General West visits 64th FTW

Maj. Gen. W. Thomas West, 19th Air Force commander, prepares to fly a T-37 formation training sortie with Capt. Kyle Kremer, 35th Flying Training Squadron. At right, Susan West is surrounded by spring skit participants during a tour of the Reese Child Development Center. The Wests arrived at Reese Thursday and will be at the base through Sunday. During the visit, the general is scheduled to fly T-37 and T-38 training sorties, tour base facilities and receive program updates. Mrs. West is slated to visit several family-oriented operations at Reese, such as the CDC, thrift shop, family support center and youth center.

General Fogleman cites need for Air Warriors

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — When people think of air power, they often picture a precision bomb going down the smokestack of a military facility in downtown Baghdad, Iraq.

However, air power is much more than that. And senior Air Force leaders are intent upon developing "air warriors" who understand the totality of air power and how to employ it to support America's security interests.

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman provided his thoughts on these subjects while meeting with captains in the Air Force intern program. This program provides a unique opportunity for selected junior officers to enhance their leadership abilities. It combines graduate courses in management and leadership with hands-on experience as an intern in the Air Staff, Secretariat, Joint Staff, or the Department of Defense staff.

The general told the interns that, "The Air Force has become too stove-piped. We have fighter experts, bomber experts, mobility experts, space operators, intelligence analysts, etc."

Fogleman acknowledged that "it's important for young officers to ground themselves in the basic skills of their specialty, particularly during their initial assignment." But he stressed, "they also need to broaden their perspective and develop an appreciation for what other members of the Air Force team contribute to our combat capability. And they need to understand how best to employ air power as part of the joint warfighting team."

Fogleman also described the core capabilities that the Air Force provides the nation in the post-Cold War era.

Spring fever

Allergies bloom along with flowers

by Capt. Joanne Bollhofer
Chief, Pharmacy Services

The old saying goes "April showers bring May flowers," but they also can bring allergies.

Many people cannot enjoy the sights and smells of the new season because of their itchy, watery eyes, runny noses and almost constant sneezing. While there is no "cure" for allergies, there are treatments available that may help alleviate symptoms and make the season more comfortable.

With the variety of products on the market, it is very easy to become confused. To lessen this, keep the following in mind:

□ Decongestants cause blood vessels to constrict. In the nose, this causes nasal membranes to shrink promoting drainage and lessening the feeling of stuffiness. Decongestants are available in both oral (tablet & capsule) and topical (spray & drop) forms. The topical products affect the nasal passages more dramatically and because of this, they should be used for no more than 3 days in a row.

Overuse of a nasal spray or drops leads to rebound congestion - the person finds it more difficult to breathe and uses the nasal spray more frequently and a vicious cycle starts. Oral products are not as effective in relieving congestion as nasal ones, but they do last longer and can be used for an extended period of time, if okayed by a doctor.

While decongestants are generally safe, people with hypertension (high blood pressure,) diabetes (high blood sugar,) hyperthyroidism, glaucoma and enlarged prostate should avoid their use, unless prescribed by a doctor.

Some examples of decongestants are pseudoephedrine (SudafedR), oxymetazoline (AfrinR spray) and phenylephrine (NeosynephrineR spray.)

□ Antihistamines work by blocking the effects of histamine. Histamine is released from many cells in the body when exposed to an item it is allergic to. It is histamine that causes the runny nose and itchy eyes that are associated with allergies and the antihistamine which can relieve these difficulties. Antihistamines can cause various degrees of drowsiness - the most likely are the ethanalamines (ex. diphenhydramine -- Benadryl R) and the least likely are alkylamines (ex. chlorpheniramine - Chlortrimeton R).

People must be aware of this side effect because it can affect their ability to drive or do other tasks that require them to be mentally alert. "Nondrowsy" antihistamines (ex. terfenadine - SeldaneR) are available only by prescription. People who should use antihistamines only with a doctor's okay include those with glaucoma, prostate enlargement and asthma.

If a person cannot use either an antihistamine or a decongestant, they can use saline (salt water) spray to relieve some of their discomfort. Moisture received from the spray can make it easier to breathe and lower the "annoyance factor" of the allergies.

Whenever possible, it is suggested that a single ingredient product be used. Taking more medicine is not better and can increase the chances of side effects.

If there are any questions as to which product is the best for you, ask your doctor or pharmacist.

Be prepared to answer the following questions: What are your symptoms? How long have you had them? Do you have a fever? Do you take any prescription medicines?

The more information you can provide, the easier it will be to recommend the appropriate therapy that will allow you to welcome the arrival of spring.

IRS outlines tax deductions for home owners

Owning a home at tax time can be a very trying experience as you fill out the federal tax forms if you don't have everything in order, said Internal Revenue Service officials.

