Colonel Martin assumes command of the 52nd FTS

Lt. Col. LeeRoy Martin took command of the 52nd Flying Training Squadron from Lt. Col. Mark Richardson on May 3 in the second of three change of command ceremonies here.

Maj. Harry Edwards will relinquish command of the 64th Medical Support Squadron to Lt. Col. Richard Paschedag at 3 p.m. today at the Reese Club. Everyone on base is welcome.

Martin replaced Richardson who leaves this summer to attend Senior Service School as a National Defense Fellow to the Mershon Center, Ohio State University.

A native of Louisville, Ky., Martin entered the Air Force in 1978 through the Reserve Officer Training Program, where he was a cadet corps commander and a distinguished graduate. He graduated from the University of Southwestern Louisiana with a bachelor's degree with distinction in business.

His education also includes:

a master of business administration degree in human resources management/personnel administration from the University of Missouri; Squadron Officer School distinguished graduate; Air Command and Staff College; and Air War College.

Martin's previous flying assignments have included positions as copilot, standardization-evaluation pilot, aircraft commander, cockpit procedures training instructor, flight commander, instructor pilot, flight examiner, combat crew training school instructor, assistant operations officer, executive officer and operations officer.

In addition, Martin has had staff tours at Headquarters 8th Air Force, Royal Saudi Air Force Headquarters, Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, and the Pentagon, Washington D.C.

He is a senior pilot with nearly 4,000 hours in the T-38, KC-135, KC-10 and T-1A.

Married to the former Charlene Ann Mack of Jennings, La., the Martins have four children, Melanie, Angela, Craig and Kathryn.

Col. Bruce Burda, 64th Operations Group commander, passes command to Lt. Col. LeeRoy Martin in the T-1A Hangar. Martin succeeds Lt. Col. Mark Richardson.

Alcohol-related accidents increase when warmer temperatures rise

by Staff Sgt. Glenn Stanton
Behavioral medicine flight

Thoughts of summer include warm temperatures, flowers, yard work, traveling and outdoor activities. Alcohol-related incidents are often a topic not considered, but do increase during this time of year.

Overall, the entire Air Force sees an increase in alcohol-related incidents during this quarter, and unfortunately, so does Reese Air Force Base. There are many ways to avoid the increase in incidents and the negative impact they may have on your life and career.

First, it is important to know some of the reasons for the increase in incidents. The one that ties into the others is the warmer weather. With nicer weather there is an increase in parties and gatherings. This in itself is not an issue, but there are some who use these events as an excuse to become intoxicated. Occasionally, their intoxication leads to some type of physical assault or driving while intoxicated.

Also, with the warmer weather there is an increase in outdoor projects and working outside in the heat brings thirst. It is common for some people to quench their thirst with alcoholic beverages. Unfortunately, the sun intensifies the effects of alcohol.

Another area that leads to more alcohol incidents is the increase in traveling. Some people take "road trips" and consume alcohol on the way to their destination. There are others who wait until they are away from home and drink irresponsibly, because "nobody's watching." These types of behaviors can lead to arrest for an open container, either inside or outside of a vehicle, or public intoxication. All of these scenarios can be prevented.

When having barbecues and other types of gatherings, remember the primary purpose is to enjoy each others' company, not to abuse alcohol and become intoxicated. Limiting the amount of alcohol available is also an option.

When you go away to "party for effect," remember if you have an incident, it eventually makes its way back to your base. A good rule of prevention is to know your limit and stay within it. As the saying goes, "Think before you drink." Let's all have a nice and enjoyable summer without alcohol-related incidents.

For more information or questions on substance abuse, contact Staff Sgt. Stanton or Capt. Richard Rini at the behavioral medicine clinic, 3739.

DRINKING PROBLEM...

Safe summer requires supervision, planning

Capt Mary Quint
Family advocacy officer

Summer is right around the corner, and soon children will be home 24 hours a day.

Planning a safe, memorable and interesting summer is an important part of parenting. Providing supervision is the most essential part and can prevent bad things from happening to our children.

The greatest threat to the health and well-being of our children is accidents. Accidents kill more children in the United States than the six other leading causes of childhood deaths combined. Accidents occur more frequently in the spring and summer months than the rest of the year.

What can we do to prevent this?

Children age five and under should be under constant supervision both inside and outside the home. Approximately one-half of all child accident fatalities occur in this age group. Accidental poisonings can occur outside the home when children attempt to ingest poisonous plants, pesticides, and lawnmower fuel. Children should be closely supervised near pools, even if shallow. Parents should be in their yards with their young children to prevent them from playing in driveways and streets.

Motor vehicle accidents are the number one fatality for children ages six to 14. Children should be instructed on proper traffic safety rules, wear seatbelts and should wear helmets when riding a bicycle. Drowning is the second highest accident fatality for this age group and adequate supervision should always be provided.

Children should be taught the dangers of lighting matches, starting fires, and playing with power tools, dry ice, fireworks, and other hazardous materials. Firearms and ammunition should be locked and stored separately and parents should talk to their children about the hazards of using firearms without supervision.

