

Air Force Assistance Fund

It's easy and the return is incredible

by Col. Roger Brady
64th FTW commander

Twice each year the Air Force asks us to reach in our pockets and help someone less fortunate than ourselves.

The Combined Federal Campaign is held in the fall and we are now in the middle of our Air Force Assistance Fund campaign.

Both are extremely important and provide us the opportunity to help others—and ourselves!

The benefits reaped from a strong Air Force Assistance Fund Campaign are easy to see and understand.

Let's take a look at what happened at Reese last year. We had a wing goal of $12,150 and collected $17,595 - almost 150 percent of our goal! Even more important, look what Reese people received.

We contributed $17,595 as a wing, but $30,324 and four $1,000 education grants were received by Reese people in need.

That's an amazing return on our investment!

Now let's talk about what it takes to meet and exceed the goal. The answer is - not much. Raising $10,528, this year's goal, is a real no-brainer!

If we all kick in a couple of bucks per month to each of the four agencies - The Air Force Village Foundation, The Air Force Aid Society, The Air Force Enlisted Men's Widows and Dependents Home Foundation and The General and Mrs. Curtis E. Lemay Foundation - and we'll blow the top off the goal.

More importantly, we'll take care of a lot of Air Force people, past and present, who really need help!

Remember the old saying, "Charity begins at home"? Well, the AFAF is "home."

I'm looking forward to a great campaign and I really appreciate your support!

Social Actions Office best in AETC

Cross-trainees put quality lessons into practice

Free of what quality training people call "paradigms," a group of cross-trainees resurrected the social actions program at Reese and turned it into the command's best.

The Reese Social Actions Office is the winner of the Air Education and Training Command Outstanding Installation Social Actions Program of the Year Award.

In simple terms, a paradigm is a pre-set idea of what can and cannot be done.

"When we arrived here," said Capt. Paula McGehee, chief of the Reese Social Actions Office, "the wing had been without a social actions program for eight months. Only one of us had ever worked in the career field before and he (SSgt. Glen Stanton) had been serving as a forward air controller in Korea."

Captain McGehee, an intelligence officer before coming to Reese, was teamed with other cross trainees: MSgt. Walter Lilley, social actions superintendent and former security policeman; SSgt. Laverne Dutkowsky, NCO in charge of ment and former radar maintenance technician; SSgt. Doug Arnold, a substance abuse counselor and former maintenance technician; and Sergeant Stanton, substance abuse counselor.

Since the team had no paradigms to restrict its creativity, it set out to build a program around the needs of the wing.

"We became user friendly," said Captain McGehee. "We didn't sit back and wait for people to come to us. We took the program to the people by assisting at commander's calls, going into our client's work place and being active in a variety of base and community programs."

Some of the programs developed here have been adopted by other AETC offices.

A prime example of what the quality Air Force program is all about, the Reese Social Actions Office continues to fulfill its motto: "Commitment to people — the main ingredient for mission excellence."

It's time to start spring yard work

by Travis Harney
Reese Grounds Maintenance

It's time to start getting you lawn in shape for the summer. Here are a few pointers to help you make your yard green and beautiful.

Reese Village occupants should begin mowing and watering lawns in the next week or two.

After the first mowing, water twice at an interval of three days, then apply a 16-8-8 fertilizer (available at the base self-help store). A second fertilizer application should be given during the month of June.

Do not use a weed and feed type fertilizer this time of year. Weed and feed fertilizers are designed for use during the colder months when trees are dormant and will not be affected by the herbicide.

There are two predominant types of grass in family housing. One is bermuda grass, a low, runner-type grass, that is probably still brown. The other type of grass is a clump-type grass called fescue, which grows well in shady areas and may already be green. Bermuda grass should be mowed to a height of 3/4 to 1 inch, while fescue grass should be mowed to no less than 2 inches.

MSgt. Norman King, 64th Civil Engineer Squadron, explains the use of various lawn care products to Irma Sanchez. The 64th CES Self Help Store offers a variety of house and lawn care products.

Lawns have the highest water requirements during the months of June, July and August. During these peak months, lawns should be given approximately 1.5 inches of water every five days.

