Sales tax totals $3.8B

Texas Comptroller Glenn Hegar announced last week that state sales tax revenue totaled $3.79 billion in September. The amount was 2.8 percent more than the revenue received in September 2022. The majority of September sales tax revenue is based on sales made in August and remitted to the agency in September.

“Modest growth in sales tax revenue compared with last year may reflect a slowing pace of economic growth, as well as cooling inflation,” Hegar said. “Remittances from the oil and gas mining sector led all major sectors in growth, as has been the case nearly every month since the economy began to emerge from the pandemic. Other sectors driven by business spending were mixed, with receipts from the construction sector up moderately while remittances from manufacturing and wholesale trade fell slightly.

“Remittances from the retail trade sector overall were slightly up from a year ago. Among retail subsectors, receipts from grocery stores saw the largest increase compared with a year ago, followed by those from convenience stores and gasoline stations. Receipts from the electronic shopping subsector grew moderately, while receipts from general merchandise stores were essentially flat compared with a year ago. Receipts from home improvement centers were down for the third consecutive month, and from furniture and home goods stores down for the eighth month in a row.

“Restaurant receipts increased, but at less than the inflation rate for food away from home in August.”

Ahead of the third called special session set to begin on October 9, Comptroller Hegar also announced that his office will release his Certification Revenue Estimate, which provides detailed tables for the revenue estimate used to certify the General Appropriations Act for the 2024-25 biennium and other appropriations bills approved by the 88th Legislature.

Total sales tax revenue for the three months ending in September 2023 was up 3.7 percent compared with the same period a year ago. Sales tax is the largest source of state funding for the state budget, accounting for 57 percent of all tax collections.

Texas collected the following revenue from other major taxes: (1) motor vehicle sales and rental taxes — $631 million, up 2 percent from September 2022; (2) motor fuel taxes — $329 million, up less than 1 percent from September 2022; (3) oil production tax — $544 million, down 2 percent from September 2022; (4) natural gas production tax — $208 million, down 57 percent from September 2022; (5) hotel occupancy tax — $59 million, up 3 percent from September 2022; and, (6) alcoholic beverage taxes — $144 million, up 4 percent from September 2022

Legislators return to Austin

The 88th Legislature began its third special session Monday, with Governor Greg Abbott calling lawmakers back into Austin to consider the issue of legislation that will permit the diversion of some public funds to private schools.

Also on the agenda is legislation relating to border security, bills that would ban private businesses from mandating COVID vaccinations, and legislation that would extend state services and oversight to the rapidly growing south Texas community of Colony Ridge in Liberty County.

Border Security

The special session agenda is on well-trodden ground for the Senate. In his proclamation, Governor Abbott directed the Legislature to consider "creating a criminal offense for illegal entry into this state" as well as "increasing the penalties for criminal conduct involving the smuggling of persons or the operation of a stash house."

The Senate has passed multiple bills, in both regular and special sessions, that do just that, but they never received enough support in the House. The governor also called for bills increasing funds for maintenance and operation of physical barriers along the state border with Mexico.

School Choice

The Senate also passed legislation that would answer the governor's call for school choice during the regular session, but those efforts face a steep climb in the House, where majorities have consistently rejected diversion of public money to private schools.

The plan passed in April by the Senate would permit up to $8,000 per student to be given back to families to help pay for private school tuition, tutoring services, and other education related expenses. "We will chart a brighter future for all Texas children by empowering parents to choose the best education option for their child," Abbott said in his special session proclamation calling for the creation of education savings accounts for all Texas pupils.

The Senate Education Committee is slated to take up their school choice plan at a Tuesday hearing.

School Funding

Teacher pay raises didn't pass during the regular session and they don't yet appear on the governor's session call, but on Monday the Senate Finance Committee moved forward with a plan to increase teacher salaries across the board. SB 2, by Conroe Senator Brandon Creighton, would increase annual teacher pay by $3,000 per year in large districts, and $10,000 for teachers who work in districts with fewer than 5,000 students.

Creighton says that pay for teachers in smaller rural districts lags that of their urban colleagues by tens of thousands of dollars in some cases. "It's not designed to create a windfall where small districts pay better than the larger districts," he said. "It's designed to take a teacher that's making in the $30,000 [range] and give him or her a fighting chance to stay in the profession in that small school district."

