General West visits Reese

Maj. Gen. Thomas West, 19th Air Force commander, made his first visit to Reese Monday. During the visit he received training flights in the T-1A and T-38. At right, the general preflights his aircraft with Capt. Scott Grizzard, 54th Flying Training Squadron. At inset, the general adjusts his headphones before a T-1A training sortie with Maj. Danny Leonard, 52nd FTS. The general also visited several wing facilities and met with Reese people.

Air Force to mask advanced degrees on some briefs

by Gen. Ronald Fogleman
Air Force Chief of Staff

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — As a result of discussions at our November meeting with the Air Force's senior leaders, Secretary of the Air Force Sheila E. Widnall and I have changed the policy concerning advanced academic degree consideration by officer promotion boards.

Effective in time for the 1996 major's board this spring, advanced academic degree status — completion or noncompletion — will not appear on the line officer selection brief at the central selection board for promotion to captain and major. The change affects the total force — active-duty, guard, and reserve officers.

I want all our officers to understand the reason for this policy change — what it says and what it doesn't say. First, the policy: Advanced academic degree status, that is the completion or noncompletion, will be removed from the officer selection brief at the central selection board for promotion to captain and major. This information will continue to be included for promotion to lieutenant colonel and colonel.

This is in no way intended to communicate that completion of advanced degrees is not important. In fact, it actually emphasizes just the opposite — advanced degrees enhance professional development when applied at the right time for the right reasons.

Think about this in the context of the professional development of our officer force. In every career field, the first priority of new officers is to become experts in their jobs. That "depth" is attained in different ways. For operators, it involves several lengthy, intensive training programs while for mission support officers it includes initial technical training followed by focused, base-level experience.

Regardless the path, the priority is to develop expertise in your job. The next step in professional development is field grade rank and a focus on breadth rather than depth. It

President cites importance of Bosnian mission

Spirit of cooperation encourages NATO peace keepers

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is pleased with the progress of the U.S. deployment to Bosnia and is encouraged by the spirit of cooperation from the Serbs, Croats and Bosnians.

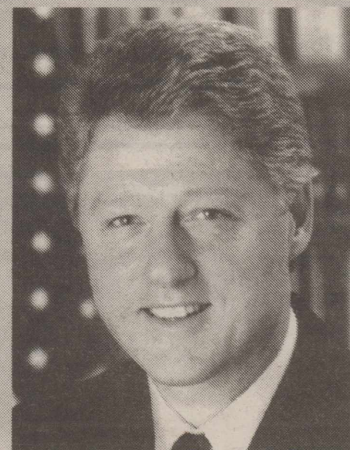

Clinton outlined these views during a recent Pentagon roundtable discussion with defense reporters.

The president said the U.S. involvement is morally the right thing to do and it is in American interests to help bring peace to the war-torn area. He also said U.S. involvement is crucial for continued U.S. leadership.

"The Bosnian mission is critical for our ability to lead the world for the next 10 or 20 years as we sort out the security of the post Cold War world," Clinton said. "I can tell you that our leadership of NATO specifically, and in general our ability to lead in the world toward peace and democracy, is very much tied to our willingness to assume a leadership role in this Bosnian mission."

Clinton said the success of the mission is important, but the fact the United States was willing to lead means more.

"If we make this effort and we succeed in our military mission, even if, God forbid, after we're all gone the thing should come apart, at least we will be united in doing what we can do to promote stability in Europe and take a stand for peace in the post-Cold War era," Clinton said.

Clinton said during the year the people of Bosnia can hold elections, begin reconstruction and begin to see the benefits of peace. The year will also serve to set up some security equilibrium within the country.

The president stressed NATO forces are not going into the country to fight or end a war, but to help implement a peace.

"I think it's a mistake for the United States or NATO to be going around anywhere guaranteeing the results of peace agreements which really must be guaranteed in the minds and hearts of the people who are making it.

Clinton said he will not allow rogue groups to halt the mission. He said he will withdraw American service members only if the mission no longer exists. NATO would withdraw if the nations wanted to fight again since the peace mission would then be a failure. "(We) anticipate there will be violations of this agreement, but the leaders will not abandon it and the vast bulk of people will not abandon it," he said.