Just a few questions that may cost you time include what's deductible, what's not and what costs are deferred, said IRS officials. And if you sold your principal residence in 1995, your tax paperwork will be even more complicated.

The key to simplifying federal taxes as they pertain to your house, tax officials said, is good recordkeeping. According to IRS officials, an easy way to keep records for tax purposes is to keep them in three groups: purchase costs and improvement records for the old home, sale records for the old home and purchase records for the new home.

IRS officials explained this way your records will be straight for your federal taxes every year, whether you stayed in the old home for years and never moved or frequently changed residences.

As part of the home's tax records, keep selling and closing costs, repair costs, home improvement costs and mortgage interest. If you own a home, said IRS officials, these are just a few things checked on the tax return by the tax agency.

If you own a home, keep in mind:

□ The basis of a property is a way to measure the investment for tax purposes. It is usually the construction costs, fair market value or purchase price. The home's basis includes title insurance, surveys, and abstract and recording fees. It does not include fire and homeowners' insurance premiums, and sewer and water taxes.

□ Home improvements add to a house's basis, while home repairs, which keep the house in good repair, aren't added.

□ An individual 55 and older who sells his or her main home may be entitled to a once-in-a-lifetime tax break that excludes up to $125,000 of gain from taxes.

□ Normally, an individual has two years to buy and begin using a new home once the old home is sold. However, military members are given four years replacement time after the sale of the house. In addition, this may be extended up to eight years, depending on circumstances.

□ Before you take any deduction on your federal taxes when it comes to your home, IRS officials said you should make sure it is a legal deduction.

IRS forms and publications dealing with owning your own home include: Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel; Publication 17, Your Federal Income Tax; Publication 523, Selling Your Home; Publication 530, Tax Information for First-Time Homeowners; Publication 544, Sales and Other Disposition of Assets; Publication 547, Nonbusiness Disasters, Casualties and Thefts; and Publication 551, Basis of Assets.

Other related forms are: Publication 936, Home Mortgage Interest Deduction; Form 2119, Sale of Your Home; Publication 584, Nonbusiness Disaster, Casualty and Theft Loss Workbook; and Publication 587, Business Use of Your Home.

64th SPS provides variety of protective services

by Tech Sgt. Curtis Montez
64th Security Police Squadron

The 64th Security Police Squadron offers a wide variety of services to the Reese community.

The following is a listing and short explanation of these services. The majority of the programs are open to military, civilian, and contracting personnel.

□ Crime Stop: On-base residents can report crimes in progress to the law enforcement desk by calling 3400. The names of persons reporting crimes through the Crime Stop Line are kept anonymous.

For emergencies, residents are urged to use the 911 system. The law enforcement desk is located in Bldg. 500 and is open 24 hours-a-day, every day. Call 3333 or 3332 for routine business.

□ Vehicle Registration: Vehicle registration is conducted at the Reese Visitors Reception Center (Bldg. 6100), from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Proof of insurance, state vehicle registration, and drivers license are required to register a vehicle. Call 6261 or 6652 for information.

□ Operation Identification: A crime prevention program allowing members to engrave and catalog their belongings in the event of theft. Engravers are available for issue 24 hours a day from the law enforcement desk.

□ Courtesy Vehicle Check: If you purchase a new or used vehicle and would like to ensure it is free of drugs or paraphernalia contact the military working dog section. A narcotics detector dog team will do a courtesy check of the vehicle. Call 3989 for information.

□ Firing Range: Periodically, the combat arms training and maintenance section will open the weapons range on Saturdays for privately-owned weapons firing.

Nearly all rifles and handguns are permitted on the range. Participants have to supply ammunition and targets. Dates will be publicized. Call 3846 for additional information.

□ Home Vehicle Watch: Patrol Officers will do a courtesy check of on-base residences and vehicles during extended absences. If interested in this program, stop by the law enforcement desk and complete an application.

□ Child ID: Periodically a child identification operation is conducted at the base exchange, child development center or youth center. This program allows parents to maintain their children's current fingerprints, photos, and other critical data. Dates and locations will be publicized. Call 6261 for details.

□ Ride-Along Program: Any military member or dependent interested in learning more about the security police career field is welcome to join us in a "Ride-along." Certain rules and restrictions apply so please call in advance. Call 3949 or 3612 for information.

□ Bicycle Registration:

Senior Airman Kristi Mayo, 64th SPS, answers a call at the law enforcement desk. Access to many security police services is available by calling the desk at 3333 or 3332.

Bicycles are common theft targets and registering bicycles is one deterrent. It also helps police return recovered bicycles. If interested, bring the bicycle to the visitors center between 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays. Participants will be issued a permanent decal to affix to the bicycle.

