Remembers 1932 Parade

Dear Editor:

Enclosing some photos that may be interesting. 'Twas the last parade I remember in Jayton, 1932.

That was the year of George Washington's Bi-centennial. Parades were held nationwide celebrating Washington's 200th birthday, and was probably in the fall. Perhaps your Jayton paper files would tell you the date. I'm sure it must have been a Saturday because that was the only day Jayton ever had that many people in town when farmers and ranchers came to town to trade and visit. They were too busy to take any other day away from work.

Guff caught up the community burro packed him. Guff dragged the bottom of his britches to fit in with the hard times, and times had been hard and had more rags than not.

The parade had been formed north of the square somewhere between the Rest Home and the old Lowrance home. It would be interesting to know who Guff's parade partner was. Could have been Harman Mayes, proprietor of machine and blacksmith shop that was in the vicinity of Sleepy's barber shop and Kelly's old kitchen; however, that man in the photo seems younger than I remembered Harman. In No II photo Guff followed by a covered wagon approaching the square, rounding the corner of Bryant-Link store, finally occupied by the Joiners. The boy standing by the right rear of the car and directly under the phone pole is believed to be A. J. Lafoon.

In the photo it is evident the parade has disbanded and Guff and his partner is on his way home. The subjects are blurred but in the background is the old Black motor Ford house, rt.; old C. S. Kennedy Store, center; and the Bank building which by this time in 1932 had locked its doors. Further south of the back is the old Garnett Hotel, probably Barfoot by '32, I believe it was built soon after the railroad came to Jayton. It housed the post office, the bank, known as the Jay Bank, and the hotel.

The Burro was one belonging to anyone who wanted to catch him up to ride, feed, and take care of. When a kid or family tired of him he was turned loose on the town and some one was almost always ready to claim him or give him a hand out and I never remember seeing him thin enough to see his ribs. The only family I can still recall now was the Dr. Alexander family, one of whom it your postmaster. They were few among many who enjoyed him and I'm sure he had just as many names.

I remember seeing a young man about 16 with the burro one day. He'd ridden him to Guff Lafoon's service station and dismounted to chew the fat awhile with Guff. Upon leaving, he mounted the saddled burro and headed east and the young man dug his spurs into the burro and he dumped him right then and there but his spur became entangled in some of the saddle gear. The burro didn't take another step until that young man had extricated himself some 5 minutes later by resorting to taking the spur off his brogan. The burro napped.

Knowing he was such a gentle, good natured animal, Guff said, "Boy, that mule was mighty good to you just now. Better throw them damn spurs away". The young man put the spurs on the saddle horn instead and rode away. I've often wondered what became of the burro, and who brought him to Jayton in the first place.

There Is Help For The Physically Handicapped

Persons with physical handicaps who need treatment and services in Kent County may find the services they need through Mr. Bearl Murdoch who is the Kent County representative of the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas.

The Easter Seal Society offers rehabilitation services to children and adults with physical disabilities including speech and hearing problems, according to Mr. Murdoch.

The Society also operates an information and referral service that will direct residents of Kent County to other appropriate sources of health and welfare aid in the area, he said.

He urged parents, doctors, nurses, clergymen and other individuals and organizations to refer handicapped persons who need assistance to the Easter Seal Society by contacting him at the Kent County State Bank, Jayton.

The Texas Easter Seal Society helps support 20 treatment centers where services are provided to crippled children and adults regardless of their ability to pay. Physical, occupational and speech therapy are offered to help the handicapped to overcome their disabilities.

The Easter Seal program is financed by contributions made during the Easter Seal Campaign which is now underway and will continue until April 12, Easter Sunday. During 1970, the Texas Easter Seal Society provided treatment and services to over 21,000 children and adults with a variety of physical handicaps.

Mr. Murdoch urged that contributions to the Easter Seal Appeal be made as soon as possible.

For a good while this columnist has been giving thought to the condition that would result if Alaska becomes a state and is gratifying to learn others are concerned about it too.

