Trained and certified technicians will perform inspections and train parents and caregivers to install and adjust their car seats properly. Car seat checks are free. The child must be present and each checkup will take approximately 30 minutes per child.

For more information or to schedule an appointment for a car seat inspection, contact Person at (940) 937-7179.

City approves $3.1 million water project bids

The Clarendon City Council approved bids totaling more than $3.1 million for improvements to the city's water distribution system during a called meeting May 29.

The three separate bids are part of a USDA-funded grant-loan project the city has been pursuing for several years. Work on the project is expected to begin in late July, according to City Administrator

David Dockery.

The first bid awarded was to Circle P Welding Inc., for the construction of a new standpipe on the east side of town at a cost of $338,048.

The second award was $410,186.94 to Western Industrial Supply for the purchase and installation of auto-read water meters in a project that will replace all the existing meters in town. The awarded bid was not the low bid in this instance, but City Hall said the low bidder did not meet the specifications set out for the bid.

The third and largest bid was awarded to L.A. Fuller & Sons Construction, Ltd., for $2,356,302 to replace approximately six miles of cast iron distribution pipes.

In other city business, the council revisited its action from March that would have closed a portion of Allen Street and Bugbee Avenue to through traffic. Keith Floyd addressed the council in favor of keeping those thoroughfares open, while Suzan Chassande-Baroz was back before council as the one who had asked those streets to be closed. No action was taken.

The council authorized Mayor

Sandy Skelton to sign a grant agreement with the Don & Sybil Harrington Foundation, and aldermen also approved a resolution expressing the city's appreciation to the foundation for its $100,000 award in support of the city's water recreation project.

The council also approved a bid on tax delinquent property as presented.

Equestrian vaulting event at CC Saturday

The public is invited to attend as equestrian vaulting teams from Texas, Oklahoma, and New Mexico participate in a Funfest competition this weekend at the Clarendon College Livestock & Equine Center.

Equestrian vaulting is a sport that combines dance and gymnastics on a horse walking, trotting, or cantering in a 60-foot diameter circle on the end of a lunge line. The Funfest event is open to the public, and there is no charge for admission.

Clarendon was chosen as the location for this Funfest and clinic because it is approximately half way between the Vaulters del Sol of the Albuquerque area and the Gold Star Pacesetters from Fort Worth area, which are the two groups responsible for planning then event.

Gold Star Pacesetters founder and head coach Frank Pace also said Clarendon College was most gracious and helpful in allowing the use the arena and other facilities.

"Quite a few of the horses will be great big draft and draft-cross with Clydesdales, Percherons, and Belgians being the most common," Pace said. "Our Percheron/Quarter Horse cross gelding is 17 hands tall and weighs right at 1,800 pounds. Just to see these gentle giants is worth coming to the vaulting."

Pace reports that the vaulters will arrive Friday, June 8, with vaulters' clinics beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday, June 9.

The Funfest competition that is open to the public will then commence at 2 p.m. Competition will start up again at 9 a.m. on Sunday, June 10, and will run until all classes are completed.

All vaulters, world-wide, do the same set of compulsory moves. Vaulters then do free-style routines with from one to three vaulters on the horse at one time. There are competitions for one vaulter, two vaulters or doubles, teams of four (again only three vaulters on the horse at any one time) and teams of six (again, only three.)

The youngest vaulter this weekend is six years old, and the oldest is the mother of one of the young vaulters. Alejandra Orozco, an international level vaulter from Mexico, will judge the Funfest and will instruct the vaulters in a clinic both before and after the Funfest competition.

This Funfest is being conducted using the rules and guidelines set by the American Vaulting Association, but some classes may be modified so that newer vaulters will get their first taste of competition in a less stressful situation. Other modification will be made to facilitate those vaulters who are wanting to move up from one gait to the next level, such as from a walk to a trot.

Equestrian vaulting is similar to Western Trick Riding but also very different. Trick riders perform their tricks on the horse at a full gallop around the arena; vaulters are on the horse at a walk, trot or canter as the horse moves on the circle under the control of the person lunging.

Trick riders each have their own horse; vaulters share the same horse. Only one person at a time trick rides; up to three vaulters at a time. Trick riding has no compulsory moves; vaulting compulsory moves are world-wide. Trick riding requires no music; vaulting free-style is very much choreographed to music that fits the vaulter(s) and the horse.

For more information about equestrian vaulting, visit www.goldstarpacesetters.com.