The best time to water is in the early morning. Use a sprinkler that emits large drops of water, not a misting sprinkler. To determine how much water your sprinkler delivers, set three to five empty cans at different distances from your sprinkler and run it for 30 minutes. Add the inches of water in all the cans and divide by the total number of cans. Multiply by two to find the inches of water delivered in one hour by your sprinkler.

Now is the time to clean and weed flower and shrub beds. Trim hedges to the desired height and shape before they start to put on new growth. Trees, shrubs, and ground cover should be watered weekly. Apply enough water to wet the soil to a depth of at least one foot. New plantings require more frequent watering the first two years.

From April 17 through May 31 the base self-help store will be issuing vouchers for potted plants and shrubs to family housing residents. These vouchers may be redeemed at three local nurseries for up to $100 worth of potted plants or shrubs. These nurseries are offering Reese a discount, so take advantage of this opportunity to make your yard look better.

If you have any questions concerning your lawn or yard care, contact contact grounds maintenance at 3431.

The road to women's equality has been long, hard

by SSgt. Laverne Dutkowsky
Reese Social Actions

In addition to motivating us to promote and pursue equal opportunity and treatment for everyone, special observances such as Women's History Month serve as a jolting reminder to those of us who today benefit from the struggles and sacrifices made by the pioneers of our past.

Last month's black history celebration reminded us of the contributions of Booker T. Washington, Fredrick Douglass, and W.E.B. Dubois. But does our commemoration of Women's History Month bring to mind Elizabeth Stanton, Esther Peterson, or Betty Friedan?

The 1800s proved to be a tumultuous era in our history. We were up in arms over the abolition of slavery. The participation of women in that movement largely influenced the rise of their consciousness regarding their own oppression. Women active in the anti-slavery cause came to see their situation as similar to that of the black slave - associating themselves as a class, and therefore subject to discrimination.

The establishment of female anti-slavery societies in the mid 1800s provided women the opportunity to develop leadership, organizational and political skills. In 1869, Elizabeth Stanton and Susan B. Anthony established one of the first women's rights organizations - the National Women Suffrage Association. Its goal was to obtain full equality in all social, educational and political spheres for women. The rapid growth of such clubs led to the formation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, claiming membership of 500,000 in 1890 and over 2 million by 1910.

The struggle for the ratification of the 19th Amendment proved to be arduous, lasting 52 years and spanning 19 successive Congresses. Finally on Aug. 26, 1920, Congress ratified the amendment. But the fight was far from over.

The women's cause progressed slowly until the 1960s when Esther Peterson, the head of the Women's Bureau, persuaded President John F. Kennedy to appoint a commission to assess the place of women in the economy, the family and the legal system. The commission's report documented significant problems of discrimination in employment, unequal pay, as well as social and legal inequality. As a result of this report, the Equal Pay Act of 1963 was passed, followed by the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which banned sex discrimination and established the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Dissatisfied with the EEOC's efforts, the National Organization for Women was formed in 1966, headed by Betty Friedan. Although most of NOW's early efforts focused on alleviating bigotry in educational, economic and social arenas, NOW soon became an aggressive advocate of the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion issues.

Women with more conservative views founded the Women's Equity Action League. WEAL avoided the highly volatile abortion issue and concentrated their efforts on eliminating gender discrimination in employment and education.

Over the past century, women have openly challenged the age-old gender-based stereotypes. You may not agree with the agendas these organizations advocate, but our history illustrates that ignoring the cries of the oppressed undermines the rights of each one of us and stifles our collective potential. As we move into our Women's History Month celebration, take a few moments to examine the contributions to equality you have made. Do your ideas about a woman's capabilities allow you to use your people-pool/resource to the utmost?

Are you willing to give each person the same opportunity to progress? No one's asking you to lead a march or make a speech. But we challenge you to remember the past as you make history today.

Military assignments

No immediate changes, even if base should close

by Capt. Thomas LuKenic
Chief, Military Personnel Flight

The relocations office within the Reese Military Personnel Flight has been receiving a large number of phone calls this past month concerning how the proposed closure of Reese will affect individual reassignments.

We would like to address a number of these concerns to help lower the anxiety level a little bit and hopefully answer the questions that we have received concerning the process.

If Reese is placed on the final closure list, all enlisted personnel will be given an airman assignment availability code of 54, to indicate the member is assigned to a deactivating base or unit.

