JSUPT Class 95-06 graduates today General Griffith to address new aviators

Twenty Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training students will receive their pilot wings today during graduation ceremonies for JSUPT Class 95-06.

The ceremony will be at 9:30 a.m. in the Simler Theater.

The guest speaker for today's graduation is Lt. Gen. Thomas Griffith, 12th Air Force and U.S. Southern Command Air Forces commander, Davis-Monthan AFB, Ariz.

The general entered the Air Force in 1967 after serving as an Army Officer since 1963. He has commanded the 35th Tactical Fighter Wing, George AFB, Calif., and the 836th Air Division, Davis-Monthan. The general served on the Joint Staff in the Pentagon and as deputy chief of staff for plans and programs, Headquarters Tactical Air Command, Langley AFB, Va.

A command pilot with more than 4,000 flying hours and more than 900 hours in combat, General Griffith was commander, United States Air position.

Today's ceremony is open to the base and will be followed by several events in the Reese Club. A buffet is scheduled from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. All Reese personnel are invited to the graduation buffet. There will be a parent's social at 6:30 p.m. and a dinner-dance at 7 p.m.

During the graduation ceremony and dinner dance, awards will be presented to students and permanent party members.

The awards include the Air Education and Training Command Commander's Trophies (top overall graduate in each training track) and Top Stick Awards (top flying students).

Presentations will also be made for academics and leadership.

Permanent party members will be recognized in several areas, including flight, academic and simulator instructors; maintainers; and mission makers.

Secretary DeMesme tours base

Ruby DeMesme, deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force for force management and personnel, is briefed by Jack Beam, T-1A simulator instructor, during her visit here Monday. The secretary visited several Reese facilities as part of an orientation tour of Air Force installations.

Lead poisoning is real threat to kids

By Capt Darnall
Chief, Public Health

About one in six children in America have high levels of lead in their blood. You may have lead in or around your home without knowing it because you can't see, taste or smell lead.

Before we knew how harmful it could be, lead was used in paint, gasoline, water pipes and many other products.

Now that we know the dangers of lead, house paint is almost lead-free, leaded gasoline is being phased out, and household plumbing is no longer made with lead materials.

Other sources of lead include imported ceramic dishes, leaded crystal, fishing weights, ammunition, and pottery.

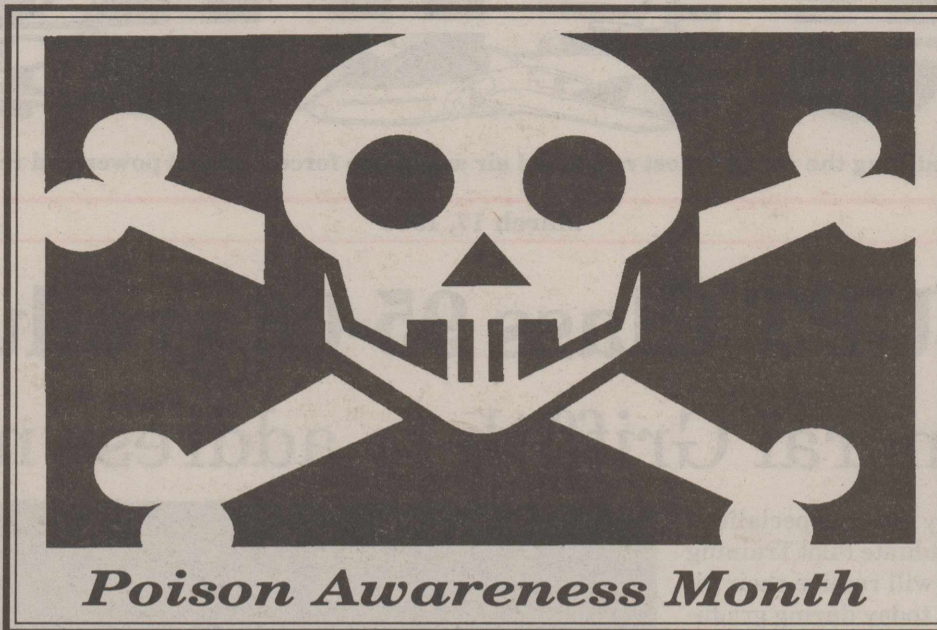

If present, symptoms of lead poisoning may include stomach ache and cramps, irritability, fatigue, frequent vomiting, constipation, headache, sleep disorders and poor appetite.