□ Texas HEAT: Texas Help End Auto Theft program is a statewide voluntary vehicle registration program whereby decals are affixed to a vehicle to indicate the owner's written consent that a police officer may stop the vehicle between the hours of 1 and 5 a.m. to determine vehicle ownership.

The H.E.A.T. program is sponsored by the 64 SPS Unit Advisory Council and registration is free for all base personnel. If interested, call 6652.

General Ralston addresses JSUPT graduates

Captain Thompson, Lieutenant Neufeld capture commander's trophies

General Joseph W. Ralston presents Captain Mark Thompson with the bomber/fighter track AETC Commander's Trophy.

Calling it a "great day for our man of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Navy, a great day for our Air Force and most importantly, a great day for our nation," Gen. Joseph W. Ralston, vice chair-

The general told the 18 graduates that the wings they received marked the beginning of a journey. "The silver and gold wings are badges of excellence that you will always wear proudly. In a larger sense, they symbolize the American aviation legacy -- courage, skill and professionalism -- that is unmatched anywhere around the world," said Ralston.

Stressing the importance of joint training, Ralston said, "We learned a lot of lessons in Desert Storm. The cooperation between ourselves and our allies made us believers in the value and necessity of bringing jointness all the way down to primary aircrew training."

The vice chairman also presented the Air Education and Training Command Commander's Trophies to the top graduates in each training track.

Capt. Mark Thompson was the top graduate in the bomber/fighter track and 2nd Lt. Mark Neufeld took top honors in the tanker/airlift track.

In addition, Thompson captured the bomber/fighter track

Flying Training, Academic Training and Distinguished Graduate Awards.

Neufeld also received the tanker/airlift track Flying Training and Distinguished Graduate Awards.

Other bomber/fighter track award recipients were: Leadership Award — Capt. Steve Pedrotty; Citizenship Award — Capt. Robert Churchill; and Outstanding Young Officer Award — 2nd Lt. Gregg Jones.

Tanker/Airlift awardees in-

AF to begin airpower mentoring program

The Air Force's intercontinental ballistic missile force stands alert around the clock to deter nuclear attack on the United States. Day to day, Air Force-operated satellites provide communications, weather, navigation and missile warning support to American forces around the world. They also provide the National Command Authorities an awareness of what's going on in the world — global situation awareness — with a focus on likely hot spots.

When a crisis flares, the Air Force typically will deploy "air breathing platforms" — such as the E-3 Airborne Warning and Control System (AWACS), RC-135 Rivet Joint, EC-130E Airborne Battlefield Command and Control Center (ABCCC), EC-130H Compass Call, and U-2 aircraft. Beginning this spring, it also will operate unmanned aerial vehicles.

All of these systems will help provide the theater commander information dominance in the crisis area, Fogleman said. "We'll also insert special operations units to set the stage for follow-on forces. Our airlifters and tankers will create air bridges to deploy combat forces from the continental United States and forward bases to the crisis flash point."

Flying from the United States, Fogleman said, "Air Force long-range bombers can launch attacks that stop an aggressor in his tracks — then conduct lethal, sustained combat operations from theater bases. Fighters can deploy to the crisis and fight on arrival — securing control of the air before launching devastating attacks on vital enemy centers.

All these operations involve a tremendous Air Force team effort by operations, maintenance and support troops working side by side to generate war-winning combat capability. "No one member of the team is more important than another. In the final analysis, no one does anything in the Air Force without the support of other members of our team," Fogleman said.

The chief of staff went on to say, "We're creating an airpower mentoring program to help commanders develop young officers and NCOs into air warriors who comprehend the totality of air power. That way, when our officers and NCOs serve in joint positions on unified command staffs, the Joint Staff, or in the office of the secretary of Defense, they will be able to articulate how best to employ Air Force capabilities to achieve national security objectives.

In particular, Fogleman indicated, they'll be able to explain that "air power is the collection of unique military capabilities that control and exploit the air or space medium to gain a powerful advantage in time, mass, position, and awareness in pursuit of national security interests.

"In the end," the general said, "our Air Force provides the nation an economy-of-force capability that can be used to indicate concern, to deter, to defend, to compel, or to strike an adversary."

As the Air Force enters the 21st century, Fogleman said, "We owe it to the American people to provide the full range of air and space forces necessary to underwrite this economy-of-force capability.

"And we must provide the air warriors who know how to leverage this capability to fight and win our nation's wars."

Akima Corporation gets fuels contract

The 10-month contract award was based on a competitive procurement and will draw down consistent with base closure plans, stated Reese contracting officials.

