May this season of peace bring you great joy

Happy Holidays

by Col. Randy Gelwix
64th FTW Commander

The wing will take a well-deserved break from its flying training mission from Thursday through Jan. 3. During this period, I encourage each of you take as much leave as your supervisor will permit.

I can't overemphasize how proud I am of the job you have done this past year.

As a guest on the "Big Ed" radio show Monday, the show's hosts, Ed Wilkes and Paul Bean, commented that Reese was unquestionably the number-one news story in Lubbock in 1995. That comment brought home to me just how much you have accomplished ... and more importantly ... the way you have accomplished it.

You're a class act Reese! Despite the burden of uncertainty brought by base closure, you have remained focused on our primary training mission. As American forces begin their deployment into Bosnia and continue their world-wide vigil to preserve peace, I want each of you to take pride in your role in our international peace efforts. It is through your dedication, and those of your comrades around the world, that hope exists for real 'peace on Earth.'

The challenge continues in 1996. Our last class will enter training in January and the wing will have to work even harder to balance the demands of closure with the unwavering standard of excellence required for joint specialized undergraduate pilot training.

I ask that you all take some time over the next two or three weeks to recharge your batteries. Spend time with your families and reflect on the spirit of the Christmas and Hanukkah seasons. I also encourage you to open your hearts and homes to our single and unaccompanied people. The joy of the holidays glows strongest when shared.

Whether staying in the Lubbock area or traveling for the holidays, remember to celebrate safely. Don't try to do too much, eat too much or drive too far. And most importantly, don't drink and drive.

Combining drinking and driving is a sure way to ruin any holiday. Use a designated driver, call a taxi or call a friend — just don't get behind the wheel of a vehicle. I want to see every member of the Reese family back to work on Jan. 3.

Irmgard and I wish each of you a safe and happy holiday season.

AF Secretary, Chief send greetings

by Sheila A. Widnall
Secretary of the Air Force and Gen. Ronald Fogleman
Air Force Chief of Staff

As we close out another successful year for our service, we want to express our sincere appreciation to the dedicated men and women who make up our total force Air Force — active, Guard, Reserve, and civilian.

We are extremely fortunate to have you on our team. You are the most intelligent, most talented, most motivated and most innovative individuals we've ever had in our Air Force. You stayed with us through the turbulent times of the drawdown, reorganization, mission realignments, base closures and such.

As a result, we're well postured to deal with the challenges of the post-Cold War world.

Like most large and diverse organizations, we've had to address some serious problems within the past year. We realize that these problems are not characteristic of the entire force.

However, when problems occur, we will act swiftly to address them and to minimize their adverse impact on our people and our service. In that process, the Air Force leadership has reaffirmed its commitment to high standards, discipline, accountability, equal opportunity and treatment, and professional relationships.

In the final analysis, we realize that you are the reason our Air Force is the most respected air and space force in the world, today. While we have some of the most advanced weapon systems ever developed, they would be little more than pieces of scrap without high-quality people such as you to operate, maintain and support them.

We are fortunate to have you out there in the field and in the headquarters, striving to improve our day-to-day activities and to strengthen the warfighting capability we provide the nation.

You understand that the purpose of our Air Force is to fight and win America's wars when called upon to do so. And you are committed to provide the ready combat capability to do just that. You realize that our unique air and space capabilities make us extremely valuable to theater commanders who must respond to fast-breaking crises in an unstable world.

You have demonstrated time and time again that you are prepared to deploy around the globe to meet the needs of these commanders to safeguard our nation's regional security interests.

For our part, the Air Force leadership is striving to ensure what you're doing is important, that you receive adequate recognition for your efforts, and that we take care of your families while you're away.

We're championing quality of life programs because we realize they directly impact force readiness; and we've won valuable allies in the Department of Defense and Congress.

We've also made progress in spreading deployment taskings across the entire Air Force team. And we're pursuing initiatives to address those areas where we're exceeding our goal of no more than 120-days temporary duty per year. We're also re-doubling our efforts to provide much needed stability for our people.

In the final analysis, we are the "nation's Air Force" — a full-service Air Force dedicated to the development and use of airpower for the defense of America. We do so better than anyone else in the world because of you ... our outstanding people.

Thank you for your service, and best wishes for a happy holiday season and continued success in the New Year.

General Boles cites AETC accomplishments

by Gen. Billy J. Boles
AETC Commander

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS) — The holiday season is a time for family get-togethers and time shared with friends in the warmth of homes across the nation.

It's also a time to celebrate the end of one year and anticipation of a new one. And it's a time to remember those who are deployed around the world, far from their families at Christmas. Although they're physically separated from us, they're with us in spirit.

