Reese remembers those fighting for freedom -- past and present -- on Veterans Day 1996

Cover by Mike Parrish

Clinton proclaims Monday Veterans Day

by President Bill Clinton
Commander-in-chief

A proclamation:

This Veterans Day, Americans enjoy the fruits of peace, freedom and prosperity in a world where too many must still struggle to live their lives free from conflict, violence and repression.

As leaders in the fight for liberty, we have sought to advance the cause of freedom and democracy to people all over the world. The credit for our own freedom, as well as our continued security, belongs overwhelmingly to the men and women who have served in our nation's armed forces — our veterans. Had they not been there yesterday, were they not with us today, our world would be far different.

Today we salute their service, honor their sacrifice, thank them for supporting this nation in every hour of need. And we acknowledge that freedom's cost continues long after the guns fall silent. Many of our veterans bear the disabilities and scars of military service. The families of others — who never returned from their service — live always with a profound sense of loss. It is our duty to remember what our veterans have done and to uphold our commitments to them and their families. As we mark the past achievements of our veterans, let us remember that they are a vital part of our present and future. Of the 40 million who have served in America's military since the Revolutionary War, 26.5 million are with us today — not distant historical footnotes, but as close as a father or mother, brother or sister, grandfather or grandmother, friend or neighbor. Their tradition of service extends beyond the battlefield and the barracks. Most veterans in civilian life continue devoting their energies to the service of their country and communities. They are civic-minded role models who challenge and inspire our young people. They are volunteers who work for neighbors in need. They represent what is best in the American spirit.

That is why we must help them make the transition from military to civilian careers and empower them with the opportunities to use their training, discipline, and motivation in good and rewarding jobs. We owe them as well a guarantee that we will continue to defend the American ideals for which they have served and sacrificed. As the strongest force for peace and freedom in the world, we recognize our responsibility to maintain a military capability second to none.

In respect and recognition of the contributions our service men and women have made in defense of America and to advance the cause of peace, the Congress has provided [5 U.S.C. 6103(a)] that November 11 of each year shall be set aside as a legal public holiday to recognize America's veterans.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, WILLIAM J. CLINTON, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim Monday, November 11, 1996, as Veterans Day. I urge all Americans to recognize the valor and sacrifice of our veterans through appropriate public ceremonies and private prayers. I call upon Federal, State, and local officials to display the flag of the United States and to encourage and participate in patriotic activities in their communities.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this thirty-first day of October, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and ninety-six, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the two hundred and twenty-first.

Veterans Day recalls contributions

by Sheila Widnall

and
Gen. Ronald Fogleman
Air Force Chief of Staff

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — After the bloodiest fighting in the world had ever seen — allegedly the "war to end all wars" — President Woodrow Wilson proclaimed Armistice Day on Nov. 11, 1919, to commemorate the end of World War I and remind Americans of the tragedies of war.

During the height of the Cold War, following the carnage of World War II and the Korean War, President Dwight Eisenhower in 1954 signed legislation "to honor veterans on the 11th day of November each year...a day dedicated to world peace."

Although the name and purpose of the holiday have changed over the years, one attribute has remained constant: it's a day to recall the sacrifices in war and contributions in peace by America's armed services.

The contributions of today's Total Air Force — active duty, Reserve, Guard and of nuclear devastation is lower than ever. And democracy is spreading around the world. So its appropriate this Veterans Day — as we move forward to the Air Force's 50th Anniversary — to take a moment and reflect on your contributions to unprecedented global peace. You are a significant part of the ongoing heritage of America's military — forged in fire — dedicated to the ideas that make America great.

forward through the service, integrity and excellence you display in all corners of the world.

The result of your efforts is a world that isn't consumed by war; a world in which the threat of nuclear devastation is lower than ever. And democracy is spreading around the world.

So its appropriate this Veterans Day — as we move forward to the Air Force's 50th Anniversary — to take a moment and reflect on your contributions to unprecedented global peace. You are a significant part of the ongoing heritage of America's military — forged in fire — dedicated to the ideas that make America great.

We honor veterans for service, sacrifice to all

by Col. Kodak Horton

Wing vice commander

Horton

On Monday we celebrate Veterans Day. This important day is set aside to honor all veterans for their service and sacrifice to this country and the preservation of the freedoms we enjoy.

domains we enjoy.