Passing the Pedal Pusher

Motorists today are sharing our streets and highways with more than 60 million bicycle riders, an all-time high. As never before, a driver must be alert to his legal responsibilities as he passes his slow and silent companion of the road.

The law's Number One Rule is that a motorist must make fair allowance for the vagaries of bicycle riding. Take this case:

A driver saw a bicyclist ahead of him on the highway, wobbling noticeably. It seems that the rider was steering his bike with one hand and balancing a rake over his shoulder with the other. Nevertheless, the driver neither slowed down nor steered to the left. At the last instant, the bicyclist lurched into his path and got hit.

Was the driver guilty of negligence? A jury decided that he was indeed, for failing to adapt his driving to a danger he should easily have foreseen.

Still, motorists are not expected to do the impossible.

Another case also involved a bicycle that swung across the path of a car. But this time, the accident occurred on a dark night, the bicycle had no lights, and the rider was wearing dark clothing from head to toe.

Under these circumstances, the court saw no reason for blaming the motorist. The court said he could hardly be expected to notice someone who was so nearly invisible.

Furthermore, the bicyclist himself has the responsibility of handling his own vehicle with care.

One rider, pedalling around a bend, crashed into a car that was parked at the curb. Painfully injured, he decided to put in a claim against the owner of the car. He based his case on the fact that the car had been parked in a no-parking zone.

But the court refused to let him shift the blame for what was really his own fault. The court said:

"A bicycle rider has the same duty as any other vehicle operator—to keep it under such control that he can avoid collisions. He cannot, willy-nilly, run into a standing vehicle and (expect to) recover damages."

JAYTON 1932—SENIOR GOSSIP

Happy Worten is back with us this week after a severe tussle with a sore throat.

We promise not to tell but it is too good to keep. Kelly and Wade had heavy dates Monday night with two junior girls. Probably that accounts for the sleepy look they wore the next morning after.

C. C. is wearing an Abilene classing this week. Wonder what that means?

Jack looks unique this week with his prolix hair, just a tad we suppose---Oho Blondy and Wilma those eyelashes and eye brows.

Goodness what that? Oh nothing much, only Top Chub and Winnonah raising Cain because their class rings won't hurry and come, such temper.

Pete lost his dignity Monday morning in Spanish and went to sleep.

See Med if you wish to know how the correct gentleman dresses.

Something you never see--

Bearl with out that sleepy look.

"Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must undergo the fatigue of supporting it."

Thomas Paine Sept. 12, 1777

"We, the People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquillity, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

This short paragraph—the Preamble of the Constitution for the United States of America—states in one sentence the intentions of the men who wrote it. Not many would find themselves in disagreement with the proposed objectives, but from the beginning there has been disagreement over the laws which would be necessary to fulfill these objectives. Some of this disagreement arises out of the tendency of many of us to look at everything in the light of our own personal desires, ambitions and material gain.

In order to be able to properly evaluate laws, either those now in force or those being proposed, we need to take a more impersonal point of view and try to think more in terms of "WE, the people of the (WHOLE) UNITED STATES, —"

© Coleman Advertising Serv. 7537 Tanna Drive Dallas, Texas 75229

Our precious heritage embodied in the flag of the United States, is as alive today as it was when written for the ages in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. It stands for all the world to see and for all Americans to cherish. And in the tradition of Washington, J. Adams, and Hamilton, we, too, have a privilege, a right, and a duty. While we may disagree as to the methods, we should not disagree as to the goal—that of preserving the greatest democratic society the world has ever known. Our flag is a symbol, not of sentiment, but of history, the history of men and women willing to live and die for it. Surely this willingness is with us still, because daily we experience more of the blessings that are ours—more because we are Americans.

