Combined Federal Campaign kicks off Thursday

Reese sets wing goal at $95,000

by Col. Roger Brady
64th FTW Commander

As we wind down on fiscal year 1994, we can look back on a very successful year for the 64th Flying Training Wing -- mission, safety and the development of our people are all success stories. I'll have more to say about that in the next few weeks, but today I want to challenge you to rise to the occasion for one more important event.

The Combined Federal Campaign is a great opportunity for us to show we care and make a difference in the lives of people -- many of whom cannot help themselves. We talk a lot about "quality" in the Air Force, and it means a lot of different things. But quality starts within each of us -- a desire to make things better than they are. This is our chance to do that.

The 1994 Combined Federal Campaign kicks off, Thursday.

During the six-week fund drive, the wing looks to exceed its goal of $95,000. Last year, wing contributions helped more than 115,000 people in Lubbock alone.

Just to name a few: a total of 29,270 persons received food and assistance from the Salvation Army; 257 victims were helped by the Rape Crisis Center;

550 children were served by Big Brothers or Big Sisters; and 11,464 scouts (boys & girls) were aided.

Other local health and service organizations receiving support from Reese's CFC contributions include: Reese Youth Activities, Red Cross, Boys' and Girls' Clubs of Lubbock, Catholic Family Services, Lubbock Children's Health Clinic and Women's Protective Services.

Donors can designate that their contributions go to any of 35 local and 1,000 national and international agencies.

Contributions go for everything from taking care of children of working parents who don't earn enough to pay for day care, to research in cancer and heart disease.

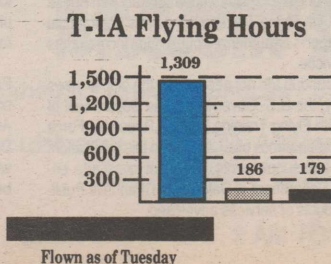

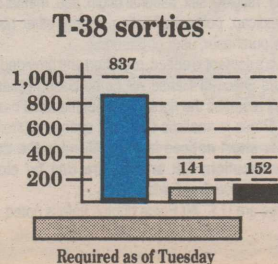

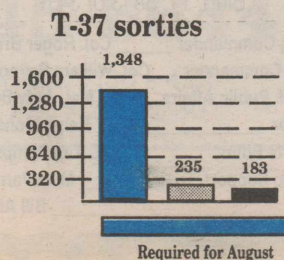

I want everyone to know that when they make a contribution, their gift will go to whatever agency they designate. Because of volunteer help and donations of material and equipment, 95 cents out of every dollar raised goes directly to aid community organizations.

Contributions by wing members allow the CFC to make a significant impact on the quality of life we share in the Reese and Lubbock community.

Like most things we undertake as a team, it doesn't take a Herculean effort by any one individual. It takes all of us doing our part. The 64th FTW "leads the league" in almost every area. CFC should be the same. Let's do it!

People first!

DoD places priority on people over hardware

by MSgt. Merrie Schilter Lowe
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — It started as an Air Force chorus: "Put people first." In late August Department of Defense officials took up the refrain, adding, DoD is choosing people over weapons systems.

Deputy Secretary of Defense John Deutch said in a Pentagon press briefing that unless Congress appropriates more money, which Deutch said he doubted would happen, DoD will have to reduce some out-year modernization programs to fund readiness, military pay and quality-of-life programs.

"In sum, this message is: Money is tight and we are choosing people over systems," Deutch said.

The announcement came less than a week after the civilian media reported on an internal working memorandum that Deutch sent to all the military services telling them to prepare to delay or cancel several major weapons programs, including the Air Force's F-22 stealth fighter, the Army's Comanche helicopter, the Marine's V-22 Osprey tilt-rotor aircraft and the Navy's new attack submarine.

Although Deutch did not confirm the list of systems, he stressed that the systems were only "candidates" for cancellations, terminations or postponements.

"Nothing has been decided," he said, and nothing will be decided until after "an extensive" consultation period with the services and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Responding to a question about why the Air Force may have to delay the F-22 program for up to four years, Deutch said it was "in part" because of the reduced threat the United States faces now that the Cold War has ended.

