JSUPT Class 95-10 to receive wings

Navy captain to address 16 graduates

Sixteen Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training students will receive their pilot wings today during graduation ceremonies for JSUPT Class 95-10.

The ceremony will be at 10:30 a.m. in the Simler Theater.

The guest speaker for today's graduation is Capt. Vernon C. Lochausen, III, USN, chief staff officer, Strategic Communications Wing One, Tinker AFB, Okla.

The command and control unit flies the E-6A.

Since earning his Navy commission in 1973 and completing flight training at NAS Corpus Christi, Texas, the captain has served in a variety of command and staff positions.

Prior to assuming his present duties he served as the "Take Charge and Move Out" readiness officer on the command staff, Naval Air Force Pacific, NAS North Island, Coronado, Calif. There, Captain Lochausen helped with the reorganization and relocation of TACAMO to Tinker.

Lt. j.g. Terry Obermeyer, JSUPT Class 95-10, goes over preflight procedures with Capt. Jim Garrett, 52nd Flying Training Squadron C-Flight instructor pilot. The class graduates today.

He is slated to assume command of the TACAMO wing next spring.

Today's ceremony is open to the base and will be followed by several events in the Reese Club. A buffet is scheduled from 11 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. All Reese personnel are invited to the graduation buffet.

There will be a parent's social at 6:30 p.m. and a dinner-dance at 7 p.m.

During the graduation ceremony and dinner dance, awards will be presented to students and permanent party members.

The awards include the Air Education and Training Command Commander's Trophies (top overall graduate in each training track) and Top Stick Awards (top flying students).

Presentations will also be made for academics and leadership. Permanent party members will be recognized in several areas, including flight, academic and simulator instructors; maintainers; and mission makers. (Graduate photos on Page 4)

Secretary Perry proposes housing legislation

by Jim Garamone
AFIS staff writer

Defense Secretary William J. Perry promised service members "a home and not just a bunk" as he proposed the Military Family Housing Revitalization Act of 1995.

"The military family housing we have today is in terrible shape," Secretary Perry said during a Pentagon news conference.

In an interview with military reporters afterwards, Secretary Perry said he was proposing the legislation because it is the right thing to do and because it promotes readiness. He said family housing will be the first thrust of the program, but he expects the program will also benefit single service members.

DOD has more than 350,000 family housing units; officials estimate more than 200,000 are substandard.

"The military will be spending about $750 million a year on new housing construction and renovation," Secretary

Perry said. "At that rate it's going to take somewhere between 30 to 40 years to fix the housing problem. And I consider that inadequate.... The challenge I gave to my staff was to come up with a program that would fix this problem in 10 years or less."

The DOD program will look to private industry and financing to solve the military family housing crisis. The department has often looked to private industry in the past to help with military housing needs—Secretary Perry noted much of the housing built in the 1950s and 1960s was done with private capital—but DOD needs relief from certain requirements. This will give the department the flexibility to address the problem across the country.

"There's not a single silver bullet in what we're proposing here," he said. "It is a complex set of legislative authority, which will allow us to use the technique best suited to the area in which the housing is needed."

Summer safety

Sound safety practices are the key to making it through the 101 Critical Days of summer

by Charles Gerrior
Reese Ground Safety

Today marks the 20th day of the 101 Critical Days of Summer.

The following tips will help everyone make it through the summer safely.

□ Swimming in water with a temperature of 68 degrees or less can cause hypothermia. When this happens you can lose body heat rapidly and may drown.

□ Running during the early morning or evening hours of summer days can eliminate the effects of mid-day sun and reduce heat stress.

□ Always wear heavy duty shoes when cutting the lawn to avoid cutting your feet.

□ A bicycle helmet on your head regardless of age can protect you in a bicycling mishap.

□ Children standing in the swing seat while they swing back and forth can become a flying object.

□ Swim only in an authorized swimming area or pool with a life guard present to prevent a drowning.

□ Store your supply of gasoline in "UL" or "FM" approved containers made of metal or plastic.

□ Plan enough time to allow for unexpected delays and detours when planning your summer trip.

For additional safety information call 3045.

