STORM REPORT

As Reported by... Stormie Meriwether, U.C.O. Freshman

Dear Friends, We did it! My mom and I signed up for the OKC Memorial Marathon. We did the 5K part. It was supposed to be in April, but they didn't have it because of, you guessed it, the virus. Finally they sent our shirts and medals. Everyone has to do the run on their own. We did our run on a cold, windy day. It was great and I love the (Continued Page 4)

Merely Mustard

I've been a bit out of sorts lately. I have been knocked off-course and now feel as though I am adrift and subject to the powers of whatever life holds for any given day. A certain part of that is inevitable, as all mankind, sooner or later, and to one degree or another, has to reckon with its own impotence to effect things according to its will, but what I am speaking of is something lesser; it is things that I usually can control, which have recently gone haywire. And I think a good deal of my being off-course has to do with the recent abandonment of some of my routines.

I have mixed feelings toward routines. In fact, I used to oppose them fairly strongly. My thinking was they were a set of chains, and man has enough factors at work that limit freedom, and I didn't want to place any voluntary regimens or restrictions upon myself beyond those I already had, such as health and hygiene practices. But recently I have been experimenting more with the development and application of routines, and have found they provide a bit of clarity and a bit of guidance, which are occasionally necessary, when lucid thought and the cooperation of the will are scarce. A mentor described such routines and structures as a set of braces, that may be painful to get into at first, but ultimately will correct or prevent problems and lead to less pain. So, gradually, I began experimenting with routines, trying to determine what works and what doesn't, based on how they equip me to fulfill my purposes. To be fair, playing around with routines is something I believe we all do; we all have our tendencies and behaviors which we repeat - so I was already using routines, but I mean that it was only recently when I began assessing their value and effectiveness, and therefore their worthiness to remain.

Making these assessments required additional assessments as to what was important in broader terms, that is, asking, "What are the things of foundational importance?" This is an ongoing process and has taken a large amount of reflection and paying attention. And I would venture that I am not that close at arriving at an answer. I suspect this question shall continue to be asked, and a final answer will remain elusive, lifelong. But thinking it through has shed some light on the things in life that are meaningful. Once those are identified a more ground-level assessment can (Continued Page 3)

Route 66 On National Register

Route 66 in Wheeler County was recently listed in the National Register of Historic Places. The Texas Historical Commission (THC) assisted in the nomination of this district in recognition of its importance to the history of the State of Texas. Noted for its historical significance, the historic road joins other properties around the state with National Register status. Route 66 was one of the nation's most significant highways during the early to mid twentieth century, serving as the primary corridor between Chicago and southern California. The listed property features eight concrete segments of the original highway across Wheeler County. The road was fully paved by 1932, and served as Route 66 until 1970, when Interstate 40 was completed to the north. In 1968, the highway was transferred to the State of Texas to serve as a frontage road. Still in use today, the designated road segments convey a strong sense of their historic time and place and are the best-preserved concrete sections of Route 66 in Texas. Listing in the National Register will increase opportunities for heritage tourism and heightened protection and preservation considerations during any future, federally funded construction projects. The nomination process was initiated and prepared by Texas Historical Commission staff through the cost-share grant from the National Park Service Route 66 Corridor Preservation Program.

The National Register of Historic Places is the nation's official list of cultural resources deemed worthy of preservation. Authorized under the National Historic Preservation Act of 1966, the National Register is part of a federal program to coordinate and support public and private efforts to identify evaluate, and protect the Country's historic and archeological resources. The national Register includes more than 3,300 listings in Texas. Listing affords properties a measure of protection from the possible impact of federally funded projects, as well as access to technical expertise and grant funds to facilitate their restoration and preservation. Income-producing properties are also eligible for federal tax benefits for sympathetic rehabilitation work.

To learn more about the National Register of Historic Places, contact the THC's History Programs Division at 512-463-5853 or visit thc.texas.gov.

be made as to what habits or practices will lead to fulfillment or attainment of the things identified in the big-picture assessment, and those habits and practices can then be implemented into life on a daily, weekly, monthly, and yearly basis, as guideposts and guardrails to keep one on the path toward what it is one has identified as meaningful, or important, or worth pursuing. And it is an ongoing experiment, where something has to be tried out, and modified or replaced if it does not serve one's purpose.