Air Force is planning to buy 422 of the jets, at a cost of more than $70 billion, as a replacement for the F-15 Eagle air superiority fighter starting in 2004.

Deutch admitted to the press that by choosing readiness and people over weapon systems, DOD could be creating future readiness problems. However, he stressed that within a fixed budget situation, "you have to make these choices."

"As I said before, for the time being, given the national security needs that we see, and which are in front of us every day in the newspapers, we are choosing people, we are choosing quality of life of the troops in contrast to provisions for the future."

Smoking during pregnancy endangers child Risk especially high during first four months

by Capt. Maritza Milan
Chief, 64th MDG Behavioral Medicine

According to the American Cancer Society there are two major reasons why you should not smoke while you are pregnant. Based on research, smoking retards the growth of your baby in your womb and increases the incidences of infant mortality.

Studies have suggested that babies of smoking women on the average weigh six-ounces less than babies of nonsmoking women.

This is caused because nicotine restricts the blood vessels and breathing movements. In addition, carbon monoxide reduces the oxygen level in the baby's blood. The child's vitamin metabolism is also disturbed.

Although the weight loss is quickly regained after birth, a follow-up study showed that seven-year old children of mothers who smoked during pregnancy were shorter in stature, tended to have a lower reading ability, and several rated lower in "social adjustment" than children of mothers who did not smoke during pregnancy.

Statistics also show a positive correlation between smoking during pregnancy and the rate of spontaneous abortion and stillbirths. It seems that women who smoke a pack or more of cigarettes a day during pregnancy experience about a 50 percent greater chance of infant mortality. However, research correspondingly shows that the risks of infant death are decreased if the mother stops smoking before her fourth month of gestation.

Pregnancy and motherhood are great responsibilities and challenges. You owe it to you and your family to care for your own health as conscientiously as you do for theirs.

If you would like to quit, call 3739 to see us or to sign up for Behavioral Modification - Smoking Cessation Classes.

From your perspective

"A Careline column provides one of many opportunities for a commander to find out what people are thinking, what's bothering them, what they like, etc. If you've wondered why we do something, or just want to make a comment, don't hesitate to call. You can call the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273. If you leave your name and telephone number, we'll get back to you and answer your concern by telephone. Calls of interest to the Reese community will be published, without the caller's name, in the Roundup the following week. I look forward to hearing from you."

Kudos to medical staff

I'm calling in regard to the medical staff here. I recently went to the primary care section with a severe migraine headache. The staff was extraordinary. They took me in immediately, gave me extra care and showed that they were genuinely concerned.

I want to thank everyone who was there and treated me. They were wonderful. I wish I knew their names so I could thank them personally. I was extremely sick and they took such good care of me. My thanks go out to everyone at the medical group.

Thank you for your kind words. The medical providers and nursing personnel of the primary care clinic set a fine example of customer focus. We are happy to hear that you had such a positive experience.

Blueprint: the Objective Air Force

Reference books detail Air Force mission, history

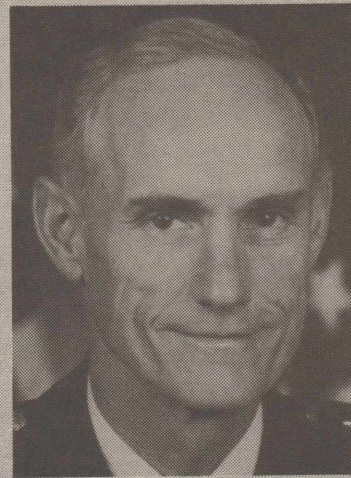

WASHINGTON (AFNS)— Air Force commanders now have a quick reference that represents the corporate philosophy on organizational alignment — the structure for America's Air Force.

The landmark document, "Blueprint for the Objective Air Force," culminates a top-to-bottom review of the Air Force. The three-volume set, classified by Air Force officials, defines the simple, streamlined structure that is the result of the most significant organizational changes made since the Air Force became a separate service in 1947.

The Blueprint, approved by Gen. Merrill A. McPeak, Air Force chief of staff, was built for commanders at all organizational levels. "The Blueprint is a necessary tool for decision makers," said General McPeak. "How the Air Force is organized to fight influences all else," he said.