Oklahoma City bombing a reminder that blind hatred still exists

by TSgt. David Masko
Air Force News Service

We recently passed the 50th anniversary of Adolf Hitler's death. But the legacy of his hatred is still alive and well around the world today.

The central act of World War

II was Hitler's campaign of terror — first against countries on Germany's border, then the Jews. The human cost of Hitler's terrorism was enormous — more than 50 million dead, including 6 million Jews murdered by the Nazis.

While the figures for losses in the Oklahoma City bombing pale when compared to terrorist acts 50 years ago in World War II, or in Bosnia where more than 200,000 have already died, any act of terrorism is devastating.

Perhaps these ghastly acts pray on people's minds today because television brings it right into the living room.

At the same time one television network was showing a 50th anniversary of the world's discovery of Nazi death camps recently, another network was graphically reporting 2,000 people killed in Rwanda.

For someone "channel surfing," they'd see murdered people in crowded Nazi concentration camps being stacked like cords of wood and dumped into mass graves. With the same sense of horror, they'd also see similar acts happening today in Rwanda.

Hopefully, the thought of six million, 200,000 or even 2,000 dead still has the power to shock today. Television has made murder so familiar that its meaning may not register as it should. And there is the danger, say experts who study terrorism. People may become complacent to the danger.

As long as there are people who want what others have, there will be terrorism. So said Stephen Sloan, professor of political science at the University of Oklahoma last January. From the standpoint of a terrorist — one who uses force or threats to demoralize — Sloan's theory is coldly realistic, given what's been happening in the world today.

According to a 1993 report given to Congress by the Institute for Studies in International Terrorism, this decade probably will be described as the "decade of the super terrorist." The institute report stated the 1990s will be marked by unconventional attacks, or threats of attacks, with biological, chemical and even nuclear devices.

The institute also reports that there's little that can be done to safeguard people from terrorism because terrorists attack when least expected.

The shattered building in Oklahoma City, mangled bodies in Rwanda, children crying in Sarajevo, and the Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C., are just some of the reminders of man's continued inhumanity to man... reminders that terror never dies.

Proposal looks to private sector to improve housing

secretary of defense for economic security and the chief of the DOD housing team, said DOD proposes a $1 billion five-year test under the legislation. Secretary Gotbaum said 1994 National Association of Home Builders figures show the average new house sold for $169,000 and had 2,100 square feet. DoD spends roughly the same, but the average size is 1,440 square feet. "It costs us more, it takes us longer, and we build homes smaller than the private sector," he said.

Part of the act seeks changes in authorities DOD already possesses. For example, if DOD were authorized to build a 300-unit family housing project in San Diego and a 300-unit building came on the market, the department has the legal authority to buy the building.

"But if that building has room sizes that are above the statutory limits, we can't do it," Gotbaum said. "We can't use commercial standards."

DOD has the same problems with lease transactions because DOD can't guarantee payments.

The legislation will allow DOD to use commercial standards and will allow the department to guarantee payments — for rent, lease or mortgage. This is especially a concern to developers as the military downsizes and realigns. With this authority DOD would be able to guarantee developers don't lose their money.

The authority would enable the department to try different procedures in different areas. Secretary Gotbaum pointed out it is much different putting up housing in an expensive area such as San Diego than in an area such as Fort Hood, Texas. At the end of the five-year test the proposed legislation requires the secretary of defense to report to Congress on what worked, what didn't and what is needed for the long term.

An offshoot of the program is an effort to standardize housing throughout DoD. Currently all services have different standards for housing.

Secretary Perry stressed housing is a readiness issue. People are the main resource of the department—training is an important part of readiness, but the investment is lost if people leave, he said.

"To put it in simple terms, if we can't retain, then we have to retrain at great expense and a loss of quality," he said.

Secretary Perry said the program has bipartisan support, and they expect it will pass as part of the Defense Authorization Act.

Reese airman dies while swimming

A1C David Brent Wray, 64th Civil Engineer Squadron, died Monday in an apparent drowning.

The 21-year-old airman from Cape Coral, Fla., was assigned to the Reese Fire Department since May 1994.