We will also have a three-day weekend, the second of the fall season. The long, hot days of summer are over and cooler, more unpredictable weather is setting in. If you are planning to leave the local area over the weekend, you must take weather and road conditions into consideration. These conditions can sometimes change in a matter of minutes causing unplanned delays and challenging travel situations.

As has been said before, moderating the consumption of alcohol can also eliminate many incidents. If you are planning a weekend gathering and plan to serve alcohol, ensure a designated driver is available. Exercise the same good judgement used in your regular duties and take safety one day at a time.

Enjoy this weekend, and also take a moment to reflect on the freedoms we enjoy in these United States.

Civil engineers detail winter maintenance tips

by Maj. James Sohan
64th Civil Engineer Squadron

Now is the time to get your home and yard protected and ready for the damaging effects of the cold that Old Man Winter will soon bring.

Here are some basic tips:

□ Set your mower height to three inches when mowing and apply fertilizer during the next two to three weeks to provide critical nutrients for the dormant winter months.

□ Trimming shrubs and edging the yard one last time in late November should suffice through the winter months.

□ Raking needs to be done on a regular basis until all leaves have fallen. Put the leaves in bags and place them near the curb on Monday mornings. Please don't rake the leaves into the streets as the civil engineers don't have the capability to vacuum them up.

□ Continue to water on a regular basis; however, after the first hard freeze, cut back on watering to once or twice a month until spring.

□ Strong winter winds mean an occasional pick-up of trash and limbs by residents.

Now that autumn is here and temperatures are getting colder, furnaces may be turned on in base housing. Housing maintenance personnel check furnaces during annual inspections to make sure they are operating properly. However, remember to clean furnace filters on a monthly basis. The electrostatic filters may be cleaned by washing; those with paper filters need to replace them monthly.

This is also a good time to check the batteries on smoke detectors and carbon monoxide (CO) detectors. Do this by depressing the light on the detectors.

CO is a colorless and odorless gas produced by the burning of fuel, in this case natural gas. Symptoms of elevated levels of CO in the home may be headache, fatigue, and/or nausea. CO poisoning leads to more intense symptoms and possibly confusion, unconsciousness and death. If a CO detector alarms, leave immediately and call 911 from another residence. Direct questions about furnace servicing to housing maintenance at 3047.

Effective Nov. 1, the Reese Self-Help Store has moved into the housing office located in Bldg. 552. Store hours are from 7:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A reminder to all housing occupants: Do not put lawn debris, (i.e. grass clippings, leaves and tree limbs) in the dumpsters. The leaves should be bagged and set by the curb for pick-up, tree limbs should be put curbside for pick-up.

Specific guidelines on maintaining government quarters can be found in the "ABC's of a Happy Home" brochure provided to residents when they first moved on base. Direct any other questions about winter maintenance to the housing office at 3913.

Using the above tips will make winter a "breeze."

Portable heaters require caution to stay warm safely

Commentary by Michael Guzman
Fire inspector

During the winter months, finding ways to stay warm is on everyone's mind.

The ideal form of heating your home is the permanent, central-type that is provided either by furnaces or boilers. However, since this is not available in all areas, we have to look at alternatives.

One of the most convenient methods of heating is the use of portable, electric space heaters but there are several precautions that should be kept in mind when using them.

First of all, these heaters are prohibited in areas where hazardous operations are conducted. This includes hangars, open fuel cells, maintenance bays, munitions areas and the like. The heaters must be laboratory approved. Proof of this can be easily found stamped on the heater itself. The heaters must have an installed safety tipover switch which automatically de-energizes the unit when it is tilted.

No other type of space heaters are authorized for use. There should be a clearance of at least 36 inches in all directions and clearly away from curtains, furniture and all other combustible materials.

Finally, the heater itself should be in good working condition. Before use, check the wiring. If the cord is damaged or frayed, it should not be used. If during use, the cord or plug become hot to the touch, remove the unit from service.

Call 3686 for more information. We hope all of you will stay warm this winter—safely.

Medical troop wins AF level

Staff Sgt. Kyle Gibson, 64th Medical Support Squadron, processes a medical claim. Gibson was recently awarded the Medical Enlisted Health Services Management Award for Air Force level in the airman category. "I won because I work for the best organization and commander," said Gibson. "Col. (Monica) Figun and 1st Lt. (Ward) Hinger gave me the opportunities to excel." The Amarillo, Texas, native has been stationed at Reese since July 1993. Gibson's next assignment is at Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas. He reports in May.