As more lead accumulates, clumsiness, weakness and loss of recently acquired skills can occur.

The long-term effects of lead in a child can be severe. They include learning disabilities, decreased growth, hyperactivity and even brain damage. If caught early, these effects can be limited by reducing exposure to lead or by medical treatment.

There are several simple things you can do to help protect your family from lead poisoning.

□ Get your child tested. You can't always tell if a child has lead poisoning unless you have him or her tested. Current DOD guidelines state that households with children 6 years of age or younger should complete a questionnaire to help determine if the children are at increased risk for lead poisoning. All high-risk children 6 years of age or younger and all 12-month-old babies reporting for their well-baby check should be tested.

If you wish to complete a questionnaire or have your child tested, call the Pediatric Clinic at 885-3297.

□ Keep it clean. Ordinary dust and dirt may contain lead. Children can swallow lead or breathe lead contaminated dust if they play in dust or dirt and then put their fingers or toys in their mouths, or if they eat without washing their hands first.

Keep the areas where your children play as dust-free and clean as possible. At least two times per week, mop floors and wipe window ledges and chewable surfaces such as cribs with a solution of powdered automatic dishwasher detergent in warm water. Wash toys and stuffed animals regularly. Also, make sure your children wash their hands before meals.

□ Reduce the risk from lead paint. Many homes built prior to 1978 may contain lead paint. This paint could be on window frames, walls, the outside of your house or on other surfaces.

Tiny pieces of peeling or chipping lead paint are dangerous if eaten. Lead paint in good condition is not usually a problem except in places where painted surfaces rub against each other and create dust.

To decrease the chances of exposure, make sure your child does not chew anything possibly covered with lead paint.

□ Don't remove lead paint yourself. Families have been poisoned by scraping or sanding lead paint because these activities generate large amounts of lead dust which can easily be inhaled.

If you own a home, hire a person with special training in correcting lead paint problems to remove lead paint from your home. This individual knows how to do this work safely and has the proper equipment to clean up thoroughly. Don't try to remove lead paint yourself. Also, all occupants should leave the building until all work is finished and a thorough cleanup is done.

All Reese Village units were inspected for lead in 1993 and 1994. Any problem areas detected were corrected then.

□ Don't bring lead dust into your home. If you work in: construction, demolition or painting; with batteries or radiators; or if your hobby involves lead you may unknowingly bring lead into your home on your hands or clothes.

You may also be tracking in lead from the soil around your home or worksite. If you work with lead in your job or hobby change your clothes before going home. Also, make sure that children playing in dirt wash their hands when they come inside.

□ Eat right. A child who gets enough iron and calcium will absorb less lead. Foods rich in iron include eggs, lean red meat and beans. Dairy products are high in calcium. Don't store food or liquid in lead crystal glassware, or imported or old pottery.

□ For more information concerning the health effects of lead or the child blood-lead screening program, contact Reese Public Health at 3534.

Rabies incidents increase in Texas, Southwest

by Chuck Gerrior
Ground Safety Office

Incidents of rabies have recently shown significant increases in Texas and the Southwest United States. Knowledge and awareness are primary steps to counter this potential health problem.

The most common rabies carriers are raccoons, skunks, possums, coyotes, foxes and bats. Unvaccinated domestic animals such as dogs, cats, horses and cattle are also at risk if they come into contact with a rabid animal.

□ Watch out for sudden behavioral changes by your family pets to include difficulty in walking, eating and drinking.

□ Home garbage and compost heaps can attract wild animals. Keep your garbage in containers with secure lids.

