will adjust to the car once you have traveled far enough for him to realize that he is not headed for the vet's office.

LAURA LIPTON, SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: Please advise "Car Lover in Maine" to spend a few evenings sitting in the driveway, reading or listening to music with the cat on her lap, before starting out for a cross-country motor trip.

If you plan to travel in an RV or motor home, it's a good idea to actually live in it for about a week — that way, it becomes the cat's territory. Also, take a few trips up the alley and back so the cat will become familiar with the sounds and the motion of the vehicle.

Another thing that will reassure the cat: Talk to it. Believe it or not, pets can read your facial expressions and can also read body language, and they will be able to interpret what you are saying to them by the tone of your voice and your expression.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old mother of three — an 11-year-old daughter, a son who is 9 and another daughter who is 10 months old. Here's my problem:

My 11-year-old daughter is pregnant and is due next month. She doesn't want the baby. She wants to put it up for adoption. With me trying to raise a baby myself, I agreed with her. Am I wrong to feel this way about my first grandchild? My sisters agree with me. We feel that my daughter is too young to handle that kind of responsibility.

What do I tell the rest of my family and friends when my daughter comes home from the hospital without a baby?

Please answer soon. I would also like to hear what your readers have to say about this situation.

CONFUSED IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR CONFUSED: First, you and your daughter are to be commended for your decision. You are doing not only what is best for your daughter, but for her baby. Furthermore, you will be giving a childless couple a gift that all the money in the world could not buy.

Please don't worry about what to tell your family and friends. Tell them exactly what you have told me — that your daughter is too young to handle that kind of responsibility.

DEAR ABBY: You told us single women to give "Single and Short in Minneapolis" a break. I bet all odds that he would not give me a break. Most men won't. Why? Is it because I am 25 years old and teach second grade? No. Or is it because I am 5 feet 6 inches tall with light brown hair, blue eyes and pretty? No. Maybe it's because I am kind, loyal, funny and caring? No.

Men will not give me a break because I bench press 205 pounds, back squat 375 pounds (naturally) and am rated in the top 10 in women's discus in the United States.

Men are either intimidated by me, or they think I'm a lesbian, which I am not. I am a woman who enjoys a wonderful sport that requires physical strength, but I am not unfeminine. I wish I could find someone who is kind, caring and mature, and would accept me for what I am.

DISCUS THROWER IN CALIF.

DEAR DISCUS THROWER: You sound like a prize to me. Just watch out for the guys who throw the ball.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I will be married 40 years on Dec. 26.

We just came across the enclosed "Dear Abby" column in our "important papers" file. It was submitted by a Mrs. David Hedlin of Naples, Fla. Abby, it suits my husband to a "T" Here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I love my husband. Let me tell you why:

"I love him for not making any noise when he gets up at 6:30 every morning and knows I like to sleep a little later.

"I love him for never asking me why I don't balance the checkbook.

"I love him for walking the dog and feeding the cat, even though they're both mine.

"I love him for not making me pay him off when I lose a bet, even though he always pays when he loses.

"I love him for not noticing when the beds aren't made.

"I love him for noticing when my hair is done a new way.

"I love him for being extra nice to my mom and dad.

"I love him for watching a 1956 romantic movie with me even though the Celtics are on the other channel.

"I love him for not getting mad when there's not a clean shirt in the drawer.

"I want him to know it's the little things that count."

Abby, don't you have one about wives?

MRS. LARRY SMITH,
ORANGE, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. SMITH: No, but if enough husbands send me three reasons why they love their wives, I'll publish a companion piece to the above.

DEAR ABBY: "Happy and Shows It," who was criticized for her perpetual smile and cheerful attitude, asked for an appropriate comeback to the rude woman who remarked, "You must be either very stupid or incredibly lucky, because nobody can be that happy all the time." You advised her not to get into a wrestling match with a skunk.

Abby, we must battle the skunks of the world, or they will gain undue influence. I submit that an appropriate response (to paraphrase Voltaire) might have been: "You think I'm either stupid or lucky. I thought you were a refined woman. Perhaps we were both mistaken."

