By ROGER CLINE

When it meets this evening, the City of Big Spring will consider taking a step toward euthanizing dogs instead of continuing to operate a no-kill shelter.

The meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers, 307 E. Fourth St.

During the meeting, the council will consider a resolution repealing City Council Resolution 003-2016 "...which set the goal of ending the euthanization of homeless pets...", according to the meeting's agenda.

Information provided with the meeting's agenda indicates that the council will consider entirely repealing City Council Resolution 003-2016, which reads "The City of Big Spring City Council hereby adopts the goal of ending the euthanization of homeless pets in the City of Big Spring's animal shelter by January 1, 2017."

Also included in the supplementary information provided with the agenda is a planned ordinance which sets out the rules - including rules for "humane euthanization" - for dealing with stray animals. According to those proposed rules, dogs and cats must be kept for a minimum of five days, or a living on through her adoring family and friends.

Charlene was a caring and lovable woman who, throughout her lifetime, devoted herself to her pets and the people around her. Born in 1943 in Fort Worth, Texas, to Charles and Georgia, she was the eldest of seven. Charlene was an intelligent and charismatic woman whose smile would light up a room. In spite of the many struggles and myriad of health problems, she would always seem to look at the brighter things in life and never said a bad word about anyone.

As a mother of six children, she was generous, loving and kind. When Charlene became a grandmother, she was absolutely thrilled about her family growing even bigger.

In her free time, Charlene loved to write poetry, care for her animals or visit with friends and family, especially her grandchildren. She will be greatly missed by her family and especially her children, Gary, David, Kevin, Rhonda and Kelly, who adore her with all of their hearts.

Charlene was preceded in death by her father, Charles, and her mother, Georgia; her sister, Katherine; her brother Steve; and her firstborn son, Randy. She is survived by her three sisters, Carol, Jane and Nila; her brother, Terry; three sons, Gary, David and Kevin; two daughters, Rhonda and Kelly; six grandchildren, Randy, Breana, Hollynne, Caleb, Chloe and Aedyn; and her five great-grandchildren, Zalei, Aiden, Jake Daniel, Malaysia and Malachia.

Animals which exceed their redemption period may be placed by the city for adoption through a humane organization.

While the rules do allow others to adopt the animals following the 5- or 15-day period and allows the city to foster them out to those willing to take them, they also allow circumstances in which the animals may be put down by the city: "In the event that an animal impounded for forty-five (45) or more days is not adopted, fostered, or transferred to a humane organization, the ACD may humanely euthanize the impounded animal," "In the event that insufficient space exists for newly impounded animals, and that an animal past its redemption period is not adopted, fostered, or transferred to a humane organization, the ACD may humanely euthanize the impounded animal," and "Any impounded animal which appears to be suffering from serious injury or disease and which is in great pain and suffering and probably will not recover or which appears to have an infectious disease which is a danger to humans or to other animals in the opinion of the ACD or which, due to its extremely violent nature, poses a substantial risk of bodily harm to the safety of ACD staff, may be humanely euthanized at any time during its holding period." Election staff abruptly quits, upending rural Texas county

By PAUL J. WEBER

Associated Press

FREDERICKSBURG, Texas (AP) — Part of why Terry Hamilton says he abruptly left his job running elections deep in Texas wine country is by now a familiar story in America: He became fed up with the harassment that followed the 2020 election.

But this was no ordinary exit.

On the brink of November's midterm elections, it was not just Hamilton who up and quit this month but also the only other full-time election worker in rural Gillespie County. The sudden emptying of an entire local elections department came less than 70 days before voters start casting ballots.

By the middle of last week, no one was left at the darkened and locked elections office in a metal building annex off the main road in Fredericksburg. A "Your Vote Counts" poster hung in a window by the door.

A scramble is now underway to train replacements and ground them in layers of new Texas voting laws that are among the strictest in the U.S. That includes assistance from the Texas Secretary of State, whose spokesperson could not recall a similar instance in which an elections office was racing to start over with a completely new staff. But the headaches don't stop there. The resignations have more broadly made the county of roughly 27,000 residents — which overwhelmingly backed former President Donald Trump in 2020 — an extraordinary example of the fallout resulting from threats to election officials. Officials and voting experts worry that a new wave of harassment or worse will return in November, fueled by false claims of widespread fraud.

couldn't come to a closure, and they decided in frustration to just quit," said Saiidi, who also serves on the county's election commission.

A survey released in March by the Brennan Center for Justice at the New York University School of Law found that one in three election officials knows someone who has left a job in part because of threats and intimidation, and that one in six had experienced threats personally.

In Texas alone, at least 37 election administrators since the 2020 election have left what were previously stable positions, said Trudy Hancock, president of the Texas Association of Elections Administrators, citing a presentation she had seen. There are 254 counties in Texas, not all of which have dedicated election administration offices.

