Texas Challenges Company's Sanitizer Disposal Plan

The sheriff's office in Wheeler County contacted TCEQ, raising concerns about shipments of palletized hand sanitizer that were received and stored at this unimproved site in Shamrock, Texas.

By Mike W. Ray Staff Writer
SHAMROCK, Texas — A company founded in Wyoming less than a year ago won a six-figure contract to dispose of more than 7,000 pallets of “inventory” that included hand sanitizer containing a high concentration of ethyl alcohol and some contaminated with methanol. And although the contractor told a federal court that the products would probably be destroyed in Mexico, the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality discovered them developing an apparent disposal site in the Texas Panhandle near the Oklahoma border.

4e Brands Northamerica filed an emergency motion on May 31, asking the U.S. Bankruptcy Court for the Southern District of Texas, Laredo Division, to approve a “destruction and recycling proposal” that the company claimed represented “the most cost-effective, efficient and safest destruction process available.”

4e also asked the court for permission to start the destruction process with its proposed “recycling vendor”: Latitude Liquids, which submitted “the most favorable bid.”

Latitude “provides the services of unpacking and recycling methanol- and ethanol-based hand sanitizer,” 4e told the court.

“This solution effectively removes expired and unsellable hand sanitizer from the market through socially responsible methods.” The methanol is “typically utilized in biofuels,” 4e wrote.

STORM REPORT

As Reported by... Stormie Meriwether, U.C.O. Freshman

Dearest Friends, I could not miss being in Wheeler for Halloween! Seth and I handed out candy at Baba and Pop's house. The costumes were very good. I got to see many cute characters. All of the trick or treaters were very polite. Good job parents.

My family started a group text and shared pics of Halloween costumes and told stories of things they did in the past. It was fun. Addy, Clark and Daxton, in Hinton, were so cute! My newest niece, Gracie, was precious. She is almost three months old. She can't have candy yet, but she will get there. Good luck Colby and Joanna she will be running for candy soon and she will be adorable! That's it!

This past week I received notice from three publications that they would each be discontinuing the print offerings. Each of these notices was couched in a manner which attempted to suggest how the publisher's decision was a benefit to me somehow. They also all indicated how simple it would be for me to subscribe to the digital offerings in lieu of the now-extinct print editions. But who needs another email in their inbox? And who has an opportunity to read the myriad newsletters already delivered to the inbox?

Two of the three publishers also indicated that their decision would be good for the environment. That may well be true insofar as publishing online does not require paper and ink (until the readers print the articles, to preserve for later, or simply because reading is generally much more pleasant when the reader is looking at a piece of paper instead of a screen), and it does not require fuel to be burned in order to deliver newsletters to their readers' mailboxes.

Both of these claims are red herrings intended to divert attention from the reality that online newsletters are both cheaper and easier than their print counterparts. Fine. I acknowledge that, but there is no need to attempt to cloak in a shroud of virtue the desire for cheap and easy. I suppose I would have been less annoyed by the notification of digital publication if it had been more closely aligned with the truth: “It is easier and cheaper to publish online instead of via a print newsletter, so we are discontinuing our print edition henceforth.”

In any case, I opted to not sign up for the digital newsletters because I knew doing so would consume some of my time, without adding value to my life. One of the newsletters was a retail flyer; my non-subscription may cost the retailer some sales revenue from me. Come to think of it, maybe they really were doing me a favor by foregoing print in favor of digital.

Finally, I make use of this space to acknowledge with gratitude the publications which do continue to print (Continued Page 2)

They say that bulls
Are a necessary evil
About as smart
As average boll weevil
To visit the neighbors
Was high on his list

There were girls over there
That needn't be missed
It fell my lot
To go get old Henry
Drive him home again
Past that patch of shinnery
I saddled my horse
And moseyed on over
To where Henry was nibbling
On some good-looking clover
He stared at me
For just a short while
Then headed towards home
It was only a mile
Well, bless his heart

NEAT TRICKS

If you have a dog or a cat, then you know just how quickly your house can become overrun with animal hair. And even more frustrating, sometimes the vacuum fails to pick everything up. To make the chore easier, get a squeegee with a long handle and use it as a "hair rake." The rubber squeegee will help loosen the hair embedded in the carpet or furniture fabric, and will also help clump the hair together. Then you can just pick or vacuum it up.

fail you and the cork breaks and stays wedged in the bottle. You can still push the cork into the wine bottle, but then you have the issue of potentially drinking cork pieces with your Merlot. To filter your wine, use a coffee filter to catch the debris. Place the filter over your glass, and slowly pour the wine out. Any cork pieces that ended up inside the bottle will be caught in the filter and you can drink without worry. Save your soda can tabs because you never know when they will come in handy!

Disposal (from Page 1) when 4e filed for bankruptcy on Feb. 22, it had 7,402 pallets of inventory that included hand sanitizer which was recalled by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration "due to the presence of methanol in the product." The pallets were stored in seven warehouses in Fort Worth, Laredo and Conroe, Texas, and in Indianapolis, Indiana, a court document shows.

