SD Day Planned to Make County Safety Conscious Says Sheriff

Sheriff A. C. Shivers late yesterday voiced the hope that "Aransas County motorists and pedestrians make sure they're alive to enjoy Dec. 25 by keeping alert Dec. 1."

The sheriff was directing attention to the county's observance of Safe Driving Day on Dec. 1. Sponsored nationwide by the President's Committee for Traffic Safety, S-D Day is the attempt to awaken every driver in Aransas County and the U. S. to his opportunity and obligation to reduce traffic accidents through his own active caution and vigilance. The problem is as close to the driver and pedestrian as his two hands on the steering wheel or his two legs that carry him across the street. "We know it can be done if every driver and pedestrian in the county admits and acts on his own responsibility. The challenge to everyone concerned is just this: not a single traffic accident for the 24 hours of Dec. 1. And if a motorist can break a bad driving habit for one day, he can do it every day . . . just by paying year-around attention to correct driving procedures."

Concerning good driving habits, Sheriff Shivers suggested that every car owner become a defensive driver. "The defensive driver knows himself and his car to be ever exposed to 'enemies' like thoughtless motorists and pedestrians and unsafe traffic conditions. He makes allowances for these highway hotheads and street corner sleepwalkers. In short, he escapes accidents by anticipating and outsmarting them."

The sheriff suggested that drivers maintain a reasonable speed always within legal limits, obey all traffic regulations and try a little driving courtesy as a starter on S-D Day and every day. Pass only with plenty of room; never on hills or curves.

"Signalling to turn or stop isn't old fashioned," Shivers continued. "It's smart . . . so is extra alertness at intersections. Since darkness brings danger, slow down at sundown; keep far enough behind the car ahead to stop without the aid of its back bumper. And stay in line . . . don't weave."

Last Dec. 15, the first S-D Day, saw a reduced number of deaths, injuries and accidents, as against the national figure for that day in 1953. This year, score keeping of fatalities in Aransas County and across the country starts Nov. 21, ten days before S-D Day, and will continue ten days afterwards. Published reports of the results will let the motorists know, state by state, county by county, how others behaved in preventing driving injuries and deaths just before and after S-D Day.

1621 THANKSGIVING 1955

In 1621, the Pilgrims celebrated our first Thanksgiving holiday at Plymouth Colony by order of Governor William Bradford, to express their gratitude for the good things of life.

At that time, says H. M. Cleveland, manager of the Social Security Administration in Corpus Christi, the musket was one of the principal tools of the pioneers. It provided protection for the home and by the application of a steady hand and a clear eye, it brought down game to provide food for the table of the family and the neighbors.

There was a spirit of helpfulness in Colonial times which characterizes the American way of life today, Cleveland believes. During the 334 years since the first Thanksgiving, great changes have taken place. The muzzle loader above the fireplace is no longer a symbol of security. But as the population increased, and as we grew into a great industrial nation, new methods of meeting old problems were developed as they became necessary.

"Today—Thanksgiving 1955, we are found with the same qualities of enterprise and initiative which marked our people in earlier days. Communities are strengthened and families are protected through the joint efforts of individual members of society as before," he says.

"For example," Cleveland continued, "the retirement and family insurance provisions of the Social Security Act are made effective through the cooperation of workers, their employers, and those who are in business for themselves. Agriculture and industry, labor and management, participate together for the benefit of all of us."

"For the national strength that is ours at Thanksgiving time, we are especially grateful for the heritage handed down to us by our ancestors," he concluded.

Miss Kathleen Raymond and Mrs. Lloyd Smith were in Corpus Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elgie Ware and Mr. and Mrs. Bonner Smith were guests at Live Oak Apartments. Mr. Ware is mayor of Jewett, and Mr. Smith is a prominent oil operator. They were here on oil business.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. (Buddy) Robbins, Jr. arrived Saturday from San Antonio to visit through Thanksgiving until next Saturday with their parents, Mrs. G. D. Robbins, Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. B. D. (Bill) Mitchell. They are attending Tech Vocational College in San Antonio and studying art under the direction of Warren Hunter.

