Lawrence Carter gives this advice on how to handle an old-fashioned girl—'don't'—Have you noticed Postmaster George W. Ragland's sweater? It is black with red, blue and grey stripes around the front and sleeves. It was bought as a Christmas present for Clifton Roark but it was too small for him and Ragland inherited the wrap—The Review's waste paper basket is filling up with political announcements from state candidates who expect have "all or part" of their promises and platforms printed free of charge. Precinct, county and district candidates have to pay for their announcements and it is not fair to charge them and print the state candidates' announcements without cost.

PASTURING OF SHEEP ON WHEAT BRINGS IN REVENUE

Farmers in this section have found that pasturing of sheep on wheat has been of considerable financial return to them.

Pasture leases have brought them more than it cost to prepare the land and sow the crop. Running sheep or livestock on wheat keeps down growth during the winter months and prevents a rank growth in the winter when roots are more necessary.

The past season around 60,000 head of sheep has been run on pasture, in addition to some cattle. Farmers have begun to ship sheep to market. Generally the animals are pastured from 60 to 90 days.

MOISTURE FOLLOWED BY COLD WAVE

Moisture ranging from an eighth to a half inch fell in this territory late last week to add to the prospects for a good wheat crop and to put land in condition for plowing. Clear, cold weather early this week followed the moisture.

School assembly programs will be given to the scouts for the demonstration of their work in first aid, safety and firemanship.

With Friday as Civic day the scouts will be elected and take over various county and city offices and "run the City and County".

Saturday will again bring the scouts before the public as they give actual demonstration of street, highway and home safety and downtown streets, in store windows and other places emphasizing the importance of safety.

Plans have not been completed here yet for local scouts participation in the nation-wide observance, but will be soon, according to local officials.

A. C. KOENINGER OUT FOR OFFICE OF COUNTY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT

Announcement of candidacy for the office of Hale county school superintendent (term of four years) was made last week-end by A. C. Koeninger of Liberty school. Koeninger will be remembered by many local residents. He was superintendent of Lakeview school five years, and at Clements, two. His statement follows:

In announcing for the position of County Superintendent of Schools, I realize that I am asking you to confer upon me the most important office in your county. At this time when educational forces are clashing on every hand; when educational aims and objectives are being changed over night, as it were; when rural and urban forces are arraying themselves against each other; the office of superintendent needs not only a trained mind in the art of teaching; but one with vision and courage. It needs a man wise in counsel, considerate of the opinions of others, and one who is capable of leading the united forces for the improvement of the rural schools of this county; for if they are not improved they will be destroyed.

I believe that I possess the necessary qualifications to fill this office. I have been trained in some of the best schools of this, as well as other states. I have been especially trained in supervision. I have taught in every position from a one room school to superintendent of larger town schools; and from classroom teacher to principal in the city

Raglands Among Pioneer Families Settling in Plains

(Editor's note: Postmaster Geo. W. Ragland is the author of the following interesting article on settling of the Plains country. Herein he gives an account of his family's migration from Ellis county to the tract of land which is now part of the Lakeview community.)

CONQUERING THE WEST

Mr. W. H. Ragland was a tenant farmer in Ellis County, Texas. He labored incessantly for a number of years on a tenant farm of small acreage. Each year, when he had gathered his cotton crop and marketed it, he found himself no better off financially than at the beginning of the year. Mr. Ragland had a wife and five small children. He was very thoughtful and ambitious for his family, but each year he had seen his ambitions crushed.

He awoke from his sleep one morning in the late fall of 1890. His crop had all been harvested and sold. He said to his wife, "Etta, this is the first time we have disposed of our crop and had any money left. What do you think about leaving this country?" Mrs. Ragland was a devoted wife and trusted implicitly in the good judgement of her husband. She inquired of him where he thought he would go. He told her of having talked with some people who had been west and that they told him of a vast expanse of untouched land on the plains of west Texas. This land could be homesteaded at a very small cost. The image of a home of their own began to take form in their minds. This desire grew and grew until finally they decided to try to satisfy their ambitions.

In a short time Mr. Ragland boarded the train and came to Amarillo, Texas. From there by stage coach and other means of travel he was able to find, he came to Plainview, Texas. There were only two or three little stores there at that time. Most of the population were living in tents. The land around Plainview was being homesteaded very rapidly but few people had moved to their homesteads. He finally found a section of land twenty miles south of Plainview and filed his claim on it and went back to Ellis County to make a report to his wife.

In the Spring of 1891, after days of preparation and forethought, Mr. Ragland and his family bade farewell to friends and loved ones and embarked on their journey to the Staked Plains of West Texas. Even though they were thrilled with the prospects ahead, they also realized to some extent the hardships that lay before them. Their household goods, and a years supply of groceries were loaded in two covered wagons with the family. Mr. Ragland, leading the way, drove one of the wagons and his wife, with a small baby in her arms, drove the other. Two milch cows followed immediately behind the first wagon. When they had traveled as far as Graham, Texas, Mr. Ragland took ill and also the baby. They were delayed there for ten days. The thought that would have occurred to most people would have been to turn back but not so in this case. With undaunted courage and faith in the future they moved on. More than 30 days passed before they reached the hestead which lay in the midst of the great tablelands of West Texas.