Fish lover constructs large aquarium

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A quick glance around Mike Foxx Ford's back yard clearly tells the story of some fishy business. Hundreds of colorful fish — young and old — seem to be everywhere and moving elegantly from one place to another. Among them are many of the world's best-known exotic and tropical fish. Scores of Japanese Goldfish shake their silky-looking flashy tails. A few feet away, a 15-pound flat-headed nurse shark swims endlessly inside a cage that sits in the middle of a shed. Contrasting the shark's enclosed environment is a large freshwater pond fed by a man-made waterfall. Ford's back yard can provide moments of tranquility, but it is also a business. Most of the fish are for sale. "People get a chance here to see firsthand the fish they want to buy," he said, overseeing what is perhaps one of the largest indoor aquariums in the area. "They can see how pretty and how big some fish can get." The $20,000 fish tank is 33 feet long, 18 feet wide, and 6 feet deep. It is fully equipped with overhead lights and a temperature-controlling system. The tank, home of about 100 species of fish, is also the home of a large albino catfish called "Whity." "That one is not for sale," said Ford, pointing to the half-pink, half-white catfish. "Whity is our mascot." Ford's fish business started first as a hobby when he was in elementary school but it wasn't until recently that the native of Columbus, Texas, decided to think commercially. "Nyassa Cove, home of the (Rio Grande) Valley's largest aquarium," reads the sign erected on the front lawn off Boca Chica Boulevard. The 24-year-old Ford, a political science student at the University of Texas-Pan

American, recalls the days he owned his first 30-gallon fish tank. "I have had aquariums since I was in elementary school," he said, "but I never thought I was going to have something like this." Ford said it took a lot of planning, dedication and persuasion to convince his parents, Jane Ford and John Ventura, to lend him the money to undertake the project. "It has been kind of interesting watching him build the place up and working with the landscaping," Ms. Ford said. "We bought this place three years ago."

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: On a "20/20" segment shown last June they talked about radioactive dye injected into patients for X-ray purposes that caused liver cancer and resulted in death. Would a myelogram use that kind of dye and would a radioactive capsule used for taking pictures of a thyroid use the same dye?

DEAR READER: I did not see the "20/20" segment you refer to, but I am aware that certain isotopes (radioactive materials) that were popular many years ago for liver scanning have been suspected of causing liver tumors that show up much later. Isotope scanning is considered safer today because newer, less hazardous materials are used.

Isotopes produce a "reverse" X-ray. When tiny amounts are injected or drunk in a beverage, the radioactive material is temporarily concentrated in an organ — such as bone, liver or thyroid gland.

By measuring the concentration and distribution of the isotope, technicians can determine if the organ absorbs a uniform amount. This produces a silhouette of the organ on an X-ray film and is a useful way of assessing whether the organ is functioning normally. The isotopes used for modern scanning are excreted by the body in a matter of hours; hence, the risk of damage is markedly reduced.

A myelogram is an X-ray test of the spinal canal. During the examination, a non-radioactive liquid compound — not an isotope — is injected into the spine. This material shows up as a shadow when X-rayed. Thus, pinched nerves can be highlighted because the "dye" fills the spaces around the nerves and provides a contrast enabling doctors to identify the location and extent of the ailment. Once the myelogram has been completed, the "dye" is withdrawn; any residual usually causes no consequences.

You are correct that thyroid scanning does require a "radioactive capsule" of isotope material. However, the isotope is quickly released from the thyroid gland and passes out of the body. In certain circumstances, when doctors want to treat an overactive thyroid gland, they administer much larger quantities of isotope, which depress thyroid function and usually cure the condition without the necessity of surgery. Again, these therapeutic amounts are far in excess of the small quantities used for scanning.

Because isotopes are radioactive and people should avoid unnecessary exposure to any radioactive material, many doctors use scanning tests only when such examinations are absolutely vital for diagnosis. Nonetheless, the tests are extremely useful when appropriately administered and are believed to pose no serious, long-term health problems.

The lines are already being drawn in what may become a major health issue of the '90s: air pollution. Experts disagree about how serious the problem is, but many doctors and authorities at the Environmental Protection Agency believe that dirty air is an important — and preventable — cause of serious, permanent lung damage in healthy adults and children, as well as in patients with chronic pulmonary disorders.

At one end of the scale are representatives of industry whose views were heralded in a recent Wall Street Journal editorial critical of President Bush's $11 billion-$15 billion air clean-up plan. "The smog lobby ought to stand up and explain in detail what real risks justify the high cost. The draconian solutions seem out of proportion to what actually is known about the problem," the editorial said.

On the other hand, the EPA has reported that more than 80 areas in the country, containing more than 100 million people, fail to meet federal air-quality standards. According to lung specialists writing in the doctors' magazine Medical World News, the impact of air pollutants is considerable: depletion of pulmonary reserve, chronic inflammation involving virtually all lung tissue and susceptibility to infection.

Carcinogenic (cancer-causing) hydrocarbons are present, to varying degrees, in the air everyone breathes. These compounds are produced by automobiles, diesel engines and industrial manufacturing.