LIVING WALLS

BY NANCY BRADY

BEDROOMS

A narrow, uninspiring room six feet, six inches wide (left) was transformed into a functional bedroom for a teenager (right) with the help of the Wallcovering Industry Bureau. Bright colors are liberally mixed with white in wallcovering. Module chests alternated colors in drawers and pulls in white and green repeat the fresh green vinyl wallcovering. Removable framed mesh panels now hide the ugly water pipe and a fiberglass ceiling brings it to the proper height for the room. A matching fabric glamorizes the floor-to-ceiling posts of a canopied bed. A new wash basin has a laminated cabinet that matches the wallcovering.

A masculine and a feminine temperament can seldom agree on the subject of a wallcovering pattern for a mutual bedroom background, but they can generally decide on colors they both like, and find stripes and textures in wallcovering in that color range which will please both of them.

Master bedrooms should strive for a tailored look, with valances over the windows, simple draperies, and simple but comfortable furniture. Serenity and comfort might be the watchwords, and a fireplace—that works!—is to be prized.

In a large bedroom there may even be "his" and "her" sections, furnished accordingly, although the best solution is to have separate dressing-rooms in which the background and appointments can differ from the bedroom proper, to the degree that they are isolated.

Children? From infancy the individuality of a child ought to be respected. Psychologists now believe that tiny children enjoy bright primary colors as well as pastels and merchandise for the nursery suggests this. One thing is certain, their response to animal motifs is unmistakable. Since babies and toddlers spend so much time in bed, decorated borders around a room at a level where they can be seen should help keep them entertained. Scrubbable vinyls relieve the worry factor in all-over-the-wall use. Strip-pables make it simple to remove and replace when childish motifs are outgrown.

The principal factor in a room that may signify the girl's or boy's age may be the wallcovering. Every year or so this may reflect his or her changing taste. Children outgrow a background as they do their clothes. Happily, by the time they are teenagers they should be able to select their own patterns and, what's more, apply them. Prepacked papers and strip-pable wallcovering should be investigated with this in view.

For information on wallpaper and wallcoverings, send $1.00 for a 208-page book to: "Living Walls," Wallcovering Industry Bureau, 969 Third Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022.

NEWS OF ECOLOGY

SHARING THE WATERS. Oilmen and fishermen coexist compatibly in the Gulf of Mexico, where both oil and fishing are important industries. The reason: oil companies take special precautions to keep the waters clean. The salt water that is produced with crude oil is separated from the crude in installations such as the Texaco Inc. facility above, where it is then run through elaborate purification equipment, then released to the sea as clean water. Moreover, the artificial reefs formed by pilings of installations like this soon swarm with marine life, to create exciting new fishing in the Gulf of Mexico.

We promise not to tell but it is too good to keep. Kelly and Wade had heavy dates Monday night with two junior girls. Probably that accounts for the sleepy look they wore the next morning after.

C. C. is wearing an Abilene class ring this week. Wonder what that means?

Jack looks unique this week with his pixie hair. Just a tad we suppose--Oho Blondy and Wilma those eyelashes and eye brows.

Goodness what that? Oh nothing much, only Top Club and Winnona raising ca in because their class rings won't hurry and come, such temper.

Pete lost his dignity Monday morning in Spanish and went to sleep.

See Med if you wish to know how the correct gentleman dresses.

Something you never see--

Beard without that sleepy look.

SENIORS NEW YEARS PARTY

Last Thursday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. L. Alexander, the seniors were entertained with a New Years party. Many interesting games were played after which refreshments of coffee, cake and sandwiches were served to the seniors and their sponsors. Everyone had a wonderful time.

The seniors are expecting their rings this week.

Attend The Church of Your Choice

Those who expect to reap the blessings of freedom must undergo the fatigue of supporting it."

Thomas Paine - Sept. 12, 1777

"We, the People of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

This short paragraph--the Preamble of the Constitution for the United States of America--states in one sentence the intentions of the men who wrote it. Not many would find themselves in disagreement with the proposed objectives, but from the beginning there has been disagreement over the laws which would be necessary to fulfill these objectives. Some of this disagreement arises out of the tendency of many of us to look at everything in the light of our own personal desires, ambitions and material gain.