The Blueprint integrates force structure, manpower and weapon systems into one, easy-to-understand reference source. It is the simplest way the Air

"We know that it isn't airplanes that win wars. It isn't hardware that prevails in combat. What wins is people!"

General McPeak

Force can be organized to achieve the mission. "What we want in the Air Force is an organization capable of high performance in very tough circumstances. The Blueprint tells you what the organization ought to look like and also tells you what the organization should not look like," he said.

The Blueprint should be used by commanders, senior enlisted advisors and first sergeants. "People need to be aware of how their unit fits into the overall big-picture Air Force," General McPeak said.

The Blueprint depicts the entire Air Force organizational structure from Headquarters Air Force and Field Operating Agencies down through Major Commands, Numbered Air Forces, wing and base-level units, including tenants. Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard units are also listed.

"Everyone is in there somewhere. If they aren't, they better check to make sure their organization is still in business," General McPeak said.

The books contain more than organizational charts and data tables — approved unit patches or emblems for heritage-bearing squadrons are included.

"Air Force heritage is a significant part of who we are," General McPeak said. "We know that it isn't airplanes that win wars. It isn't hardware that prevails in combat. What wins is people!"

Associating the legacy and heritage of the Air Force with the Blueprint is a way of connecting the human values to the management structure of the organization.

"The patch is how we recognize a unit; it represents unit pride and esprit de corps. Including patches in the Blueprint links our organizing scheme to our heritage," he said.

Updates to the Blueprint will be made twice a year. Each succeeding version will be used as a planning tool for the next Future Year Defense Plan exercise.

"Future senior managers and leaders will go back to this Blueprint, like a map, to constantly check their position," he said.

The document, which is already getting a "thumbs up" from users, will be distributed to major Headquarters USAF organizations, MAJCOMs, centers, NAFs, wings and independent groups. Organizational unit emblems will be available on CD ROM.

Unit assessment team continues evaluation of Reese procedures

by SSgt. Mike Breslin
64th FTW Public Affairs

Wing units are roughly two-thirds of the way through Reese's first unit self-assessment under the Malcolm Baldrige quality improvement criteria.

Thus far, the assessment has "been a learning process for all parties," according to Lt. Col. Roger Cude, 64th FTW Quality Office chief.

Colonel Cude added that remaining interviews are scheduled to take place next week.

A rough draft of the report will be submitted to the wing commander in mid-October, with the final version due in November. Wing officials will use the results of the self-assessment to make improvements in the wing; it will also provide a baseline for future assessments at Reese.

The survey is being done by a 40-person team of officers, enlisted members and civil servants from throughout the base.

The Baldrige criteria are broken down into seven categories that encompass well-known Quality Air Force concepts. Categories include leadership, information and analysis, strategic quality planning, human resource development and management, management of process quality, quality and operational results, and customer focus and satisfaction.

AF reduces improper statements on military performance reports

Evaluation officials at Reese and the Air Force Military Personnel Center, Randolph AFB, Texas, report a marked decrease in the number of implied or veiled promotion recommendations in enlisted and officer performance reports.

The officials add that there is still some confusion as to what is and isn't acceptable.

Promotion recommendations are prohibited in all EPRs and OPRs, regardless of rank.

The decrease, say personnel officials, is primarily the result of local military personnel flight efforts.

SrA. Gary Thurman, Reese Military Personnel Flight performance report specialist, said that Reese has had extremely few reports rejected for implied or veiled promotion recommendations.

"The supervisors have done a great job of complying with the new guidelines," said Airman Thurman. "The reports are coming to us very clean."

Some examples of statements not permitted are:

- "Performs like a chief."
- "My number one choice for senior airman below-the-zone."
- "A top one-percenter!"
- "Groom her for the highest positions!"

Airman Thurman says the ratee should be compared with peers in the same grade.

Personnel officials offered other examples of what is and isn't permitted:

"The top 1 percent of my senior NCOs" is not acceptable when the ratee is a master sergeant; however, "Top 1 percent of my master sergeants" is.

Also, ratees should not be compared with the top percentile of their peers throughout the Air Force.