What can we do as a community to protect our children?

□ Try finding safe, structured activities for children whether you provide it yourself or utilize the youth center, church youth groups, organized sports, summer camp, or scouting.

□ Know your children's friends, their parents, and where they play.

□ Take turns at playgrounds providing supervision for your neighbors' children. If you see a young child being unsupervised, take that child home to his or her parents.

□ Children under age 10 should always have a caretaker close by. No elementary school-aged children should be left unattended in a motor vehicle. If you have to go inside a building (including your home), bring your preschooler with you or ask a neighbor to help in your absence.

Contact base agencies such as family advocacy, 3739, health promotions, 6153, and the family support center, 3305, for suggestions.

Have a safe and wonderful summer!

Two enlisted specialties to see changes with reenlistment bonus

Enlisted members in two specialties will see changes regarding participation in the service's selective reenlistment bonus program, according to Airman 1st Class Shayn Wyman, special actions at Reese Career Enhancements.

Communications-computer systems operators, AFSC 3C0X1, was added to the SRB program April 30. Communications-computer systems programmers, AFSC 3C0X2, will see a reduction in their SRB multiplier effective May 30.

The addition of 3C0X1 gives those in Zone A and Zone B a multiplier of .5. Likewise, the reduction for the 3C0X2s lowers the multiple for both zones to .5.

Previously, Zone A reenlistees had a multiple of two and those eligible in Zone B received a multiple of 2.5.

Zone A consists of airmen within the SRB program having 21 months to less than six years time-in-service. Zone B are those airmen with six to 10 years time-in-service.

The changes, say officials with the Air Force Personnel Center, are the result of a recent SRB review board.

For more information about reenlistments and the SRB program, contact Wyman at 3082.

Spouse is key for success of military family

Reese Family Support Center slates open house for Military Spouse Day

By Elsa Summers
Family Support Center

Frequent moves, family separations, balancing education, careers and parenting responsibilities are all part of being a military spouse. They may not be in uniform, but the roles they fill are just as important as that of their active duty spouses.

The second Friday in May is Military Spouse Day, a day when military spouses all over the United States and overseas are saluted for their sacrifices and contributions.

It is the military spouse who holds the family together during temporary duty assignments, mobility exercises and remote assignments. They become single parents for extended periods of time, handling family crises and do it all with a stiff upper lip.

Many military spouses at Reese agree that frequent moves, particularly when there are school-aged children involved, is one of the toughest tasks facing military spouses. Selling a beloved home, leaving friends behind, finding a new school for the children, a good mechanic and even a new hairdresser can be stressful.

As Kate Schmidt begins sorting through her family's possessions, getting rid of outgrown toys, recycling children's clothing and eliminating excess shipping weight, the process she's come to know all too well starts over again. For the seventh time in eleven years, Staff Sgt. Douglas Schmidt of the 64th Aerospace Medical Operations Squadron and his family are getting ready for a permanent change of station move next month.

This is one of the biggest challenges of being a military spouse, says Schmidt, but it can also be one of the biggest benefits.

"I would probably never have gone to Europe if Doug wasn't in the military," said Mrs. Schmidt, who has lived in Turkey and Germany.

Travel and the opportunity to live in different countries and meet a variety of people are often mentioned as the benefits of being a military spouse.

"We spent six years overseas in England. I would not have traded those six years for anything," said Valerie Kimsey, whose husband is Maj. Kevin Kimsey of the 54th Flying Training Squadron.

All in all, spouses agree it can be a tough "job," but the support that is offered at the bases eases the stress. Quality facilities and services on base and local communities that welcome military personnel and their families play an important role in the quality of the military lifestyle for spouses.

In honor of Military Spouse Day, the family support center will host an open house Monday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. All military spouses are welcome to stop by and tour the center, get information on base activities and programs. Family support center staff members will be available to answer questions on relocation, family issues, transition and career development. For more information contact Elsa Summers at 3305.

Reese schedules National Police Week activities

National Police Week is a nationwide event which honors all the men and women who have valiantly and faithfully served their country in the law enforcement profession.

It is also a time to reflect upon and pay tribute to all those courageous men and women who have paid the ultimate price and gave their lives in the line of duty so that others may enjoy freedom, protection, safety, security and equality throughout the nation.

National Police Week will be held Monday through May 17.

Throughout the week, local law enforcement departments enhance community relations, amplify their positive image and serve as role models through a series of events aimed at interaction with the local community.

This year, the 64th Security Police Squadron has the following events planned for National Police Week:

Saturday: The 64th SPS will hold a mini-fair at the base park from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Food and drinks will be provided.

Events that will run the whole day include a fingerprinting booth, a bike rodeo for the registration of bikes, a Dunk-the-Cop booth, Drug Abuse Resistance Education—DARE—information, police vehicle, equipment and combat arms weapons displays.

