As It Looks From Here

By Rep. Omar Burleson
Member of Congress, Texas

Omar Burleson, M.C. 17th District, Texas

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The big He-Lion commanded great respect until he opened his mouth to roar and revealed he was toothless. To assume he had also lost his claws and that all lions had no teeth would be a grievous mistake.

This is something like the national land-use legislation now pending in subcommittees of both the House and the Senate. At places and times it could scratch and bite a lot of people.

The purpose of the legislation, according to its sponsors, is to establish a national policy in recognition of the fact that land-use management decisions of wide public concern are often factors contradictory to sound environmental, economic, and social land-use considerations.

Basically the legislation provides that each state inventory and identify areas of critical environmental concern. The areas defined are coastal wet lands, marshes, other lands inundated by tides, beaches, dunes, estuaries, flood plains of rivers, lakes, and streams, areas of unstable soil, undeveloped agricultural land, grazing, watershed lands, and in fact just about any real estate could be included.

The legislation tells the states to establish a land-use planning process which would submit their findings to a newly created department called Land-Use Policy Administration in the Department of the Interior. The estimated initial cost is somewhere between $220 and $850 million. This is the "carrot" to the States. The "stick" is a provision to withhold Federal money from this program and programs already in effect, such as airports and roads if States failed to comply.

The plan would presumably protect certain areas from the location of highways, water impoundment, and other uses of land found to be related and affecting the environment.

If all this sounds rather vague, it is because it is intended to be that way. No doubt it would have far-reaching effects on many communities if the law was enacted as now proposed. It could have the effect of controlling the use of much of our land as to the location of any facility or development since everything would have to comply with standards set by the Environmental Protection Agency, the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, and the Clean Air Law already on the books.

Incidentally, it is contended by some that there is already authority under these several Acts to control the use of land. No doubt some serious mistakes have been made in the development of suburbs around many cities. Across the river from Washington in Virginia, suburbs have developed which can not be accommodated by present water and sewage facilities. It has created serious problems and, of course, the developers and local officials should have been aware of such a situation beforehand.

The nation's capital is not particularly unique in its own problem of what to do with its sewage. Its main sewage treatment plant is busy processing effluent at maximum capacity, creating a huge pile of sludge as a by-product of inefficient treatment. There are few "takers" who will haul away the sludge, and burning it adds to air pollution. So it piles up. During heavy and prolonged rains, raw sewage finds its way into the Potomac.

In the wake of all this are serious considerations as to the control of land by the National Government. An organization called Land Use and Urban Growth, headed by Laurance Rockefeller of New York, concludes that Americans may have to change their concept of urbanization rights, now considered as coming from the land itself like minerals or crops. The rub is should the Federal Government be able to tell local governments how to run their communities in this regard. Thus far, the struggle over land use has been between the "environmentalists" and the "developers." Since property taxes are, of course, involved and since this is the business of local governments, it would seem that proper development of the land should also be the business of local governments.

Conservationist Busy In 1973

By Rhett H. Johnson
District Conservationist
Thick Creek Soil and Water Conservation District Cooperator in Kent County have been very busy planning and applying conservation practices during the 1973 fiscal year which ends June 30.

Cooperators have been the construction of approximately 226,000 feet of parallel terraces. This is a very outstanding accomplishment, as it is more than any other county in the twelve county Lubbock area. This is the first time Kent County conservationists have constructed this many parallel terraces in a twelve month period and led the twelve county area. This is very commendable, and shows that Kent County farmers are interested in the conservation of their natural resources. Along with this accomplishment, 60,000 feet of standard terraces were constructed, and 11,951 feet of diversions. Cooperators applying the terraces were Bill Jones, Frankie SoRelle, Elbert Walker, Howard Thomas and Bill and Bob McCormick.

Another practice that many cooperators are giving much consideration is the High Intensity-Low Frequency Rotation Deferred Grazing Systems. Two of these systems have been initiated by cooperators on 5488 acres. These cooperators are Bill Parks and J. T. Watson. Many other cooperators are in the planning stage of their systems with a program scheduled to be started this coming year.

Approximately 9000 acres of brush control has been carried out along with 3000 acres of range seeding. This is an outstanding accomplishment. SWDC Cooperators in Kent County are very active in the Great Plains Conservation Program. There are 28 active contracts at the present time on 135,000 acres. This is more acreage under GPCP contract than the total acreage in the twelve other Lubbock area counties. Nine GPCP contracts expired in 1973 on 49,165 acres. There were four new contracts initiated to carry out a complete conservation program.