The Air Force Military Personnel Center will update these codes exactly one year from the date the base is scheduled to officially close. For example, if the base were scheduled to close April 1, 1997, all codes will be placed in the assignment system by April 1, 1996. Normal assignment procedures would remain in effect until one year out. At that time all enlisted assignments would be frozen.

Officers are not affected by these codes and would not be frozen. Officer assignments are handled a little differently and I'll discuss that later.

About one year from base closure, a briefing team from AFMPC will arrive at Reese and discuss the assignment process. No assignments will be made at this time. About four months later, teams from AFMPC and Headquarters Air Education and Training Command will return and begin the process. It's a relatively straight forward procedure with individual assignments broken down by rank and Air Force specialty codes. Enlisted assignment selection is based on the following order:

- Personnel with the earliest date of rank have first choice
- Total Active Federal Military Service is the second priority
- Date of birth is the final factor

The Reese MPF Personnel Systems Office will have rosters including all personnel, which will allow the commander to indicate when each person will be allowed to depart the base (Date of Availability). Each of these DOAs will have the concurrence of the wing commander, with final concurrence coming from MPC and the AETC staff.

Once the assignment has been given, that person is free to leave the base upon their DOA, given the normal time for standard out processing. The wing commander has the option of letting select individuals depart up to 60 days earlier, based on circumstances surrounding each member's case.

Overseas assignments are not a part of the assignment team selections. Enlisted personnel will be offered stateside jobs. The minimum number of stateside selections will be at least two. If you wish to go overseas, you will have to consult the enlisted quarterly assignment listing on your own and volunteer through that process. Again, the assignment teams will only offer you stateside choices.

In the event you refuse all of your choices and elect to separate, AFMPC will have a team member present with full separation authority. Squadron commanders will be present and approval can be granted on the spot. Exceptions arise if the member has a critical AFSC or has an active-duty service commitment remaining. These exceptions are worked on a case-by-case basis. So far as we know now, separation incentives will not be offered to personnel separating from a closure base; but, early retirement will be.

Officers will be expected to work through the DADELUS system and their individual assignment teams at AFMPC. Being in a "must-move" status, they will have some priority over normal personnel rotating stateside. Overseas returnees will still have slightly higher priority.

Assignments will be based on each officer's DOA, so it is recommended that officers begin looking for their assignments about six to eight months from their individual DOA.

If you have any additional questions, please call MSgt. Karol Hughes, personnel relocations office, at 3714. You'll be talking to the expert on this. If Reese is on the final closure list it will be the third base closure for her.

Air Force announces uniform changes

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — Air Force members can now wear the pull-over sweater without a tie or tab and women can wear cuff links on the long-sleeved shirt.

These are two of the 55 uniform changes Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman has approved based on recommendations from the Air Force Uniform Board that met in January.

The uniform division here has already sent messages to bases announcing the changes and implementation instructions. The changes become effective when the implementation message is received, unless otherwise noted, division officials said.

Some changes require uniform design modifications, or development and testing, and evaluation by senior leadership before they can be implemented.

The uniform division also sent minutes from the January meeting to base military personnel flights. The minutes, which should be available by March 24, show each item considered and the board's rationale for the decision.

The chief of staff agreed with the board and disapproved some suggestions including, returning to the white ceremonial dress, designing a shirt-styled dress for women, and designing a shorts set with matching socks and walking shoes for summer wear. He also disapproved the suggestion to wear name tags on the service dress coat, allowing officers to wear swords with the service dress, and allowing members to wear any color T-shirt under BDUs and flight suits.

Uniform board officials said they thank everyone who submitted an idea. "We were very pleased with the overwhelming response and interest," said Maj. Beverly C. Wright, chief of the uniform division.

She said the large number of inputs — more than 2,500 suggestions which were condensed into 363 proposals — "showed how important the uniform issue was to active-duty members, retirees, family members and former Air Force members."

"By far, the majority of the ideas were extremely good and well thought out, which allowed board members to make quality recommendations to senior leadership," Wright said.

