FAMILY LAWYER

Heart Attack At Wheel

What trouble may befall the driver who suffers a heart attack while driving his car. His woes may include not only the heart attack itself, but even legal action for any injuries he happens to inflict upon somebody else.

When will the law impose liability on such a person? Generally speaking, when he had reason to foresee the likelihood of a heart attack (or some other disability). Anyone who drives the wheel under these circumstances is committing an affirmative act of negligence.

For example: A man went for a drive, even though he had a severe, chronic heart condition. He did suffer a heart attack, did collide with another car, and did cause injury to the other driver. And, in due course, a court held him responsible for the injury. Reason: he could have avoided the accident while driving in the first place. On the other hand, courts usually say that a first-time disability, coming "out of the blue," is not grounds for liability.

Thus, in another case, a court refused to impose liability for an accident on a driver who had backed out for the first time in his life. One court even classified an unavoidable accident caused by a sneeze when the man didn't see the slightest warning that a sneeze was coming.

In one unusual case, a man headed down a steep hill in spite of the fact that he knew his brakes were in bad condition. When the car began to roll out of control, he became so frightened that he fainted.

Did his sudden fainting excuse him from responsibility for the collision that took place at the bottom of the hill? No, ruled a court, holding him liable. The court pointed out that while the man could not be blamed for fainting, he could indeed be blamed for starting downhill with bad brakes. It was just original act of negligence, ruled the judge, that set the stage for disaster.

4-H'ers Swell Nation's Horse Population

Horse race handicappers use a combination of numbers when figuring odds: age, track time, starts, wins, post position, weight, and so on.

7 Million Horses

Another handicapper has figured out how many horses there will be in the U.S. starting with 7 million in 1970, which averages about one horse for every 30 people. By 1977 he predicts that the horse population will reach 10 million, when 82 million people are expected to ride a horse at least once a year.

Among those 82 million will be a sizable number of ex-4-H members who learned to ride, train, show and take care of horses as teenagers. They were in the national 4-H horse program supervised by the Cooperative Extension Service.

Enrollment has jumped 600 percent in the last 10 years. Now 225,000 boys and girls between 9 and 19 years of age own or have access to one or more horses.

"I've got to get Julie clean for the show," says 4-H'er Lori Ferreri. This scene is repeated many times as 4-H horse club members spruce up their mounts for the show ring or just a ride along the trail. Lori is one of the 7 million horse owners throughout the U.S.

funds for six annual scholarships of $800 each, hosts the top state winners at the National 4-H Congress in Chicago and pays their expenses.

The 4-H'ers benefit not only from guidance of leaders in their horse clubs, but from cooperation of horse breed associations.

Besides fun, comradeship and pride of ownership inherent in the 4-H horse program, there is preparation and conditioning for part-time jobs, or full-time careers in the fast growing equine industry. The sponsor also provides

Attend The Church of Your Choice

WHAT BELONGS WHERE? ??

The hub of a railroad—the classification yard. Could you, without training or experience, take charge here? Could you sort and "spot" thousands of cars, have them ready at the right time on the right track to go out with the right train?

But every day your mind performs an operation even more complex. You sort and classify your thoughts and impulses. You decide what is right and wrong. You determine which actions are urgent, and which can be deferred. You resolve that some goals are important, and others are secondary. And every decision affects your life, and the lives of others!

Preparing men and women—and boys and girls—to make the right decisions is one of the great functions of the Church. There are sound Christian standards by which life's choices should be sorted. There is confidence and strength for those who seek, learn and practice the true Way of Life.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

COTTON TALKS

FROM PLAINS COTTON GROWERS, INC.

In a surprise move the U.S. Senate July 8 voted 40 to 35 in favor of a $20,000 limit on payments to individual farmers under federal cotton, wheat and feed grains programs for 1971.

The vote came on an amendment to the annual agricultural appropriations bill and was a reversal of action last year when the Senate voted down an identical amendment by 53 to 34. Surprised were Washington friends of agriculture in both House and Senate, farm organization leaders and even the aides of Republican Senator Ralph Smith of Illinois, the man who offered the amendment.

The House-passed version of the appropriations bill for agriculture and related agencies carried no limitation of payments and authorized a total appropriation of $7.2 billion, about $800 million less than the bill passed in the Senate. The Senate increased the House appropriation for food stamps by $500 million and raised the amounts allocated to a few other programs.

Donald Johnson, Executive Vice President of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, said "There is hope that the $20,000 per farmer limitation can be knocked out in the House-Senate Conference Committee." He added, however, that "there is great danger that this cannot be done if the appropriations bill is allowed to go to Conference Committee before the House Agriculture Committee reports out a farm bill."