The men and women — both military and civilian — of Air Education and Training Command can be proud of your accomplishments this year. You played significant roles in many success stories as you continue to make a vital contribution to readiness. Your training prepares our students to defend democracy worldwide. Each of you is important to the Air Force and important to our team.

1995 was a good year for the command, and like every year, it was also a year of changes. We can expect more changes and more challenges in 1996. I can't imagine a better group of professionals with which to face those challenges.

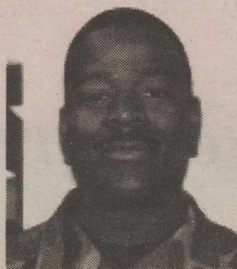

Kay and I wish you and yours the very best this Christmas and throughout the new year. Have a great holiday!

Safety tip Decorations are the leading cause of residential fires during the holidays. Keep real trees watered and all decorations away from sources of heat. Inspect all holiday lighting and use only as directed on labels.

JSUPT Class 96-02 to receive wings today

Colonel Lamkin to address grads

Twenty-two Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training students will receive their pilot wings during graduation ceremonies today for JSUPT Class 96-02.

The ceremony will be at 9:30 a.m. in the Simler Theater.

The guest speaker for today's graduation is Lt. Col. Kenneth Lamkin, liaison officer for the Montana Wing of the Civil Air Patrol, Malmstrom Air Force Base, Mont.

Colonel Lamkin, who served as a T-1A simulator instructor pilot at Reese from 1993 to October 1995, is a command pilot with more than 3,600 hours in the C-130, C-12, C-23, T-37 and T-43 aircraft.

Today's ceremony is open to the base and will be followed by several events in the Reese Club. A buffet is scheduled from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. All Reese personnel are invited to the graduation buffet. There will be a parent's social at 6:30 p.m. and a dinner-dance at 7 p.m.

During the graduation ceremony and dinner dance, awards will be presented to students and permanent party members.

The awards include the Air Education and Training Command Commander's Trophies (top overall graduate in each training track) and Top Stick Awards (top flying students).

Presentations will also be made for academics and leadership. Permanent party members will be recognized in several areas, including flight, academic and simulator instructors; maintainers; and mission makers.

For detailed information on each graduate, see page 4.

AFAS offers 1996-1997 scholarships

ARLINGTON, VA — The Air Force Aid Society awarded $5 million in education grants for school year 1995-1996.

The grant program, named in honor of General Henry H. (Hap) Arnold, was initiated by the Society's Trustees in 1988 in response to the rising costs of higher education. Since that time over 29,000 individual awards of $1,000 each have been made.

The Education Grant program provides $1,000 grants to sons and daughters of active duty, retired or deceased Air Force members, retired reservists over age 60, and Title 10

Reservists on extended active duty (all other Reserve and ANG are not eligible); and spouses of active duty members and Title 10 Reservists on extended active duty stationed in the United States.

This year 5,000 grants were awarded to help people pursue their educational goals, 500 of the scholarships were to spouses. The Society plans to award another 5,000 Education Grants for the upcoming academic year.

Program officials, though very pleased with the overall response to the program, did voice one concern. Too many applicants began, but did not complete, the entire application process because part two of the application required completion of a financial statement to assess relative need. In response to the perception that the form was complicated, the society developed a new financial questionnaire. The society is confident families will be more motivated to complete the process.

Applications for the Air Force Aid Society's 1996/1997 Education Grant Program may be obtained by contacting the AFAS officer at the Reese Family Support Center.

Applications may also be requested by writing to: HQ AFAS, Education Assistance Department, 1745 Jefferson Davis Highway, Suite 202, Arlington, VA 22202.

For additional information, call MSgt Luis Lynch at 6395/3305.

64th Dental Squadron

Providing proper dental care for the people of Reese

by Senior Airman Tim Dempsey
Staff writer

When you receive a dental examination and cleaning appointment, does the thought of a grinding drill send chills down your spine?

You shouldn't be afraid.

In addition to the examinations, the 64th Dental Squadron provides restorative, surgical, periodontal and prosthodontic services to active duty personnel.

Four dental officers and 16 ancillary staff personnel are responsible for the dental health of approximately 1,535 active duty members here.