Threats are not all that's making the job tougher in Texas. A sweeping new voting law gives wide latitude to partisan poll watchers and threatens election workers with criminal charges for denying them access. The same law put new restrictions on mail voting but made a messy debut during Texas' first-in-the-nation primary in March, when more 23.000 mail ballots were discarded outright as voters struggled to navigate the new rules. It underscores the challenges a new staff will face getting up to speed under a time crunch. For now, Saiidi said the county clerk and tax assessor have been discussed as possible fills-in. Hancock, who is also the elections administrator in Brazos County, said her workers could previously take angry calls as voters blowing off steam. "But in this climate and the things that go on now, we have to take everything serious and at face value," she said.

Bennie Porter, 87, died Thursday. A me-

Hamilton, who has clashed with poll watchers in Gillespie County in past elections, said he didn't want to go through it again.

"That's the one thing we can't understand. Their candidate won, heavily," Hamilton said. "But there's fraud here?"

He declined to discuss the nature of the threats in a phone interview, referring questions to the county attorney, who did not respond to a phone message. Gillespie County Sheriff Buddy Mills said neither his department nor police in Fredericksburg had received information about threats from elections officials.

Hamilton worked under Anissa Herrera, the former county elections administrator whose resignation was first reported by the Fredericksburg Standard Radio Post. "I was threatened, I've been stalked, I've been called out on social media," she told the outlet. "And it's just dangerous misinformation."

The departures pile on the examples across the U.S. of how death threats, harassment and unfounded accusations have driven local election officials from their jobs. Citing the potential effect on democracy, the U.S. Department of Justice launched a task force last year toaddress rising threats against election officials.

They are familiar to many election workers in Texas, which has been at the vanguard of a Republican campaign nationwide to tighten election laws in response to Trump's baseless claims that the 2020 election was rigged. Supporters are easy to find in Gillespie County, a popular getaway to booming vineyards and vacation rentals in the scenic Texas Hill Country, which is a short day trip from the state's liberal capital in Austin but separated by a gulf politically. In 2020, Trump won the county with nearly 80% of the vote.

But the resignations surprised Mo Saiidi, chairman of the Gillespie County GOP, who said recent elections had run smoothly. Hamilton said run-ins with poll watchers traced back to 2020 but said other issues weighed on the office, including what he contended was was a lack of support from the county. He also recently decided to run as a write-in candidate for county treasurer, which he said required him to step down.

Saiidi believes funding played a role. "They had some differences and they

Less than 24 hours after the office in Gillespie County officially cleared out, the resignations were front of mind at a pavilion in Fredericksburg, where Democrat Beto O'Rourke had swung through in his campaign to unseat Republican Gov. Greg Abbott.

Roger Norman, 60, felt the election was still in good hands but called threats a pattern of intimidation. Outside, at a counter rally of Trump supporters, welder Abel Salazar said he had no concerns with elections in the heavily conservative county and that interest in poll watching was high.

"There are a lot of people that have been volunteering," Salazar, 53, said.

Hamilton said deadlines in his old office are already creeping up.

"They didn't think we did anything," he said.

The Big 12 is skimming the cream off the top of the American Athletic Conference next season, shifting the landscape for a second-tier conference that has struggled for a measure of national respectability.

Last year's AAC champion, Cincinnati (13-1, 8-0 AAC), became the first school outside a major conference to reach the College Football Playoff.

Runner-up Houston (12-2, 8-0) beat Auburn in the Birmingham Bowl and finished No. 17 in the country. Central Florida (9-4, 5-3) took down Florida in the Gasparilla Bowl.

All three will make the move to the Big 12 in 2023. First, though, they are expected to finish top of the table in their final AAC campaign.

Behind transfers and established upper-classmen, Cincinnati had a lightning-in-a-bottle 2021 season and made the CFP, only to lose to Alabama in a semifinal.

The Bearcats saw nine players chosen in the NFL draft, including quarterback Desmond Ridder, running back Jerome Ford and cornerbacks Ahmad Gardner and Coby Bryant.

"We lost a lot of big-time players and players that have been here for a long time," Cincinnati coach Luke Fickell said. "I say that life without Desmond Ridder and Coby Bryant is the best quarterbacks in the country, different, but I think that sometimes players in their own way are really excited about proving who they are and what they have done as leaders."

No. 23 Cincinnati will try to replace Ridder, one of the nation's top QBs a year ago, with Ben Bryant, who was Ridder's backup for two seasons before playing at Eastern Michigan last season, or sophomore Evan Prater. The Bearcats ended fall camp without declaring a starter.

The uncertainty is reflected in the AAC preseason media poll that picked Houston to finish No. 1 over Cincinnati by a single point (243-242).

Houston coach Dana Holgorsen isn't buying it.

"I doubt they were relying on just those guys within their program," Holgorsen said. "They probably have some good players behind them. They haven't lost a game in the conference in the last couple of years, so (Cincinnati) is going to have to be my pick. They are setting the standard for what it takes to win in the American."

No. 24 Houston has one of the more experienced quarterbacks in Clayton Tune, a fifth-year player who completed more than 68% of his passes and threw 30 touchdowns in 2021. He has started 30 college games.