"Well, Etta, what do you think of our new homestead?" was Mr. Ragland's remark as he pulled his team to a halt. You can imagine her unspoken reply as she scanned the vast acreage for miles around. Not a tree to be seen. There was not a living soul to be seen and the only evidence of life, human life, was a few dugouts and none of them were closer than four or five miles. They dismounted, sought a suitable place for a home and pitched their tent, in which they lived for four months. Fortunate were they that they lived near an old cattle trail up which herds of cattle were driven to market. This virtually solved the fuel problem. Occasionally this was supplemented by a load of wood hauled from the cedar breaks far away.

After they had been there four months, and to some extent had adjusted themselves, they decided to build them a more permanent home. An excavation was made in the ground some thirty by sixteen feet and three feet deep. The plan called for wooden walls four feet above the ground with a sheetiron roof. Leaving Mrs. Ragland and the children at home with nothing to keep them company but the howling wolves and the galloping antelopes, Mr. Ragland set out for Amarillo, Texas, the nearest trading station and secured the material to finish the house. Having good luck, he could make the trip in ten days. In due time the half dugout was completed and they moved in.

Money matters were getting tight by this time and he had not yet been able to handle " " in such a way as to

AT THE RITA

"IT'S LOVE I'M AFTER"
Rita Thursday-Friday

Starring three topnotch stars, this picture brings both laughs and drama to the screen, with comedy the main course. Leslie Howard, Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland have the lead roles. It's fast and super-funny, say advance reviews. Theatres in the northeast and on the west coast which have played the film report it is a box-office sensation—a recommendation for any fan.

Howard tackles comedy for the first time in his career in this show—all previous roles having been his money on the calves and he invested in a like manner again and soon had a small bunch of cattle all his own.

In 1892, the year following their arrival, he broke some land and planted it to oats. The grasshoppers infested his field and completely destroyed the crop. It was getting late in the season so he could plant only some cane. This produced very well and furnished feed for the stock. They soon learned that beans, peas, pumpkins and watermelons were adapted to the country and they planted freely of them. They made syrup and vinegar from the watermelons and stored the pumpkins in the cellar. This was what they called a full-blood dugout—all under the ground.

Antelope ran in droves on the plains of Texas at that time. It was difficult to get close enough to them to shoot them if you were on foot. Mr. Ragland had a horse especially trained for the hunting of antelope. He was very fast. Mr. Ragland would lean over to one side of the horse to obscure himself from the sight of the antelope and shoot them from under the horse's chin. Antelope meat would keep for days hanging on the windmill tower. This furnished meat for the table.

In due time a small school was established which ran for only a few months of the year. The settlers went there occasionally on Sundays for church or other gatherings.

After seven years had passed, Mr. Ragland had accumulated a small herd of cattle and was doing as well as the average in a financial way. They decided to build them a real house. This was a three-room box house, each room being fourteen by sixteen feet. In this house they reared a family of ten children and today they all look back with tenderest regards and fondest recollections to the old W. H. Ragland Homestead, which is located about 11 miles northeast of here, in the Lakeview community.

"DANGER PATROL"
Rita Saturday Night Only

Dealing with a romance that flows under the constant shadow of the death that hangs over nitroglycerine workers, RKO Radio's "Danger Patrol" brings Sally Eilers, John Beal and Harry Carey in the leading roles.

Beal portrays a young medical student who takes up the life of a "soup handler" to earn money to complete his studies. Miss Eilers is the daughter of Carey, a veteran at the risky game, and when Beal becomes her father's protegee in learning the details of the business, the romance begins.

Throughout the swift action runs a vivid delineation of the actual duties of nitro workers and their methods in bringing in new wells or extinguishing fires with deft application of a few quarts of the treacherous explosive. This realistic setting, and the ever-present danger of a careless moment, greatly enhances the drama and contrasts strongly with its love story.

Much of the picture was actually filmed in the oil fields and under the guidance of veteran nitro men who saw to it that its background was true to life.

MRS. ROOSEVELT LIKES FAIR "SAMPLE"

NEW YORK (Special)—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, like more than 200,000 others persons from all over the world, has already sampled the New York World's Fair of 1939 by visiting the exhibit the Fair Corporation maintains for the public on the Fifth Avenue floor of the Empire State building.
 "I am much interested in this Fair," said Mrs. Roosevelt, after she had seen the ingeniously illuminated models and animated displays that promise so many wonders for the Nation's Fair. "It seems to me that there is opportunity here to do a remarkable piece of work from the educational standpoint. The conception of the whole Fair as outlined to sounds very provocative of thought." The theme of the Fair is "Build the World of Tomorrow."