In order to be able to properly evaluate laws, either those now in force or those being proposed, we need to take a more impersonal point of view and try to think more in terms of "WE, the people of the (WHOLE) UNITED STATES."

LIVING WALLS

BY NANCY BRADY

BEDROOMS

A narrow, uninspiring room six feet, six inches wide (left) was transformed into a functional bedroom for a teenager (right) with the help of the Wallcovering Industry Bureau. Bright colors are liberally mixed with white in wallcovering. Module chests alternated colors in drawers and pulls in white and green repeat the fresh green vinyl wallcovering. Removable framed mesh panels now hide the ugly water pipe and a fiberglass ceiling brings it to the proper height for the room. A matching fabric glamorizes the floor-to-ceiling posts of a canopied bed. A new wash basin has a laminated cabinet that matches the wallcovering.

A masculine and a feminine temperament can seldom agree on the subject of a wallcovering pattern for a mutual bedroom background, but they can generally decide on colors they both like, and find stripes and textures in wallcovering in that color range which will please both of them.

Master bedrooms should strive for a tailored look, with valances over the windows, ample draperies, and simple but comfortable furniture. Serenity and comfort might be the watchwords, and a fireplace—that works—is to be prized.

In a large bedroom there may even be "his" and "her" sections, furnished accordingly, although the best solution is to have separate dressing-rooms in which the background and appointments can differ from the bedroom proper, to the degree that they are isolated.

Children? From infancy the individuality of a child ought to be respected. Psychologists now believe that tiny children enjoy bright primary colors as well as pastels and merchandise for the nursery suggests this. One thing is certain, their response to animal motifs is unmistakable. Since babies and toddlers spend so much time in bed, decorated borders around a room at a level where they can be seen should help keep them entertained. Scrubbable vinyls relieve the worry factor in all-over-the-wall use. Strip-pables make it simple to remove and replace when childish motifs are outgrown.

The principal factor in a room that may signify the girl's or boy's age may be the wallcovering. Every year or so this may reflect his or her changing taste. Children outgrow a background as they do their clothes. Happily, by the time they are teenagers they should be able to select their own patterns and, what's more, apply them. Prepasted papers and strippable wallcovering should be investigated with this in view.

NEWS OF ECOLOGY

SHARING THE WATERS. Oilmen and fishermen coexist compatibly in the Gulf of Mexico, where both oil and fishing are important industries. The reason: oil companies take special precautions to keep the waters clean. The salt water that is produced with crude oil is separated from the crude in installations such as the Texaco Inc. facility above, where it is then run through elaborate purification equipment, then released to the sea as clean water. Moreover, the artificial reefs formed by pilings of installations like this soon swarm with marine life, to create exciting new fishing in the Gulf of Mexico.

GENTLE BEN SIGNS ON FOR SAVINGS BONDS -- In first-of-a-kind ceremony during Utah State Fair, Salt Lake City, big lovable "Gentle Ben", bear/star of television fame, gave gruff but hearty endorsement to Payroll Savings. Speaking through his manager, TV Star CANDY CANDIDO, Ben urged all patriotic Utahns to "Take Stock in America". He says he plans to buy retirement home in Florida, with his Bonds, when his acting days are done. With crowds of delighted youngsters watching, "Gentle Ben" made his paw-mark on replica of $100 Savings Bond, presented him by Mrs. KATHLEEN MEIKLE, Utah State Director for Savings Bonds.

BUILDING A BETTER WORLD ENGINEERING TO IMPROVE LIVING

OVERCROWDING
Can American towns and cities be made livable again? And, assuming that they may be, why should anybody bother? These questions were hotly debated at an informal "rap session" held late in 1970 at a meeting of the Interprofessional Council on Environmental Design at College Park, Maryland.