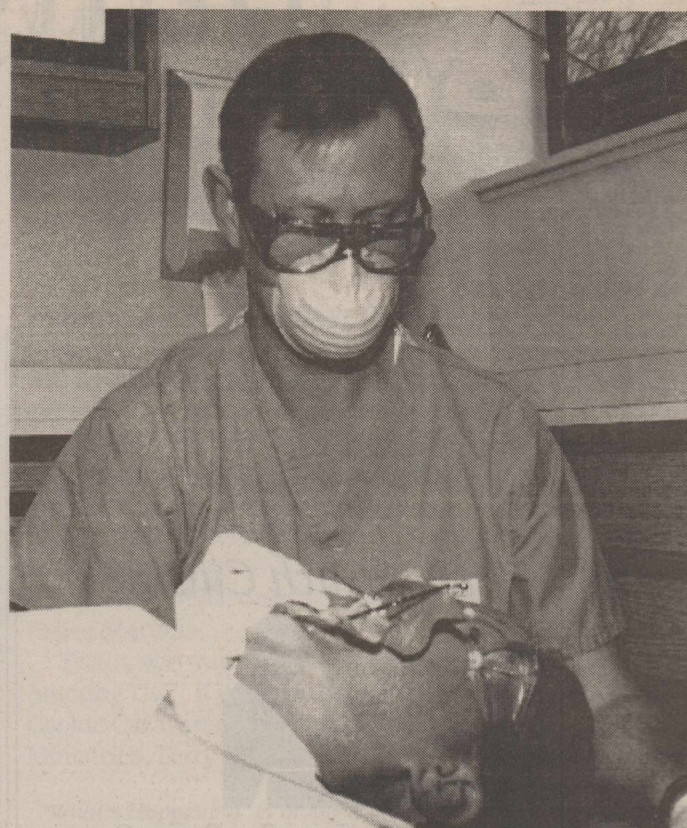

This is accomplished through three flights working together to give proper dental care.

The clinical dentistry flight, most commonly seen, handle restorative, endodontic (root canals), periodontic (gums), exams and cleaning.

