JSUPT Class 96-03 to receive wings today

Chief of Naval Air Training to be graduation speaker

Seventeen Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training students will receive their pilot wings during graduation ceremonies today for JSUPT Class 96-03.

The ceremony will be at 9:30 a.m. in the Simler Theater.

The guest speaker for today's graduation is Rear Admiral William Hayden, Chief of Naval Air Training, NAS Corpus Christi, Texas.

The admiral, who helped pioneer the JSUPT program for the Air Force and the Navy, has headed Naval Training since July, 1993.

Prior to his present assignment as Chief of Naval Air Training, the Dartmouth and Cornell graduate served as the director for Plans, Policy and Operations at Commander-in-Chief, Atlantic Fleet.

Hayden received his aviator's wings at NAS

Pensacola in 1968. He has flown operational tours of duty in F-14 and F-4 aircraft. The admiral has commanded the USS Iowa Jima and the USS Abraham Lincoln.

Today's ceremony is open to the base and will be followed

64th CONS specialist AETC's best

A 64th Contracting Squadron sergeant has been named best in Air Education and Training Command.

Tech. Sgt. Glenna Thompson, 64th CONS service contracting specialist, is the AETC Outstanding Contracting Enlisted Member of the Year.

In garnering the award, Thompson was cited for her oversight of more than $4.5 million in service contracts.

"Thompson expertly managed the most complex mission-essential contracts," said Maj. Robert Verica, 64th CONS commander tional area chiefs and establishing a training plan for 64th Services Squadron personnel.

According to Verica, Thompson maintains the squadron plans program, was the project officer for the 1995 Air Force Assistance Fund, is the squadron mobility team chief and the unit representative on the Wing Health Advisory Board. Thompson also completed her bachelor's degree in Education during the award period.

AF strengthens its commitment to accountability

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — In a continuing effort to hold people accountable, Air Force has approved several changes to the officer personnel and administrative systems.

The changes link disciplinary actions — such as issuance of an Article 15 or letter of reprimand — with subsequent personnel actions such as assignments and promotions, said Air Force personnel officials here.

Under the new guidance, when a commander takes disciplinary action against an officer, the personnel and administrative systems will ensure the actions are documented. Commanders will review this information at "critical decision points" such as when the officer is eligible for a promotion, performance evaluation, assignment or decoration, officials said.

Most Air Force officers

"serve their entire career with honor and distinction," said Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman in a message announcing the changes. However, when an officer's conduct "reflects disregard of the law — civil law or the Uniform Code of Military Justice — or departure from the Air Force's core values," commanders must document such actions, Fogleman said.

Commanders who don't take appropriate disciplinary action or document an officer's misconduct do a "disservice" to all officers competing for promotion, Fogleman said.

Specifically, Air Force will now:

Require court-martial information to be permanently documented in an officer's selection record. Currently, this information only stays on file for a maximum of two years.

Taking care of each other

Members of the Reese family don't let others drive drunk

by Col. Randy Gelwix
64th FTW Commander

Now that we are through the Christmas and New Year's holidays, there can be a tendency to relax safe driving practices. "Don't Drink and Drive" publicity — which fills the media in December — seems to take a back seat to other campaigns in February.

Not at Reese and the 19th Air Force.

From Maj. Gen. Thomas West, 19th AF commander, down the chain to the direct duty assignee from basic training, we are all part of the Air Force family ... and families take care of each other.

We have all heard the phrase, "Friends don't let friends drive drunk." That's more than just a slogan here — it is an essential element of our command policy.

We have all been in social settings where someone has celebrated too much. To let someone get behind the wheel of a car after drinking heavily is like letting a child play with a loaded gun. We wouldn't stand by and let that happen and we shouldn't let our people endanger themselves and others by driving drunk.

I expect everyone in this wing to be an active participant in the fight against drunk driving. If you see someone who shouldn't be behind the wheel, offer them a ride home. If you can't do that, contact their supervisor and arrange for a ride. I can assure you, every supervisor in this wing would rather provide a ride home for one of their people than to have that person involved in a DWI or worse.

Col. Don Hoffman, the 14th Operations Group commander at Columbus AFB, Miss., has written an excellent article that draws a parallel between our responsibilities to "impaired" drivers and the way we take care of "wounded comrades" in battle. It contains a strong message we should all remember. Colonel Hoffman wrote:

"When flight crews brief combat missions, they discuss what to do if one of the aircraft has a malfunction or takes a hit from enemy fire. The "wounded bird," if no longer maneuverable, cannot keep up with the rest of the aircraft as they ingress or egress enemy airspace, and without a plan, it would be an easy victim to enemy attack.