Fur, Feathers & Fins

By JACK BAUGHMAN

Every once in a while somebody pipes up with the bright idea that if we only had pheasants in Texas, there'd be plenty of hunting for everyone, despite the fact that plantings of these birds have never been successful in the state.

All that's needed, according to these prophets, is to find the right species, and the gunner's problems will be solved automatically.

Unfortunately, it's not quite that simple. A glance at the excellent maps in Delacour's "Pheasants of the World", a recognized authority on these birds, shows that none inhabit country like ours, nor do they occur in similar areas elsewhere.

Few people have any true concept of the geographical position of Texas. The southern tip of the state lies 500 miles south of the holy city of Jerusalem.

Two birds that fall within this classification, both of them excellent game, have been almost entirely overlooked by the game managers. These are the jungle fowl of India and the southern Asia, from which most of our domestic chickens are descended.

Delacour, who has a more thorough knowledge of the pheasant group (which includes jungle fowl) than probably anyone alive, believes that the red Indian species has never been given sufficient chance to prove its worth in this country where, he says, "in many districts they would be far preferable to ordinary pheasants."

Jungle fowl are wary, strong, cunning and prolific, and, while they acclimate themselves readily in most places they have been tried, never lose their wildness.

extremely good eating. They are also very attractive birds, with fiery crests and necks, a big, orange-colored patch at the base of the tail, and dark, metallic green body, wings, and tail feathers, resembling a brown Leghorn rooster. Best of all, several species do well in hot, dry, brush country like that found in much of Texas.

There are about 40 species of francolins, or spur-legged partridges, and they spread across parts of India, Indo-China, and Africa. A dozen species have been imported for private game collections, but, despite this, they are still largely unknown to most hunters.

Agriculture and high shooting pressure have reduced francolin populations in some areas of their native lands, but they have withstood these factors and the wild stock is largely unimpaired. Francolins have strong legs, fitted for both running and scratching, and short, heavy bills, adapted for a variety of foods. They thrive on seeds, grains, shoots, bulbs, insects, locusts, and grubs, and are prolific breeders. The babies are hardy, and eat from the day they are hatched.

Maybe one of these species could produce a new game bird for Texas.

Speaking of exotic game, there are one or two places in Texas where the hunter who is willing to pay for it can shoot Indian black buck, African aoudad, or Asiatic sambar, sika, fallow and axis deer.

Depending on how well-heeled you are, and how badly you want one, an aoudad (African wild sheep) will cost you $250; sambar, a big Asiatic deer that is nearly as large as an American elk, will set you back $300; black buck, the Indian antelope that maharajahs run with cheetahs, are $175; and axis and sika deer are $200 apiece up at Eddie Rickenbacher's ranch, near Hunt, Texas. No buck, he says, no cash.

Mark Moss, owner at Llano, has some exotic wild turkey, which may be killed on his ranches during the season.

The otter is the least known denizens of Texas waterways, yet one of the most interesting. It is now and then found in eastern or southern Texas. If captured when only a few weeks old, they make affectionate and gentle pets, for they're intelligent, easily trained, and friendly.

Usually two or three otter pups are born in April. Home is generally a bank burrow, perhaps an old muskrat or beaver den that has been abandoned by its original owner, or it has been known to be the base of a hollow tree.

When born, the youngsters are about the size of squirrels. Their eyes are closed, and their coats are dark—almost black. They do not see until they are about five weeks old and must be taught to swim and to hunt for crawfish that form a large part of their food when they are grown. The mother is a patient instructor and tends her brood carefully. They stay with her until almost a year old.

Travelers to Mexico can purchase canned, pure water at most of the border towns, some of which come from Boston, Mass., nearly 2,500 miles from Texas.

The common dolphin, caught offshore here during much of the year, is a fish of the open sea, a child of the great waters, ranging in many-colored beauty through all the oceans of the world. A dolphin in this area averages around four pounds or less, but the world record on rod and reel was a Hawaiian fish, weighing sixty-seven pounds and a half. Smaller fishes, shrimp and squid comprise the dolphin's food, and many tiny sailfish have been taken from the stomachs of these fish. Dolphin over twenty pounds in weight are often found in pairs, but smaller ones occur in pods or schools around bits of floating drift and, when found, offer wonderful opportunities for bait casting and spinning. They strike with terrific speed and generally hook themselves. The first run is long, swift and hard, and may be followed by a jump or two. After that the fish settles down to a plunging, sheering fight, somewhat like a jack, that may be tough on tackle.