Akima is headquartered in Charlotte, N.C., with parent corporations in Anchorage, Alaska. The corporation is owned by over 10,000 Native American shareholders consisting of Eskimos of the northwestern Alaska region, and Aleuts, whose ancestors were the original inhabitants of the Aleutian Islands and southwestern Alaska.

The word "Akima" is from the Inupiat Eskimo language and is pronounced "Ah kee-ma." It means "win," or "winning," in the context of a team effort.

THE FIRST STEP ON

HOW TO THINK LIKE A PRO

by Tom Kite with Dr. Bob Rotella

(NAPS)—An important key to a successful golf game is staying in the present. Here are a few tips Doc and I recommend to help you focus on your game and keep you from getting ahead of yourself.

Resist the urge to add it up:

If you anticipate your score, you'll be distracted from the task at hand. Avoid thinking about breaking a personal record or blowing a lead.

Focus: Concentrate on hitting great shots rather than worrying about bad ones or what others will think if you miss. Visualize the ball going to your target. If your mind wanders, take a moment to refocus and start over again.

Keep your mind on the hole you're playing: Don't worry about the shot you just missed, or how you're going to play the 18th. Stay focused on your current shot. Taking care of the present lets the future take care of itself.

Former U.S. Open Champion Tom Kite, captain of the 1997 United States Ryder Cup team, consults regularly with sports psychologist Bob Rotella.

March of Dimes
WalkAmerica
 Walk for Someone you love

On WalkAmerica day, hundreds of thousands of people will be walking for someone they love...a son, a granddaughter, or a neighbor's child. A pregnant friend, a healthy baby, a sick baby, a baby yet to be born.

Who is the special someone you'll be walking for?

Call the March of Dimes at 797-6771, and sign up for WalkAmerica to be held Saturday, April 27.

64th MDSS provides diverse health care

The 64th Medical Support Squadron is a diverse squadron consisting of approximately 65 military and civilian personnel performing a variety of tasks.

Six flights perform the squadron's unique tasks: diagnostics/therapeutics, logistics, resource management, TriCare, medical information systems and personnel and administration.

The diagnostics/therapeutics flight is comprised of the pharmacy, radiology and laboratory. These fields provide the diagnostic testing that aids military and civilian medical providers in the diagnosis, treatment and health maintenance.

Logistics, resource management and TriCare form the medical service corps element. Logistics mission is to provide supply support, medical maintenance and facility management. TriCare manages a health care system in partnership with Lubbock that will provide the best care to beneficiaries. Resource management ensures accurate execution of the annual operating budget and patient data collection.

The medical information systems flight is responsible for management, maintenance, implementation and disposition of all major hospital computer systems, including more than 100 computers.

Personnel administration is responsible for the overall administrative support to the entire 64th Medical Group.

64th SPTG creates award

Airman 1st Class Kimberly Carrington received the first 64th Support Group Mission Maker Award here April 5.

Carrington was recognized for outstanding customer service in the Reese Fitness Center. She was also instrumental in designing the Summer of Fun program for the Youth Center and formulating the Senior Airman and Below committee for the 64th Services Squadron.

The 64th Support Group recently established the Mission Maker Award Program in recognition of individuals contributing to the success of their organization, group and wing.

These individuals gain personal recognition through outstanding performance in their jobs on a daily basis.

The recipients receive a certificate which bears the Mission Maker creed.

American flag disposal

What will you do with your American flag when it is no longer serviceable? AFPAM 36-2241 states a torn flag may be professionally mended, but a badly torn or tattered flag should be destroyed.

When the flag is in such a condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, destroy it in a dignified manner, preferably by burning.

Reese Village residents are requested to turn their flag into the housing office for a replacement flag.

Organizations requesting the proper disposal of a U.S. flag should call Staff Sgt. Kip Huston at 3948 or drop it off at building 500, security police supply section.

Make a Wish card request

Seven-year old Craig Shirgold of Keen, N.H., is dying from an inoperable brain tumor. He made a wish to the Children's Wish Foundation to receive one million cards by August 15 so he can make the book of world records.

Cards may be sent to him, care of Children's Wish Foundation, 32 Perimeter Center East, Atlanta, Ga., 30346.

Air Force products via email

Air Force Public Affairs has launched a system to allow anyone, military or civilian, to automatically receive recurring Air Force products via electronic mail.

There is no charge associated with subscribing to the service. The system is designed to allow customers to get only the products they'd like to receive.

The following products are available: Daily Air Force News Service, Weekly Air Force News Summary, Monthly Commander's Call Topics, Monthly Air Force Policy Letter.

To sign up for products, send an electronic mail message to listserv@peach.ease.lsoft.com. Additional sign-up information is available on the facts on demand system at 1-800-422-USAF or DSN 224-6031.