"In World War II, it was the B-17 straggling behind the bomber formation that was attacked — we have all seen the movie footage. Without the mutual support of the rest of the team, a wounded bird is usually lost.

"That's why flights brief procedures for healthy aircraft to escort the damaged bird to safety. Fellow flight members protect and defend their comrade from further attack.

"Now that you understand the concept, let me apply it to everyday life.

"In a peacetime environment, we are exposed to threats every day. You wouldn't consider sending your child into a hostile or dangerous environment without an escort, and we should apply the same protective logic to members of our team.

"When we drink, we impair our abilities to function. We "self-wound" ourselves, which, in moderation, usually has no damaging effects.

We need to have a game plan, though, to protect the impaired from collateral damage. A great example of this is the designated driver concept, which has prevented countless accidents. We need more, however — we need to protect our teammates when they are approaching the "stupid zone. When someone has had too much to drink, we need to 'escort them back to friendly territory' and get them home before they take a hit they wouldn't have if they were fully aware of their actions.

"I've read too many blotter entries and seen too many career-damaging actions where we missed an opportunity to protect the wounded bird.

"When someone takes a hit, we — supervisors, leaders, teammates and wingmen — all take the hit because we missed an opportunity to protect one of our own. We perform this function during duty hours, but we need to also exercise the same leadership in a social setting.

"It's much easier to prevent than it is to try to rectify inappropriate behavior after the fact.

"Peacetime threats are real. Do you have a wounded bird game plan? "Avoiding the club or drinking in private are not the answers — taking care of each other is the solution.

"All of us need to be more aware and encourage better mutual support within our organizations."

Know what to do if carbon monoxide alarm sounds

by Michael Guzman
fire prevention specialist

Recently, the Reese Fire Protection Flight has experienced an increase in carbon monoxide emergency responses in the military family housing area. These incidents have brought up many questions concerning carbon monoxide and its effects.

Carbon monoxide is an invisible, odorless and tasteless gas produced by incomplete combustion. Carbon monoxide prevents blood from carrying sufficient oxygen to tissues in your body.

According to a report by the American Medical Association, accidental exposure to carbon monoxide in the home is responsible for about 1,000 fatalities annually and causes an estimated 10,000 more people to seek medical attention. Potential sources of carbon monoxide in the home can include the furnace, fireplace, water heater, automobile exhaust, barbecue grill, gas dryer, or stove (including pilot lights).

Inhalation of carbon monoxide may cause headaches, nausea, dizziness, weakness, rapid breathing, unconsciousness and even death. High concentrations may quickly lead to death without producing significant warning symptoms. Pregnant women are more susceptible to the effects of carbon monoxide exposure.

If your detector makes a chirping noise it's an indication that the battery pack is low and needs replacing. Contact housing maintenance at 885-3047.

If the carbon monoxide detector sounds a steady alarm or symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning appear, do not call the fire department. Evacuate the building and call 911 from a neighbor's house.

If a person breathes large amounts of carbon monoxide, move the exposed person to fresh air at once. Seek medical attention immediately.

Keep the affected person warm and at rest. In order to help reduce carbon monoxide emergency responses, the heating and air conditioning filter should be checked monthly.

For further information or assistance, contact the fire prevention section at extension 6339/3686.

Bicycle riders must wear helmets on base

Staff Sgt. Anthony Stone, Wing Safety, examines a bicycle safety helmet at the Reese Exchange. Helmets are now mandatory on base. The exchange has a wide selection of helmets.

Anyone riding a bicycle on-base must now wear a safety helmet, according to wing safety officials.

The helmet must be certified by American National Standard Institute or Snell Memorial Foundation.

The only exceptions, say safety officials, are for persons operating in industrial or flight line areas designated as no-hat areas due to potential foreign object damage to aircraft and operators riding three-wheeled cycles.

The helmet requirement is effective immediately, however, the base will observe a grace period through April 30 to allow sufficient time for personnel to purchase helmets and to inform personnel about bicycle helmet requirements.

Starting March 1, Reese Security Police will begin ticketing cyclists without helmets.

Bicycle related statistics support the Department of Defense-wide policy.

According to the Air Force Safety Agency and Bicycle Safety Institute:

- About 1,000 persons are killed and 557,000 are treated due to bicycle injuries each year.

- Head injuries account for 62 percent of bicycle-related deaths.

- Forty percent of deaths due to bicycle-related head injuries happen to children 15 years old or younger.