By Sept. 30, the TCEQ told the court, 4e had sent approximately 2,900 pallets of hand sanitizer from warehouses in Indiana and Texas to Latitude Liquids for disposal at "Latitude's destruction facilities" in Oklahoma and Texas. The specific location of those disposal sites is not listed in the court records.

It was unknown how much sanitizer remained in Fort Worth after a fire which broke out the night of Oct. 6 in a commercial warehouse that was filled with pallets of the alcohol-based product and burned for more than a week. Firefighters were still on the scene 11 days later.

Numerous bottles of hand sanitizer were washed into Fort Worth storm drains, littering the Trinity River and its banks. Dozens of dead fish were found floating in the river nearly two miles from the burned warehouse.

4e told the bankruptcy court that by Sept. 30, all of the company's inventory that had been moved for destruction was in Texas. However, the TCEQ indicated in an Oct. 21 document that 4e may have some hand sanitizer still stored in Indiana.

Illegal disposal site discovered in Texas

On Oct. 6, the sheriff's office in Wheeler County – at the eastern edge of the Texas Panhandle, abutting Beckham and Rogers Mills counties in Oklahoma – contacted the TCEQ office in Amarillo, raising concerns about shipments of palletized hand sanitizer that were received and stored at an unimproved site in Shamrock, Texas.

TCEQ investigators visited the site four times in October and found pallets of Blumen brand hand sanitizer pulled from store shelves and warehouses after the FDA recall. Guy Wilkins, the TCEQ's waste/water section manager, said he saw "approximately 1,100 shrink-wrapped hand sanitizer containers being stored outdoors, with more pallets being delivered."

Wilkins wrote that he also observed "operations indicative of an intent to improperly dispose of the hand sanitizer materials in a pit dug on site."

If disposed of improperly, hand sanitizer containing ethyl alcohol in a concentration of 70%, and maybe contaminated with methanol, is flammable and "creates risks that include fires and potential contamination of ground water."

TCEQ "orally asked" Latitude to stop accepting any more hand sanitizer materials until it provided documentation showing that the hand sanitizer is not a solid waste "under TCEQ regulations."

Latitude Liquids "took no such action," so on Oct. 19, the TCEQ sent a cease-and-desist letter to the company.

A TCEQ investigator said he "observed approximately 1,400 shrink-wrapped pallets of hand sanitizer and approximately 111 totes of hand sanitizer" at the Shamrock site on Oct. 20.

That triggered a TCEQ examination into the company.

Company not registered in Texas or Oklahoma

Records from the Wyoming Secretary of State's Office show that a company named Latitude Liquids LLC was formed on Jan. 14; however, the company "was set up by a registered agent service and no officers or directors are listed."

On its website, Latitude Liquids claims it is "an organization experienced in the ethanol-based hand sanitizer and recycling markets, which gives us a unique perspective... We have created relationships that allow us to solve your hand sanitizer situation."

Latitude says it is located in Laredo, Texas, but its "de-packing" and recycling facilities are located in Mexico.

Its website includes no telephone number. Inquiries to the company can be accomplished only by filling out a form on the website.

Searches of records of the Texas Secretary of State and of the Texas Comptroller show that Latitude "has not made the proper filings" with either agency "and is not legally authorized to conduct business in Texas."

The Southwest Ledger checked records of the Oklahoma Secretary of State and found 28 companies with names that include "Latitude." None is or was named Latitude Liquids, and the most recent of them was established in 2021, a year before Latitude Liquids was created in Wyoming.

Recycling, disposal plan 'not clear'

4e's plan for "destruction and recycling" of recalled and unsold products "is not clear," the TCEQ said.

The motion of 4e Brands Northamerica on May 31 to approve its "destruction process" reported that it "will likely occur in Mexico due to the current market cost to recycle and the location for demand of the recycled products." The hand sanitizer would be recycled into ethanol and methanol "to be used commercially."

But 4e Brands' motion asking the bankruptcy court to approve a settlement with its parent company, 4e Global, "states that destruction will now take place at Latitude's facilities in Oklahoma and Texas." Again, those locations are not specified.

The TCEQ asked the court on Oct. 21 to order 4e Brands to stop sending any more hand sanitizer to Latitude Liquids and provide the TCEQ with a written plan for the legal destruction of its inventory of hand sanitizer.

In the TCEQ's cease-and-desist letter of Oct. 19, Michael McGovern of Latitude Liquids in Rogers, Arkansas, was directed to provide by no later than 5 p.m. Oct. 31 myriad documents and a recycling plan for the hand sanitizer, along with "any records supporting a contention, if any, that you have an economically viable means of recycling" the hand sanitizer.

Further, TCEQ wants to be provided a list of all Texas facilities where 4e's hand sanitizer is stored, a list of all safety measures in place at those facilities and a list of all Texas facilities where the hand sanitizer has been sent for destruction.

The Trunk or Treat on the square was a great success with lots of youngsters and treaters. All ages took part in the event.

This however did not lessen the number making the rounds over town. We had 188 come to our door.

Leroy, Rhonda, Babara and I sat in the living room and enjoyed the parade of youngsters and parents. Stormie and Seth were in charge of the candy.