A memorial service was held Thursday at the base chapel. He is survived by his wife Kim and parents Howard and Nancy Wray.

As a firefighter here, Airman Wray assisted in extinguishing a structural fire, in providing emergency care to a heart attack victim and volunteering off-duty time for building repairs at the Texas Boys Ranch of Lubbock.

With U.S. Savings Bonds, the more you give, the more you receive.

Every day, we pass a little of ourselves on to the next generation. When it's best to go fishing, which bait to use, how to cast, what makes a keeper. The knowledge that we give stays with them forever. And we hope we've made their lives a little richer for the learning.

Giving U.S. Savings Bonds also passes an important lesson on to the future generation. Bonds can teach our children how to save, how interest grows and how a small investment can help make their dreams come true.

Buying U.S. Savings Bonds contributes to a solid and secure America for generations to come. What a great way for you to say, "I believe in your future!"

Bonds are as easy to buy as they are to give. Buy them at half their face value through your local bank. U.S. Savings Bonds are like friendships — the longer they're kept, the more they're worth.

So share the tradition of U.S. Savings Bonds. They're the gift that gives back more than you've given.

EPR system

Well written report sign of top-notch supervisor

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas (AFNS) — A well-written Enlisted Evaluation Report is the mark of a top-notch supervisor; someone who is prepared and knows what's required. But similar to public speaking, writing an EPR is a form of communicating that scares some folks to death.

"Many supervisors fear writing an EPR because they're not confident they have the skills to write a well-written EPR, and there's a close-out date that's closing in," said CMSgt. Icy Lee, chief of the evaluation procedures section at the Air Force Military Personnel Center here.

But these are obstacles that can be overcome with a little preparation, beginning early in the ratee/rater relationship.

"Preparing for a well-written EPR begins when ratees are assigned to raters," explains Lee. "Once ratees receive their initial performance feedback where performance expectations are outlined, the rater must begin observing and evaluating how well they are performing their assigned duties and tasks."

As time progresses, facts about performance should be documented in follow-up feedback sessions and midterm feedback sessions. Raters should also keep records of their ratee's accomplishments.

"As raters we have a tendency to not remember achievements or deficiencies that occurred six to 10 months ago," said Chief Lee. "It's important we record them as they occur and not rely on memory." Although many supervisors require their people to keep track of their accomplishments, the ultimate responsibility lies with the supervisor.

When evaluation time rolls around, begin by reviewing the EPR shell and ensuring all the data is correct and current. Also, take time to review the ratee's personnel information file.

Now it's time to grab an EPR form and begin writing. Your first challenge involves the job description section.

"A strong job description helps set the tone for the rest of the EPR," said Chief Lee. "Job descriptions are often taken for granted until a ratee meets a promotion board and begins investigating why he or she didn't get promoted." This is important for senior NCOs whose reports meet promotion boards.

Some things to consider are:

- Include the level of responsibility, number of people the ratee is responsible for, and whether the ratee is a direct supervisor or not.

"The assessment of how the ratee's performance impacted the unit's mission is very important and the rater should ensure it's obvious in the EPR."

— CMSgt. Icy Lee

- Provide statistical data such as budgets, inventories, equipment, costs, dollar value. These focus on the ratee's scope of responsibility.

- Consider the decisions the ratee makes and who they affect. What level of visibility does the ratee's product receive?

- Know the ratee's customers and what the ratee does to satisfy their requirements. Does the ratee make independent decisions that have an impact internally plus externally?

- What does the ratee do besides his or her primary duties. Is it an additional duty that links directly to the mission?

Section V, the rater's comments, is the heart of the EPR, says Chief Lee.

"The first bullet statement should carry a heavy punch," explained the chief. "Avoid rambling on. Answer the basic question: What did the ratee do and what was the impact?"

Lee says to think in terms of impact and result bullets. Document what the ratee did, how well he or she did it, and provide a measure of the ratee's contribution to mission accomplishment.

"The assessment of how the ratee's performance impacted the unit's mission is very important and the rater should ensure it's obvious in the EPR," explained Lee.

And do this using words that have meaning and don't waste space.

"Describe performance in plain English," said Lee. "You won't impress anyone with big words and you will probably do better with those that are clear and understandable to the reader.