Faithful servants

The City of Clarendon recognized John Molder and James Watts for 27 years of service recently. Both started with the city May 20, 1991, with Watts in the sanitation department and Molder in public works. Mayor Sandy Skelton presented both men with cards signed by City Council and Staff, and gift cards to show the city's appreciation. Shown here are Mayor Skelton, Watts, Molder, and City Administrator David Dockery.

H'wick seeks to improve communication

The City of Howardwick is pursuing ways to improve communications with its citizens following a special meeting of the City Council there last Tuesday, May 29.

City Secretary Sandra Childress presented three suggestions to quickly inform residents about issues with the water system, the availability of lots for sale and other issues.

The first suggestion was to contract with a service known as One Call wish would automatically notify people with a message over cell phones, the second was a digital message board at City Hall, and the third was the implementation of a website or city Facebook page.

Following discussion, the council approved separate motions to spend about $483 to set up the One

Call system and $275 to purchase the electronic sign.

Earlier in last week's meeting, Alderman Johnny Floyd addressed the council and those in attendance regarding decorum at council meetings and drew people's attention to the city's entrance signs, which proclaims "Little City, Big Heart."

"I'm sick of the way people are talking to each other," Floyd said. "I've begun to think I'm living in the wrong place."

Floyd quoted from 1 Corinthians, Chapter 13, about love and urged his fellow citizens to come together and support the council and mayor.

"Try to work together and try to love each other," Floyd said. "I have a lot of respect for [Mayor] Greta [Byars], and think she will do us a lot of good if we can work together."

Citizens comments at the meeting ranged from concerns about water pressure and supply to continued "harassment" of the mayor. One citizen raised concern about not being able to get a permit to place a storage unit on his property. Mayor Byars said the Planning & Zoning Commission members would go out one by one to look at it and approve a permit, but Alderman Debora Sharpton, reading from the ordinance, said no permit was necessary for a storage building.

CPA Gordon Maddox addressed the council regarding his qualifications to conduct the city's audit. The council approved a motion to hire Maddox as the auditor.

Spreading the word for 140 years

This issue marks 140 years since Rev. L.H. Carhart first published THE CLARENDON NEWS in an effort to record the happenings in his fledgling Christian colony and entice more settlers to this part of the world.

A lot has changed since that first issue on June 1, 1878. Articles for that first issue were prepared in our little town that was then on the banks of the Salt Fork of the Red River and then mailed back to the Carhart's relatives who had a printing press in Oshkosh, Wisconsin. The printed paper was then shipped back to Texas for local readers. Given the turnaround time for production, the paper was a monthly affair to start out with. Two years later, the News got its own press, and we've been cranking out the news ever since on a weekly – and sometimes more frequently – basis ever since.

For longer than most towns in the Panhandle have existed, this newspaper has been in business, fulfilling its duty to record the happenings of everything about Donley County and its people. While the news "paper" is still our core business, we carry out our duties today in ways that Rev. Carhart could have never conceived.

The ENTERPRISE was one of the first weekly newspapers in Texas to offer a digital edition for subscribers. Readers across the country get the weekly news from Donley County directly to their email boxes to peruse on their computers, tablets, and smartphones. And increasingly, people rely on the ENTERPRISE'S website and social media outlets. The paper that once communicated only once a month can now send out the news in seconds.

Unchanged since our 19th century origin, though, is our commitment to you, our readers and neighbors, to bring to you the most accurate news and information possible and to provide our local merchants an avenue to advertise the goods and services they have to offer.

It is no exaggeration to say that this newspaper would not have survived to this point without the unwavering support of the local business community. Advertising has been what pays our salaries, and this has been the case from day one. This is why we have always supported and promoted our local businesses. We understand, perhaps better than most, that there exists a synergy between local merchants and the community.

Just as Walmart, Sam's, and Amazon and other big city or Internet merchandisers do not advertise in this newspaper, they also do not sponsor your local baseball teams or pay taxes to help support your cities and county. It is not Amazon that will help re-open the Mulkey Theatre, for example. It is the local business who support that worthwhile effort just as they have so many other efforts through the years.

Likewise, your support of local businesses means you have local options when it comes time to buy goods and services. If no one buys boots locally, there will be no place locally to buy boots. If no one buys jewelry locally, there will be no place to buy jewelry locally.

We still hold fast to the premise that a good, strong community requires the presence of a good, strong newspaper. A strong newspaper requires the advertising of a strong business community, and that comes right back to citizens supporting local businesses.