Of equal importance, however, are air pollutants such as sulfuric acid and nitrogen dioxide, both of which intensify the harmful effects of ozone, a naturally occurring, unstable form of oxygen that is poisonous to lung tissue. To the dismay of observers, adverse consequences of air pollution are increasingly being seen in small-town America where air-quality standards have been believed to be acceptable.

For example, studies by Dr. Homer Boushey, professor of pulmonary disease at the University of California, showed that physical activity in "normal" air was potentially hazardous. People performing intermittent exercise in supposedly "safe" unfiltered air had the same inflammation and deterioration of lung function seen in people exposed to short-term high-ozone levels. In fact, athletes may be particularly prone to lung damage from ozone, because breathing through the mouth bypasses natural air filters in the nose, also, athletes breathe more deeply when exercising.

Although all adults lose lung capacity as they age, air pollution appears to increase the rate and severity of the depletion. Doctors, who treat asthma and other lung disorders, express concern about the increased incidence of asthma, a phenomenon they attribute to air pollution that is no longer confined to urban centers. Unfortunately, prohibitive costs prevent researchers from performing the complex and sophisticated studies needed to prove unequivocally that normal persons are being affected by air pollution in non-urban areas. Nonetheless, preliminary data suggest disturbing trends. For example:

- Harvard investigators discovered twice as much respiratory illness among schoolchildren in Steubenville, Ohio, (where air pollution is severe) than among youngsters in relatively unpolluted Portage, Wis.

- A 10-year study at the University of California at Los Angeles revealed accelerated loss of lung function in non-smoking adults living in polluted Glendora, Calif., compared to similar people in less polluted Lancaster, Calif.

- A study of 80 asthmatics in Glendora showed that 63 percent developed significant deterioration of breathing ability that was directly related to rising ozone levels exacerbated by air pollution.

It will probably take many years to document satisfactorily the full effects of polluted air on lung function. Until then, the public must be made aware of the potential harm resulting from levels of air pollution we all take for granted but that may be doing irreparable harm to healthy people, as well as to those with pulmonary disease.

Beatles reunion said not likely

TORONTO (AP) — Paul McCartney is singing a slightly different tune now about a possible Beatles reunion.

When he suggested last month that he, George Harrison and Ringo Starr may come together for a reunion, Harrison responded there wouldn't be one "as long as John Lennon remains dead."

McCartney said Thursday he understood. But he still held out hope for a reunion.

"There can't be a Beatles reunion because John died," McCartney told a news conference before his concert at the SkyDome.

"And I don't think any of us would be interested in substituting someone for John, even (his son) Julian, which has been suggested. But there is a film we might get around to in a couple of years that we've been meaning to do, and there might possibly be some involvement there where we play together."

He said the group wouldn't call it a Beatles reunion, but the media probably would.

Newton wants award to stay

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Entertainer Wayne Newton's lawyer says if his client's $5.3 million damage award in a suit against NBC News is overturned, it would have "dire consequences to the public."

Newton sued the network in 1981, claiming that a series of broadcasts in 1980 defamed him. The broadcasts linked Newton to alleged crime figures and centered on his purchase of the Aladdin Hotel here.

Lawyer Morton Galane said in a brief filed with a federal appeals court in San Francisco last month that if the verdict is overturned, "victims of malicious defamation by the mass media will have no effective remedy and the media will not be deterred from disseminating knowing or reckless falsehoods."

"The cost of litigating against a media giant like NBC will often exceed any compensatory award the victim could hope to receive."

A jury awarded Newton $19.2 million in damages in 1986. The following year, U.S. District Judge Myron Crocker cut the award to $5.3 million.

Pearl Harbor horror haunts Texas veteran

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — It may have happened 48 years ago and he may be 73 years old, but M.L. "Bud" Tinker has no problem remembering Pearl Harbor.

Like most Americans living on that "day of infamy," Tinker can remember precisely what he was doing — directing his young, inexperienced Marine gun crew on board the USS Pennsylvania, trying to fight off the screaming Japanese dive and torpedo bombers.

He remembers vividly the frustration of trying to shoot the planes down with ineffective guns and improperly fused shells. He remembers watching the USS Arizona being blasted into oblivion beneath the waves. He remembers seeing a crewmate literally flattened against a bulkhead by the shock wave of an explosion.

Tinker has no trouble remembering any of that, or what he lived through later on Guadalcanal and the Marshalls and other islands he's forgotten the names of, or never even knew. It's forgetting that has been hard, and until recently, his daughter said, he rarely talked about any of it.

Tinker was a 24-year-old Marine gunnery sergeant on the Pennsylvania, flagship of the fleet. He was one of only about 120 marines on board, and had been stationed on the battleship two and a half years. He commanded a crew of a 5-inch surface- and shore-shelling gun.