"Craft your thoughts carefully. Lots of empty space may signify there wasn't much to say. EPR readers will get this message quickly."

Although space is limited, stay away from jargon and acronyms. "Avoid acronyms because they often obscure rather than clarify," added the chief. Don't forget off-duty education and activities, added Chief Lee. "They're important, but are secondary to the primary mission impact."

Next comes recommendations for additional endorsers. "Additional endorser comments are just as important as the rater's comments," believes Chief Lee. "They highlight the exceptional performer."

Here are some tips:

- The additional endorser should consider what the rater has said in Section V, plus the ratings in Sections III and IV.

- Consider how the ratee compares with his or her peers. If the ratee is at the top, say so. Give impact/results comments that had a positive impact on the unit, division and wing.

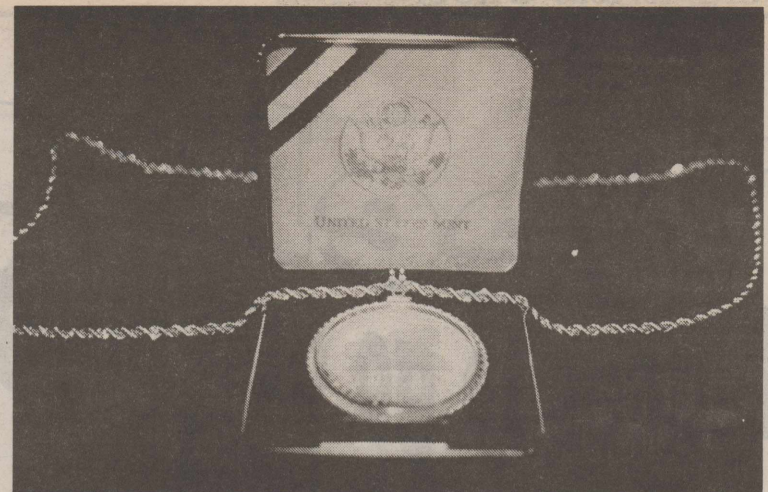

- State ratee's potential for increased responsibilities and if his or her potential is limited, say so.

- Look for accomplishments by the ratee that differentiate him or her from peers.

- Being prepared and well-informed eases the reporting process.

"The bottom line is writing EPRs demands your best effort," said Chief Lee.

"Start early and revise it until the EPR says exactly what you want to say," he concluded.

Sale of the WIMSA Memorial Commemorative Medal has been extended through July 15. Proceeds from the sale of the coin go to help build the memorial.

Ground breaking set for women's memorial

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — A memorial honoring the 1.8 million former and current women in the U.S. military is about to take shape.

The Women in Military Service for America Memorial Foundation will break ground Thursday for the memorial at Arlington National Cemetery in Arlington, Va.

Retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Wilma Vaught, Women in Military Service for America president, said the heart of the memorial will be a register with the names, records of service, photographs and memorable military experiences of servicewomen.

Family and friends of deceased women veterans can submit information for the register or get more information by calling WIMSA at 1-800-I-SALUTE (472-5883). Women who register before the memorial's dedication in 1997 will be listed as charter members, General Vaught said.

In addition, the U.S. Mint has extended sale of the WIMSA Memorial Commemorative Silver Dollar through July 15. The coin costs $35 and is available by calling WIMSA at 1-800-222-2294. Proceeds from the sale of the coin go to the memorial.

Capt. Paula McGehee is the local contact for WIMSA. For information about the memorial or the commemorative coin, call Captain McGehee at 3901.

Reese CGOC earns best in region award

The Reese Company Grade Officer Council recently earned the 1994 Central Region CGOC of the Year Award at the 11th annual central region CGOC conference held at Dyess AFB, Texas.

The Reese CGOC was cited for its strong relationship with the base and the downtown community. Also, by soliciting funds, coordinating and directing every phase of Camp Blue Yonder, 80 underprivileged children were able to participate in last year's camp.

Capt. Bryn Russell, formally chief of information management and former president of the Reese CGOC, was named the 1994 Central Region Company Grade Officer of the Year.