There's also more money in the bill for the basic allotment, that variable that determines the base level of funding each district receives. The bill would also double the school safety allotment per student and per campus, and includes more money for local enrichment tiers.

The bill contains more money, about $1.2 billion, than was finally appropriated at the end of the regular session as Comptroller Glenn Hegar has revised the biennial revenue estimate upwards, giving lawmakers more room to increase education funding.

Spending Limits

They can't spend everything they have in the state treasury, however, Houston Senator and Finance Committee chair, Huffman, told members, as total appropriations are already approaching constitutional spending limits for the upcoming biennium. There's about $6 billion headroom left, she said, and they have to leave enough margin to cover the supplemental budget that will be passed next session to true up projected revenues and expenditures with actual costs and income. "We must remain fiscally responsible and not commit to ongoing expenses that the state cannot sustain in future biennia," said Huffman.

Check Your Mirrors

By Sue Jane Sullivan

The paradox of progress

In general, I am not one to wish for things to be as they were.

I had to wait 364 days to be able to watch The Wizard of Oz since it only came on once a year on a Sunday night at 6 p.m. CST. Once—and only once—I watched my mother wash out my little brother's poopy cloth diaper in the commode. Not being able to write checks out of town meant carrying more cash than I wanted to have on my person. To advance in high school sports, you had to win first place in district play. No runners-up, no wild card. Writing letters or making long distance telephone calls were the primary means of communication with relatives who lived in other towns or states apart from traveling to see them in person. Fast food pretty much meant hamburgers, hot dogs, or fried chicken. And secretaries (as they were called then) had to learn shorthand and be able to type at least 60 words per minute.

Fast forward from my baby boomer youth and young adulthood to 2023.

Streaming movies and shows on a variety of platforms allows us to stay home and save money on overpriced concession stand candy. If asked, the majority of new parents and babysitters would fund a monument in Washington, D.C., to honor whoever invented disposable diapers. A debit card is reincarnated cash. Many of you have a child or grandchild whose season did not end when they finished second or even third in district play. Video chatting with my grandchildren from a train, sending a text to my nephew in New Zealand, ordering groceries, and downloading a Johnny Cash song for $1.29 is possible on my phone. Chinese food, Mexican food, fried chicken, baked chicken, Chick-fil-A chicken, sandwiches, coffee and tea with a zillion options are ours after ordering into a faceless speaker. In 2023, business communication is global and instantaneous.

No doubt advancements have improved or facilitated life. But saturation of such progress has a trade-off. Instant gratification at the click of a remote denies me the wonderful feeling of anticipation. The use of cotton cloth diapers symbolizes patience and frugality, virtues we could use more of today. Credit cards make it easy to ruin a credit score. Eating at home around a dinner table instead of a vehicle might encourage conversational skills and table manners and prevent trashy cars (personal experience).

Having said all of this, I go on record with this confession: if I am blessed with another grandchild someday, I will be taking thousands of photos on my cell phone. And then I'll ferry the older grandkids through drive-thru for supper followed by a Disney Channel marathon as we celebrate the newest family member. As for that baby, you better believe that when Pearl is in the house, he or she will be wearing Pampers.

#9—Lying

By Brett Hoyle, Pastor, First Baptist Church

Can you think of any professions that have a reputation for not always telling the truth? Politicians, used car salesmen, and lawyers come to mind, but they are not the only ones prone to twist the truth, withhold truthful information or even speak deceitfully about someone or something. Each and every person is prone to bend the truth for their own benefit, especially when uncomfortable confrontations arise, or when they may be tempted to lie for the sake of someone or something else. Going this path is the path of the father of lies, Satan himself, who deceived Eve in the Garden, twisted God's Word when tempting Jesus, and will do the same thing to lead you astray as well.

The problem with lying is not simply that it twists the truth, but it also falls short of God's standard for how we are to communicate and live. Every lie is like a web that entraps its teller, growing into a massive matrix with layers of half-truths, twisted truths and distortions that engulf those tied to it. Lying is not simply a sin that God says not to commit in the Ten Commandments (Exodus 20, Deuteronomy 5), but God has a much clearer path to communication that leads to freedom and righteousness. God's design for your vocal cord usage is that you 'speak the truth in love' (Eph 4), discerning when and how to speak, unlike a blabbering fool who only wants to spew opinions (Prov 12:15, 18:2). When you speak the truth in love, you first must be grounded on the truth of God, redeemed by the one who is the Truth, Jesus (John 14:6), and bold in sharing the greatest truth, which is the gospel.