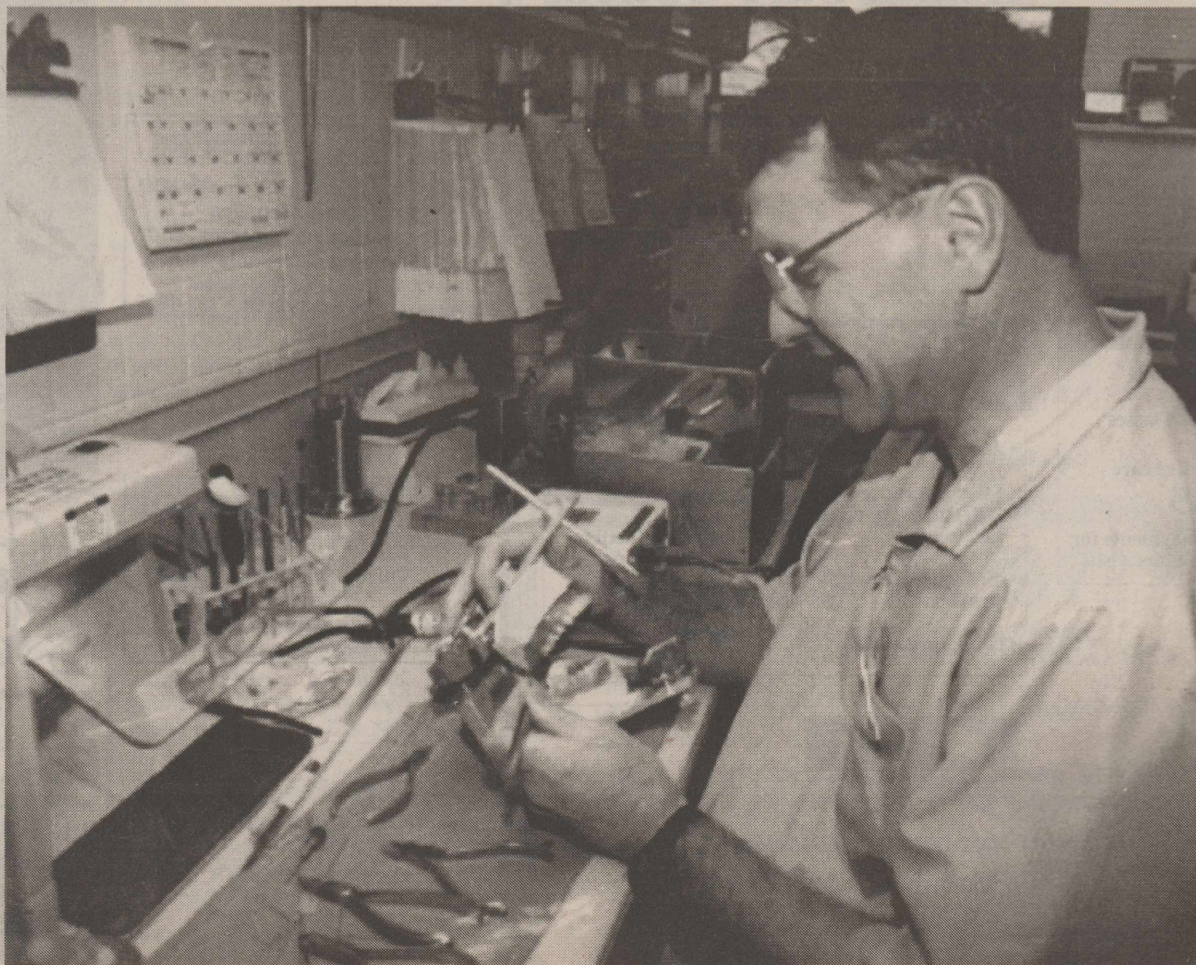

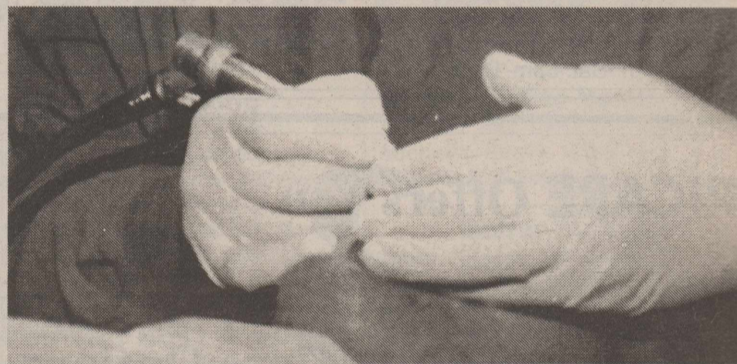

The dental laboratory flight makes crowns, dentures, mouth guards and custom face guards.

The dental support flight is responsible for supply, X-rays and sterilization of cleaning equipment. Also, it is comprised of the people everyone meets, the receptionists.

The squadron does provide standby treatment on a space available basis to non-active duty beneficiaries.

Above, Lt. Col. (Dr.) Richard Paschedag bleaches a patient's teeth. This is one of the many dental services provided by the 64th DS. Below, a technician's hands carefully clean a patient's teeth.

Lt. Col. (Dr.) Ronald Pratt, 64th DS commander, puts the finishing touches on a set of dentures.

Chaplain stresses true meaning of holiday season

by Chaplain (Lt. Col.)
Stephen D. Hess
Senior Chaplain

This becomes one of the busiest seasons of the year. We immerse ourselves in parties, shopping, and gift giving.

For some it can become a difficult time as many find themselves far away from loved ones and familiar faces.

We hope that each of us can stop and ponder the meaning of the season.

For many, these Holidays are Holy Days. For the Christian World it is a commemoration of the Gift of the Son of God, who brought new hope of eternal joy into the world. Christmas is celebrated through thousands of lights and the giving of gifts.

For the Jewish Community, Hanukkah celebrates the rededication of the ancient Temple and a renewed commitment to the House of Israel. This followed a military victory throwing off oppression and desecration of their sacred places caused by the Greek Syrian King, Antiochus.

They celebrate by lighting candles and also exchanging gifts. They renew their commitment to the identity of Israel that Antiochus tried to alienate.

Hanukkah is called the festival of lights as the mood is to be joyous and festive reflecting their renewed faith.

While these two holidays are not historically related, they share a common theme. That of renewed hope coming into a community that had lost hope.

It is very important that we stop and sense hope within ourselves and look for it in each other.

If we are not nurturing hope in ourselves we lose touch with humanity and we begin to feel very alone. If we focus on the needs of others during this season we begin to see the good in humanity. If we genuinely give of ourselves to give joy to others, we find hope spontaneously growing within us.

If you are with loved ones this year, open your hearts and homes to those who are not. If you are away from loved ones, open yourself up to those like you and even less fortunate. A holiday season spent away from family and loved ones, more often than not, opens our eyes to a more clear vision of the season because we are not so immersed in celebration.

There is much to be grateful for this year. A fragile peace is being sought in the Balkan States and the future may find some of us there. Let peace on Earth and goodwill towards all humanity begin within our own hearts towards all of those around us. Destroy an enemy this season. Make that person a friend.

The Reese Chapel staff wants to wish everyone a blessed holiday season. Peace to all, and God bless all.

Chaplain (Maj.) Leslie North and Airman 1st Class Tansa Williams set up the Nativity scene at the base chapel.

All gift requests will go up on a tree displayed in the Chapel Sanctuary. Individuals will be asked to select a "star" which represents an individual, take it home and wrap a gift.