For example, descriptions of annual award winners as "top 1 percent of all airmen, NCOs, etc." are prohibited. The specific award should be highlighted: "Selected as Reese Senior NCO of the Year for 1994."

Comments, except in Section IV of the EPR, referring to the ratee's promotion potential are not appropriate. Section IV, "Promotion Recommendation," is designed specifically for that purpose.

If a ratee is filling a position which normally requires a higher grade than which the ratee has, the focus, personnel officials explain, should be on the responsibility of the job, what the ratee did, and the impact of the ratee's performance on the unit or organization.

Raters with questions about specific statements can clear them through their unit orderly room or call the military personnel flight's evaluation office, 3339 for officer reports or 3789 for enlisted reports.

Quarry Heights, Panama (AFNS) — U.S. Special Forces units from the United States and Panama, and military forces from Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador are participating in a Joint Chiefs of Staff exercise — Cabanas 94 - II — in the United States and Panama. The exercise began Thursday and continues through Sept. 21.

Cabanas is an annual CJCS-sponsored exercise designed to promote regional security cooperation and respect for human rights, develop internal defense techniques, and promote military-to-military relations, according to U.S. Southern Command officials. Approximately 1,150 U.S. personnel from Panama and the United States will train with approximately 525 personnel from the three Latin American countries.

General Ashy to assume NORAD command

In these positions, he will be responsible for the aerospace defense of the United States and Canada, and the exploitation and control of space for national purpose through a far-flung network of satellites and ground stations around the world.

WW II ace dies

KELLY AFB, Texas — Hubert A. "Hub" Zemke, 80, a World War II flying ace who commanded the 56th Fighter Group, which scored the most aerial victories of any Army Air Force unit in the European theater, died Aug. 30 in Oroville, Calif.

The retired Air Force colonel is best remembered as a tactician whose innovations contributed to the success of his fighter group, dubbed "Zemke's Wolfpack." He was an ace with 17 aerial victories and eight ground victories. World War II historians refer to Zemke as the "fightingest" fighter commander because he led his group into battle so often.

Name Your Adventure covers pilot training

COLUMBUS AFB, Miss. (AFNS) — How the Air Force trains its pilots will highlight the Saturday season premier of the hit morning NBC-TV series "Name Your Adventure."

The show, which could be seen in up to 2.7 million homes, will also air three or four more times during the 1994-1995 season.

The 14th Flying Training Wing was chosen as the site of high school senior Jennifer Dowell's adventure of becoming a military jet pilot. A crew of producers, technicians, and sound and camera men arrived here May 16 and spent several days shooting the segment, which will air as half of the 30-minute show.

Two young Zairian boys watch as a U.S. Air Force MC-130 readies for humanitarian operations at the Goma Airport in Zaire. More than 1,000 missions have been flown in support of the relief program.

Support Hope exceeds 1,000 missions

Nearly 21,000 tons of cargo has been delivered

SCOTT AFB, Ill. (AFNS) — Air Mobility Command marked an important milestone in Operation Support Hope Aug. 29, when command tankers and airlift aircraft, working in concert with civilian contract aircraft, passed the 1,000-mission mark.

In the 40th day of assistance to Rwandan refugees, the command had flown 1,076 missions, moving nearly 10,000 passengers and 20,769 tons of humanitarian and operational support cargo.

AMC aerial refueling aircraft had offloaded more than 2.5 million gallons of fuel in support of the operation, as of Aug. 29.

From the beginning of the operation on July 21, AMC has provided the airlift and air refueling necessary to get critical relief supplies to the central African area.

Earn CCAF credit while deployed

Education flight courses offer constructive use of TDY time

MAXWELL AFB, Ala. (AETCNS) — Air Force members can count on being deployed at some point in their Air Force careers, now more than ever.

What does this mean to those trying to complete their education?

For many, putting it on the back burner is the answer. But in reality, time spent studying while deployed or on temporary duty can be a great way to complete course work toward an associate's degree.

"Folks are usually deployed from two to six months at a time, depending on the location," said MSgt. Clinton Allen, program administrator for the Community College of the Air Force. "Students can usually work out an agreement with their instructors to complete missed course work or visit their education office where a counselor can prepare them for CLEP, DANTES or other college level exams."