The state's wild turkey population has taken a beating this year, and remains low despite a reasonably good hatch during the latter part of the nesting season. Weeds and grass have been high, and the predator population low, but this doesn't necessarily mean anything, for other states, like other species, have found out that they follow a rhythm of their own, which doesn't seem greatly affected by the predator population. Range conditions in the Hill country this year are supposed to be better than at any time since 1945, but the brood stock is low, and not too many young turkeys were raised, as, from one cause and another they were lost, even after the comparatively good hatch. Parts of the state outside the Hill country are about the same as last year, except for a slight improvement in some parts of East Texas.

There will be no open season in either Mason or Gillespie counties this year, and the legal limit in Kerr County will be only one gobbler. Moreover, many ranchers in areas where the season is open are prohibiting turkey hunting on their own account.

In Time, for November 7, there was a most interesting item on hunters and hunting in the U.S. "Among America's 5,000,000 big-game hunters," it says, "there are probably 5,000,000 differing but firmly held opinions on the right equipment and tactics for big-game hunting. One hunter will spend thousands of dollars for his kit, including such luxury items as Abercrombie and Fitch Co.'s pure cashmere long underwear ($99) and binoculars (at $230). Another will actually turn a profit on a hunting trip, spend less than $100 and come home with enough venison to stock his freezer."

Whoever wrote that sure knows his hunters, than whom there is no more argumentative bunch alive. "One hunter will contend that deer, being mostly nocturnal animals, should be stalked at dawn or dusk; another will hold firmly that they should be hunted in daylight. An experienced moose hunter will argue that a single shot from a comparatively light 30-30 is enough to fell a moose; a second will answer that only a powerful .35 Remington Express with a 200-grain bullet is equal to the task. It a bear's eyesight bad? Should elk be hunted on horseback? Is a Rocky mountain goat harder to kill than a grizzly? Fresh experiences refuel the old arguments every fall and keep them raging until the next big game hunting season comes around."

Bill Robbins will be here from Cameron, La. to spend Thanksgiving with his wife and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Roden and son, Rocky, arrived Friday from Port Lavaca to visit with Mrs. Roden's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Smith. They visited Saturday with her sister and family.

Den 1 met at the home of Mrs. Ernest Russell, den mother, with assistant den mothers, Mrs. W. E. Beasley and Mrs. W. A. Ormand. The meeting was opened with the living circle. The law of the pack was recited. The Cubs had a short business meeting and then roll call.

Den 2 met at the home of Mrs. Ernest Russell, den mother, with assistant den mothers, Mrs. W. E. Beasley and Mrs. W. A. Ormand. The meeting was opened with the living circle. The law of the pack was recited. The Cubs had a short business meeting and then roll call.

Den 3 met at the home of Mrs. Gene Everett, den mother with Mrs. Hugh Morrison, assistant den mother, present.

The Cubs practiced the flag ceremony and sang songs. They also practiced for the skit. Bobby Borchert was elected keeper of the Buck Skin.

They worked on hats for the next pack meeting.

Roger Carroll served refreshments. Cubs present were Tom Wells, Bubba Armstrong, Bill Wilson, Hugh Morrison, Andy Everett, Tommy Cassell, Roger Carroll, Danny Zawadzki, Bobby Borchert and Bill Cutchler.

Den 5 met at the home of Mrs. Shelley Roaten with Mrs. Herbert Mills present.

The meeting was opened with the flag ceremony and the pledge of allegiance was recited.

The Cubs completed their scrap books to be displayed at the next pack meeting.