If you value the newspaper you're reading, if you value the service we provide in keeping local governments accountable, if you value the coverage we give to your schools and college, then show that support by shopping at your local merchants. Your community needs them. We need them. And ultimately, you need them, too, if you want to live in a vibrant community.

We appreciate the support so many readers and advertisers have shown us for 140 years, and Clarendon is fortunate to have several other businesses that have been here for generations as well as new businesses that keep our little town fresh and exciting. Together we can continue to work to make Clarendon and Donley County the best that it can be for many years to come.

Meanwhile...

To celebrate the momentous occasion of our 140th anniversary, we would like to invite our friends and neighbors to join us next Thursday, June 14, at our office as we host this month's Business After Hours with the Clarendon Chamber of Commerce. Come and go at 105 S. Kearney between the hours of 5:30 and 7:30 p.m., enjoy some refreshments, and take in a little bit of history as we celebrate our past with our friends and neighbors.

To love, honor, and write together

For the bulk of their professional lives, he went his way, and she went hers. Their careers, both awash in words, began with the single-syllabled "I do's" exchanged at their Kilgore wedding almost 55 years ago.

Linda Pirtle, a career educator, taught English and spent her final years in administration. Caleb, an award-winning journalism graduate of the University of Texas, has likewise been consumed by the "word business."

Now, they are "writing off" into the sunset at full gallop, as authors, teachers and editors, as well as tending their literary website. It connects readers with today's growing population of authors throughout the world....

They enjoy their work greatly, so discussions about retirement are rare. Thus far, sunsets have turned out to be mirages. They plan to pursue their literary passions as long as they have clear minds, ongoing creativity and the ability to find home keys.

Mastery of those home keys has been central in their work. Both would have been "big-eyed" had they known back then of the possibility that together, they would author 100 books, maybe more.

The Pirtles already are "knocking on the door," and Guinness may have a spot for "most books authored by a couple."...

For about a dozen years, they've lived in Lindale, Texas, their creative juices flowing like sap in the pine trees that dominate the landscape.

"Grandmotherly things" occupied Linda for a few years, and still do. The couple makes numerous trips to see grandson Jackson, 8, and granddaughter Avery, 6 – children of son Josh and daughter-in-law Taylor – in the Metroplex.

Last year, she started writing mysteries, responding to the intrigue of reviewing others' work for years....

Both retreat to their computers routinely after daily jump-starts provided by stout coffee and the gentle warbling of songbirds in foliage around their home.

If communication is needed when they are in writing mode, they send emails to each other.

She published her first novel, The Mah Jongg Murders, last year. It was set in the mythical East Texas gated community of Leisure Lake. She recently released her second novel about the games people play. Her Deadly Dominoes, and hubby's Back Side of a Dark Moon, both won Best of Texas book awards this year....

The soft-spoken Caleb says little about his many honors. He won the William Randolph Hearst Award for feature writing at UT, and received numerous Associated Press and Texas Headliners awards while writing for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

The first communications director for the Texas Tourist Development Agency, Pirtle later spent a decade as travel editor of Southern Living magazine. Then, he spent 25 years as editorial and production director for a Dallas custom publishing company.

Pirtle isn't sure how many books he has authored, but admits to "more than 75." (That's more than one a year, on average since birth.)...

He has traveled many miles, writing about those whose paths he crossed— from homeless folks to celebrities, from country music stars to death row inmates, and from farmers who struck it rich overnight when oil erupted. Stories about that first well are mind-boggling.

It started with farmers digging for earthworms needed for a fishing junket. Soon, some of them owned enough "black gold" to build their own lakes!

His latest is The Man Who Talks to Strangers, a "memoir, of sorts." It "oozes excellence," as only his books can. It's a great piece of work. Pirtle books are available on Amazon and at calebandlindapirtle.com.

No matter their literary greatness, however, they are even better parents. Their son, Josh, was unsurpassed as a student athlete, twice named Academic All-American. I handed him a diploma a few years back at Howard Payne University. Now a CPA and Senior Vice President of Asset Management for Crescent Properties, he's as great with numbers as his folks are with words....

Be careful putting on garden gloves

Terry Taylor of Alpine has some serious complications from a black widow spider bite he got last August while working in his back yard. He is still struggling with it.