When the statement was made by one of the participants that overcrowding is an unavoidable feature of city life, and that cities are therefore outmoded, most of the assembled civil engineers, architects, and social scientists disagreed. "Irrelevant! Nonsense! Irresponsible! Ridiculous!" they cried. It was not population density, but poor planning at the lack of any plan at all that was at fault.

In the past, cities "just grew" or grew one section at a time, like a child's sand castle. Civil engineers were rarely asked to plan and design a "good" place to live—cost and "convenience" were usually uppermost. As a result, many urban centers are now hodge-podge, just able to support human life but unable to nourish it and help give it meaning. Engineers who dared to suggest the idea that a plan for a human community be accorded the same attention as one intended for livestock facilities were too often considered visionary and impractical.

William H. Wisely, Executive Director of the American Society of Civil Engineers, has pointed out that 85% of the 101 million new Americans whose births are expected over the next 30 years will live in the already-overcrowded 11 major urban areas. Unless this pattern of American life is drastically re-directed, Americans will suffer disastrously from this overcrowding.

Impressive laboratory evidence implicates overcrowding as a source of discontent, poor health, and anti-social aggressive behavior. Rats raised under overcrowded cage conditions soon show mental and physical stress. Sexual failure, unsociability, irritability, even cannibalism, is often the result.

Is a similar psychological reaction against human overcrowding one of the causes of drug addiction and crime in our cities? Can and will better planned cities shelter our increasing population without causing social problems?

Engineer Wisely believes that we are standing at a crossroads. "Here is a real and timely opportunity," he said recently. "For the social sciences to make a significant contribution to environmental design theory and practice." Humans are vastly more adaptable than other "social" animals, but making tomorrow's communities more habitable will take much better planning than past generations of Americans ever considered necessary.

ROCCO ELEGANCE

There is no better way to express splendor and charm in the home than to recapture the graceful, devastating elegance of French Rococo styling.

A gift from the 18th century court of Louis XV, the best of rococo is exemplified in this Thomasville-founded room. Featuring "Flare Venetian" bookcase, cocktail and lamp table, the distinctive authentic styling is highlighted by flowing serpentine fronts... marquetry-inlay tops... and richly carved flower designs on cabriole legs and dove moldings.

Even the woods are warm and unique, blending leafy, heart-shaped walnut veneers and pecan solids with unusually rich grain patterns that create the one-of-a-kind look on every piece.

Even Louis, himself, would feel quite at home in this elegant, nostalgic salon setting. And chances are—you would, too!

HOME BUYER

CLINIC
By John W. Warren
Vice President
American Land Title Association

Difficulties in Deed
It isn't unusual to encounter a home owner who confidently states, in effect,

"Sure, I own my property. My name's on the deed."

Unfortunately, a deed may not assure the home buyer that he owns anything. It is merely a document in which the seller of real estate transfers his right of ownership to the buyer in a home purchase transaction. The John W. Warren deed does not prove the seller is the owner, nor does it eliminate rights others may claim in the property.

A woman in a southeastern state learned of difficulty that can be experienced with a deed when workmen unexpectedly began clearing her land to make way for a shopping center. She had been paying taxes on the real estate for years and held a deed. But the shopping center owner also had a deed and his title prevailed.

class of mail is going up except parcel post, I hear, and that's the one where the Government has some competition. I saw by the papers where a regular mail outfit was trying to start, but it got in trouble cause the Government said it couldn't use regular mailboxes. Looks like what the mail needs is healthy competition to keep the rates down.

Practical speaking, I think the mail cure is going to be worse than the disease. Business gets ahead by giving good service at reasonable rates. The mails is trying to keep a corner on the market, charge as much as it wants to, and give as little service as it can.

The truth is, Mister Editor, if private business tried that, the Government would close em down.

Yours truly,
UNKEL ZEKE

UNKEL ZEKE SEZ

DEAR MISTER EDITOR:

I don't know nothing and I git that mixed up, so I wish somebody would set me straight on this new postal service that President Nixon says is going to put delivering the mail on a sound foot. For a short spell there, I had some better that things might git better, but now I think its jest another case of paying more and more fer less and less.