Panhandle Parables

Layout Ground

By Jeff Procter, Minister, 6th Street Church of Christ

When I was about twelve I learned to drive a tractor helping my granddad plow layout ground. Every now and then he would pull some of his land out of production so there was no crop planted that particular growing season. Even land needs a break every now and then. This was a good place to practice learning to handle large equipment and there was plenty to learn. Here is just a couple of things:

1. Layout ground may not be producing a crop but can grow lots of weeds quickly.
2. There are lots of moving parts when it comes to a tractor and a plow.
3. Pay attention, not just when turning around.
4. Never use a grazing cow as a guide, you will have to make a cleanup round to straighten up that mess.
5. Sometimes preparing the land is as important as reaping the harvest.
6. Slow down before you do anything else when you get to the end of the row.

There are several spiritual lessons I learned, not necessarily when I was twelve, but for sure in the reflection of those memories of sitting in my Pop's lap trying to plow and keep it straight.

1. When you are idle spiritually, be aware weeds (distractions) can pop up fast and left unattended will cause you a lot of wasted energy.

2. Life has a lot of moving parts, decisions you make can impact others in good ways or bad based on the choices you make.

3. Be aware, Satan is always looking for an opportunity to cause you trouble. Remember there are lots of moving parts. You can make a mess in a hurry if you don't stay focused.

4. Don't make decisions based merely on feelings or what others are doing. Make decisions that are right because God says they are right, making poor decisions will require more work to fix.

5. To receive blessings from God, it often requires a preparing of the heart to receive what God wants to plant there. It won't grow just anywhere, but a heart open to the Lord.

6. Slow down, too many big decisions are made in haste leaving regret as the reward.

This is simple stuff. Yet I am amazed as to how often I get caught up in other stuff that distracts me from God's will for my life. Be aware of the season in life you are in and if it happens to be a slow time (layout ground) keep the soil ready for what God has next.

All Praise and Glory to God

By Teena Hughs

In my Monday Bible study, we started studying Tamar in Genesis 38. In my research, I found an interesting article about how God's people are prone to corruption. 1 Corinthians 15:33 says "Bad company corrupts good morals."

I have always had trouble with this Scripture because I thought I was strong enough to be friends with any type of person, believer or unbeliever, smoker or non-smoker, drinker or non-drinker, straight or gay, whatever race, whatever denomination a person is, etc.

When I was in graduate school at Tech, I became friends with a girl who was pretty much my opposite. She drank, smoked, didn't go to church, had a lot of money to spend, and since her family owned a car dealership, she drove fancy cars. For sure, we were the "odd couple."

While we were running around together, I never changed who I was, and neither did she. We were good friends. When she could not find a dress to wear to a wedding, I stayed up all night making her a dress. When Feller and I started to get married, I asked her to be a bridesmaid. She agreed, but she told me that if I needed to cut down on the number of attendants, just let her know, and she wouldn't be an attendant. I knew why she made that gesture; a friend asked her to be a bridesmaid, and then rescinded the offer. Never in a million years would she admit her feelings were hurt. And no matter what, she was going to be in our wedding, and she was!

She and I have gone our separate ways for the most part. She lives in the Dallas area where she is a successful business woman. I send her cards and we talk every five years or so. I always thought she believed in God, but today she goes to church, and she has a relationship with Jesus. The bottom line is, we were different, but we stayed true to who we were, and God has changed both of us. I never dreamed I would ever talk about Jesus and church with this friend!

God reminded me this week that I haven't always been this strong. While I was in grad school, I also fell in love with a guy who smoked pot. He would smoke cigarettes around me, but never pot. The one thing I hate most in this world is drugs, and I would have married this guy knowing our marriage would end in divorce.

The author of the article I found said, "We may think we will stand our ground, but we will drift without knowing it," and that is exactly what I did. I was willing to overlook what I hate most in this world to marry him. Thankfully, he did not feel the same about me as I felt about him. I would not have been happy or proud of being married to him, because he was not going to stop smoking pot. It would have been a complete disaster with lasting emotional scars and feelings of defeat.