□ If any family member is bitten or scratched by any animal, you should identify the animal by kind, color, size and location where the incident occurred. Cleanse the wound with soap and water and see a doctor immediately. The bite or scratch should also be reported to the Military Public Health Office or your local health authority.

□ Report stray animals to an animal control officer.

□ Stay away from bold, friendly or seemingly tame wild animals. Be wary of night creatures such as foxes and skunks that are out during the day. Avoid any choking animal.

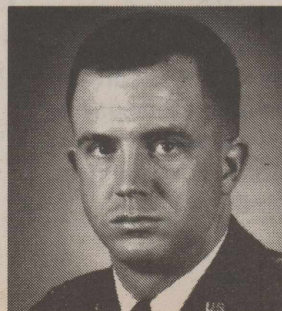

□ When camping or hiking in the wild, check with the local fish and wildlife office for safe wooded areas.

By taking these few precautions it can save you from being exposed to this serious health problem.

Town meeting scheduled for Reese civilians

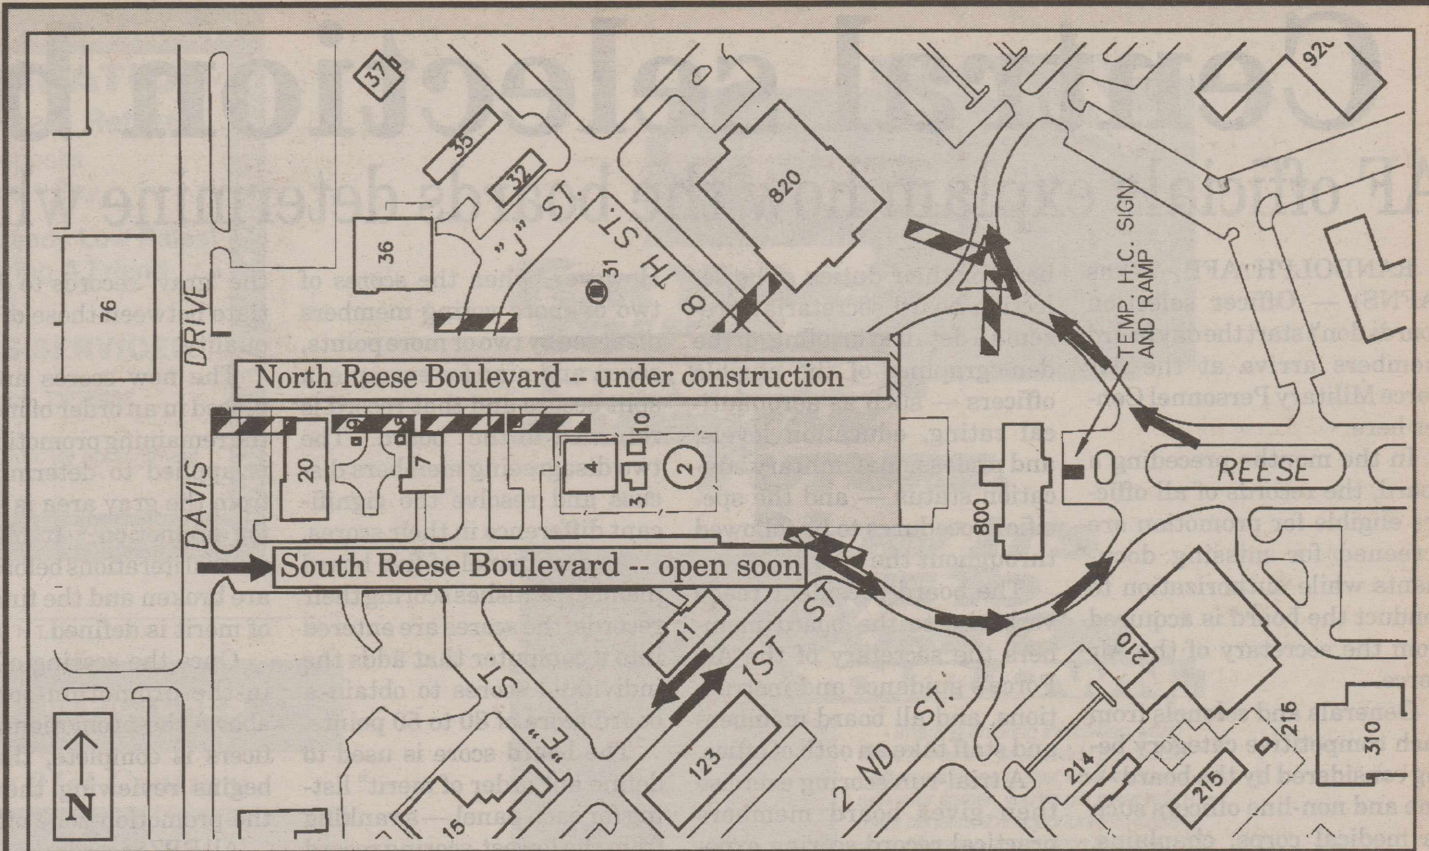

The Reese Civilian Personnel Office is sponsoring two "town meetings" to discuss base closure candidacy issues for federal (appropriated fund) civilian employees and their spouses Wednesday and Thursday.

Both meetings will be held in the Simler Theater. Wednesday's meeting is set for 1:30 p.m. Thursday's town meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 a.m.

According to Hal Corbin, chief of Civilian Personnel Labor and Management Relations, military supervisors of federal civilian employees are also encouraged to attend.

Air Education and Training Command civilian personnel officials will provide briefings on reduction in force, outplacement programs, retraining programs, retirement issues and voluntary separation incentives.

Question and answer sessions will be held during the meetings. Anyone with questions about the town meetings should contact Corbin at 3974.

Reese street to reopen

South Reese Boulevard, the street that runs east between the post office and the water tower, is expected to reopen early next week. North Reese Boulevard remains under construction. South Reese Boulevard will again be a one-way street for east-bound traffic.

Central selection boards

AF officials explain how the boards determine who gets promoted

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS) — Officer selection boards don't start the day board members arrive at the Air Force Military Personnel Center here.

In the months preceding a board, the records of all officers eligible for promotion are screened for missing documents while authorization to conduct the board is acquired from the secretary of the Air Force.