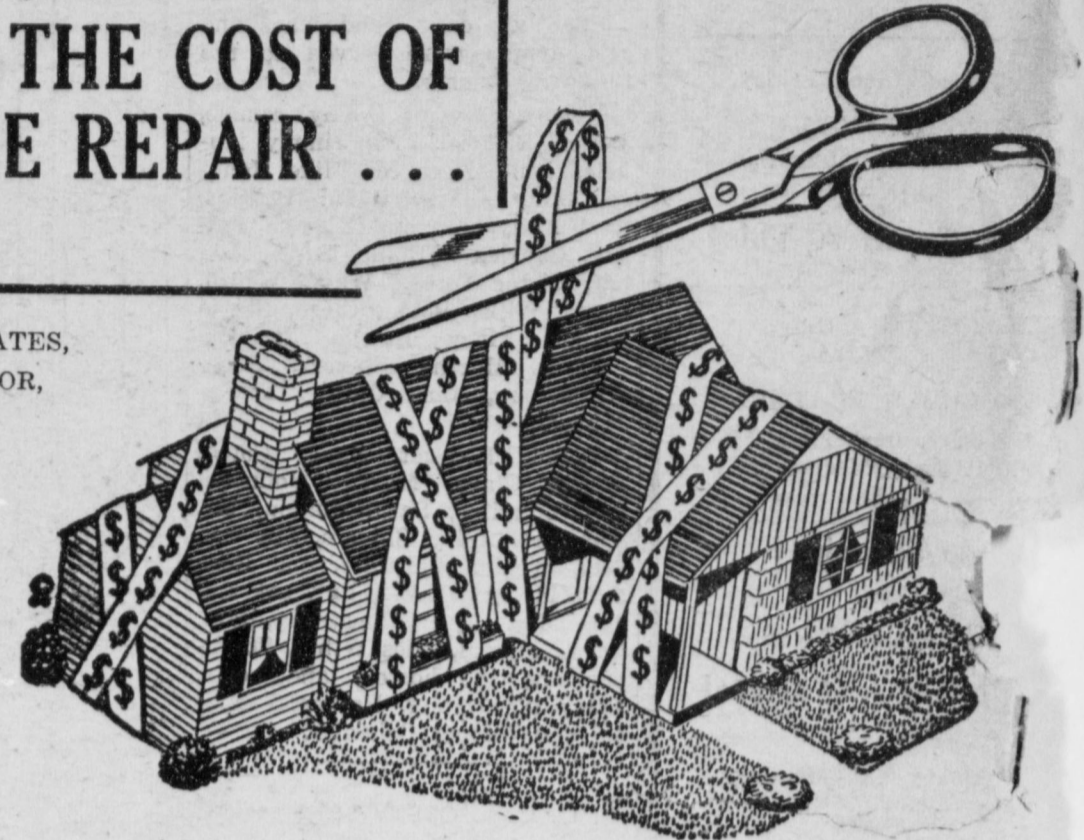

They worked on costumes and practiced for the skit for the next pack meeting. David Picton furnished refreshments and Cubs presided over the business meeting. Among the items under new business were the announcements that food is to be taken to the next pack meeting for a needy family and that a hand carved miniature Indian totem pole will be awarded the Den having the largest attendance at the pack meeting. As a closing of the den sang the two songs the theme for the month. At the activity period the Cubs lacked the waste baskets they made during the month, cutting them for display.

Proposed High School Layout

This is the High School Campus, approved by the school board, and for which a portion of the bond issue that will be voted on December 3 will be used. Due to lack of space, it was impossible to show the same sort of picture as of Rockport Elementary, but a good idea of the layout can be obtained from this plan. The black areas to the right show the present building. To the left of these, and connected with them by a covered walk, will be the junior high school classrooms, and, if possible, a new home economics classroom. The present building used by the home economics class will be converted into a receiving room where all school supplies, etc., will be delivered, to keep from interrupting classes at the two schools. In the lower left hand corner of the sketch is shown the new gymnasium, and in the upper left a diagram of the eventual development at the present stadium.

We Are Thankful

We are fortunate to live in a land of such abundant resources, and freedoms as we have.

Our freedoms were the reason why this country was set up by the founding Fathers. Our laws were made for the few who could not observe the rights of our country. Freedom of the press makes it possible for us to have newspapers, and to say what we think.

We have some duties to perform for each right we have. The right to vote is one that so many people gripe about, yet you will always find that few that don't care enough about their right to go down and cast their vote to the best of their ability.

This Thanksgiving we should be thankful that we have so much freedom. Also, that our nation has been able to overcome the many difficulties that we have been faced with.