The commander in chief said he would follow the advice of military commanders in regards to a visit to the country. "If I had my way, I would [have spent] ... Christmas Eve and Christmas morning [in Bosnia]," he said. "That's what I wanted to do. But our commanders made it clear it would be disruptive."

Clinton spoke of the decision to help in Bosnia. "You have to do what you think is right," he said. "Once I became convinced we could train for this mission, that we could define the mission in the peace agreement, that we could minimize the risk to our troops, the decision was not difficult.

"Because I believe in a time like this you have to ask yourself, which decision would you rather defend 10 years from now if it goes wrong? I would much rather explain to my child and grandchildren why the United States tried to stop slaughter, prevent the spread of the war, maintain NATO ..., maintain the leadership of the United States in the world for peace and freedom.

"I would much rather explain why we tried to do that than why, because of short-term political problems, we permitted the war to resume ... it expanded ... the NATO alliance was destroyed and the influence of the United States was compromised for 10 years."

Driving defensively is best bet for surviving on the highways

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AETCNS) — An airman assigned to Luke Air Force Base, Ariz., was killed in an automobile mishap recently when she collided with a vehicle which failed to stop at a stop sign.

Airman Kimberly Collins, 23, recently died from blunt traumatic injuries to the chest and abdomen sustained in the two-car accident.

Collins was on her way to work when the accident occurred. Officials said she attempted to maneuver to avoid the collision, but couldn't. The driver of the second vehicle was cited in the mishap and Collins was found not at fault.

In an effort to avoid future accidents such as this one, Air Education and Training Command officials continue to stress the importance of defensive driving.

"Don't assume the other driver will always do what is expected," said Herm Dean, chief, ground and explosives safety division, Headquarters AETC Safety directorate.

"Always give yourself an alternate escape route when driving. Be aware of your surroundings," he said.

Dean said following tips like these reduces the chances of traffic accidents.

"While defensive driving cannot guarantee your safety in every situation, it is by far your best means of avoiding unfortunate accidents," he said.

Winter safety tips

Here are some tips for a safer winter at Reese.

- Clear your vehicle windows of snow and ice to see and be seen.
- If you are planning a trip over holiday weekends, allow enough time for road or weather delays.
- Early morning or evening jogging during the extended hours of darkness will require extra precautions. Wear light color clothing with reflectives stripes.
- Building custodians are reminded to have a supply of sand or salt to prevent personnel from slipping or falling on ice or snow covered sidewalks and stairs.
- Using a charcoal grill in a garage or enclosed space can be deadly. The grill can fill these spaces with carbon monoxide gases.
- Black ice is hard to spot on the roadway during hours of daylight. It is even more difficult during hours of darkness. Reduce your speed to maintain control of your vehicle.

Top 10 world changes

Secretary Perry looks back at landmark year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22— "I never imagined I would cut off the ear of a [roast] pig in Kazakhstan, hear an Uzbeki colonel sing like Frank Sinatra or eat rendered Manchurian toad fat in China," said William J. Perry.

During a year-end interview, the 19th secretary of defense presented his "Top 10 List" of recent experiences reflecting this new, rapidly changing world.

□ NO. 10—America forming security ties with the former Soviet states: The travel itinerary for the U.S. defense secretary has changed dramatically since the end of the Cold War, according to Perry. He said his exotic culinary adventures in Kazakhstan and China are examples.

Previously, he said, U.S. defense secretaries visited such traditional, Western allies as Great Britain, France and Germany. Perry has traveled to South America, the Middle East, the Far East and to countries that formerly made up the Soviet Union—newly independent nations such as Estonia, Albania, Uzbekistan and the Czech Republic.

"In this new world we have the opportunity and the challenge to form security relations with countries in a state of transition, countries emerging from a communist, authoritarian regime, wanting to become democracies, ... trying to form security relations with the West," Perry said.

