

Gorbachev elected president

MOSCOW (AP) — The Supreme Soviet Saturday elected Communist Party chief Mikhail S. Gorbachev president, replacing Andrei Gromyko who retired a day after stepping down from the ruling Communist Party Politburo.

The election of Gorbachev today allowed him to unify the top Communist Party and government jobs, increasing his power to reform the top-heavy Soviet political system.

Moscow Communist Party leader Lev N. Zaikov said Gorbachev had been endorsed by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, and the Central Committee of the Communist Party.

He was elected unanimously by the 1,500-member Supreme Soviet.

Gromyko, a Communist Party and government stalwart from the time of Stalin through the first several years of Gorbachev's reforms, retired from the ruling party Politburo on Friday during a hastily called meeting of the 300-member Communist Party Central Committee.

That meeting also approved wide-ranging changes in the party bureaucracy destined to strengthen Gorbachev's hand.

After retiring from the Politburo, Gromyko's resignation from the presidency had been expected. He became president in July 1985 after serving 28 years as foreign minister.

His five-minute farewell address was greeted with thunderous applause.

"The star of socialism since October 1917 has constantly shined and given light," he said.

"Thank you comrade deputies for the trust you've granted me in the past and now. I have very deep respect for it," he said.

The 57-year-old Gorbachev, who took the floor after his election, said his campaign to restructure Soviet society had won the support of Soviet working people, and that the time had come to push it more actively.

He told the Supreme Soviet that the Soviets, or local government bodies, would take on a more important roll under his reform efforts.

La Leche League gives support to all mothers

La Leche League (LLL) is part of an international mother-to-mother network which is a valuable resource for breastfeeding help and parenting support. The league is a non-profit organization and is entirely supported by donations, memberships and sales of materials.

Judy Cave, the local LLL leader, has been helping mothers in the Scurry County area learn more about breastfeeding and parenting since 1985. LLL meetings are informal gatherings to discuss the practical, physical, psychological and medical aspects of breastfeeding.

The meetings offer support for mothers who work outside the home as well as those who are involved in full time child care. Members of LLL are eligible to participate in term life insurance programs (in some areas) as well as receiving a bimonthly "New Beginnings" magazine, and a 10 percent discount on most purchases from La Leche International.

LLL's basic manual, The Womanly Art of Breastfeeding," has sold nearly two million copies. LLL is the world's largest resource for breastfeeding information. They publish 12 books and distribute more than 3 million publications annually. International and area conferences are held periodically for parents and professionals.

LLL's health advisory council of 42 professionals is consulted on medical problems and evaluation of new research.

If you are interested in learning more about breastfeeding and or gaining more insight on early childhood development, La Leche League of Snyder encourages you to attend their next meeting, Mrs. Cave said.

Meetings dates, times and locations are announced monthly in the Community Calendar published in the Snyder Daily News. Nursing mothers are always welcome to bring their babies, Mrs. Cave said.

An Open Letter To Our City Council

We Don't Need a Smoking Ordinance in Snyder

We don't need to pass an ordinance to make criminals of smokers like the big cities of New York, San Francisco, Dallas or even Lubbock.

Why pass an ordinance that requires a business to post signs that referees disputes, and imposes criminal penalties on businesses....all for not enforcing a city passed ordinance.

We have a history of working together in Snyder respecting all points of view.

We don't need a big city ordinance telling us what we should be doing or not doing...discriminating against many at the urging of a few.

Who wants this ordinance??? Only a few people, so why pass an ordinance that the rest of us don't want or need.

Whatever happened to the rights of all individuals in Snyder? We don't impose our social beliefs on others...why make criminals of business owners and of smokers?

This Ordinance doesn't make any sense for cents or votes.

We urge the council to vote against this discriminating, unnecessary and unwarranted ordinance.

Thank You,
Signed by Concerned Citizens & Businesses

Hourse fire said arson

Firemen worked for three hours late Friday and early Saturday at the scene of a 2011 Ave. K house fire that Fire Chief Terry Don McDowell said later was being investigated as arson.