Retiree dental plan available

Military retirees now have a dental plan that will give them quality dental care at an affordable cost. The program started Oct. 1.

Although in a test or pilot stage, military retirees in Colorado, Florida and Texas have the opportunity to enroll in PMI DeltaCare. This Health Maintenance Organization affiliate of Delta Dental Plan of California serves nearly one million retirees of the uniform services.

The plan, according to James Ramsey, president of Uniform Services Dental Corporation (USDC) based in San Antonio, Texas, is available to military personnel, military retirees, former military, civilian support personnel and all of their dependents.

Cost effectiveness is an issue to be considered when choosing a dental plan. According to USDC, this plan provides more than most other dental insurance plans at an affordable cost. This plan is offered on a voluntary basis for $11.95 a month for a single person, $19.95 for subscribers with one dependent and $29.60 for full family coverage.

The plan has no claim forms to be filled out. There is also no required deductible to pay, no dollar limit on benefits and no preexisting condition limitations.

When a person enters the DeltaCare plan, he or she is required to select a DeltaCare dental office from the list of providers sent when an enrollment brochure is requested. To request a brochure that includes a complete Description of Benefits and Co-payments, the listing of participating dentists and an enrollment form call the DeltaCare Customer Relations department at 1-800-390-DENT (3368). Call anytime Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. Central Standard Time.

New commandant views academy training

U.S. AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AFNS) — After almost three months of settling into his position as the academy's commandant of cadets, Brig. Gen. Stephen R. Lorenz said, "It's just great to be at the academy and live in Colorado Springs. I'm working with great cadets, officers, enlisted members and Air Force civilians."

Lorenz arrived here in August after serving as commander of the 305th Air Mobility Wing, McGuire Air Force Base, N.J. A 1973 academy graduate, the general is responsible for all cadet military training and airmanship education. He also supervises cadet life activities, facilities and logistics support.

Peacekeeper missile celebrates 10 years

F. E. WARREN AIR FORCE BASE, Wyo. (AFNS) — Oct. 10 marked 10 years of the Peacekeeper missiles being on alert at F. E. Warren Air Force Base, the only base with an Intercontinental Ballistic Missile capable of carrying up to 10 warheads.

While the Peacekeeper is a relatively new weapon system, its genesis dates back to the years of Vietnam, Apollo moonshots and President Nixon.

The United States needed a new missile to check the Soviets' ICBM improvements. In 1971, a Strategic Air Command study called for a new weapon system. The weapon had to exceed the capabilities of the Titan and Minuteman missiles. Work began on a new missile — known as Missile X, or MX for short — in 1974.

It was in the midst of the Cold War that the Peacekeeper program began in earnest. President Carter announced in 1979 his decision to begin full-scale development of the MX. Initially, Carter wanted sheltered mobile basing of the missile. This deployment plan existed until 1981 when President Reagan canceled it. He decided to deploy the MX in existing Minuteman silos. The next year, Reagan renamed the new missile Peacekeeper.

In April 1983, Reagan selected F. E. Warren to base the Peacekeeper. By Dec. 22, 1986, 10 Peacekeepers became operational at Warren. The 50th and final operational Peacekeeper came into service Dec. 16, 1988.

Air Force realigns airlift

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The Air Force has announced initiatives to streamline air mobility forces by realigning continental U.S. C-130 and C-21 fleets under Air Mobility Command. Theater mobility assets, to include KC-135s, theater airlift C-130s and operational support airlift fleets, will continue to be assigned to Pacific Air Forces and U.S. Air Forces in Europe.

These changes are the first announced in a series of actions decided at the recent "Fall Corona" senior leadership meeting in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Memorial dedicated to B-24 Liberator crew

ISTRES, France (AFNS) — Two weeks prior to the Normandy Invasion, May 27, 1944, an American B-24 Liberator from Gioia Del Colle, Italy, was flying in a bombing formation destined for Nimes, France. Its mission was to disrupt enemy lines of communication and to destroy valuable rolling stock.

Just shy of its target, the aircraft, "Old Grand Dad's Dream," was blasted by German anti-aircraft artillery and crashed into a French vineyard located in Quartier St. Laurent, Corthezon. All 10 airmen on board were killed.