□ NO. 9—Western Hemisphere defensive leaders uniting: In July, Perry hosted defense leaders of 33 Western hemisphere democratic nations at a security conference in Williamsburg, Va.

"A few years ago, I never would have imagined there would be 33 democracies in the Western hemisphere," Perry said, "or that they would be willing to meet with me in the United States and talk about mutual security problems."

□ NO. 8—Military specifications for fruitcakes eliminated: "I never really imagined we would eliminate the 100 or 300 or 500 pages of specs for fruitcakes and belt buckles and joint attack missiles," Perry said. "I've always seen the challenge out there of acquisition reform, but it wasn't ever clear we were going to be able to turn that around."

In the past year, the defense acquisition system was "turned on its head" by requiring program managers to get a waiver to use a military specification rather than commercial specifications, Perry said. This change initially affected only new programs, but last month he extended it to programs already under way.

□ NO. 7—Daycare as a prerequisite for readiness As the defense leader of the most powerful military in the world, Perry said, he never dreamed he'd have to worry about day care. But, he said, he realized early in his tenure that to achieve readiness he also had to pay attention to quality of life.

□ NO. 6—Soviet officers attending classes on democracy: Perry said he never thought a secretary of defense would manage a school to teach former Soviet military officers about democracy, budgeting and how to testify to a parliament. But, he said, that's what the Marshall Center in Germany is all about.

"This is a remarkably successful effort in bringing the military in these former communist countries and teaching them how the military should operate in a democracy," he said.

□ NO. 5—Former Warsaw Pact troops training in America: Last summer, troops from Albania, Bulgaria, the Czech Republic, Poland, Romania and eight other former Warsaw Pact nations trained with U.S. counterparts at Fort Polk, La. They participated under Partnership for Peace, a program Perry calls the most successful European security program since the Marshall Plan.

□ NO. 4—Russian troops training in America's heartland: "I never imagined I would be in Kansas watching U.S. and Russian troops train together," Perry said. "But there they were last October training for a joint peacekeeping operation." Perry and Russian Federation Defense Minister Gen. Pavel Grachev talked with the troops.

"It was inspirational to me," Perry said, "to see him telling his Russian troops that they ought to work hard to make the most out of this meeting, make the relationship with the Americans work because their children and their grandchildren would benefit from it."

□ NO. 3—A Russian general destroying a U.S. missile silo: In October, Perry helped Grachev blow up a Minuteman II missile silo in Missouri. He said he couldn't foresee helping the Ukrainians convert a missile field back into a wheat field or helping the Russians chop up nuclear bombers, but he did early in the year.

□ NO. 2—Dayton, Ohio, would mean peace in Bosnia: "I never imagined Dayton, Ohio, would become synonymous with peace in the Balkans," Perry said. "Frankly, I wasn't sure the warring parties in Bosnia would ever be able to reach a peace agreement, but I would not have imagined that taking place in Dayton."

□ NO. 1—Russian troops serving under a U.S. commander: Perry said it took four "sometimes long into-the-night meetings" with Grachev to reach an agreement for Russian troops to serve as part of NATO's peace force in Bosnia.

"I never imagined the Russians would agree to put one of their brigades in an American division under the command of an American general, working together to bring about peace in Bosnia," Perry said.

AETC sets drawdown schedule for base transfers, assignments

Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 97-04 will be the last class to enter training at Reese, according to Air Education and Training Command officials.

Class 97-04 is scheduled to begin training on Jan. 23 and graduate on Jan. 22, 1997.

Command officials said the remaining SUPT bases, Laughlin Air Force Base, Texas; Vance AFB, Okla.; and Columbus AFB, Miss., will see an increase in student operations due to the closure of Reese starting with the entry of Class 97-06 in March.

At the same time, AETC will begin increasing student loads due to the Air Force's increased need for pilots.

"This means that by the end of fiscal year '97, the remaining bases will have almost doubled their current student production rates," said Maj. Mike Connolly, AETC plans and programs.

AETC will begin the drawdown of aircraft at Reese as early as December '95. The first aircraft to leave Reese are currently in storage here and are not being used for student training.