Generals and colonels from each competitive category being considered by the board — line and non-line officers such as medical corps, chaplains, and lawyers — are assigned from across the Air Force as board members.

Enough board members are selected to complete the board process within two weeks, with a panel of five members formed for each non-line competitive category and several panels to evaluate the large number of line officers competing on a central promotion board.

Board members are chosen to mirror the population of officers competing for promotion in terms of race, sex, aeronautical rating, command of assignment, and career field.

Board members don't begin scoring records the first day of the board. Considerable time is spent preparing board members for their duties. The selection board secretariat presents a detailed briefing on the demographics of the eligible officers — such as aeronautical rating, education levels, and professional military education status — and the specific procedures to be followed throughout the board.

The board president reads verbatim to the board members the secretary of the Air Force's guidance and instructions, and all board members and staff take an oath of office.

A trial-run scoring exercise then gives board members practical record scoring experience before the actual selection process begins and helps them to establish a consistent scoring pattern for use throughout the board. Only after all board members are comfortable with the selection process itself does the scoring of actual records begin.

During actual scoring, the board room is closed to anyone not designated in writing by the secretary of the Air Force to serve on the board. Each officer's record is scored by five different board members using a six- to 10-point scoring scale in half-point increments — such as 6.0, 6.5 and 7.0 — with 7.5 representing the average score.

Voting is by secret ballot.

However, when the scores of two or more voting members disagree by two or more points, seven and nine for example, a split occurs and that record is returned to the board. The two disagreeing members discuss and resolve the significant difference in their scores.

As each panel of five board members finishes scoring their records, the scores are entered into a computer that adds the individual scores to obtain a board score of 30 to 50 points.