The firefighters were called at 10:53 p.m. Friday to the home of Bruno Perez and were there until 1:45 p.m., confining the damage to fire and smoke damage to the interior of the house.

Damages were estimated at $5,000.

McDowell said Saturday morning that the police department had been notified of the arson investigation.

Discovery said 'operating just super'

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Discovery was "operating just super" Saturday as its five astronauts photographed sunrises and sunsets, forests, craters and volcanoes and prepared to test a spy-proof communications system of talking lights.

The astronauts, awakened by a Beach Boys-style tune, read a teletype message radioed to them overnight congratulating them for "another super job yesterday," and giving baseball scores and the news of the shakeup in the Soviet government.

The message also said, without explanation, there was "no update on the sinks" at pilot Richard O. Covey's house and said the wives of the crew "send their greetings and report they represented you well at the Outpost."

The Outpost is a bar that is a favorite of the astronauts near the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The astronauts were very quiet in the hours after wakeup today as they went about the business

Changes in welfare cheered by most, questioned by some

WASHINGTON (AP) — The landmark welfare overhaul bill awaiting President Reagan's signature has been strongly cheered by most lawmakers, denounced as unfair by a handful and compared to a coin flip by one who wondered if it would work.

"It's strictly marginal, a coin flip," said Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., shortly before the House's 347-53 vote Friday completing congressional action on the Family Support Act.

It's a five-year, $3.3 billion chance, but Frenzel declared it "worth the investment."

The work-oriented welfare bill, the first fundamental overhaul of the system since it was established in 1935, has engendered great expectations among many.

Its aim: transform the system from a long-term trap to a short-term boost, a gateway to mainstream economic America for poor parents ill-prepared for the workplace.

Its major tool: a broad new program called Job Opportunities and Basic Skills (JOBS) designed to equip young parents and long-term recipients with the education, training and job experience they need to become responsible for their own families.

"Honest, productive, creative work is the essential element for helping people turn their lives around," said Rep. Hank Brown, R-Colo., a chief architect of the measure. "It is the greatest gift we can provide for those who are less fortunate."

Reagan has expressed satisfaction with the bill, which sailed through the Senate 96-1 on Thursday.

Liberals complained that the bill, which contains work requirements, is unfair to welfare recipients; conservatives charged that it won't cut people off the rolls or save taxpayers money.

But their complaints were buried under an avalanche of bipartisan support for the bill that was painstakingly developed over two years of hearings and a summer of intensive negotiations.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said the end product "provides real help, not promises."

The bill combines carrots and sticks, both for the states that will have to organize broad job, training and education programs and for the welfare parents who will have to participate.

States will get the freedom and money to fashion their own JOBS programs — but they're also told to expand cash benefits to two-parent unemployed families, a group only 27 states now serve.

To the extent resources are available, able-bodied parents with children over 3 must participate in JOBS. But they'll get help with child care and transportation costs, and a 12-month extension of child care and Medicaid to help ease them into the private workforce.

$2.5 billion pledged to bail out thrifts

DALLAS (AP) — September ended with a bang for the Texas savings and loan industry as federal regulators pledged $2.5 billion to save six insolvent thrifts in two separate deals.

David Colgren, spokesman for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board in Dallas, said regulators are "definitely on schedule" in their execution of the federal Southwest Plan, a program devised to consolidate or close more than 100 insolvent thrifts in Texas.

In the two deals, private investors pledged more than $150 million towards the acquisitions.

"It's good news for Texas and it's good news for the Texas thrift industry," Colgren said. "We are about a fourth of the way completed with the thrift situation in Texas."

Officials with the bank board said Friday a Dallas-based institution called Guaranty Federal Savings Bank will consolidate First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Austin, Delta Savings of Texas in Alvin, and Guaranty Federal Savings and Loan Association of Dallas. The three thrifts have combined assets of about $3.19 billion.

A joint venture of three Texas firms, including Temple-Inland Inc. of Dibold, a forestry company, is getting $1.49 billion in assistance from the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corp. to acquire the three thrifts.