Items the chief of staff approved are:

- Wear pull-over sweater without a tie or tab
- Alter women's long-sleeve shirt for cuff links
- Army and Air Force Exchange Service to produce limited quantities of A-lined skirts in polyester fabric
- Physician assistants to wear two-line name tags
- Name and USAF tapes must be back on BDUs by Oct. 1, 1997
- Wear a maximum of three badges on BDUs
- Wear command patches on BDUs at major command option
- Wear U.S. flag on BDUs in a contingency situation
- Wear Army patch when attached to that unit
- Wear morale patches on BDUs and flight suits at MAJCOM option
- Wear unit emblem and T-shirts with pockets with BDUs and flight suits
- Women may wear BDU belt tip facing either direction
- Wear Air Force wing and star patch on A-2 flight jackets when assigned to unit not aligned under a MAJCOM
- Wear BDU or blue outer garments with white service uniform
- A more ceremonial band uniform
- A more distinctive USAF

Amn. Heather Thomas, 64th Mission Support Squadron, wears the pullover sweater without tabs. The new look is part of a host of uniform changes recently approved by the chief of staff.

and base-level honor guard uniform

- Security police may wear SP arm band with commander approval
- MAJCOMs may modify the elite guard uniform
- Wear metal grade insignia or chevrons on all outer garments except raincoat
- OK to mix regular size occupational badges with miniature size wings, missile badge and fire protection badge
- Missile badge will not be phased out

OK to wear other U.S. services aeronautical badges

- Colonels and below will wear half-inch blue braid on coat
- Majors and above to wear clouds and darts on service caps (men and women)
- Store flight cap under belt, but not folded over
- Service cap optional for captains and below
- Wear brown leather flying gloves with A-2 flight jacket
- OK to wear new tie with old service dress uniform

OK to carry gym and clothing bags with straps over left shoulder

- AAFES to carry a less expensive optional handbag
- More flexible standards for optional handbags
- Oxfords may have low wedge heels
- Athletic shoes authorized for recruits
- AAFES to carry a comfortable hospital shoe
- Some or all ribbons required on service coat
- Nail polish must be a single color
- Physical fitness uniform for Air Force ROTC cadets
- Different rank insignia for Airman Education and Commissioning Program students and physician assistants
- Civil Air Patrol senior members may transition to new uniform
- CAP to wear silver-gray epaulet and silver-gray name tag

Ideas approved, but requiring design modifications or development:

- Blue cardigan sweater
- A poly/cotton shirt for the optional uniform program
- Alternative design for front pleats and kick pleat of women's skirt
- Evaluate re-sizing of men's trousers for a more relaxed fit
- Redesign women's service cap in one color — blue
- Add stiffer backing to men's poly/wool flight cap
- New women's mess dress blouse without ruffles
- Combat arms occupational patch
- Subdued, metal chevron for goretex parka or desert BDU under deployment conditions
- Need and feasibility for flight suits in women's sizes
- Need and feasibility for BDUs in women's sizes
- Need and feasibility for desert colored flight suit

Air Force directs EO training

Underscoring its commitment not to tolerate discrimination or sexual harassment, the Air Force has directed all civilian and military members to receive equal opportunity training.

Air Force Secretary Sheila E. Widnall and Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman sent a message to senior leaders March 8 stating EO training "is essential to readiness and the right thing to do."

"We do not intend for this training to be just an Air Force stand down and lip service. Our goal is to ensure mission accomplishment by not tolerating discrimination or sexual harassment. Our people are too valuable," the message stated.

According to Capt. Paula McGehee, chief, Reese Social Actions Office, EO training is expected to begin in June. The four-hour blocks of instruction will include information on leadership and supervisory responsibilities, the impact of discrimination and sexual harassment on the work place, and the military's role and responsibility to ensure that discrimination and sexual harassment does not go unchallenged.

The Air Force is also adding 86 manpower authorizations to base social action offices to ensure its EO programs "remain strong and responsive to address those issues impacting our people...." the message stated. (AFNS)

CMSAF: Maintaining quality of life a must

by MSgt. Gary Pomeroy
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — Providing a "quality of life worthy of our people" is instrumental for the Air Force to meet its current challenges, the chief master sergeant of the Air Force told a House panel March 7. CMSAF David J. Campanale said the Air Force's current challenges include adapting to its role in humanitarian and peacekeeping efforts, retaining current warfighting capabilities and modernizing the force through technological advances.

"We want to meet each challenge without causing any additional stress on our people."