The board score is used to define an "order of merit" listing for each panel — a ranking from the lowest-scoring record to the highest. The maximum number of officers that can be promoted — the board quota as defined by the secretary of the Air Force — is then applied proportionately to each panel's order of merit to determine where the select and non-select cut line will fall.

Often, the cut line falls at a point where more officers have the same board score than there are promotions left to give. For example, 25 records may be tied with the same board score for the last remaining 10 promotion quotas.

This is typically called the "gray area," meaning some but not all of those officers can be promoted. To resolve the problem, the entire board re-scores the "gray" records to differentiate between those of similar quality.

The new scores are again placed in an order of merit and the remaining promotion quota is applied to determine who from the gray area is selected for promotion. It may take several iterations before all ties are broken and the final order of merit is defined.

Once the scoring of all the in-the-promotion-zone and above-the-promotion-zone officers is complete, the board begins reviewing the below-the-promotion-zone officers.

All BPZ records are initially scored using a yes or no system, where "yes" indicates "exceptionally well qualified" for promotion. With five scoring board members on each panel, three or more "yes" votes, a majority, are needed for that record to be re-scored using the six- to 10-point scoring scale.

The same procedures used for scoring, split resolution, building an order of merit, applying the BPZ promotion quota, and resolving the gray area, are then followed during the scoring of the "exceptionally well qualified" records to determine the BPZ selects and non-selects.

One of the promotion board's last actions is to confirm that the BPZ select officers have better quality records than the IPZ and APZ non-selects, since BPZ promotions come at the expense of the IPZ and APZ officers. The entire board compares the lowest-scoring BPZ select's record to the highest-scoring IPZ or APZ non-select's record.

A majority of the board members must agree that the BPZ record is better than the IPZ or APZ record for the BPZ officer to displace an IPZ or APZ officer on the selection list. If the record isn't better, the IPZ or APZ officer becomes a select and the BPZ officer becomes a non-select.

The process is repeated until a BPZ officer displaces an IPZ or APZ officer. This process ensures that officers selected for promotion below the zone are indeed of such quality that they should displace officers in and above the zone from selection.

The board president is a non-scoring member of the selection board. He or she monitors the progress of the scoring panels, ensures the board is conducted in accordance with the secretary's guidance and instructions, and conducts a quality review of those records that score very close to the final cut line between selects and non-selects.

The board president also reviews a large number of records from all the scoring panels to ensure that the quality of officers selected for promotion is consistent between the panels. While the board president cannot change the select or non-select status of an officer, he or she can have a record re-scored to ensure that all officers have received fair and equitable consideration by the board. The board president also briefs the results of the promotion board to the secretary of the Air Force upon completion of the board.

Before the board adjourns, each board member signs the board report certifying that the officers recommended for promotion are, in the opinion of the majority of the members of the board, fully qualified and best qualified to meet the needs of the Air Force among those officers whose names were furnished to the board.

The board president and staff members from the board secretariat then carry the report to the secretary of the Air Force for approval. If joint-duty officers have competed for promotion, the report also goes to the Joint Chiefs of Staff chairman for review.

The secretary of defense is the next stop — and approval at that level is required before board results can be publicly released to Air Force officers.

The secretary of defense then forwards the selection list to the president, who nominates the officers for promotion to the Senate.

When the Senate confirms board results, officers on the promotion list can actually begin assuming that rank. (Story courtesy Air Force Military Personnel Center)

64th CES team builds hope

Twenty-nine members of the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron helped bring hope to the children of two small villages in El Salvador.

The team, headed by Maj. Keith Yaktus, participated in a joint-service exercise from Feb. 12 to March 12.

"We were one of four Air Force teams participating in the exercise," said 2nd Lt. Jeff McBride. "The first team set up the base camp, we began construction on the two schools and the final two teams will finish the project."

The lieutenant said the exercise is designed test the ability of Prime Beef teams to deploy to remote locations and perform construction missions.

"The great thing about this deployment was we were able to do something to help the people in these villages," he said.