In turn, Temple-Inland, Dallas-based real estate development and management company Trammel Crow Co., and Mason Best Co., a Dallas-based private merchant banking firm, will invest $128 million in the deal.

Temple-Inland will receive 80 percent of the new institution's stock while the other two companies will get 10 percent each.

'Indian Images' exhibit will open Sunday at WTC gallery

"Indian Images," an exhibit of paintings by Marie Phillips-Thornton of Rotan, will open Oct. 2 in the Western Texas College Fine Arts Gallery.

A reception honoring the artist is planned from 1:30-3:30 p.m. and the public is invited to attend. The show will continue through Oct. 25 and can be seen on weekdays without admission charge.

Mrs. Phillips-Thornton, a Fisher County native, has lived most of her life on the C-Bar Ranch near Rough Creek in northwest Fisher County. She has sketched since childhood and began painting in oils when she received a set as a gift for her 25th birthday. She is basically self-taught, though she has attended many workshops and, for a short time, took lessons from Amy Patton in Snyder.

In 1973, the artist was encouraged to begin teaching art. She opened a studio in Rotan and taught three classes a day, six days a week, reaching around 100 students weekly, some of whom have gone on to their own careers in art. The art studio was sold in 1978 and since that time she has limited her teaching to one weekly class to give more time to commission work and to her own personal growth as an artist.

Mrs. Phillips-Thornton became interested in Indian art in 1987 while in Taos, N. M. She has made an intense study of the subject since then, concentrating in the Hopi tribe and their pottery and Kachina dolls. Her knowledge and love of Indian lore and history plays an important part in the creation and the mood set of each of her paintings.

"Indian art is of great interest to me," she said. "The Kachina doll represents many things to the Indian and plays an important part in their ceremonies. The designs on the pottery, and the way they are combined, tell a story. As the Hopi were primarily an agricultural people, many of their symbols mean life—clouds, rain and corn, always looking to a good harvest. They were ever conscious of the Great Spirit, and so many symbols, such as the hawk, were considered intermediaries between them and the Great Spirit, or Sky Father. Many of their designs are very ancient, as it is said the Hopi are descended from the Anasazi.

"I never plan a painting," added the artist. "I just start putting color and shapes on canvas and soon the painting will begin to take shape. I always know the subject I'll paint, but I never know how I will present it on canvas.

Speaking about her thoughts on the creation of art, Mrs. Phillips-Thornton commented, "It's a gift. Something that is given to a few people. Ask any artist, and most of them will say they feel the desire to paint and they have to get something down on canvas. I've had that feeling since I was a small child. I still have sketches I did when I was a teenager. Not too bad, either."

Paintings by Mrs. Phillips-Thornton have been sold in Hereford and Fort Worth as well as in Rotan to buyers from Oklahoma, Arkansas, California, Washington, D. C. and Wisconsin as well as Texas. A photograph of one of her paintings depicting coon dog hunting was included in a Bicentennial display in the Smithsonian Institute in Washington as a representative of everyday life in 1776.

By Shirley A. Gorman

The up and down cycle of weight gain and loss gets a real workout in Lee Burke's class in weight control at Western Texas College.

Overweight people who have tried every fad diet and weight loss gimmick and the ones who are trying to maintain a weight loss turn to Burke for solace, strength and help.

He is happy to help, he says, having struggled with overweight problems himself in the past.

"They are often discouraged when they come to the class but they haven't given up or they wouldn't come," he said.

Burke, who is beginning his 14th year at WTC, designed the course himself and teaches the class on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8:30 to 10 a.m. He is the division chairperson for the Health and Physical Education Department at the college.

Last year, 17 people signed up for the class, mainly women. Most were overweight or had some kind of weight problem or were trying to maintain a weight loss, he said.

"People come into my class knowing about nutrition and exercise but they have not been able to make that knowledge work for them. So I try to find a 'trigger' which will make the program click for them," Burke explained.

"Sometimes it is a fact they already know but is presented in a different way or maybe they just suddenly understand something they missed before," he continued.