Fifty-two years later, on Oct. 5, the Association of Military Vehicle Collectors from Orange, France, erected a stone memorial near the site of the crash in honor of the fallen Americans.

Seventh CMSAF leaves "big gap"

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The death of retired Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force Arthur L. "Bud" Andrews leaves a very large personal and professional "gap" in the life of the man who preceded him as the Air Force's top enlisted person.

Retired CMSAF James M. McCoy described his long-time friend and associate as "a private person who made a great many contributions to the Air Force while he was on active-duty and after he retired."

Andrews died in a Marietta, Ga., hospital Oct. 26 from complications following heart bypass surgery.

He served as the seventh CMSAF from August 1981 until his retirement in July 1983. He recently served as the Air Force Sergeants Association's deputy executive director of public relations. He was 62.

McCoy, who served as

CMSAF from August 1979 to July 1981, said he last saw Andrews early in October at an NCO Academy graduation ceremony in Montgomery, Ala., an event usually attended by all former CMSAFs whose schedules permit.

"You could tell he wasn't the same Bud Andrews. I was glad I got to see him," McCoy said of the man he first met in the mid-1970s.

"I could always remember that he set kind of a pace for a lot of us, particularly in dorm restoration," McCoy recalled, adding that Andrews was proud to show off then-innovative enlisted dorms with outside accessible motel-type layouts, a departure from inside hallways.

"I'm not saying he was the first to do this, but he was so intent in making sure his people were well-taken care of."

McCoy said, Andrews was a "very forward thinker on quality of life issues" and his unofficial motto was: "This Bud's for you."

"He kind of used that," McCoy said. "I've seen several articles written about him saying this. Because he really was for his troops. He really believed 'I'm here for you.'"

McCoy said the "toughest thing" is going to be the next time he attends a former CMSAF panel discussion on graduation day at the Senior NCO Academy: "He was always the guy I introduced because we go down the line in order. That's going to be a big gap."

Andrews is the second former CMSAF to pass away. Retired CMSAF Richard D. Kisling, who served from October 1971 to September 1973, died Nov. 3, 1985, from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease.

Women's Memorial construction underway

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — Construction is well under way on the Women's Memorial at the main gate of Arlington National Cemetery, to be dedicated Oct. 18, 1997.

Spearheaded by the Women in Military Service for America Foundation Inc. and led by retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Wilma Vaught, the memorial will honor more than 1.8 million women who have served or are serving in the military since the American Revolution.

The memorial will feature a computer register of women. Using this database, visitors may access military histories and photos of women who've been in the U.S. military.

The foundation is still accepting names, addresses, photos and memorable experiences of women who have served. Families and friends of deceased servicewomen may register for them.

For more information, call the Women in Military Service For America Memorial Foundation at 1-800-222-2294, e-mail the foundation at wimsa@aol.com, or check out their web site at <http://www.wimsa.org/pub/wimsa/>.

Myers-Briggs: What 'Type' are you?

WASHINGTON (AFPS) — Gathered around the conference table, about two dozen co-workers waited for the class to begin. Some clustered in small groups, punctuating office gossip with the occasional loud guffaw. Others idly stirred and sipped coffee or munched donuts. A few sat quietly, alone in their thoughts.

Almost anyone could pick out the extraverts and introverts in this group. But to a trained observer, their actions and speech revealed much more about who they are and why they act—and react—the way they do. By morning's end, they, too, would better understand themselves and the people in their lives. The Myers-Briggs Type Indicator would provide this information.

Using ideas put forth by Swiss psychiatrist Carl Jung, Katherine Cook Briggs and her daughter, Isabel Briggs Myers, developed the indicator, now widely used by executives, military leaders, educators and others to better understand personality differences. Such knowledge, said instructor Edie Alexander, can improve communications, promote teamwork and enhance lives.

"Myers-Briggs helps us understand and accept the differences in how we perceive other people and situations and how we react," said Alexander, who in March joined the American Forces Information Service training directorate in Alexandria, Va. This knowledge, she said, "helps individuals make right decisions about their careers and lives, helps organizations achieve greater productivity and helps educators bring out the best in their students."