A1C Chris Watson lowers a cement block to SSgt. Daniel Carrington during the 64th CES Prime Beef deployment to El Salvador. The men were helping erect the exterior wall to a new school building. At far right, MSgt. Robert Stalker runs a compactor over the ground at one of the two school construction sites.

News notes

Three earn E-8 stripes

Three Reese master sergeants have been selected for promotion to senior master sergeant. The selectees are: MSgt. Samuel Brown, 64th Mission Support Squadron, MSgt. Ruben Gonzales, 64th Operations Group, and MSgt. Peter Davenport, 64th Medical Operations Squadron. There were 22,168 master sergeants eligible for promotion throughout the Air Force. There were 1,605 selected for a promotion rate of 7.2 percent. The selections were announced Wednesday.

AETC names top airmen

Two airmen assigned to Randolph AFB and two stationed at Lackland AFB have been selected as the outstanding airmen of the year in Air Education and Training Command.

The winners, named March 9, are: Airman of the Year — SrA. Albert Hernandez, 320th Training Squadron, Lackland; NCO of the Year — MSgt. Alejandra Gasper, Inter-American Air Forces Academy, Lackland; Senior NCO of the Year — MSgt. Keith Cobb, 99th Flying Training Squadron, Randolph; and First Sergeant of the Year — MSgt. James Jernigan, 12th Communications Squadron, Randolph.

The four selectees advance to the Air Force competition. They were selected from a field of 16 candidates representing 19th Air Force, 2nd AF, Air University and assorted small units assigned to AETC. Reese's MSgt. Walter Lilley was the 19th AF nominee in the NCO of the Year category.

Civilian personnel closed Tuesday

The Reese Civilian Personnel Flight will be closed Tuesday for staff training. The flight will resume normal operations on Wednesday. Civilians requiring emergency assistance on Tuesday should call 3974.

64th LS-A nets title

by SrA. Tim Dempsey
Sports editor

The 64th Logistics Squadron-A squeaked past the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron, 54-52, to capture the intramural basketball championship here Monday.

SrA. Mike Garduno led the 64th LS-A with 18 points to cap a perfect 16-0 season before an over-zealous packed house.

The game began with the 64th CES jumping out to an early 5-2 lead. The 64th LS-A responded with a 12-point run, pushing its lead to 14-5.

However, the 64th CES was not ready to lie down. The team methodically chipped away at the lead to bring the game within one point, 25-24, at the half.

The 64th LS-A opened the scoring in the second half as both teams continued to light up the score board. The 64th LS-A managed a six-point lead, its largest lead since the opening minutes of the game, before SSgt. Joe Walker, 64th CES, went downtown sinking two 3-pointers as his team took the lead by one, 36-35.

This sparked a fire under the 64th LS-A as it quickly retook and held the lead for the rest of the game.

Trailing 52-50 in the last 57 seconds of the game, the 64th CES missed a golden opportunity to upset the top seeded team as the 64th LS-A went 2-for-10 from the charity stripe. However, the 64th LS-A was able to capture the offensive rebounds to secure the victory.