"A lot of my students have 'yo-yoed' all their life and they are confused so I try to help them," he said.

Burke said that it is a proven fact that people who lose weight and gain it back usually always gain back extra pounds as well. This can be discouraging for the dieter, he said, because it sets up a vicious cycle.

Burke's class is divided into two categories. The first deals with the dispensing of good, sound nutritional information and the second is exercise.

A large part of the class time is spent in an informal classroom setting where the students talk and share their feelings, beliefs and ideas, many of which are wrong he said.

"We try to sift through the 'trash' and get rid of the fallacies and dangerous information which can hurt people," Burke said.

For instance, he said many of his students are aware of the need to cut back on fats. But he said you have to do more than just trim the fat off your meat. You also have to avoid hamburgers and bacon which have a built in fat content.

"There is nothing new in my class or program," he explained. "I borrowed from everywhere, but I borrowed from the best I could find."

That includes information obtained through universities engaged in research or reputable researchers who are qualified to release their findings. Burke said that in this day and age when a new fad or gimmick diet comes out almost every week that it is no wonder people are confused.

He hands out newsletters for his students to read and encourages them to make reports and to continue reading from outside sources. "There is so much to learn about nutrition that you really have to study it all the time," he said.

Another example of information that may do more harm than good is the knowledge that joging is good for you but then the person has no idea of how to go about doing it safely, he said.

During the classroom discussions Burke often uses cassettes and video cassettes and this semester he has added a "new twist." He has students keep a log of their activities within a 24-hour period and then has a computer analyze the data to determine how many calories they burned. Later, he has them keep a log of what they eat so that total calories consumed can be computed as well.

"It's easy to see that if you are eating more calories than you burn in a day then the result is weight gain," he said.

The computer computes calories which are burned in three ways, basal metabolism, 56 percent; physical exercise, 35 percent and digestion of food, nine percent. Basal metabolism is defined as the energy your body needs to function when resting. It makes up the calories your body uses to breathe, circulate your blood, make your internal organs work and keep your body warm.

Burke also introduces his students to physical exercise which he said many of his students come into his class knowing nothing about.

"First we do floor exercises which makes the body more supple and flexible," he explained. "This part of the class provides muscle toning and the more muscle tissue you have the easier it is to burn calories."

"The body is an amazing thing in that muscles adjust and the fat begins to disappear but (and he emphasized the but) it is a gradual process. Your body knows what to do and you just have to be patient and let it do it."

According to Burke, a sedentary lifestyle leads to obesity. That translates, he said, into watching too much television and driving instead of walking to destinations.

After the floor exercises comes what Burke calls the "aerobic portion" of the class. Students are taught and encouraged to walk for exercise, plus there is a cool down period when the heart rate is monitored.

"Everyone has to learn to listen to their own bodies and do what it tells them to do," Burke explained. "That is the key to a sound exercise program. Each student works at his or her own pace."

To determine the "zone" that everyone needs to work in for the walking portion of the class, Burke said they start with the number 220 and then subtract the person's age from it. That determines the maximum heart rate. "The range we are looking for is 60-70 percent of the maximum heart rate," he said. "The idea is to raise your heart rate to your

FEATURED THIS WEEK MINISTRY OF GREED. By Larry Martz.

This is the inside story of the scandal called "Gospelgate" — the intricacies of what happened and, more important, how and why. It is an explanation of how Jim and Tammy Bakker built their empire by preaching a brand of "prosperity theology" that appealed to the values of their followers, and how their greed exploded in their faces.

And it is a rare window on the world of the evangelical movement that comprises nearly a quarter of America's populace — its factions, its beliefs, and its values, which increasingly mark our future. This inside story of these holy wars is a cautionary tale of America in the 80s.

MAIL-ORDER SHOPPING

Shopping by mail can be the ultimate in consumer convenience — or in frustration, if things go wrong.

Last year Americans spent $43 billion on products ordered by mail.

Most mail-order shoppers must be satisfied, since mail-order sales have been on the increase for years, and rose over 11 percent between 1986 and 1987 alone.