"Reese has been blessed with an exceptional group of fine young leaders," said Lt. Col. Mike Ross, the council's advisor.

"They're professional, focused, dedicated and will make outstanding future leaders of our Air Force. I feel very privileged to share time with them as their advisor," he said.

"The Central Region CGOC offers networking and leadership opportunities for CGO's," said 1st. Lt. Dawn Wallace, wing protocol officer and president of the central region CGOC. "The awards program we sponsor provides an excellent avenue for CGOC recognition."

64th CS crushes 64th MSS

by SrA. Tim Dempsey
Sports Editor

The 64th Communication Squadron extended its winning streak to three games in intramural softball as it out hit the 64th Mission Support Squadron, 17-7, June 6.

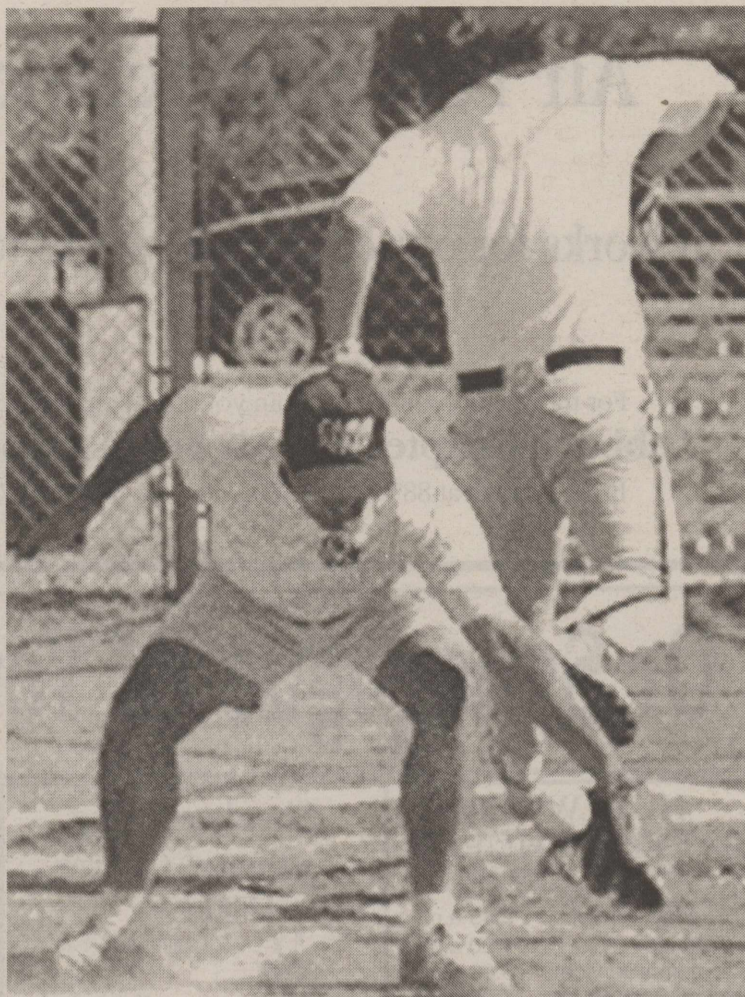

AIC George Judge ended the game in the bottom of the fifth inning on a three run homer.

With one out and runners on first and second base, Airman Judge drove the ball to right field for an in-the-park home run.

The game was called because the 10 run rule is used. The airman finished the game 3-for-3 at the plate with a walk and six RBIs.

The damage, however, came in the bottom of the third inning as the 64th CS went completely through its lineup, scoring seven runs. SSgt. Ramon Guerrero bounced a long ball over the left-center fence, scoring a run during the offensive onslaught.

There were a few bright spots in the 64th MSS offense as MSgt. Mike Pleskovitch drove in two runs with a homer in the top of the fourth inning to cut the lead to seven, 14-7.

Don Brown, 64th MSS, avoids the throw to Capt. Frank Rossi, 64th CS, at home plate June 6. The 64th CS went on to defeat the 64th MSS, 17-7, to extend its winning streak to three games. The 64th CS finished the week unblemished to extend the streak to five games.