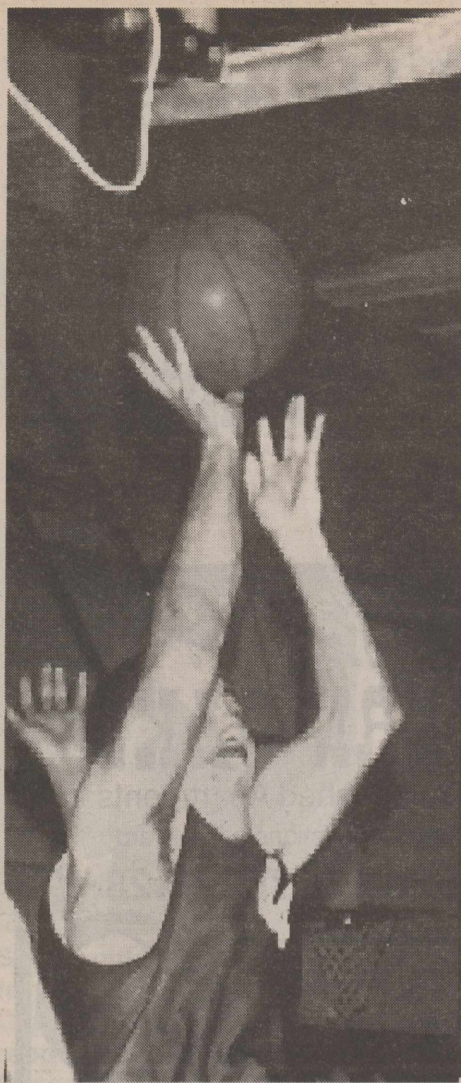

The 64th LS-A made its way to the finals by defeating the 35th Flying Training Squadron in the opening round, 61-53, and disposing of the 64th Medical Group, 67-56, in the semi-finals.

The 64th CES snuck past the 64th Security Police Squadron, 54-53, in the first round and skinned the 64th Services Squadron, 60-58, in the semi-finals.

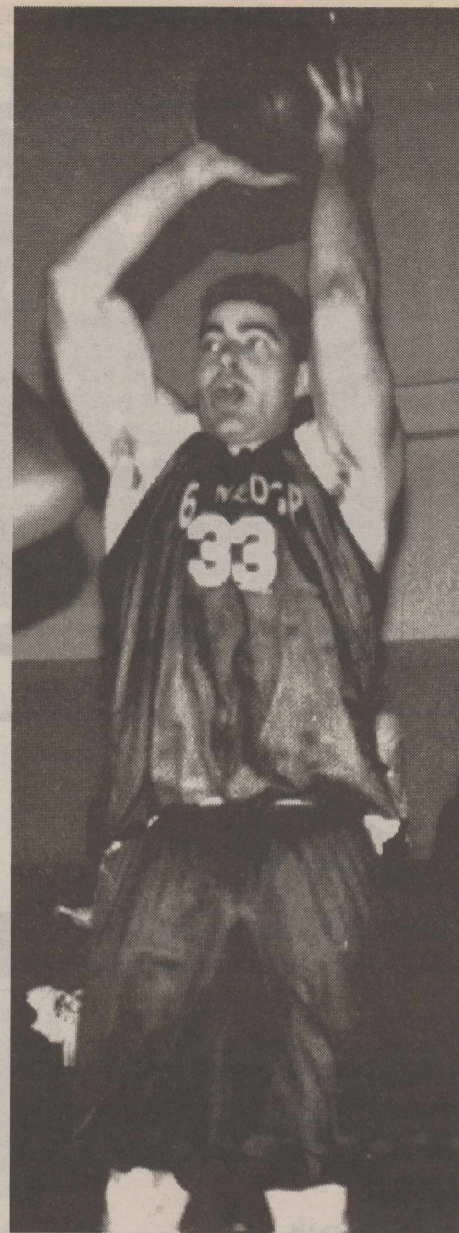

In the consolation game, John Bailey became the high scorer of the tournament as he smoked the net for 32 points as the 64th SVS sanitized the 64th MDG, 67-56.

Both teams appeared to have a good time with double dribbles and playful fouls as intramural sportsmanship highlighted the consolation game.