However, problems with mail orders also top the list of consumer complaints made to Better Business Bureaus throughout the nation.

Common problems include overstated claims, poor quality merchandise, failure to deliver, delayed delivery, failure to provide refunds for undeliverable goods, failure to answer letters of complaint and outright fraud.

Buyers can take some steps to avoid mail-order problems.

Ordering from catalogs or companies that are well-known or have a track record in the mail-order business will generally increase your chances of being satisfied.

The reputation of the company is important because advertisements for mail order goods in newspapers or on television are not screened and the claims may be exaggerated or untrue.

Consumers need to keep a copy of the order and the advertisement being answered and a note of when and where it was sent.

Don't send cash with an order.

You need a cancelled check or credit card statement to prove that the order was received by the seller.

Consumers have to do their part, too. Before ordering clothing, for example, check the company's return or exchange policy. If you have difficulty making decisions about size and color without seeing the item, you should select a mail-order firm with a liberal exchange policy.

Also be sure to give necessary information. Mail order companies complain that many problems are caused by consumers failing to give complete or correct addresses.

With the Christmas catalog shopping season approaching, consumers should know the Federal Trade Commission regulations regarding mail order.

—Goods must be shipped within 30 days of receiving the order or within the time stated in the advertising.

—Companies that can't deliver within this time period must offer the consumer the option of a refund or an additional waiting period.

—Following the second waiting period, the order is automatically cancelled and the money refunded unless the customer notifies the company of willingness to wait even longer.

—A mail-order company must adjust a refund to a credit account within one billing cycle.

Class of '79 plans reunion

Members of the Snyder High School class of 1979 will meet Oct. 2 at 3 p.m. at the Snyder Savings and Loan Community Room to discuss plans for their 10-year class reunion.

A fix for anxiety

NEW YORK (AP) — While exercise and rest help reduce both blood pressure and anxiety, exercise lowers them longer, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

It says researchers at the University of Wisconsin-Madison compared 40 minutes of vigorous exercise to 40 minutes of rest in 30 men. They tested blood pressure and anxiety prior to, immediately following and one, two and three hours after the sessions. While rest produced lower scores for 20 minutes, exercise showed decreased blood pressure and anxiety from two to three hours after working out.

Burke teaches weight control

range and then maintain it for 30 minutes."

Burke said this needs to be done at least three to four times a week which means that students must continue to work on their own outside of class. Ideally, he said it needs to be done six or seven times a week but that depends on the stamina of each person.

Burke also encourages his students not to totally deprive themselves of something they are really craving since the "craving will drive you crazy and the guilt after you eat it will 'kill' you." Instead he tells them to eat a little bit rather than to totally deprive themselves or to give in to a binge.

Above all, he said, "maintain your walking program because when you are moving you are burning calories." Burke said he tries to get his students to realize that there are a lot of ways to get walking to work for you. Take the stairs instead of the elevator, or park farther from the front door of a store and walk a little more. Even the little things add up and begin to pay off after a while, he said.

Burke said that overweight people cut back on their physical activity without realizing that they are doing it and that that leads to increased weight gain.

He said the weight loss class grew out of a class begun one year ago for employees of the college. Those who sign up join him for a workout from 4:30-5:30 on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

"The sessions have proven to be very successful and we are getting the secretary types who are really office bound during the day. We gradually came to realize that if there was such a need among college personnel that the need also existed in the community," he said.

Burke, who was overweight as a teenager, said he understands his students and sympathizes with their problems. He noted being overweight may be due to eating the wrong kinds of food and not exercising rather than overeating.

When he first came to WTC, he said he had let himself gain about 40 pounds because he had not been as physically active as he once was. Within a year, he had trimmed off those excess pounds.

Burke does not hesitate to talk about his weight problems and is the first person to admit that his present job helps him to maintain his weight loss. He also jogs.

Burke said he got into the "fitness mode" in 1967 while stationed in Vietnam, then doing it as a time filler. When he came back to the United States, he first read a book written by Ken Cooper called "The Aerobics Book." He said the information in that book still holds up today.