From these figures it is evident that Kent County farmers and ranchers are busy carrying out conservation work. These figures only tell a part of the conservation story. The rest of the story is the yearly conservation practices farmers and ranchers carry out, such as a good Conservation Cropping System, Crop Residue Use, Emergency Tillage, Range Proper Use, Range Deferred Grazing, etc. These are practices that farmers and ranchers have adopted over the years, and are the practices that are the very basis of the conservation program.

FB Head Views Price Freeze With Cautious Fears

Waco--(June 18) --The President's 60-day freeze on retail food prices is a "stop-gap measure that carries with it some real dangers for consumers as well as farmers," J. T. Woodson, president of the Texas Farm Bureau, said today.

"There is a real possibility that we may soon see shortages of milk, eggs, and meat if prices are too low for farmers to make a profit," he said, the head of the state's largest farm organization said.

"Although farmers appreciate the President's exemption of prices of raw agricultural products, the freezing of prices at the retail level does affect prices all the way back to the farm," Woodson said.

Commenting on the cost-price squeeze, Woodson said that some producers have absorbed all the increased production, "comes they can handle."

"Farmers will not produce for very long when their prices are at or below the cost of production," he said. "When producers feel the pinch badly enough, it won't be long before the consumers will, too, in the form of empty grocery shelves and meat counters."

The farm leader said the only way that consumers can be assured of a bountiful supply of food at reasonable prices is to have adequate production and that this can only come from price incentives in the marketplace.

Woodson said that food prices are not out of line. "The American consumer spends only about 16 percent of his take home pay on food," he said. "This is lower than any other nation on earth and lowest of any time in our history."

The Farm Bureau leader said that the "real culprit behind inflation is still wasteful and deficit spending by government."

"Until we cut out spending beyond our means, we will continue to have our pocketbook robbed by inflation," he said.

Insects Moving In On Cotton Crops

Infestations of salt marsh caterpillar are causing damage to small cotton. The woolly insects are moving out of range land into cotton fields. Several chemicals will control salt marsh caterpillar in cotton:

Sevin at 2 to 2.4 pounds active ingredient/acre.

(AI) per acre
Dylox at 1 to 1 1/2 pound (AI) per acre.

Birdin has been used at 3 pound per acre (AI).
Birdin is extremely destructive to beneficials.

Salt marsh caterpillar usually feed on garden crops and range land. In the past the first generation has done the most damage to crops.

8-Year Old Girl In State Contest

Chyra Carlisle whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Carlisle, and reside at Canyon View drive at Lake Ransom Canyon near Lubbock participated the week of June 11 to 18 in the Miss Charm of Texas Contest in Dallas.

Chyra, who is now eight years old, was the winner in the Little Miss contest held in Waco a year ago, and competed against 182 girls, representing towns from all over Texas in the 7 to 12 year age bracket. She was the first 7 year old ever to be selected in the top ten in the over all contest. The judging is basically the same as is the Miss America Pageant. Chyra does a novelty twirl and dance act which she has done for a number of important occasions throughout the area. Such as the Miss Lubbock contest, the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, Abernathy Little Miss, Miss Odessa, the Crosby County Little Miss contest and the Spur Little Miss contest.

Chana Carlisle, who is only four years old, is following in her sister's footsteps. She was second runner-up in the recent La Petite contest in Crosbyton.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Hale and Mr. and Mrs. Buck Carlisle of Spur are grandparents.

THIS WEEK IN JAYTON

If you are of the conservative philosophy, and you feel like taxes are high enough, and governmental agencies need to learn to cut down, and hold the line, and not put on added taxes, then you probably will join me in feeling that Texas' new Governor Dolph Briscoe did a pretty good job during the first five months of his tenure in office.

In the final days of the session of the Legislature, when it appeared they were delaying action on the school bill, the governor sent a message over to the law makers, advising them to do what they were going to, because he was not going to call a special session to deal with the school issue.

Speaker of the House Price Daniel Jr. faced the closing minutes of the session, with the House tied 70-70 on the school bill. He could have voted yes and passed it, or voted no and killed it. But rather, he declined to vote and let it die a tie.