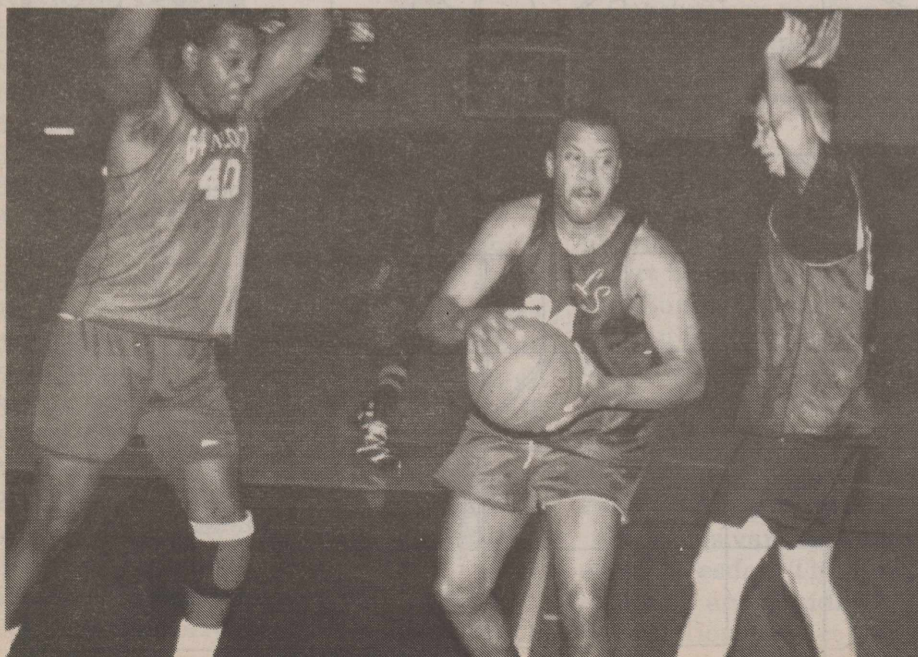

Amn. Warren Bengé stayed focused as he led the 64th MDG in scoring with 20 points.

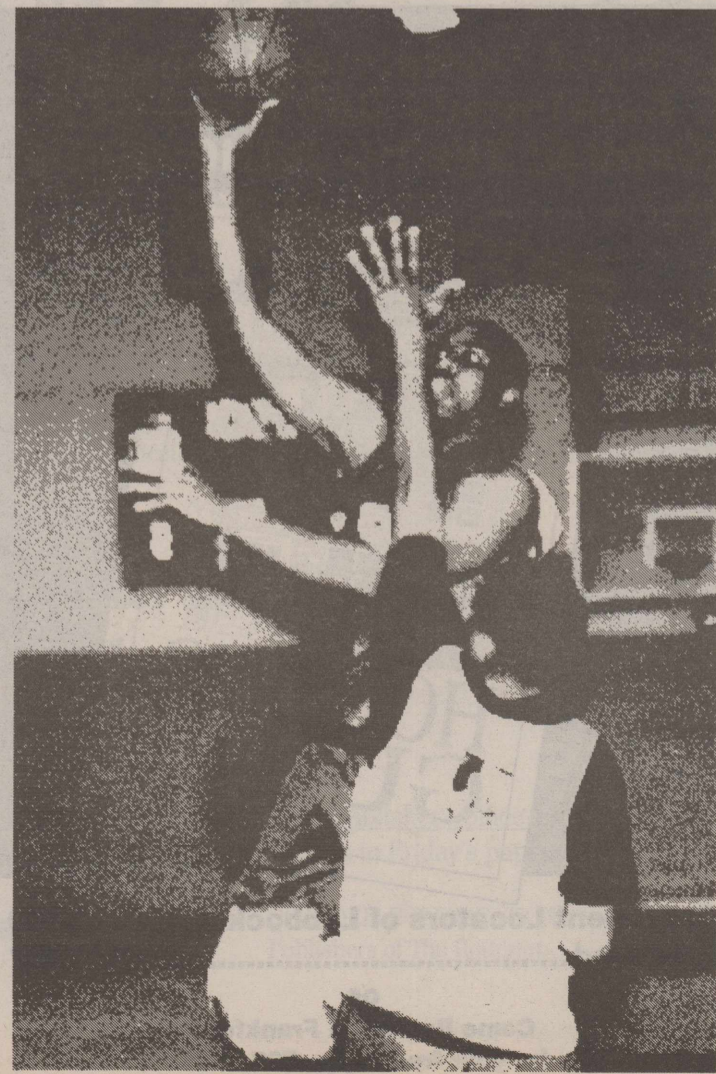

SrA. Mike Garduno, 64th LS-A, powers his way inside for a baseline shot.