Counselors work with students to determine what courses can be completed through testing and which textbooks to study while deployed or TDY.

"Since there's no penalty for failing the exam, it's really a no-lose situation," said Allen. "The student simply has to wait six months before retaking the test."

Miriam Carter, CCAF academic advisor, said education offices are willing to work with students who know they are about to be deployed or sent TDY.

"Not only can we recommend books, but we can also give students study guides for the various college level tests," she said.

Another avenue available to students, especially those TDY, is correspondence courses.

"Correspondence courses are ideal, especially for students in Air Force specialties such as criminal justice and fire fighting, because their schedules are so erratic," pointed out Cartel.

"Many colleges throughout the United States offer courses through correspondence and CCAF accepts correspondence credit.

Tutors needed for Buckner Children's Home

by Capt Eric R. Bass
Tutoring project officer

Would you like to volunteer about an hour per week to help a child do better in school?

If so, we could use you! We are developing another community assistance program in which Reese personnel volunteer their time to tutor children at the Buckner Children's Home.

This home is located right off of 4th Street and West Loop 289.

This program is new, and just getting under way. Buckner's is very excited about the possibility of Reese people tutoring their children because a lot of these children struggle in the areas of math and science. Reese is full of well-trained and educated people who could make a difference in a young person's life.

We need volunteers who can tutor about an hour per week. Tutoring hours will be Monday through Thursday between 4 and 6 p.m.

When you volunteer and sign up with Cheryl Ortiz at the Reese Family Support Center, please indicate which subject areas you feel you would be qualified to tutor, the day(s) you can tutor, and the time.

The tutoring will begin in the latter part of September. Once students are matched with people qualified to tutor them, you will be notified. Please note that this program is not the same as the Frenship Intermediate Mentoring Program. The mentoring program is an outstanding program geared towards mentoring 5th and 6th grade children at Frenship Intermediate School.

The Buckner's Tutoring Program is aimed at providing academic assistance to the residents at Buckner's.

Once again, an hour of your time per week could make a difference in a child passing or failing a grade, and in life.

Anyone interested in being a tutor at the home, should stop by the family support center or call Ortiz at 3305.

Reese Youth Center slates open house

The Reese Youth Center will hold an open house Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m.

John Bailey, the new youth center director, will use the open house to meet with center patrons and families to discuss current activities and future programs.

Bailey has a bachelor of science degree in social work from Lubbock Christian University and has worked with children of all ages. His involvement in youth programs includes the Fort Worth Boys and Girls Club, Big Brother program, sports association, and camp director.

According to Bailey, the goal of the center is to create a sound youth program for both young children and the teen community.

For more information call 3820.

Some commissaries to test credit cards

FORT LEE, Va. (AFNS) — Shoppers who prefer to carry credit cards rather than cash will have an opportunity to be part of a credit card pilot program at five commissaries in November, report Defense Commissary Agency officials here.

"Customers may choose to use MasterCard or VISA to pay for their purchases in commissaries at Camp Lejeune, N.C.; Fort Belvoir, Va.; Keesler AFB, Miss.; Quantico Marine Corps Base, Va.; and Miramar NAS, Calif.," said JoAnn Boutelle, project manager.

Boutelle said that after evaluating the program, DECA hopes to extend it to other commissaries.

Sports tip

How to putt

by Lt. Col. Bob Samay

All good putters have a consistent putting stroke. The putter is always accelerating through the ball at impact regardless of the distance from the hole.

Steps for getting the ball within two feet of the hole consistently.

□ Go to the practice green before you start your round of golf.

□ Pick a hole to putt to that is 10 paces away.

□ Using a putting stroke with a constant pace that is always accelerating through the ball, start hitting putts to the hole.

□ After a few putts from that distance, you should be able to determine how far to take the putter back to hit the ball consistently two feet past the hole.

□ After mastering the 10-pace distance, try 15 and 20 paces. The distance you take the putter back should be proportional to the 10-pace putt.

Remember to practice those uphill and downhill putts; not all of your putts will be level.

□ Once you begin your round of golf, count your paces from the ball to the hole while on the green.

□ Now apply what you have learned from the practice green to hit the ball two feet past the hole.