— CMSAF Campanale

"We want to meet each challenge without causing any additional stress on our people," CMSAF Campanale said.

He made his comments during a joint session of the House National Security Committee's Military Personnel and Military Readiness Subcommittees. The hearing was entitled "Stressing the Force: Impacts on Readiness and Quality of Life."

CMSAF Campanale told the panel that since 1988 the Air Force has endured a 34 percent force reduction and — during the same time — deployments increased fourfold. Additionally, deployments among 13 of the 21 flying weapons systems, associated crews and support troops exceed the Air Force standard of 120 days annual deployment.

The chief suggested several ways to help deal with the stress of high operations tempo, including minimizing the impact of deployments on families and maintaining a continued focus on technical and professional training.

But CMSAF Campanale expressed concern about the ability to recruit and retain the "right people" because of concerns about medical care, the commissary benefit, more and better child care and the ever-widening "pay raise gap."

Pay compatibility was last achieved in 1982 and civilian pay raises have exceeded the annual military pay raise in 10 of the past 13 years, according to CMSAF Campanale's written testimony submitted to the panel. His statement also indicated that inflation has outpaced military raises during the period.

The current 12.6 percent pay raise gap is projected to increase to more than 18 percent in the next six years, his statement read.

CMSAF Campanale indicated that military members from all branches — including active-duty, retirees and reserve components — redeemed $25.2 million in food stamps at stateside commissaries in fiscal year 1994.

Among the active-duty force, "Others quite frankly go off base because they don't want anyone to see them," CMSAF Campanale said.

"What person — who would sign to take the oath to defend their country against all enemies foreign and domestic — would feel proud about the fact that they have to turn in food stamps to make ends meet?" CMSAF Campanale asked.

He also reiterated his concerns about the need for adequate housing. Currently, 39,000 people are on Air Force housing waiting lists and 60,000 stateside housing units require improvements or replacement. The backlog, at current funding levels, will take 24 years to eliminate," said CMSAF Campanale.

"No other facility program influences the performance and commitment of our people as much as having a quality place to live, whether it is a house or a dormitory room," he said.

"We appreciate the support Congress has given us in years past but the journey is far from over. Quality housing enables our people to deploy with assurances that their families are safe, secure and comfortable."

Testifying with CMSAF Campanale were Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd, Master Chief Petty Officer of the Navy John Hagan and Sgt. Maj. of the Marine Corps Harold Overstreet (AFNS).

Winning team

Capt. Michael Woodlee, Reese Airfield Operations Flight commander, reviews tower procedures with air traffic controller SSgt. Victor Fulton. Captain Woodlee has been selected as the Air Education and Training Command Air Traffic Control Manager of the Year and Sergeant Fulton has been named the AETC Air Traffic Controller of the Year.

Reese captures energy award again

For the sixth time in seven years, Reese has been rewarded for its energy conservation efforts with $50,000.

The cash award is presented annually to the Air Education and Training Command installation with the best energy management program.

Reese won in the small installation category. The $50,000 award is used by the wing for special quality of life projects.

Past awards have been used to build Reese Manor, upgrade the fitness and child development centers and improve the family support center.

Outstanding civilian

Hal Corbin, chief of civilian personnel labor and management relations here, goes over recent modifications to the civil service career program. Corbin was recently named the Air Education and Training Command Outstanding Civilian Personnel Intermediate Specialist of the Year.

Fishing Facts & Fancies

Tips On Tackle

(NAPS)—Heeding these hints from the experts on fishing at Plano, makers of top drawer tackle boxes, may help make all your fish stories come true.

To always know how the fish you catch measure up, mark your fishing rod from the tip in one-inch increments.

Pack your fish in foil, and then put them in an ice chest filled with crushed ice and rock salt. They should stay fresh all the way home.

Get fish to rise by stringing together some flasher spoons and connecting them so they'll run about 15 to 20 feet behind the stern of your boat. They'll attract and bring up fish that could easily miss your cast.

Earthworms are excellent bait for a variety of fish, but they are incredibly messy to handle. To solve this problem without diminishing their ability to attract fish, coat the worms with dry cornmeal or sand prior to your next fishing trip.

Many anglers use barbless hooks to prevent any more damage than necessary to fish they may want to release.