"Looking back on it I have to speculate on some of it because I just don't remember. I was working in the yard early in the morning. I had to go in the house so I took my work gloves off and laid them on the ground. I was in the house just about 5 minutes. When I came back I put on my right glove first and felt some stinging. I thought some fire ants had gotten into the glove and they were hurting me. So I mashed my left hand against my right hand, which still had the glove on it, with the intention of crushing those fire ants, killing them. I didn't think a whole lot about it except my right hand started heating up. It felt like fire. Then my left arm started heating up and so did my legs. I went into the house and knew I was in trouble. Every muscle in my legs and arms was blue and was shivering. So I pressed my emergency device I was wearing. EMT's came and took me to the hospital. That was on the 18th of August and I have no recollection of anything until in September. I was totally out of it. My doctor told me I died."

The spider bit Terry between his forefinger and middle finger, right in the "v" between them. He wonders if he got more poison by putting pressure on the bite area when he tried to crush what he thought were fire ants. He was in the Alpine hospital five weeks and doesn't recall anything that happened during most of that time. Some people say he became belligerent.

"One nurse told me I really put up a fight and offered to show me the bruises I gave her. I had been having flashbacks to Vietnam for years and the only thing I can guess is that I didn't want those Viet Cong to get hold of me. The doctor told me I really raised cane and hurt people, including my daughter. Then I came out of it after almost 4 weeks without knowing what was happening. The first thing I remember is this woman talking to me in Spanish. She worked with me a few days, kept talking to me. All that supposedly happened comes to me from somebody else because I don't remember anything. That's part of my life I don't know anything about. They gave me anti-venom to help with the recovery. That was as rough as the spider bite itself. It took 60 days to get rid of the anti-venom."

stories of texas by tumbleweed smith

Terry walks with two walking sticks now. "A rehabilitation group in Alpine, the Agave Girls, helped me about three months, teaching me to walk again."

Terry is a retired entomologist and knows about black widow spiders. "Sometimes they have a red hourglass on them, sometime they don't." Terry provided insects of all kinds to museums and universities all over the world. I asked him if he thought that spider bite was retribution for all the bugs and creepy crawlly things he handled for decades. He chuckled and said "well, I put enough of them in alcohol, preserving them."

Reader objects to Cato article, cartoon

Roger, what happened to you? I thought you were a Libertarian. To me that means you are a true conservative. Your article from the Cato Institute tells me you are thinking like a liberal. That Cato article is full of bull. Comparing Social Security and Medicare in the same sample as Welfare benefits sounds just like what the national media and the Democrats are trying to spread by bending the truth to fit their story.

Our print and most of the TV media are just trying to stop Trump from making America Great Again. The fact is that our country is moving in the right direction in spite of what the media is doing. I thought being a reporter meant providing facts of a story. Since we are not getting facts, it tells me that our media is now expressing their opinion on Trump just because he won the election.

I'm writing this because I'm concerned for my great-grandkids and your kids. If our country moves back to what President Obama was trying to do, we will end up like most of the socialist countries. Bernie Sanders is convincing people who want a hand out, rather than a hand up. He is a socialist.

That cartoon on the bottom of Cato makes fun of Trump's Twitter when Melania's name came out as Melody.

Fact is that could be an auto correct. Americans are not stupid and will vote to keep the GOP in control in November. The alternative, socialism, has never worked.

Tom Stauder, Clarendon

Editor's Note: The Cato article was an opinion piece on the Opinion page, which is a legitimate place to express an opinion, such as Mr. Stauder has just done. As a reminder, the opinions expressed on this page are the views of the writers themselves and may or may not reflect the views of the Enterprise or its staff. Howardwick under water restrictions

Some general knowledge about Howardwick: We are on the banks of Greenbelt Lake that supplies water for many cities and communities, but we get our water from wells belonging to Red River Water Authority with home base in Wichita Falls.

One storage tank was decommissioned a few years ago, and now we are having problems keeping an adequate amount of water in the existing tanks, especially with filling of fire department tanker trucks and people watering to keep the fire danger down. We are now in trouble.

Problem # 1: On June 1, 2018, a boil water notification was issued by Red River Water Authority of Texas which states: "Due to water pressure dropping below the required 35 psi, the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality requires all customers in Howardwick to boil their water prior to consumption until the pressure is restored and bacteriological can be collected and tested." (psi stands for pounds per square inch and is used to determine pressure)

Water for drinking, cooking, and ice making should be boiled and cooled prior to consumption. The water should be brought to a vigorous boil then boiled for two minutes or you may buy bottled water or obtain it from a suitable source. It is okay to bathe, shower, or wash your hands and use the dishwasher on sanitize setting.

by peggy cockerham
Howardwick • 874-2886

Once the pressure is restored, bacteriological samples will be collected; and upon receiving negative bacteria results on collected samples, we will be notified that the boiled water notice is cancelled.