"I started jogging in 1969 but I found I couldn't run. I was smoking and my cardiovascular system was in sad shape," he said.

Burke quit smoking and gradually built up his body until he could withstand the rigors of jogging. Burke said he gave up smoking not only for his own health and improvement but because he didn't want to preach one thing to his students and then do the opposite himself.

Burke has both an undergraduate degree and a masters degree from Texas Tech University and he has completed several post masters courses as well. "I don't think you ever get finished studying or learning," he said.

He lives in Ira with his daughter, Suzanne, who is 13.

West had no obvious lead. His choice of the trump 10 was won by declarer, who promptly drew a second round. At trick three, declarer lost a trick to West's queen of hearts. The plan was to lose the three top hearts and eventually discard one of dummy's losers on the fourth heart. The spade finesse might even be taken for a possible overtrick.

When West switched to the six of spades, South decided to finesse on the theory that he could never win two spades unless the finesse won. That was the end of declarer. East won the king of spades and switched to diamonds, leaving South short of time. By the time South set up a heart trick, the defenders had established and cashed a diamond for down one.

South had erred in a typically human fashion. He'd been greedy. Had South gone up with the ace of spades, he would have been able to get his heart trick in time to use it. True, West might have had the king of spades, but that would have produced a single 20-point overtrick. Playing the ace of spades guaranteed the full value of a part-score. Playing the queen of spades was not a percentage investment.

South had the last word: "If the defense had led spades or diamonds, I could never have made three clubs."

Greed is the culprit

By James Jacoby

South did well in the bidding by not pushing too hard with his 18 points. When North raised clubs, South made a game-try by bidding two hearts, hoping North could bid no-trump. Since North had a minimum for his raise, he signed off in three clubs.

James Jacoby's books "Jacoby on Bridge" and "Jacoby on Card Games" (written with his father, the late Oswald Jacoby) are now available at bookstores. Both are published by Pharos Books.

I've always liked the flavor of acorn squash, but not the time it takes to cook. Now I cook it in my microwave oven, glazed the way my family prefers it, in less than 10 minutes.

CINNAMON-GLAZED SQUASH

- 1 medium acorn squash (about 1 pound)
 - 2 tablespoons brown sugar
 - 2 tablespoons dark corn syrup
 - 2 tablespoons margarine or butter
 - 1/8 teaspoon ground cinnamon
 - Salt and pepper to taste
- Quarter squash lengthwise. Scoop out seeds and discard. Arrange squash pieces in an 8- by 8-by 2-inch microwave-safe baking dish. Cover with clear plastic wrap, turning back a corner to let steam escape. Cook on 100 percent power (high) 6 to 9 minutes or until done, giving the dish a half-turn once.

In a 1-cup measure combine sugar, corn syrup, margarine and cinnamon. Cook, uncovered, on high 1 to 2 minutes or until margarine is melted. Stir to blend. Sprinkle squash with salt and pepper. Spoon sugar mixture over top. Cook, covered, for 30 seconds more. Makes 4 servings.

Clue to swearing

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — A step toward understanding Tourette's Syndrome — the infamous "swearing disease" — has been made at the University of Rochester.

Scientist Suzanne Haber, working with researchers at the Harvard Medical School, analyzed the brain from a deceased Tourette's victim. They found a striking absence of a specific brain chemical called dynorphin. How this chemical is related to the disease remains unknown, but the finding points to new ways to diagnose and, possibly, treat victims.

These seriously afflicted with Tourette's Syndrome involuntarily shout obscenities and exhibit other bizarre symptoms such as barking, grunting and spasmodic body movements.

Diversified

By Marvin Ensor Extension Agent

The effects of dry weather across the South Plains during most of the August growing period have contributed to the rapid opening of much of the area's cotton. Growers with this situation may need to consider use of harvest-aid chemicals to prepare their crop for an early harvest.

We are still six weeks before our normal expected frost date. Growers should at least consider using chemicals to terminate their crop for timely harvest.