I would like to note here that it is possible to become obsessed with routines, and care must be taken to prevent the routine from being made a golden calf that must be served no matter what. I believe routines ought to be able to be abandoned or suspended temporarily if needed; provided, if the routine is effective it will probably make its absence known, which will facilitate reinstatement of the routine. So it is with me recently, anyway. I feel a bit untethered and have noticed that I am not functioning as well as I typically do when I am supported by my routines.

As I wrap up this piece, I have the feeling that I have not written a particularly good one. Yet I realize I cannot afford for "particularly good" to be the standard by which these pieces are measured; suffice to say I feel as though today's product is poorer than normal. I attribute it to my lack of routine. I shall reinstate my routines this week and if I deliver another poor piece next week, I will be bereft of excuses, other than saying, "It is my routine to deliver writings of meager worth."

NHCS Announces 2021 Deadline For Assistance Funding

The USDA-Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) in Texas has announced the first funding application deadline of December 4, 2020, for the Environmental Quality Incentives Program (EQIP). A second funding application deadline will be February 12, 2021.

Applications are taken year around for NRCS programs, but deadlines are announced to rank and fund eligible conservation projects. Producers interested in signing up for EQIP should submit applications to their local USDA service center. If already a USDA client, a producer can submit applications online via Farmers.gov offsite link image.

EQIP is a voluntary program that provides financial and technical assistance to agricultural producers. Technical assistance is provided without a fee from NRCS specialists to help landowners and land managers plan and implement conservation practices to help them meet their land management goals, address natural resource concerns and improve soil, water, plant, animal, air, and related resources on agricultural land and non-industrial private forestland.

For additional information visit the NRCS Texas website at www.tx.nrcs.usda.gov. Applications for EQIP are accepted on a continuous basis. Producers interested in EQIP can contact their local USDA service center or visit our the morning and 80° and sunshine in the afternoon. I guess it is really typical for the Texas Panhandle.

I got to take the stress test at Mercy Friday. So much fun. The good news is that there is nothing wrong with my heart; it is just beating too fast. Another doctor.

If you have not voted, it would be wise to do it early. Some of us have three ballots, national, city and hospital. Might avoid standing in line.

Now they are telling us not to have the family in for Thanksgiving. Not looking forward to that. It is bad enough not getting to play cards with the Meriwether families.

I think I got lucky, the grass and weeds have stopped growing after the last mowing.

I had the back yard looking so nice and then the gas company had to dig part of it up to replace the line. I was happy to see that it was not necessary to go clear across the property. A tree root had squeezed a section of the casing, which kept them from putting the new line through. The fill looks great.

THE SENILITY PRAYER:

Grant me the senility to forget the people I never liked anyway, the good fortune to run into the ones I do, and the eyesight to tell the difference.

Always Remember This:
You don't stop laughing because you grow old,
You grow old because you stop laughing.

These days about half the stuff in my shopping cart says, 'For fast relief.'

Friday, NOTHING. Saturday & Sunday, I rest.

I've sure gotten old!
I've had two bypass surgeries, a hip replacement, new knees, fought prostate cancer and diabetes. I'm half blind, can't hear anything quieter than a jet engine, take 40 different medications that make me dizzy, winded, and subject to blackouts. Have bouts with dementia. Have poor circulation; hardly feel my hands and feet anymore. Can't remember if I'm 85 or 92. Have lost all my friends. But, thank God, I still have my driver's license.

I feel like my body has gotten totally out of shape, so I got my doctor's permission to join a fitness club and start exercising.

I decided to take an aerobics class for seniors. I bent, twisted, gyrated, jumped up

Storm

I am not happy to report that more people have Corona Virus. All students and teachers, Pre-K - 6th grade are at home. Not everyone is sick, but they have to clean the school. I do not know how many are out of high school, but I know some are at home. I hope everyone will be ok.

Online school is going great. I do hope I get to go back to class someday, but for now, I'm good. That's it!