Now there is a hue and cry for the governor to call a special session and spend a million or so extra dollars to let them deal with the school issue again. Personally, I hope he holds his ground.

The Watergate hearings have been called off this week, because the chief of state of Russia is visiting in the United States.

The hearing is really getting people involved, and bringing a lot of incriminating evidence against high white house officials.

The committee is employing a very damaging piece of strategy that was used in the Sharpstown case in Texas a couple of years ago.

Persons who are deeply involved, and who really know the facts, are being offered immunity from prosecution, if they "tell all."

Back when I was in high school, we had a principal who thought like this, and had certain students who would hand out information against others, for personal favors. We had a word for them. We called them tattlers.

Well, the tattlers in Washington are really singing their little songs of incrimination right now. And while they are singing, there are a lot of other people who are squirming.

Wonder what the total outcome will be? I guess no one really knows.

The oil situation continues to hold its ground. I do notice that there are not nearly so many stations open at night, or on Sunday.

Sunday afternoon, I was in Muleshoe. Most of the stations were closed. One particular station was open, and was doing good business. Prices posted prominently on the premises showed the price of regular gasoline had been boosted two cents per gallon above the prevailing price for major station gas. Texas drivers will probably face a lot of this during the current summer.

The President has ordered a price freeze on all consumer purchased goods for 60 days. He excluded from this raw farm products. Also wages were not included. The dairy industry, which had served notice of a planned ten percent raise the first of July, says they plan to continue with their price hike.

Retailers are going to find themselves in a real bind. If the price of raw farm products are allowed to rise, but the retail price is frozen, what will the answer be?

My opinion is that it will create an untenable situation. If the price of the product is raised at the farm level, but the retailer is not allowed to raise his price--then he will not be able to buy the merchandise, because he cannot sell it below cost.

This will cause a lot of vegetable and produce bins to go empty, and housewives will not be able to buy these products--in my humble judgment.

Of course I could be wrong--we will see.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Upped Check

Martin bought a secondhand motorcycle from a friendly stranger, giving him a check for "eight hundred dollars." But when he got the check back from the bank at the end of the month, it had been upped to "thirty eight hundred dollars."

Martin decided that the bank had no right to take the extra $3,000 out of his account.

"It's not my fault the fellow was crooked," he argued in a court hearing. "Let the bank try to collect the difference from him."

But the bank pointed out that Martin had made three careless mistakes in writing the check:

1) he had failed to fill in the payee's name;

2) he had failed to fill in the numbers after the dollar sign; and

3) he had left more than an inch of open space in front of the word "eight"--plenty of room for inserting the word "thirty."

The court concluded that Martin, by his negligence, had invited the tampering--hence, would have to bear the loss himself.

Of course, as a general rule, a bank has no right to pay any more money out of your account than you have authorized. The bank, after all, has the best opportunity to detect fraud by examining a check before cashing it.

But the law will usually shift the loss to you if, by your carelessness, you have made the check easy to alter.

Furthermore, you have a duty to go over your cancelled checks within a reasonable time after they are returned, and to alert the bank if something is amiss.

For example: A man whose signature had been forged on a check had to absorb the loss himself because he neglected, for almost six months, to let the bank know what had happened.

A court said that by his procrastination, he had deprived the bank of a fair chance to track down the villain.

TREMENDOUS TRIFLES

THE FRAME AND THE CHICKEN-COOP THAT REVOLUTIONIZED COTTON

Several seemingly improbable events combined to bring about the invention of the cotton gin, a device that radically changed the economy of the Southern States. It was an embroidery frame he perfected that brought out a tutor's inventive genius and an incident arising from a chicken-coop that suggested the principle of the cotton gin.

After graduating from Yale, Eli Whitney became a private tutor in a distinguished Georgia plantation family. Although ingenious, he had never attempted elaborate mechanical inventions before and, as he said, "had never seen cotton seed" before leaving his native Massachusetts.

The mistress of this family ardently practiced the art of embroidery and the tutor found that parts of the finished work were damaged by the ineptly-constructed frame. He volunteered to make one that would eliminate this defect and succeeded. This was so popular with the household members that, some time later, when the discussion ran to conjecture about better methods for separating cotton from the seed, his mistress casually recommended him. "There, gentlemen," she said, "apply to Mr. Whitney. He can make anything."