Leaving cotton that's ready for harvest in the field for a prolonged period can result in costly weathering and field losses.

Prolonged exposure to the elements not only reduces the yield, but also will discolor fiber, causing reduction in grade. In addition, cotton which has opened prematurely due to moisture stress tends to be less storm-proof, thereby contributing to higher field losses.

Cotton with yield potentials above approximately one-third bale an acre will economically justify the expenditures for chemical desiccation.

In most cases, a treatment with a desiccant will be required to dry and condition the crop before harvest. The Extension Service recommends that use of a desiccant (paraquat or arsenic acid) be delayed until approximately 80 percent of the bolls are open and the remaining bolls are too hard to easily slice with a sharp knife.

Drought-stressed cotton is often more difficult to terminate with a desiccant than is a non-stressed crop. Consequently, the treatment program should begin with at least the labeled rate of the chemical.

Good spray coverage is essential, and growers should use adequate water with ground equipment and to use wetting agents to maximize the chemical's effectiveness.

The use of multiple nozzles will improve desiccation, even in short cotton.

Pygmy goats make playful companions

FLETCHER, Okla. (AP) — Pygmy goats are just a bunch of little kids at heart.

That's what Laudell Hill of rural Fletcher discovered when her husband, LaRue, bought her a pair three years ago.

"My husband kept asking me what I wanted for a Christmas present, and I kept saying I didn't know, and he said, 'You're going to be sorry,' and got me these pygmy goats," Mrs. Hill says.

Mrs. Hill was very surprised, but she wasn't sorry at all.

"We enjoy watching animals. My husband should have been curator of a zoo. He'd collect everything if he could," she says.

Their six children and eight grandchildren, who come in to visit from New Mexico, Arizona, Illinois, Texas and Europe, also find the goats fascinating to watch.

"You can be depressed and go out and sit down and watch them and forget all about what you were worried about when you went out there," Mrs. Hill says.

Pygmy goats are mischievous as children. They love to untie shoes and play on their slides and teeter-totters. When Mrs. Hill put out grain for them at the top of the slide, one little goat made five or six dashes up the incline until he finally got up enough momentum to reach the food.

Once there, he played "King of the Hill" and nudged away a would-be diner who tried to horn in on his meal.

The goats are not only fun but profitable, too. Registered with the American Goat Association and the National Pygmy Association, they sell for $75 each. The Hills sold four recently, still had 20 the next day and had a goat expecting a litter at any time. The pygmies may give birth to up to six offspring at a time, but any over four must be bottle-fed.

People buy them for pets. In addition, says Mrs. Hill, "they sometimes use them in California, Florida and Illinois for 4-H projects because an 8-year-old child can handle them easier than a steer...They're very lovable animals, so the kids can get close to them, where they'd be afraid of a larger animal."

The pygmies can produce as much milk per pound as some dairy goats, "but I'd hate to milk one on a regular basis, as small as they are," Mrs. Hill says.

Full-grown, the goats are only 18 inches tall. For children who are allergic to other pets, they make very acceptable substitutes. A Tulsa woman whose son was allergic to dog and cat hair won a pygmy goat at a raffle, so she bought another from the Hills to keep it company. She house-trained both goats and even had them going in and out little swinging doors like any dog or cat.

As a matter of fact, dogs and cats who hang around with the goats too much may get confused after a while. The Hills' cat, Tabber, seems to think he's one of the goats. He tries to eat with them, and he sleeps in the goat pen at night.

Inmates seek pride in steamy sweat lodge

STONY MOUNTAIN, Manitoba (AP) — The Indians fast for two days before crowding into a dome-shaped lodge to chant and pray to the Great Spirit. Water is poured over 16 red hot stones in a steamy purge of body and soul.

But this sweat lodge, a hallowed tradition among natives of the North American prairies, has an unusual setting.

It's erected every month in the recreation yard of Stony Mountain federal penitentiary in western Canada, where a dozen or more Indians strip down to their bathing suits and enter the sauna-like chamber for 2½ hours of native communion.