In support of this DOD directive, the Reese Exchange is currently selling safety helmets at a special discount.

AF strengthens its commitment to accountability

- Provide commanders guidance to help decide if Article 15 action should be retained in an officer's selection record.

- Allow commanders to include letter-of-reprimand information in an OSR.

- Require disciplinary information in an OSR to remain on file for one in-the-promotion-zone cycle. After that time, an officer may appeal to his or her senior rater to have the information removed.

- Require commanders and the base staff judge advocate to annually review an individual's unfavorable information file.

- Require commanders to review the UIF when an officer is eligible for a promotion, performance evaluation, assignment or decoration.

- Require commanders to review an officer's UIF and personnel information file when the person is eligible for an award or decoration. Commanders also will certify on the decoration notice that the review took place. Currently, UIFs are flagged only on the decoration notice, but a review of the UIF is not mandatory.

Require military personnel flights to provide the summary page of an officer's UIF to the Air Force Personnel Center at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas. AFPC will use this information within five days of finalizing an assignment processing action.

Delete the "when in doubt" reference in the new Air Force instruction regarding officer performance reports.

Currently, Air Force Regulation 36-10 tells commanders, "If in doubt about referring a performance report, refer it." Deleting this verbiage will allow raters to more accurately describe a person's duty performance, officials said.

The regulation also requires all adverse information generated at a temporary duty assignment location to be transferred to an officer's parent commander.

Air Force Secretary Sheila E. Widnall and the chief of staff "are confident that these changes will have a positive and lasting impact," said a personnel spokesman.

Senate confirms General Ralston as vice chairman of joint chiefs

WASHINGTON — Protecting the nation's security is the foremost mission of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. So when Gen. Joseph W. Ralston was nominated by President Clinton to be the next JCS vice chairman, lawmakers said they needed to take a long hard look at his views on important defense policy and management issues.

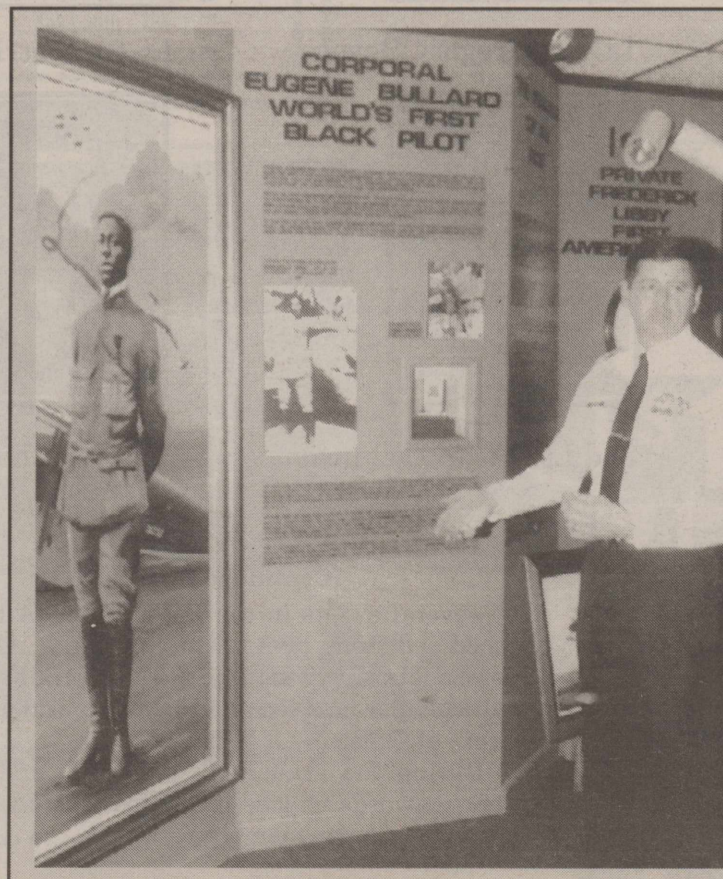

Members of the Senate liked what Ralston had to say, confirming his nomination Jan. 26.

Lawmakers asked Ralston, commander of Air Combat Command, for his views on what America must do to maintain military forces that are sufficient to deter today's threats and, when necessary, to fight and win against potential adversaries.

"We must continually monitor the levels of operations and their efforts to ensure we maintain a ready and capable force," said Ralston in his prepared response to Senate questioning.

Ralston continued with specifics on how the Joint Chiefs will ensure that today's military remains the best-equipped, best-trained and best-prepared fighting force in the world.