Police bike patrol demonstrations will be held at 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. A military working dog demonstration will be at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. Self-defense techniques will be demonstrated at 12:15 p.m.

Monday: Fingerprinting booth at the Reese Base Exchange.

Monday through May 17: To see what it's like to be a security police officer stop by the security police squadron, Bldg. 500, to sign-up for a ride-along with a base law enforcement official.

May 17: The 64th SPS will hold a formal retreat ceremony at 5:05 p.m. at the flagpole in front of Bldg. 800. All base personnel are invited to attend.

For additional information, please call Master Sgt. Ron Rucker at 6362.

Taking Control Of Your Allergies

(NAPS)—Get control of your environment and you'll feel better, say allergy experts, but where do you get the products to help you de-allergize your environment?

For many years allergy physicians have prescribed environmental control products to help their patients clean up household allergens.

Some of these specialized products were hard to find and many were not available at all.

Fortunately, there's now a central source for products to rid your home of household allergens, such as dust mites, pet dander, mold and mildew spores, and pollen.

National Allergy Supply, the nation's largest supplier of doctor recommended allergen avoidance products, offers a wealth of information about how to use their non-drug allergy products in order to start feeling better.

What kind of help is available?

A few products exist that, when applied to carpets, either kill dust mites or neutralize their allergen. One spray will de-activate the harmful protein in animal dander and render it harmless. There are also products available without chlorine that can remove mold and mildew and another product that can keep them away for up to two years.

Room air cleaners with hospital grade HEPA (high efficiency particulate air) filters can help turn an allergy sufferer's bedroom into a safe haven from pollen and other irritants that keep them miserable. New vacuum cleaners with HEPA filters contain virtually all of the dust they vacuum up and allow even the sensitive allergy sufferer to clean without a dust mask. For lifelong allergy sufferers, these products can be life-changing.

National Allergy Supply has also created a new video, How to Allergy Proof Your Home and Feel Better.

For a free catalog, more information or to order the new video, call their toll-free number 1-800-522-1448. Or write to National Allergy Supply, Inc.; 4400 Abbotts Bridge Road; P.O. Box 1658; Duluth, GA 30136.

Relief is in sight for longtime allergy sufferers. A new source of products makes it easier to take control of allergens in the immediate environment.

TIME SAVING SHORTCUTS

Microwave Ovens

(NAPS)—Microwave oven cooking is so fast that it seems impossible to come up with ways to make it any more time-efficient. However, according to home economists from Whirlpool Corporation, there are a few things that can be done to speed up cooking and clean-up.

They advise:

- Use covers on cooking utensils when possible to retain heat and moisture. The covers also help reduce splatters and decrease cleaning time.

- Cook and serve in the same microwave dish to cut down on preparation and serving dishes.

- Thin foods cook faster than thick foods, so spread casseroles, vegetables, etc. in a shallow dish with straight sides for the fastest, most even cooking and heating.

- Place thicker areas of food (such as the meaty portion of drumsticks) toward the outside of a dish where they will receive the most microwave energy the fastest.

- Use the donut shape to cook foods when possible. Foods cook slowest in the center. By eliminating the center area, all portions of the food will receive the most energy and will cook faster and more evenly.

Visit Reese Air Force Base Air Show,
Saturday & Sunday, May 18-19, 1996

Members of wing plans and BEET are responsible for planning and evaluating exercises as above.

Lt. Col. Roger Rechsteiner, wing safety chief, radios in from the flightline during an inspection of a T-38 Talon.

The wing agencies: Part I

The 64th Flying Training Wing's mission is to train the world's best pilots.

Wing staff agencies contribute to this important mission in a variety of ways.

The wing command section is comprised of the wing commander, vice commander, executive, protocol, senior enlisted advisor and historian. The protocol officer handles all distinguished visitors coming to the base. The senior enlisted advisor is entrusted with the well-being of all enlisted personnel and their activities on the base. The wing historian compiles and tracks the history of each unit on base, and ultimately, writes and keeps up Reese's history records. The historian also maintains Reese's historical property and artifacts.

The Base Exercise Evaluation Team and wing plans offices prepare the base for real world contingencies. In order to maintain a high state of readiness, periodic exercises are created and evaluated by BEET members.

The wing safety office preserves the wing's people and resources by continuously improving safety performance. The safety office advises the wing and subordinate commanders, functional managers and supervisors on safety and health matters. They also manage the wing commander's safety program and keep him informed on program status and hazards.

The wing manpower office is responsible for maintaining one of the Air Force's most valuable resources—manpower authorizations. Additionally, it's charged with providing various process improvement strategies to base functions. These strategies include management advisory studies, A-76 cost comparisons and the Air Force Suggestion Program.

The public affairs office is responsible for all community relations events, media queries and internal information for the base.

(This is the first in a two-part series.)

Ruede Turner, wing historian, looks at slides for the base archives.

Staff Sgt. Rick Carter, manpower office, helps Airman 1st Class Danielle Bowison, 64th Communications Squadron, with a manning document following the recent 64th CS-Information management merger.