We may think we are strong enough to handle anything, and maybe some people are, but the author pointed out that when we distance ourselves from Godly people, we start drifting away from God and our morals. The author points out, "While we need to build relationships with pagan people for the purpose of leading them to Jesus Christ, to do so for the purpose of camaraderie will corrupt us, not convert them." That is why we have to stay strong in the Word, and that is why we have to live it 24-7. When people meet us and get to know us, they have to know that God is the number one priority in our lives ALWAYS!

I was hurt when the guy I was in love with just quit calling, and I knew it was over. I thank God for getting me out of that relationship, because I didn't have the strength to do it on my own. He was taking care of me, even when I didn't know it, and I am so glad He was. All praise and glory to our loving and caring God!!!

Marie Hughlett: A Life Remembered

It is with heavy hearts that we announce the passing of Marie Hughlett, a beloved Texan, on October 4th, 2023, in Denton, Texas, after a brief illness. Born on May 19th, 1938, in Friona, Texas, Marie's journey through life was marked by a remarkable devotion to family, faith, and community.

Marie's early years were a testament to her dedication to academic excellence. She was named Salutatorian of her high school graduating class in 1956, setting the stage for a lifetime of achievements.

Marie's pursuit of knowledge led her to Hardin Simmons College in Abilene, Texas, where she crossed paths with the love of her life, Virgil Hughlett. Their love story, spanning 65 years, was the cornerstone of her life, built on a foundation of love, support, and shared adventures.

Marie's career path was as diverse as her interests. She began her professional journey in cosmetology and later transitioned to roles in bank administration and human resources. Her ability to adapt and excel in various fields was a testament to her unwavering determination.

While raising three sons, Marie and Virgil embarked on a journey that took them across the southern United States. Their travels allowed them to work, live, and experience life in different communities. Marie cherished these experiences and loved sharing them with her family and friends.

Marie's faith was at the center of her life. She was a lifelong believer in Jesus Christ, and her faith guided her actions and decisions. During her retirement years, she became an active member of Nocona Hills Community Church, where she participated in numerous church functions and mission trips, spreading love and hope to those in need.

Beyond her professional and religious endeavors, Marie had a zest for life. Her favorite pastimes included traveling to new destinations and indulging in the joy of shopping. Her enthusiasm for these activities was infectious and brought joy to those around her.

Marie was preceded in death by her father, L.R. White, her mother, Floreine White, and her younger brother, Teddy White. She is survived by her devoted husband, Virgil Hughlett, and two brothers, Jimmy White of Fort Towson, Oklahoma, and Max White of Shallowater, Texas. Marie leaves behind a legacy of love and a close-knit family. She is survived by her three sons and their families:

Kent Hughlett, his wife Karla, and their children Amber and Gabe Howell, with their three children, Alex, Sean, and Lily, as well as Awbrey Hughlett and his two sons, Wyatt and Walker.

Kirk Hughlett, his wife Cindy, and their children Travis Hughlett, Tyler and Dede Looney, Anna and Talor.

Keith Hughlett, his wife Lisa, and their children Drew and Emma.

Marie will be remembered for her love, kindness, and unwavering faith. Her passing leaves a void in the lives of all who knew her, but her memory will continue to shine brightly in our hearts.

A memorial service to celebrate the life of Marie Hughlett will be held on October 15th at 2:00 pm at Nocona Hills Community Church. In lieu of flowers, the family kindly requests donations to be made to the Women's Ministry of Nocona Hills Community Church, a cause close to Marie's heart.

Marie Hughlett's legacy will live on in the hearts and minds of those she touched throughout her incredible journey. She will forever be loved and missed by all who had the privilege of knowing her.

Harvest Barn Dance

When the farm harvest is stored away, there is a bit of time left to play; "Let's have a barn dance," the donkeys bray, stacking up seats using bales of hay; "With apples and doughnuts!" the horses neigh, "And tune up your fiddles for a holiday!"

What's Playing Up A Storm?
When one is done practicing with the bow he can fiddle around plucking the strings!

What farm animals are at the old barn dance?

Did you find words that rhyme with:

- play bray and hay
- plow cow
- oat goat
- bat cat
- prance dance
- moose goose