Primary training will begin to draw down in April, making T-37s available for distribution. All T-37 training here will be completed by July.

The advanced trainers, the T-38 and T-1A, will be phased out starting in August and completed in January, 1997.

As the pilot training mission is drawn down, the instructor pilot and support personnel authorizations will be transferred to the remaining bases. The first T-37 IPs are slated for reassignment in April, followed by the T-38 and T-1A IPs in August.

Headquarters AETC, Air Force Personnel Center and Reese senior leadership are working assignments on a case-by-case basis for those remaining in the command. IPs who have finished their AETC commitment will be returned to their major weapons systems for reassignment.

The AETC Support Officer Assignments Branch has begun providing Reese a listing of support officers currently assigned. The wing will annotate the listing with availability dates for each officer. Based on these availability dates, the AFPC will establish assignment availability codes on all assigned support officers. Officers will move based on the availability dates.

AETC will require most enlisted members to remain here for mission continuity, starting 18 months before the closure date. Members remaining at the base six months prior to the closure will be considered for overseas assignments. Once the overseas assignments match process is complete, stateside assignments will be filled.

"We have a top flight program in place to find positions for Reese civilian employees who are mobile, called 'Outplacement Way,'" said Carolyn Cohen, AETC director of civilian personnel. "We've surveyed the civilian force and started matching them with anticipated vacancies in the command. The employees and their families will know when they are moving, where they're going and what their new job is, in some cases, as much as a year in advance. We are coordinating job matches and release dates now."

"Registration in the Department of Defense Priority Placement program has also started. Although only a few people have signed up so far, 10 employees are in the process of moving to their new jobs," added Cohen.

Some promotion briefs masked

is at this point officers require the maturity and exposure provided by advanced studies. This added dimension is essential for professional development and leadership maturity.

Just as we recognized several years ago that the value of Air War College is greatly diminished when completed by a captain, and appropriately applied when completed by a colonel, we recognize today the full growth potential derived from completion of an advanced degree is best realized at the "right time" in your career progression. For those career fields like acquisition where advanced degrees play a significant part of your early career ladder, and for those officers who complete advanced degrees before being promoted to field grade rank, that information will continue to be a part of your "whole person" record considered by your senior rater.

We believe senior raters are in the best position to understand the relative impact of things such as operations tempo and professional development of their officers. Otherwise, the only place this information will not be included is at the central board.

I don't need to explain that since advanced degrees earned through programs that generate training reports, such as the Air Force Institute of Technology, are not considered "off-duty education" but are actual Air Force assignments, the documentation of these programs will remain in the central selection board records.

I've said many times we will only make fact-based changes. So here are the facts. First, we listened to the feedback officers provided in the recent quality of life survey.

More than 50 percent of those who answered the survey indicated they believe non-performance factors, like completion of advanced academic degrees, play too great a role in promotion consideration. That may be a fair perception for some company grade officers, but for more senior ranks, I can't agree. As I said before, completion of advanced degrees definitely contributes to an officer's professional development and preparation for senior leadership positions.

Another fact: We reviewed the professional development path of officers across all career fields to determine when in their careers officers complete advanced degrees and found a considerable difference among career paths.

Upon closer examination, we recognized some career fields such as aircraft maintenance, security police, and operators do not enjoy the same opportunity for off-duty education that others do. However, the completion rate levels out at about the 16-year point. These facts support our officer professional development construct and explain the Air Force policy decision to "level the playing field" by removing the advanced academic degree status from the central selection board folder until consideration to lieutenant colonel and colonel.

This is the right thing to do — based on the facts we have today.

Staff Sgt. Dave Andres is currently serving in the 4404th Personnel Support and Contingency Operations Squadron as part of the 4404th Wing (provisional) in Southwest Asia. The mission of the wing is to enforce the goals of Operation Southern Watch, a United Nations mandated directive which denies the Iraqi air forces access to the area south of the 32nd parallel. Andres is on temporary duty from the 64th Mission Support Squadron.