Johnson noted that Congressman Paul Findley (R-Ill.), a long-time advocate of a payment limit, already has advised House members he will move to have House conferees instructed to accept the Senate limitation amendment. "And," Johnson continued, "considering that the House membership has twice in the past voted a $20,000 amendment to the appropriations bill, you have to assume that Findley's motion to instruct conferees would carry."

Johnson explains that some House members who favor a ceiling on farm payments are now fearful that a farm bill may not reach the House floor this year, therefore depriving them of the opportunity to impose a limitation. "And with this in mind these House members would likely vote for limiting payments by way of an amendment to the appropriations bill."

On the other hand if the House Agriculture Committee reports out a bill and it, along with the payment limitation issue, can be considered by the House before a move is made to send the appropriations bill to conference, the situation would be different.

The $20,000 limitation passed by the Senate, if made to stick, would apply to direct payments under cotton, wheat and feed grains programs for 1971. But as of now there are no 1971 programs for these commodities that involve direct payments. The permanent farm legislation that is on the books provides support for cotton, wheat and feed grain prices by means of non-recourse loans, not payments. So unless Congress acts to pass commodity programs that continue some form of direct payments, the Senate's amendment to the appropriations bill could be meaningless.

However most observers consider chances for this to happen are less than slim. Congress appears to be in the mood to severely limit the benefits available to individual farmers under federal programs, regardless of the effects on the agricultural and national economy. And it now appears inevitable that this objective, one way or another, will be reached.

It is impossible to assess the effects of a $20,000 payment limitation, should it become law, on agricultural producers without first knowing to what sort of program and what rate of payments it would apply. On the High Plains if one assumed program provisions and payment rates similar to those in effect for 1970, between 10 and 12 percent of the farmers would suffer reduced incomes, the total amount of payments made on the Plains could be reduced around 25 percent and a like percentage of agricultural production would be affected.

Spider Mites Feed On Tomato Plant Sap

Spider mites are one of the most destructive pests of tomatoes. By their feeding on the sap of tomato plants they can greatly decrease production of tomatoes in the home garden. When spider mites are left uncontrolled tomato plants soon die. Heavy damage is caused to tomato plants during hot, dry weather.

The leaves of damaged tomato plants become blotched with pale yellow spots ranging from small specks to large areas on both the upper and lower surfaces. The underside of the leaves look like they have been lightly dusted with fine white powder.

With magnification fine strands of silk and small greenish or reddish mites can be seen.

Several materials may be used to control spider mites. These are dicofol (Kelthane) sulfur and malathion. Dicofol will give most effective control but several applications may be required. Sulfur and malathion are not as effective but might be used where dicofol is not available.

Pesticides should be applied according to information given on the label. Further information on control of pests in the home garden is available at your county agricultural agents office.

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J. E. PERVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

It's often been called the "near-perfect food", and rightly so, because milk contains more life-giving properties than almost any other food. But this very fact makes the control of the sanitation and quality of milk and dairy products a constant concern of the Texas State Department of Health.

In Texas, the legislature has given the Commissioner of Health Dr. J. E. Peravy the authority to adopt regulations in accordance with those released by the Commissioner. "Proper handling" as interpreted by these health departments means the production of clean milk from cows which are tested and proven to be in good health. As a continuing safeguard, the milk must be handled under rigidly enforced sanitary conditions to prevent its being contaminated from the time of its production until it reaches the processing plant. It is likewise maintained at temperatures which inhibit bacterial growth. After the milk arrives at the plant, its sanitation continues to be rigidly maintained through proper pasteurization and final packaging in sanitary containers. With all of the safeguards which are routinely and continuously applied, the possibility of milk becoming a carrier of pathogenic disease is virtually eliminated.

The Milk and Dairy Products Division of the State Health Department is responsible for public health protection by regulating milk and dairy products, including butter, ice cream, cheese, and the like, produced, processed, and consumed in Texas. The division also has the responsibility of inspecting Grade A producer dairies, milk processing plants, receiving stations, and other by-products plants that ship milk and dairy products into the state of Texas. Approximately 3,967 inspectors in seven states other than Texas have been made by Health Department personnel during the first five months of this year. Permits have been issued to about 200 over-the-road tankers.

Here in Texas, local health departments join with the state agency in maintaining frequent inspections of the 4,175 producer dairies, 77 processing plants, 12 receiving stations, 73 transfer stations, 68 manufacturing plants, 111 single service plants, and 157 trucks and vans in operation within the state. Frequent samples are taken and checked at several regional health laboratories, as well as the state lab, for sanitation, bacteria count, and butterfat content.