Problem #2, we are under water use restrictions effective immediately and will remain in effect until further notice. Outside watering will be permitted between 7 a.m. and 10 a.m. Monday through Thursday only. Even number residential addresses can water on Monday and Wednesday ONLY. Odd number residential addresses can water on Tuesday and Thursday ONLY. No washing of vehicles, boats, RV's, or driveways will be allowed. All commercial and other high water users are asked to reduce usage and prevent waste. Watch for leaks and notify Authority personnel if one is found.

Walt Rice will be monitoring water usage and assisting customers in complying with the restrictions. Violators of the restrictions will be subject to a temporary disconnection of water and a $50 fine for reconnection.

Red River Water Authority will be on the agenda for the next City Council meeting on June 12, at 6 :00 p.m. Please come and hear the latest on our water problems.

I want to say thank you to Walt Rice for his tireless work, Heidi Phelps for going door to door, Sandy Childress for manning the phones and keeping things moving, the Howardwick Volunteer Fire Department, and to assistance of many residents in passing out water.

For all citizens who sent text messages, called neighbors and helped spread the word in this crisis, we showed a willingness to work together; and if Red River Water keeps their promises, we can make it through this latest crisis.

God Bless our little community; keep up the prayers.

Going to war with robots

Last weekend, I decided to download a free game called War Robots.

the cub reporter
by benjamin estlack

This game is about a world where there are Giant robots and you start with one small robot called the Destroyer, which is the worst robot in the game but they give you an opponent that is around your level.

I've been working on this game a lot, and I have played with my cousins. I finally reached level 20, which unlocks a series of robots and weapons for you to buy.

A cool feature in this game is that there is a Black Market that has three different chests you can open. The worst is Bronze, the middle is Silver, and the best is Gold. The way you open these chests is buy paying these credits that you earn in battle.

My robots are the Griffin, the Leo, and the Raijin. My most powerful is the Leo. I look forward to playing this game in my spare time through the future.

Immigrant veterans from Texas deported

By Julián Aguilar, Texas Tribune
 CIUDAD JUÁREZ, Mexico – On Memorial Day on the Texas-Mexico border, Michael Evans, who served four years in the US Marine Corps, was one of several veterans who helped set up a public display to honor fallen soldiers who have served in America's military.

Later that same day, Lorenzo Nuñez, a Mexican national, stood at attention and paid tribute to those men and women in a minute-long salute to the flags of the US and the various branches of the armed forces.

Those actions sound similar to several that played out across the country earlier this week, but for one exception: Evans and Nuñez are the same person. And the 40-year-old man was marking the holiday in Mexico after being deported in 2009, despite his military service.

"My birth name is Lorenzo Nuñez Fernandez. It sounds like a mariachi name," Evans said with a chuckle from Ciudad Juárez's Chamizal Park, less than a city block from the international port of entry at El Paso. His name changed after he was adopted by an American family in 1984, and he was discharged in 2000 before the second Gulf War.

He is one of several former servicemen in the middle of a unique immigration debate: whether deported veterans should get a second chance at legal status in the US even though they might have committed a crime that led to their deportation.

Democratic US Reps. Vicente Gonzalez of McAllen and Beto

O'Rourke of El Paso have authored legislation to allow deported veterans who were honorably discharged to be naturalized overseas. It would exclude veterans convicted of crimes including voluntary manslaughter, murder, rape, sexual abuse of a minor, child abuse, and terrorism, according to Gonzalez's office.

The measure would also have the US attorney general cancel or rescind a removal order for an eligible veteran and change their status to legal permanent resident.

Gonzalez, who discussed the matter with President Donald Trump last year, said he was optimistic after the president expressed support for easing up on the veterans, the Chicago Tribune reported.

But the legislation has stalled, and Gonzalez recently took to the House floor to rebuke Republicans for not allowing his bill to be an amendment to larger military bill, although he's vowed to keep the issue at the forefront and fight for a vote on his bill in Congress.

"These stories are flooding in from all corners of the globe. We are deporting honorably discharged veterans after promising them citizenship," he said. "This is a disgrace."

Born in Chihuahua, Evans graduated from an El Paso-area high school before joining the Marines.

He was deported after serving time in federal prison on a felony drug conspiracy charge. He said he was two weeks from taking his US citizenship oath when a two-year old case came back to haunt him. He was adopted two years before amendments to the Immigration and Nationality Act made it easier to become US citizens after adoption. Because Evans was never naturalized, he said he was treated like any other Mexican criminal and ordered to leave the country in 2009.