The Myers-Briggs formula presents 16 personality types, Alexander explained. The indicators position people on four continuums: extraversion-introversion, sensing-intuition, thinking-feeling, judging-perceiving. Persons taking the class first complete a questionnaire.

"How someone answers the questions gives us a fairly accurate indicator of personality types," Alexander said.

A major benefit of knowing one's type, Alexander said, is "learning what you think of as deficiencies are really strengths. "Once we understand we have certain tendencies, we learn not to feel apologetic for being 'different.'"

Introverts, for example, may feel pressured to be more outgoing, Alexander said. After all, she added, 75 percent of the U.S. population is extroverted. According to Myers-Briggs records, almost 18 percent of military personnel are typed as "ESTJs:" extroverted, sensing, thinking and judging.

The largest type found in the military, however, is ISTJ: introverted, sensing, thinking and judging, she said.

ISTJs, according to Myers-Briggs, are life's natural organizers. To successfully build and direct organizations, however, they must understand and draw out the best other types have to offer, Alexander said.

For improved organizational and personal management, the Myers-Briggs Type Indicator provides a useful tool, but "it should never be construed as the final word on who and what we are," Alexander cautioned. "Extremes are not ideal, and anything else is equally acceptable. The test is merely a tool."

FY96 recruiting totals reported

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — More than 180,000 new enlistees joined the Army, the Air Force, the Navy and Marines in FY1996 the Department of Defense announced recently. In making the announcement, Assistant Secretary of Defense for Force Management Policy Fred Pang said, "To support today's high-tech, volunteer force, we must recruit the best, most capable young men and women possible."

Pang singled out service recruiters for special praise. "The services established tough recruiting goals and our recruiters came through," he said.

In FY 1996, the services recruited a total of 180,192 first-time enlistees while exceeding recruit quality benchmarks. In addition, 5,795 individuals with previous service were recruited for a total of 185,987.

Services tells enlisted heritage story

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AFNS) — In conjunction with the Air Force's 50th Anniversary, the Air Force Services Agency here is working two major projects to honor its enlisted members.

Services is renaming its enlisted awards program and establishing an enlisted heritage hall at the Services Academy at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas.

Anyone who'd like to contribute material for the hall should send their donations to Chief Master Sgt. Jeff Richard at HQ AFSVA/SVOHL, 10100 Reunion Place, Suite 402, San Antonio, Texas, 78216-4138. Call the chief at (210) 652-8875 for more information.

1996-97 AFA men's basketball outlook

The 1995-96 season at the Academy will go down in the history books as a transition year.

The Falcons played last season with a young, inexperienced squad. The senior class, though talented, was full of guys playing in new roles. The team lacked the one great player that could take over a game.

The tradition of outstanding players ranging from Tim Harris (1979-81), Rick Simmons (1980-83), Rob Marr (1985-88), Raymond Dudley (1987-90), Otis Jones (1992-95) and Chris Loll (1993-95) all had that quality.

The good news for this 1996-97 season, is that the Falcons may have found two names that, in time, could appear on that list. Last season, juniors Jarmica Reese and Mike Freeman established themselves as two of the Academy's best young players ever.

Reese, playing both off guard and forward, led the Falcons in scoring with a 14.8 average. His scoring average ranks as the sixth-best ever for a sophomore in AFA history and the best since Jones averaged 15.2 in 1993.

Freeman established himself as a force in the middle. The 6-foot-9 forward/center was third on the team in scoring with a 10.5 average and led the Falcons in rebounding with a 7.0 norm. Freeman's rebounding average is the third-best ever at AFA for a sophomore and most since Cliff Parson's averaged 8.6 in 1967.

"J and Free are excellent players and their numbers are going to be excellent," Head Coach Reggie Minton said. "They have a chance to be one of the best tandems we've ever had, but the thing that matters most is how we play as a team. J and Free will be very important to us with their leadership and play. They are both fine, fine young men and are going to be great officers and basketball players."

Reese proved to be a consistent scorer, averaging 15.4 points against Western Athletic Conference teams and leading the team in scoring in 14 games. He recorded a career-high 30 points against Colorado State to become the first sophomore since Raymond Dudley in 1987 to hit the 30-point mark.

"I think J is an outstanding player. He's gotten taller and stronger since he's been here," Minton commented. "I expect him to just get better and better and to become really one of the top players we've had around here."