Thus, Whitney found himself with a challenge he was obliged to meet. That midnight, unable to sleep, he went to the window for air and observed in the moonlight a car who, having killed a chicken, was desperately trying to pull it through the coop. The narrow bars would only allow a mass of feathers to come through. Whitney's thoughts turned to an iron claw that would pull cotton through fine mesh, leaving behind the seeds. A week later, he had the first rough draft of the cotton gin. A year later he had produced a successful machine.

The economic effects of this great invention are incalculable. It was produced by a private tutor who found his inventive talents in an embroidery frame and received his final inspiration from his observation around a Georgia chicken-coop.

The Alaska Pipeline

The changing outlook for insuring the nation adequate oil supplies in the years ahead makes the Alaska pipeline proposal look better and better. While all thinking citizens are concerned with ecology considerations in Alaska, Secretary of the Interior Rogers Morton makes a good case when he points out that a pipeline from the Alaskan oil fields would bring the nation two million barrels of oil a day.

This amount of oil, even though it wouldn't make the United States self-sufficient, would cut the deficit from foreign oil acquisition three billion dollars a year. Secretary Morton says it will take three years to build the pipeline. He hopes Congress will enact legislation clarifying his right to issue right-of-way permits across federal lands promptly. If construction begins next year, oil would flow through the pipeline by 1977.

The line Morton proposes runs south from the Alaskan fields to an ice-free port and is 789 miles in length. Tankers are to transport the oil to west coast cities from there. The Secretary argues that the other pipeline proposed, four times as long and running through Canada into the Midwest, is less desirable on all counts and would require much longer to build. He says it can be built later as an additional line, if desirable.

In view of the changing world picture concerning oil supplies, the growing needs of the nation for oil, Congress has little choice. The national interest and national security considerations dictate that the pipeline be cleared legally, and built.

Gas Tax Gas

One proposal to alleviate the gasoline shortage, originated by bureaucrats eyeing the billions Uncle Sam would gain from motorists, is to sharply increase the federal tax on gasoline. This, it's said, would mean less gasoline sold and thus help solve the problem!

Incredible is the word to describe this proposed "solution." Already beset with high prices, rapid inflation and a scarcity of gasoline, the average citizen is to be "helped" by being struck hard every time he enters a filling station.

Such a tax would probably help little, and certainly create hardship for the average working citizen who drives to work. Large companies and corporations would simply pass on the expense to their customers, creating more inflation. If the federal government moves in any direction on the gasoline front, it should freeze gasoline prices.

NEWS REPORT FROM WASHINGTON

Nixon's Future - Protecting the President-Dean's View - The Nation's Interest

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Testimony by John Dean that President Nixon was in on some of the discussions about the Watergate cover up has raised anew questions as to how much the President really knew about the whole affair, and when he learned this and that.

Dean's view is that Nixon knew more than he has admitted; the President's position is that he never dreamed so much was involved and his interpretations of conversations with Dean and others is certainly a different view.

The Dean testimony unquestionably added pressure to the President for fuller disclosures, another statement, etc. But there are also many other White House aides and former aides who believe the President and the Presidency must be protected.

The President has admitted mistakes. He has said he takes the responsibility. He has said he favored full investigation and punishment for those found guilty. But he has said he will not resign and will not resign. There are signs support for this position among the average citizen is building up. One recent radio poll (in Miami) produced 144 phone calls in support of the President and only 42 opposed. What is the basis of this strong support for the President?

Many Presidents have had their scandals, often about mistresses. Lyndon Johnson also experienced his as did John Kennedy, Dwight Eisenhower and Harry Truman. Nixon's is more broad and was the cause of a more elaborate cover-up attempt but many feel mistresses and secret love affairs are worse offenses than Watergate. Others disagree and make light of female problems as the inevitable in the course of human affairs and nature.

What confounds the Nixon critics, in short, is that many want him to remain as President regardless of Watergate and regardless of how much he knew and learned when. They feel that is in the country's interest.

Little Stogies

A study of the effects of sucking little cigars by three specialists at Central Middlesex Hospital in England shows that smokers who switch from cigarettes to these little fellows are increasing the danger to their health—if they continue to inhale.

The damage is done by the high level of carbon monoxide produced in the blood, which impairs the blood's ability to carry oxygen to the body's tissues. The little cigars are also said to contain more potent cancer-causing substances than cigarettes.