"I've always believed in Clayton," Holgorsen said. "I think he's one of no doubt. Probably the biggest key is we got better pieces around him right now."

Tune's weapons include Nathaniel Dell, who was one of the nation's top receivers last year.

WELCOME BACK

At least seven other experienced quarterbacks are set to lead AAC squads in 2022: Holton Ahlers at East Carolina; Seth Henigan at Memphis; Davis Brin at Tulsa; Michael Pratt at Tulane; Tai Lavatai at Navy; D'Wan Mathis at Temple; and Tanner Mordecai at SMU.

CHANGING UNIFORMS

Making the AAC more unpredictable is the number of new players coming to the teams via the transfer portal.

SMU, South Florida, Central Florida and East Carolina brought in at least a dozen new players via the portal.

UCF coach Gus Malzahn noted that eight of the 16 transfers coming to Orlando left Southeastern Conference schools to do so.

Ole Miss transfer John Rhys Plumlee won the starting quarterback job at UCF, and Baylor transfer Gerry Bohanon was named starting QB at South Florida.

NEW BOSSES

The AAC has two new coaches in 2022. Rhett Lashlee takes over at SMU for Sonny Dykes, who moved on to the head coaching job at TCU. Lashlee returns to Dallas after serving as the SMU offensive coordinator in 2018-19 before moving to Miami. Stan Dravton takes over at Temple after spending the last five seasons as the running backs coach at Texas.

ONLY CONSTANT IS CHANGE

All the realignment leaves smaller conferences with a more uncertain competitive and economic landscape.

The AAC in 2023 is replacing its three top teams with a half dozen mid-majors imported from Conference USA.

Athlete compensation, the transfer portal and realignment have created a "perfect storm" for an unsettled situation, AAC Commissioner Mike Aresco said.

"We can lament realignment all we want, but we have to deal with it," Aresco said. "The realignment we have seen is of course driven by money and competitive positioning.

"We all know this a new and challenging era in college sports, unlike any that we've ever experienced," he said. "These are unsettling times."

TUESDAY August 23, 2022 Call for Cosmic Collaboration

People who recognize they have a lot to learn typically make the best teachers. They are open to the flow of information and find it easy to collaborate with other brilliant minds and build together. The passing of the sun into the realm of Virgo gets back to the very basics, suggesting we teach and learn, lead and follow, inhale and exhale love

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You're willing to try new approaches, so you'll get to one that works better. Be patient! Believe! It will happen! An action will provide immediate relief from fear and stress and give you something to help you leap to the next.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Waves break on the shore of a relationship -- nobody's fault but the tide's. Blame it on the moon, and then get up on your boards and ride this out. It could be scary, fun, a high point or a wash. You'll never know until you try.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21). You're not a vengeful person, but you do believe in justice, and there's something you feel you must put right. You will get your opportunity in time. When that time comes, your next move will be obvious. Until then, focus elsewhere.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). Though you may feel wary about change, letting go of attachments will clear the way for new energy. Try not to think of the exchange as a loss but rather as a trade. You'll know when the deal feels right.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). To relieve someone's suffering elevates your own experience. And if that someone happens to be you, you get the helper's high and the benefit of the help all at once. Every healing and each good feeling raises the vibe for all.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Education is a constant for you. The world is your textbook, lab and think tank. At day's end, you'll be like a college student coming out of a long day of lectures -- brain full, ready to blow off some steam.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23). There's excitement in imagining what life will bring you. Making plans helps you realize just what you want. Don't worry, your life will still be spontaneous. The detours will be all the more delightful when there's a plan to veer from.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). You don't have to be doing something at every moment to be extremely productive. In fact, overworking and too much activity is bad for your bottom line. Take it easy; play it cool. Slow and steady wins the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). There are those who seem to see themselves as superior to the rest and want to be treated as such. Though you like to help people feel important, you draw the line at feeding an unhealthy superiority complex.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Remind yourself that you may want a thing but you don't need it. This gives you leverage. Don't rush to come to an agreement. If you walk away, or seem like you're about to, the other side will sweeten the deal.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). While you had good reasons to fear certain situations and people, your knowledge and capability has grown since then. From this more powerful position you can effectively handle these challenges. Move forward.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Your fantasy life and your reality will intersect in a way that will have you wondering if you made this happen with your powerful thoughts or predicted it would happen through your exceptional intuition. Either way, it's on.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Aug. 23). Flexibility of mind and perspective is your cosmic birthday gift, a talent you'll apply to understanding the broader context of things and fitting into the big picture in more powerful and successful ways. More features: a secret wish answered, a family legacy proudly upheld and the purchase of a property. Pisces and Cancer adore you. Your lucky numbers are: 1, 2, 23, 18 and 41.

PROFILES: CELEBRITY We celebrate the birth and mourn Kobe Bryant, superstar, athlete and humanitarian who once helped the Los Angeles Lakers win three NBA championships in a row. Bryant was born when both the sun and Saturn were in Virgo, suggesting he lifted his superior talent with an unstoppable work ethic. Mercury in Leo speaks to Bryant's out-sized heart and charisma.