Double-doubles have become the trademark of Freeman, who recorded six last year which is the most at AFA since Harris had seven in 1980. Freeman had back-to-back double-doubles three times and is the first Falcon since Brad Boyer in 1993 to do it in consecutive games.

Freeman recorded a career-best 15 rebounds against Doane which is the most rebounds by a Falcon since Boyer had 16 against Youngstown State in 1992. Freeman proved to be a solid scorer as well, leading the team with a career-high 21 points in his first-ever varsity start against Navy.

Freeman's season was cut short, as a knee injury in the last week of the regular season caused him to miss two games and required off-season surgery. He is right on schedule in his rehabilitation and should be ready to go by the opening tip of the first game.

"When people talk of some of the great big men we've had here, Free is going to be right in the mix," Minton said. "He has gotten stronger and he works hard. I don't like cliché's, but Free works as hard as anybody that I've ever been around. So much so, that after his injury we had to hold him back some so he wouldn't try to do too much."

The Falcons will rely heavily on Matt Horin to fill one of the backcourt positions. Horin, a senior, returns from his first full season on the varsity where he played in all 28 games, starting 13 times.

"Matt has a year of varsity ball under his belt and I think he'll be more consistent," the coach said. "What I need from him this season is to be steady with the ball and jump up and hit the open shot. I need for him to be a leader in both actions and examples as much as directing where we'll go on the offense and defense. I think he's very capable of this."

The other backcourt position is up for grabs. Reese will play it unless one or more young players emerge. The top candidates for that are sophomores

Adam Huitt and Jovan Hollins, along with junior Rod Smith.

Huitt is the most seasoned of the trio, playing in nine varsity games last season. He showed a solid outside shooting touch. Smith and Hollins will both be on the varsity for the first time. Hollins moved up to the varsity last year for the WAC Tournament, but did not see any action. He led the junior varsity in '96 in rebounding with a 7.2 average and was second in scoring with a 17.6 norm. Smith was also a solid contributor on the JV squad. He notched a career-high 24 points against Peterson Air Force Base.

The other two front court positions could go to a host of players—seniors Chris Kay, Mark Kilgore, John Middlemore and Bonar Luzey. Kay and Kilgore are the most experienced, both playing in over 20 games last year. Kay logged 8.4 minutes per game while Kilgore notched 5.9 per outing. Both have started in the small forward position. Middlemore and Luzey have combined for only eight varsity games played. Middlemore possesses great size at 6-foot-9 while Luzey is an athletic 6-foot-5. Both could help provide much-needed depth.

Sophomore Louis Stewart, who played 24 games last season, could also be a major factor. Stewart grew more comfortable as the season went along. He finished the season with 28 points and 31 rebounds.

"I think Louis Stewart is ready to play. Chris Kay has the ability to play several positions, so hopefully he's ready to play and be a steady contributor," Minton said. "John Middlemore is a guy that we're looking at to provide depth. He's got good size and he can make some shots. Luzey is a question mark because he's played very little. He'll have to go out and prove that he deserves to play."

Minton also feels that a freshman could challenge for a spot up front. "Bryan Summers and David McManus I think are guys that could be capable of playing one of those positions," Minton said.

Once the lineup is set, the Falcons will get early preseason tests against Navy and at the Montana State Tournament followed by the WAC schedule.

Texas Tech Veterans Day salute to Reese

The Texas Tech Red Raider football team plays Southwestern Louisiana Nov. 16 at 1 p.m. at Jones Stadium, 4th Street and University Avenue.

A special sponsor tent has been reserved in Raider Alley where Bigam's Smokehouse will cater a free fiscal year 1997 tailgate picnic starting at 11 a.m. for all Reese personnel before the game (Non-Reese guests' meals are $3.75 per person.) The tailgate picnic is open to all Reese personnel. Those not attending the football game can stop by the public affairs office in Bldg. 11 (the post office) to pick up free tickets for the picnic.

Any Reese personnel who need transportation to the Nov. 16 game need to call the public affairs office at 3410 by close of business today to make their needs for free bus transportation known.

Child care is available at the Reese Child Development Center only for Reese families attending the S.W. Louisiana vs. Texas Tech football game or for those Reese personnel who are only attending the FY97 tailgate picnic in Raider Alley. Call the CDC at 3541 for more information and to make reservations.