Football Stats On The Web Expected To Score Big With Fans

(NAPS)—As the football season passes into its fourth quarter, a growing number of computer literate fans are hearing the two minute whistle that lets them get statistics on the playoff teams without going to the record books. The software, PowerPlay® Special Edition (SE) for Football, is designed for use with a Windows PC and Internet access and allows anyone to become an expert football analyst.

The new "Eventware" gives football fans instant access to player and team information usually only seen and heard in sports articles and sports broadcasts. The software, available from Cognos, will be updated on a weekly basis through January until the Super Bowl (January 28th). The data provided will include data from all playoff teams. Users will be able to ask questions like:

- Which running back has the highest average yards per carry in the last two minutes of the fourth quarter for games played on real grass?

- Which quarterback has the best record for passing for a first down in third down situations with more than 10 yards to go?

- Which team has the best record in converting third downs with more than five yards to go inside the opposition's 30 yard line in the fourth quarter?

PowerPlay SE for Football is a limited, personal-use version of Cognos' PowerPlay, the world's most widely used software for analyzing multi-dimensional data, also known as Online Analytical Processing (OLAP).

Users simply point their Web browsers at the address <http://www.cognos.com> and click to download both the module and data file. Once downloaded, users simply launch the product and open the data file to begin their exploration

54th FTS final transition for bomber/fighter student pilots

In front, Capt. Paul McNeme, a student in Class 96-03, prepares for a sortie with Capt. Chris Hamilton, an instructor in B flight, in the T-38 "Talon." This is the aircraft used for bomber/fighter pilot training.

by Senior Airman
Tim Dempsey
Staff writer

The mission of the 54th Flying Training Squadron is to train student pilots for the transition to combat roles in the bomber/fighter track of Phase III training.

The squadron instructs principles and techniques used in flying the T-38 "Talon" aircraft.

The squadron is comprised of five flights and five duty sections. The flights consist of A, B, C, D and V flights. Life support, the duty desk, programming, student affairs and administration make up the duty sections.

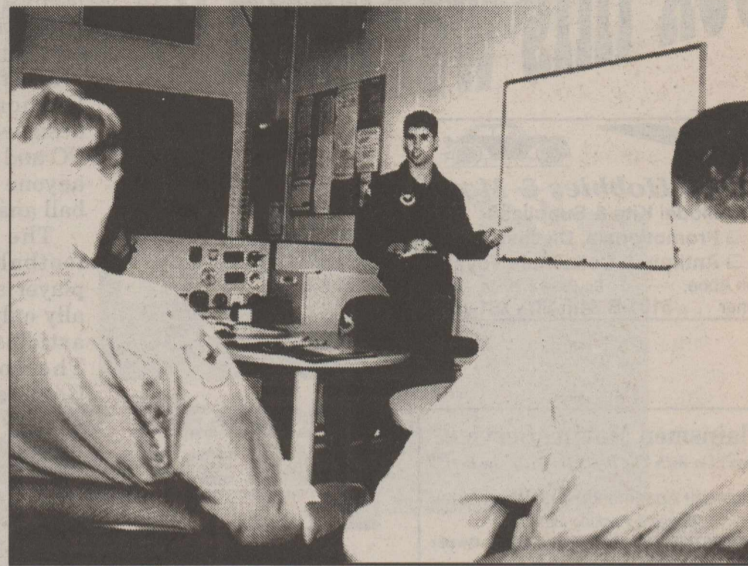

The student flights are A, B, C and D flights. Here basic flying instructions are taught to students. Also, the instructors are responsible for programs and scheduling for student pilots.

The non-student flight, V flight, is in charge of standardizing check rides for students. Additionally, they are in charge of all written testing. Maintaining a runway supervisory unit and standardizing squadron regulations is another responsibility of the flight.

Life support members maintain more than $100,000 worth of equipment. They inspect 124 chutes, 111 helmets and masks, 111 G-suits and 40 personal survival kits periodically. They also provide hanging harness and egress training to keep instructor pilots current.

The responsibility of duty desk personnel is to ensure commanders' and operations officers' policies are carried through. They maintain Air Force Operational Resource Management System, an Air Force data base used to track operation's and training for instructor pilots. The Training Related Information Management System is a similar data base for students also maintained by the duty desk.