Thus the glamorous (and stupid) television commercials about cowboys or other moonstruck young men and women staring romantically at each other while sucking little cigars are for the birds—and undertakers and cigar manufacturers, not you.

Summer

The summer solstice arrives midway between the spring and fall equinox.

The first day of summer this year is June 21st, as it often is, and summer lasts until September 22nd, the first day of autumn. The hottest days of the year will probably come—if the weather follows the traditional pattern—after the longest day of the year (the 21st).

This is true, usually, because the earth stores heat in the period when the sun shines longest. By July and August the earth has stored great quantities.

Summer means vacation-time to many students, and shorter vacation periods to many adults.

To make this summer different, drive safely on trips to mountains, lakes and beaches; reduce the death rate, which might include you.

Egg-Size Tomatoes In Offing

Egg-size tomatoes that provide as many slices as larger varieties—but cost less—may crop up in supermarket egg cartons in the next few years.

A new elongated version of dwarf tomatoes is currently under development at a Gainesville, Fla., agricultural research station.

Because of their compact size, more than six times as many of the new plants can be put on an acre than conventional varieties. This means higher per-acre yields and the possibility of once-over mechanical harvesting and mechanized handling.

Since the smaller fruit is less subject to crushing during handling, researchers believe it could be harvested with less expensive and sophisticated machinery than that now being used.

Research to develop the new species was stimulated by the threat to Florida's $100 million tomato industry from imports originating in countries where workers' daily wages approximate hourly minimums in the United States.

Agriculturists point out that elimination of the Florida tomato business would further increase the nation's balance of payments deficit and put more pressure on the American dollar and the economy as a whole.

Most everyone knows that the shortest day of the year occurs in December and the longest in June. If the sun shines the least in December, why isn't that month the bitterest of winter months?

And, if the sun shines longest in June than any other time, why isn't June the most oppressive of the summer months? As the reader knows, December is seldom the coldest winter month and July and August are often hotter than June. What's the answer?

The answer lies in the fact that the earth stores up the heat during the summer and loses it slowly. When the shortest day of the year arrives, usually December 21st, the earth still retains some of its stored up heat from the summer.

Likewise, when the longest day of the year arrives, the summer solstice (June 21st this year), the earth has not stored up the amount of heat it will contain by July and August, after additional long days and short nights.

SPACESHIPS AND SANDWICHES

"Okay, we've landed, now let's get out and look at this old moon!"
My two small boys are at it again. Today, the old gray stump is a spaceship. Tomorrow it may be a fort or a castle. More practically, at lunchtime it's a picnic table.

Right now the side yard is my sons' world. Behind a picket fence, they roam the sea and sky in imagination, the sound of their voices reassuring me of their safety.

It won't always be this way. Someday, they'll leave the back yard forever, swoonbuckling through a world of schools and camps, friends and parties.

How strange it will be—not to guide their every footstep. Where am I to get the courage? Fortunately, I can answer my own question. I have my church, and so do my boys. As a source of great goodness, it will guide them all their days.

FAST VEGETABLE SALADS

Greens and Bean Salad

The bean marinade also serves as the dressing for this tasty top prize-winner in the fast vegetable salad category—

1/2 cup salad oil	1 16-ounce can (2 cups) cut green beans, drained	1 cup (4 ounces) shredded natural Swiss cheese
2 tablespoons vinegar	4 cups torn lettuce
3/4 teaspoon salt	2 cups torn fresh spinach
3/4 teaspoon sugar
1/4 teaspoon celery seed
1/4 teaspoon paprika

In screw-top jar, combine oil, vinegar, salt, sugar, celery seed and paprika; cover and shake to mix well. Marinate green beans in oil mixture in refrigerator at least 2 hours. Just before serving, drain the beans reserving the marinade. Toss beans with the lettuce, spinach and Swiss cheese. Add reserved marinade and toss to coat. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Refreshing Summer Salad

"Blueberry-Nectarine Iceberg" is a mouth-watering combination of fresh blueberries and nectarines with a Spicy Orange Dressing atop crisp "rafts" of iceberg lettuce. This can be served as a dinner salad, or let it star as the cool winner at a summer luncheon along with cold meats, muffins and dessert.