Mister Editor, I've studied up one side and down the other what I've seen in the papers about this hole new set of mail rate hikes, and the best I can figger it all means rates is going up and service is going down. I recall when they first come up with this private corporation the idea was to run the mails like big business. It looks like the Postal Service now is trying to show business how to go bankrupt in one lesson.

Furthermore, it looks like the Government is going backwards from its usual way when

It is trying to set the mails up as a private outfit. When we have trouble with railroads, they is talk of nationalizing them as a cure for all that ails em. When steel making is the big problem, they is talk of putting the mills under Government control. But the way to fix the mails, Mister Editor, is to take it out of Government control. Like I said, they shore is a heap I don't understand.

General, I allus thought the mails was a public service that people provided themselves. I figgered we had ought to run as good a mail service as we can, but I never felt it had to be a money-making deal. Off hand, I can't think of a single Government service that shows a profit. When you take a public service out of public control, they ain't no telling what's going to come of it.

The newspapers jest not through with a three-step mail rate hike, and now another whopper is coming. This new outfit says newspaper rates will go up 142 per cent this spring. Actual, ever stagle out till Nancy is up to caring for two babies.

We have fold over "Thank You" cards printed in silver with envelopes, 4 cents each buy one or as many as you want—at the Jayton Chronicle.

We received a letter this week and a check for a year's subscription to the Jayton Chronicle, from Mrs. Willie Ratliff of Desert Center, California. She states, "We live here real well. Where we live is mostly desert, but we have lots of good water, so that helps. Wish you all could get a good rain."

"The weather has been real nice, but it is dry here, also. Tell everyone we said, "hello", and we will be looking forward to receiving the Chronicle."

We are so very sorry to hear of the death of Mr. G. H. Brown. "Cade", as we all knew him. He was in business in Jayton for many years. He was always jolly and enjoyed a good talk with everyone. He had been unable to get out much in the last few years, due to ill health. He kept up with current events in and around home.

The mother of Mrs. Bill Vencil underwent surgery last Tuesday, March 9 at the hospital in Estland. It was reported that her condition is very grave and unimproved. Mrs. Vencil and Naylor of Odessa were there for the surgery. Glennis remained with her.

Mr. and Mrs. K. P. Brantner are helping Bill while Glennis is out of town on an emergency.

Mr. Harrison, who is with an advertising firm from Oklahoma City.

Mrs. Lee Parker subscribed to the Jayton Chronicle for Rickey Kyle. Now he can receive with what is going on ed here at night. He worked in Jayton for many years in the '30's. He worked here, raised his family, and later moved away. We are glad to report that he has moved back to Jayton and is now residing in the Kent County Nursing Home. "Mr. Barton, welcome home."

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Reeves returned from a visit with their daughter, Barbara, and family of Pasadena. While there they visited Mansanette and Rickey Kyle. They reported that they had a wonderful trip; that every thing was green. Guess what they found in Jayton? Dry with one sand storm after another. But, it's home and it will rain one of these days and in a matter of hours everything will begin to "green-up."

Mr. and Mrs. Carey Gardner of Lawton, Okla., visited their parents in Jayton and Aspermont this past week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Franklin and Angle of Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Tim Jones of Aspermont, visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Cheyne, over the week-end.

Donny Rinker has been in Jayton this past week visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Rinker.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Gallagher of Cleard visited in Austin, recently, with their daughter, Joan and family, and their son, Gerald and family. He also saw his doctor while he was there.

Jack Perdue was a patient in the Hamlin Hospital recently. Glad to hear that he is improved.

Mr. and Mrs. Edd Kyle visited with Rickey and Mansanette in Houston over the week-end, where he is under-going therapy. It is reported that he is able to feed himself, and is feeding himself, using his left hand. He also pun on his sock, with the aid of a cord. He roys the lock, pulls zero