As the new vice chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Ralston replaces Adm. William A. Owens. The last Air Force officer to serve as vice chairman was Gen. Robert T. Herres in the late 1980s. In the history of the Joint Chiefs of Staff there have been 13 chairmen, and of those, three have been Air Force officers.

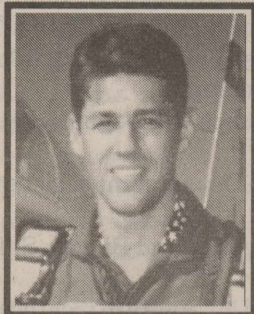

Maxwell highlights enlisted heritage

35th FTS

First flight toward wings

Airman 1st Class Latrik Smith researches information. Smith works in the Administration duty section.

The mission of the 35th Flying Training Squadron is to train student pilots in the primary phase of Joint Specialized Undergraduate Pilot Training in the T-37 "Tweet."

The squadron is the first Air Force/Navy joint pilot training squadron with instructors from both services.

The 35th FTS is comprised of six student flights, a check flight (V flight) and four duty stations: programming, life support, operations resource management and administration.

Here the students receive approximately 89 hours of flight instruction in contact, instruments, navigation and formation.

At the end of the training, Air Force Students select one of four tracks. They choose Fighter/Bomber, Tanker/Transport, Helicopter or depart for training with the Navy in the T-44 for the C-130. Navy students, upon reaching the 66 hour point of training, will be told of their advanced training assignment: Strike, Maritime, E-2/C-2 or Helicopter.

So far, the squadron has seen 10 Naval Officers and four Marine Corps Officers complete Phase II training. Currently, 12 more are in training.

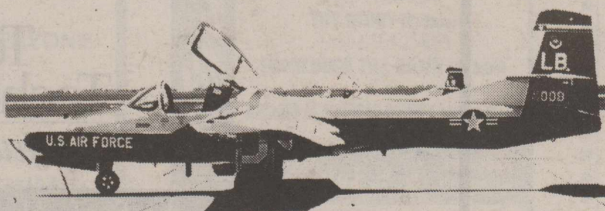

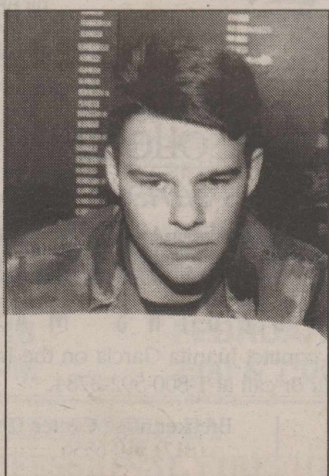

Lt. Stefan Xaudaro, USN, T-37 instructor pilot, prepares for a student sortie.

The T-37 "Tweet" flown by students in the 35th FTS

Amn. Richard Fernandez, Jr., life support, performs an inspection on a parachute. The inspections are conducted every 30 days.

Kay Dyer, Transition Assistance Director, briefs Joe Hinojoza, Lockheed Martin Logistics Management, about various ROCC programs.

Appointments needed for ROCC

Interest in the services offered by the Reese Options Career Center has been so high, that people wanting to use the ROCC must now make appointments.

According to Kay Dyer, Reese Transition Assistance director, the ROCC, opened in Late January, has been so successful that walk-in usage had to be stopped.

To make a ROCC appointment, call the transition assistance office at 3305.

The ROCC is an employment assistance center that is operated under a cooperative agreement between the Reese Family Support Center and Job Source Plus.

Employment experts are available in the ROCC to help all base personnel assess individual career needs and provide necessary assistance, including information on: job opportunities, job banks, civil service listings, career planning, etc. In addition, the ROCC has a variety of books, videos and handouts to help people find new careers.

Dyer also said the ROCC is expanding its staff so that it can offer services after normal duty hours. The extended hours of operation should begin sometime in March.

Heritage Committee has scheduled two events.

The Step Show will be held Saturday from 6 to 9 p.m. in the base theater. The Panhellenic Committee from Texas Tech will be performing. Admission is free.

Taking Charge of Change class offered

People can learn that a better life is available when they take charge of change.

Taking Charge of Change classes introduce a step-by-step system for dealing with life altering change. Using this systematic process and using it as a blueprint for adjusting to life's ordeals, will help a person:

1. grow mentally stronger and physically more capable of resisting the damage of stress;
2. increase their sense of self-control and confidence, even when dealing with events that they cannot control; and
3. discover the reservoirs deep within them that will ensure they stay on top, even when their world has turned upside down.

The class will be offered Thursday and March 14 from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. in the family support center classroom. For more information or to register call 3305.