BLUEBERRY-NECTARINE ICEBERG

1 head western iceberg lettuce 1 basket fresh blueberries
3 California nectarines

SPICY ORANGE DRESSING

Makes 1 1/2 cups

1 tablespoon cornstarch	1 cup orange juice
1/2 teaspoon salt	2 to 3 tablespoons lemon juice
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger	1/4 cup corn oil
1/4 teaspoon ground cloves	Dairy sour cream
1/2 cup honey

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce; chill in disposable plastic bag or lettuce crisp-it. Wash, drain and chill nectarines and blueberries. In small saucepan combine cornstarch, salt, ginger and cloves; blend in honey, then orange juice. Cook, stirring until mixture thickens; remove from heat. Stir in lemon juice. Pour into small mixer bowl and cool. When cold, gradually beat in oil and chill. At serving time cut lettuce crosswise into one-inch thick slices to make "rafts." Slice nectarines, removing pit. Arrange nectarine slices on lettuce, spoon on blueberries and moisten generously with Spicy Orange Dressing. Top with Dairy Sour Cream.

Makes 6 salads.

A salad is often the most exciting dish for a busy-day schedule. Serve meat loaf made by your favorite recipe and use a dip of ice cream on a warmed donut for dessert to round out your menu.

Green Salad

1 head lettuce, torn in pieces
2 stalks celery, chopped
2 green onions, chopped
2 tomatoes, cut in wedges
hard boiled eggs, 1/2 per person.

Combine salad ingredients. Arrange sliced eggs on top. Use French dressing or any dressing preferred by individuals. This combination makes an attractive individual salad also.

Soak a sticky casserole dish in warm water to which one tablespoon baking soda has been added for quick cleaning.

Buy fruits and vegetables which are in season. They are budget wise. Freeze some to be enjoyed later.

One cup of rice will make three and one-half cups cooked and one cup of hominy grits will make four cups cooked.

BEEF VS FAT

PORTLAND, ORE.—Susan Winder sued a supermarket for $100,719 after having two packages of ground beef analyzed. She claimed the supermarket acted maliciously and in wanton disregard for her rights in selling her ground beef with too much fat.

Hearty Glad The Legislature Held The Line On Taxes

The 63rd Legislature is history and by the way of a report, I am of the opinion that the best thing that this Legislature contributed to Texas is that we did not pass a tax bill.

Our District, which is a rural district of 15 counties will be vitally interested in a Public School Financing Bill which will gain much momentum in the next two years and I trust all of you will let me, as well as your Senator, have your feelings regarding it.

The so-called Court Reform Bill almost made destructive inroads into our district, County, and J. P. Courts. However, I was successful in eliminating all of that portion of the Constitutional Amendment except that affecting the Court of Criminal Appeals and Intermediate Courts of Civil and-or Criminal Appeals. The Courts, from the District Court on-down throughout Texas, should become vitally interested and assert themselves to their Senators and Representatives prior to the Constitutional Convention which convenes on January 8, 1974.

Our current biennial spending is in excess of nine billion dollars and approximately 48% of this entire amount is for public schools and higher education. I mention this to emphasize the magnitude of the money that is being spent on Education.

The most important piece of Legislation that I passed during this Session was H. B. 683 which sets up a Rural Medical School Board to handle grants, scholarships, and loans to qualified needy boys and girls who wish to attend medical school provided they return to a rural area to practice medicine. This bill lacks the Governor's signature but he assures me that he is very much in favor of it.

I trust that during the remainder of the year, I will have the opportunity to visit with you and if there is anything I can do to assist you pertaining to State Government, please let me know.

Sincerely,
W. S. "Bill" Hearty

BASEBALL

By Pete Fritchie

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The national capital is apparently to have Major League baseball again, but it's a botched up arrangement. A local group has negotiated the transfer of the San Diego Padres—a National League team!

How odd it is for Washington, an American League town in recent decades, to regain baseball in the wrong league. All the recent history of play against the Yankees, nearby Baltimore, Boston, Detroit and the other old American League foes is thus to go by the boards—unless.

The unless is the possibility that inter-league play be initiated in the near future, a possibility now under study. If that is to be, then perhaps the switch to the National League (the more successful in attracting fans) will not be so illogical after all.

San Diego fans haven't supported the Padres sufficiently to keep the team in the black. Washington, so owner Bob Short said, didn't support his team there enough to enable him to remain in the capital. So it moved. The question, then, is whether this is a full stop or a stopover for the Padres.