"Basically, it was like 'You're Mexican, you committed a crime and you got to go back,'" he said. "Back then is when Juárez was at its worst – more murders, more murders and murders" he added, referring to the cartel war that raged in the border city and claimed more than 10,000 lives.

But Evans said he's a little more optimistic that something could get traction now as the issue gains more attention.

"There was no hope for years, zero hope," he said. "But now there is some light at the end of the tunnel. We're kicking up a lot of dust, and there are a lot of people talking. So you never know."

Michael Evans, who served four years in the US Marine Corps, laughs with fellow vets on May 28, 2018, in Ciudad Juárez, Mexico. Ivan Pierre Aguirre for The Texas Tribune

For older veterans of the US military who were deported, there is less hope for themselves, but optimism about the younger ex-soldiers.

Francisco Lopez, 73, is the director of the Deported Veterans Support House in Ciudad Juárez, known as the "Juárez Bunker." He told the Tribune he was drafted in 1967 and went to Vietnam, where he served a year overseas. He was arrested in Wichita Falls after buying cocaine he said was for both personal use for selling. He was deported in 2003 and has turned his house into a shelter of sorts.

"My hopes of being able to return are pretty much dead," he said in Spanish. "Only the president can help us. But what we want is to raise attention that we need medical care. Because that's a right all of the veterans have. And we don't have it."

What's helped the cause, Lopez said, is the attention the movement has gained over the last year. On Memorial Day 2017 the group was photographed by Herika Martinez and later published by the AFP, the Washington Post reported.

The photograph eventually went viral, and a feature story by the local CBS-FOX affiliate in February prompted more attention.

Navy veteran Juan Valadez, 35, knows that everyone isn't sympathetic. He reads online comments arguing that deported veterans deserve what they got for breaking the law.

"It's a divisive issue, but the way I see it, we made a mistake. But we're still veterans, we served the country," he said.

After attending Socorro High School in east El Paso County, Valadez enlisted and was deployed to the Gulf of Aden and then to the Persian Gulf.

After that he said he served two years in federal prison after being convicted of a conspiracy drug charge. But he said he served his time and deserves another shot.

about Alderman Doc Holladay in a supervisory role over his son who works for the city, the council approved a motion to name Alderman Floyd as the city's shop supervisor. In a separate matter, the council appointed Alderman Brice Hawley, who is a member of the Howardwick Volunteer Fire Department, to be the city's point of contact with the HVFD.

Resident Coy Cooper discussed accessibility issues regarding City Hall. Alderman Hawley asked Cooper to write a plan of action for the issues and deliver it to the city secretary. Cooper also raised concerns about Ordinance 109, which defines the mayor's duties. The mayor said Ordinance 109 was not in effect because she had not signed it and it had not come back before the council.

An example of letters of complaints against Mayor Byars and threatening lawsuits against the city by Cooper were read aloud.

Childress presented a hold harmless form to allow citizens to volunteer for the city but would not allow citizens to operate city equipment. The council approved the form on a 4-1 vote with Alderman Holladay opposed.

Regarding maps being updated by the county, the council approved changing Helen Drive to Libern Drive for clarification.

A bid on tax delinquent property was approved as presented.

The council also reviewed the city's service agreement with the fire department, which was approved last fall. Alderman Holladay renewed his stance that the agreement amounts to a "blank check" for the fire department to do whatever it wants. Alderman Hawley indicated support for the agreement, saying he didn't want non-firefighters controlling the fire department. Alderman Floyd suggested the city get copies of agreements from other neighboring cities to see how they are set up and said the council needs to talk to the fire chief.

Save a Life

I too "WE HAVE NOTHING TO EAT" became "DAD, CAN I BORROW THE CONVERTIBLE?"

Millions of Americans can trace their roots back to an ancestor who came to the new world with a hunger. Metaphorically speaking it was a desire for freedom. But more often than not, this noble goal was directly tied to a powerful physical need for a good, hot meal.

They came from countries around the globe, yet their stories were remarkably similar. They had left behind hard times, oppression and just about everyone they knew and loved to seek out a better life in the land of opportunity. And while it wasn't necessarily easy, they found that with a little hard work, perseverance and good old-fashioned gumption, they could achieve a quality of life far beyond what they had known before. They were free to live their own lives and prosper by their own hands. In fact, perhaps the greatest testament to the power of freedom is that, simply by working hard and educating their children, the world's tired, poor and hungry have become the nation with the highest standard of living on earth.