He was below deck that Sunday morning, just coming off watch. He was taking a shower when he heard general quarters blaring from the speakers. He didn't bother putting on a shirt, just his pants, and then ran through the various departments (sleeping quarters) down below, and found them all empty.

"I remember I was thinking 'Oh, hell! That old damn Kimmel (Pacific Fleet Commander-in-Chief Admiral Husband E. Kimmel) s.o.b. will do anything even on a Sunday morning.'"

Tinker said Admiral Kimmel had been putting his forces through rigorous drills those months and weeks before the attack. He had started training his fleet on night maneuvers and according to Tinker, had taken over command and put into effect some very important and necessary changes, including teaching the crews to sail without all the ship lights on, which Tinker said had been the common and foolish practice.

"Kimmel came in and said, 'no more lights' and put us on a war basis."

So when the general quarters blared, Tinker just assumed it was another of Kimmel's surprise drills.

When he got to the quarterdeck, he found it was no drill. His men were already at their station and he ran there to direct them. But he said it was all an exercise in futility. The bombers were coming in so low and so fast, he said, the Pennsylvania's guns were useless.

"They just beat the hell out of us. It was like trying to shoot quail with a .22 rifle with the equipment we had." He said the guns could not be fired low enough and the shells could not be fused right to hit the low-flying attackers. One sailor reportedly became so frustrated he began throwing potatoes at the planes.

"If they had had a landing force, they could have overrun the islands."

Tinker said Kimmel was made the scapegoat for the disaster, but he has always believed there were "higher-ups" who knew more details of the attack than Kimmel but refused to pass them along.

"They knew they (the Japanese) were coming, but they had to have war because of the economy. I've felt that for 35 years," Tinker said.

Tinker watched the USS Oklahoma explode and roll over and saw a heavy cruiser and a supply ship docked alongside the Pennsylvania blow up. The Pennsylvania was hit repeatedly, and the Japanese later reported it had sunk. "But we were in dry dock and there was no way they could sink us."

The battleship returned to San Francisco and was back at sea in the spring.

But the Oklahoma, the Arizona and the Utah, and dozens of other warships, planes and at least 2,403 men were gone forever.

Kimmel's career was over, too, Tinker says because of unjust and selfish Navy brass wanting a scapegoat.

He said Kimmel repeatedly asked Washington for any information they had on Japanese plans in the Pacific. It was Kimmel's concern, Tinker said, that made him decide to divide his fleet into two task forces, to reduce the chance of the entire fleet being caught by surprise. He said Kimmel had both of his task forces in port for the first time in months because one of them had just returned after performing poorly in maneuvers. So Kimmel kept the first force in port and was sending the other one back out Sunday afternoon. It would never make it back on maneuvers.

Shortly before the attack and before deciding to keep both forces in port, Tinker said Kimmel had radioed Washington about any intelligence they had.

"Kimmel wasn't asking IF the Japanese were going to attack, he was asking WHEN," Kimmel never got a reply, and the urgent cable ordering him to a war footing arrived more than six hours after the attack began.

Tinker still had to get through Guadalcanal, New Georgia, and other bloody "bush fightin'."

Country Life

 history, he said, at the same time.

And so it is, I think, with the charismatic, visionary Russian leader Mikhail Gorbachev. He knew that change was inevitable if his nation was to survive its own internal stresses. He simply opened the door to the fresh breeze of change. But even Gorbachev could not have expected the gale force winds of freedom which have swept through the Communist Block like a hurricane, leaving one tottering Communist structure after another in virtual ruins. None of the Soviet ruling class could have anticipated the depth of resentment these people have harbored against a nation which chained them to its side on a long suicide march 40 years ago.

Twenty-five years later, when our own nation struggled through the morass of an unwinnable war, John Lennon wrote a song called, "Imagine." The lyrics went:

"Imagine all the people, living life in peace...
 You may say I'm a dreamer
 But I'm not the only one.
 I hope someday you'll join us
 And the world will be as one."

At about that same time, an East German family spent months stitching together smuggled and saved bits of parachute silk in their attic to form a crude and dangerous hot air balloon. Parents and children then risked their lives to sail over the border to freedom. Never could they have imagined one day standing on top of the Berlin Wall.

When I was in college, I knew a brave young man who actually smuggled Bibles into Russia. Last week, Gorbachev met with the Pope and agreed to once again allow religion to flourish in a nation founded on godlessness.

It is, indeed, an exhilarating time to be alive. And it's time to realize anew that all peoples — the Chinese included — who yearn to know freedom are our brothers and our sisters. And to imagine a better world one day for all of us.