Programming is responsible for the annual flying hour program for the squadron. The programmers track the number of sorties for students needed for graduation and for instructors to keep them current.

Student Affairs deals with management of students in training. It is responsible for teaching students major weapon systems and counseling students. It also handles end of course critiques for the squadron commander.

The administration section is responsible for administering the leave program. They handle the temporary duty, along with the aviation fuel account and the signed fuel receipts. It also maintains publications for squadron and the weight management program.

With closure approaching, the last class entering the 54th FTS will be Class 97-04. They will enter training July 3 and graduate Jan. 24, 1997.

Reese security police clarify entry procedures for base

The 64th Security Police Squadron has clarified entry procedures for Reese.

According to 1st Lt. Brad Harris, 64th SPS, all drivers without a valid Department of Defense registration decal must obtain a decal or a visitor's pass before being allowed on base.

Visitors arriving at Reese between 7:30 a.m. and 4 p.m. will be referred to the Visitors Reception Center at the corner of War Highway and Mitchell Blvd.

At all other times, visitor passes will be processed at the main gate.

A valid driver's license, military or civilian identification card, proof of insurance and registration is required to obtain a DOD decal or visitor's pass.

For those obtaining a DOD decal, placement is important. Decals should be mounted in the top-center of the windshield, said Harris.

The lieutenant noted that decals must be removed and turned into the VRC for de-registration when a vehicle is sold.

If the vehicle to another military member the decal can be transferred.

When transferring to another stateside installation, vehicle owners need only provide the decal number to the losing VRC and re-register with the gaining base by providing the existing decal number.

Visitors who do not frequent the base but are awarded base privileges are encouraged to register their vehicles at Reese to expedite their entry, said Harris.

Reese personnel should call 6652 during duty hours or 3694 after duty hours to sponsor individual guests onto the base.

When planning for a special event with several guests attending, sponsors should provide the 64th SPS Operations Flight, located in building 500, a complete list of guests, the function, location, time and date, and sponsor's name, and phone number. Once approved, the list will be placed at the main and industrial gates to facilitate entry to the base.

For additional information about visitor access to Reese, call Harris at 3949.

America observes MLK Day

Monday is Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Day, a celebration of the legendary civil rights leader's battle for equality for all Americans.

King, who was born in Atlanta, Georgia on January 15, 1929, was steadfast in his belief that peaceful, nonviolent protest against laws he believed were unjust was the only way to bring about change.

He helped form the Montgomery Improvement Association and was a founder of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference. In 1964, King was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize.

On April 4, 1968, Dr. King was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn. King is remembered as a man who had a vision—a dream that "one day his four children would live in a nation where they were not judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character."

Most base agencies will be closed Monday in observance of Dr. Martin Luther King Day. The Reese Commissary will also be closed on Tuesday. The Reese Base Exchange will be open Monday.

News notes

FSC holds parenting class

Improve parenting skills, learn more effective ways to discipline and encourage children and share parenting tips with other concerned parents at the Family Support Center's parenting class.

Systematic Training for Effective Parenting will meet on Tuesdays from 6 - 7:30 p.m. for six weeks starting in February.

The information presented in these classes and discussions will apply to children of all ages. Onsite child care is available. Reservations are required. For more information contact Elsa Summers at 3305.

Hearts Apart provides support

The Hearts Apart Support Group provides assistance and moral support for the spouses of deployed and TDY personnel. Waiting can be a hardship, but knowing that there is someone to turn to can help the spouse deal with the day to day issues and challenges. For more information about the Hearts Apart Support Group call the Family Support Center at ext. 3305.

Commissary to be closed Tuesday

The Commissary will be closed Tuesday to observe the holiday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

A Beta or Siamese Fighting Fish is so aggressive that it will even attack its own image in a mirror.

The Tuareg, a large group of nomads who live in the Sahara, are often called the Blue Men of the Desert, because they wear indigo-dyed robes which leave a blue color on their skin.