Community notes

Self Help Center offers plant vouchers

The Reese Self Help Center will offer $100 vouchers for plants beginning April 17. The vouchers may be redeemed at three local nurseries.

The center is also expanding hours of operation from April 17 to May 6. The center will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday. Call 3415 for additional information.

Civilian HIV awareness training set

Reese civilian employees and their supervisors will be scheduled for HIV/AIDS awareness training, according to civilian personnel officials here.

Classes will be conducted on Thursdays and individuals will be scheduled by their respective unit training officials.

SPS lists found property

The 64th Security Police Squadron lists the following found property: 35mm camera, gold wedding band and a video tape on flying. Call TSgt. David Wilson at 3999 or 3333.

OWC slates April meeting

The Reese Officers Wives Club will host its annual Silver Crystal Bingo game during its monthly meeting April 13.

The event is for club members only. The OWC will also hold elections for next year's executive board. Call 885-1914 or 885-4898 for reservations by April 9.

Essay contest set

"Joint Force Quarterly" and the National Defense University Foundation, Inc., are sponsoring an essay contest on the revolution in military affairs.

The contest will award cash prizes of $2,000 for first, $1,000 for second and $500 for third place winners. The contest is open to military and civilian personnel.

Entries must be less than 5,000 words and submitted to JFQ by Aug. 31. For further details see the autumn/winter issue of JFQ or contact Ralph Monson at the Public Affairs Office, 3843.

Volunteer nominations sought

Nominations for Reese Volunteer of the Year are due to the Reese Family Support Center by April 3. An awards social is scheduled for April 27. Call Cheryl Ortiz or George Ferguson at 3305 for details.

EWC scholarship drive continues

People wanting to support the Enlisted Wives Club scholarship drive can do so by having a family photo taken Saturday or Sunday in the Mathis Community Center.

Youth center changes schedule

The Reese Youth Center is now closed on weekends. The center had been offering Saturday afternoon programs for teens and preteens.

Lack of participation is cited as forcing the end to Saturday activities. Call 3820 for information.

Women's History Month

Those out of spotlight still shine brightly

Women's History Month is a time when a great deal of attention is focused on women who have made landmark contributions to our nation's growth.

Just as heroic, are those whose day-to-day efforts don't draw the spotlight of national attention.

Here are four such women.

A1C Mary Ann Townsend

A1C Mary Ann Townsend works as a medical technician in the 64th Medical Group.

She feels the experience, education and training she has received in her brief time in the Air Force would have been virtually impossible in the private sector.

Regarding women's roles in today's Air Force, Airman Townsend said, "The Air Force opens many doors for women by providing support and opportunity regardless of gender."

Airman Townsend is from New Orleans and is married to Carl Townsend, an employee of Texas Instruments.

SSgt. Rita Samartino

SSgt. Rita Samartino is the NCO in Charge of the 64th Logistics Squadron Orderly Room.

Her office supports 102 military and 44 civilian employees. A native of California, she is married to TSgt. James Samartino, 64th LS. They have a son Timothy.

The Samartinos have been at Reese for more than five years and they feel that Lubbock is a good place to work and raise a family.

"The Air Force provides the support needed for the difficult task of performing well in your job and being a mother," said Sergeant Samartino.

Capt. Justine Good

Capt. Justine Good, B-Flight commander, 52nd Flying Training Squadron.

Originally from Maryland, she is married to Don Good, a flight engineer with Trans World Airlines.

An ROTC graduate of West Virginia University, Captain Good was inspired to be a pilot by her father who flew B-17s in World War II.

Being one of the few women pilots at Reese, she has an interesting perspective on the roles of women in today's Air Force.

"Since the Air Force is the youngest of the four services, women have had an easier time assimilating into fields dominated by men.

"Today, performance and ability, not gender, are the standards by which women in the Air Force are judged," she said.

Cheryl Ortiz

Cheryl Ortiz has worked in the Reese Family Support Center for over two years.

Her perspective on women's roles at Reese is enhanced by the fact that she has prior service in the Air Force.

Originally from Massachusetts, Ortiz is married to Lou Ortiz, 64th Contracting Squadron.

They have two children, Amber and Lou III. Ortiz has a degree in sociology.

"The Air Force strives to provide a positive working environment for women, whether in an active-duty or civilian role," said Ortiz.