"I've seen some awfully big, angry individuals melt after one or two sweats," said Clark Morrisette, a Cree counsellor employed at the prison.

The experimental form of rehabilitation is an attempt to break the Indian cycle of violence and alcoholism by restoring cultural pride.

The prison's Native Brotherhood Organization is permitted to hold sweat lodges, sacred circles and powwows, to smoke the peace pipe, burn sweet grass and earn special passes to attend sun dance rituals on nearby reservations.

"We're trying to get rid of the myth there's two strikes against you just because you're native. But we can't do it without some form of religious awakening," said John Stonechild, a Cree elder hired to counsel Indian inmates who form half the prison's population of 430.

"These men are in search of something, and part of that search ends when they take up their rightful heritage," said Stonechild.

For many of Canada's 465,000 Indians, joblessness on the reservation and discrimination in the cities lead to drinking and violence, and natives go to jail far more often than other Canadians.

Half the prison inmates in Manitoba, and 64 percent in Saskatchewan are Indians, although they comprise less than 7 percent of the population in either prairie province.

On many reserves, bored youngsters deliberately break the law as a means of getting off the reservation, according to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Before the cultural program at Stony Mountain, seven out of 10 Indians would end up behind bars again following their release, said Curtis Fontaine, a Salteaux Indian who heads the Native Clan Organization in Winnipeg.

That rate is now down to 30 to 40 percent, and those who do return are surviving on the outside for longer periods, said Fontaine, whose agency has a contract with the government to supervise parolees and run a halfway house.

"Native people are still going through culture shock. For many, their frustration is out of control," Fontaine said. "This program shows them they do have a place in society."

Another result, according to Corrections Department official Ray Gawryluk, is fewer prison disturbances.

Inside the 20-foot-high walls of the maximum security prison, inmate Ed Sparvier, 26, said he adopted a "do unto others before they do unto you" lifestyle on the streets of Winnipeg before his conviction in 1985 for aggravated assault.

Raised on the Waywaysee-capo reserve in western Manitoba, Sparvier wants to return to life on the land when he is paroled next year.

"I remember history books in school telling me I was a sayage and my culture and religion were heathen," said Sparvier, who has "get high" tattooed on his arm and attends Alcoholics Anonymous meetings as well as two-hour sacred circles every Tuesday night.

"There's times in my life I've screwed up severely. A lot of distractions can pull you off the Sweet Grass Road. But there's a gap and a bridge across it, and it's got a lot to do with self-esteem," Sparvier said. He keeps a bundle in his cell containing sweet grass, sage, cedar and a cloth depicting the medicine wheel on which the eagle symbolizes strength, the buffalo wisdom, the bear health and the mouse courage.

Brotherhood president Cecil Cooke, 28, has been in and out of prison since he was 15 for robbery and other crimes. He's now preparing a proposal for Cree and Salteaux language lessons for inmates and plans to attend college when he is paroled.

He's learned that he alone is responsible for his actions, not society or the system, he said.

"Every time I got out before I would either re-offend or be sent back for drinking. But what happens when you leave depends on how much you want to succeed. Alcohol and drugs are always available."

Afternoon vows join couple

MRS. JAMES WESLEY TUNE

MIDLAND — Stellyce Allen and James Wesley Tune were united in marriage at 2 p.m. Sept. 24 in the First Baptist Church Chapel of Midland. The Rev. Weldon Miller of the Foursquare Church officiated the double-ring vows.

Parents of the couple are Sandra Allen and the late Calvin T. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. R.C. Tune all of Midland.

Vows were exchanged before a candelabra embellished with greenery. Potted ferns accented the piano and organ and blue and peach bows marked the pews.

Sandy Jobe provided piano accompaniment for the ceremony. Musical selections included "Sunrise, Sunset," "Wedding March," "Up Where We Belong," and the prelude and recession.

Given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. T.P. Allen of Snyder, the bride chose a white, traditional gown by Bridal Originals. The fitted, dropped bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline. Satin and chiffon were set off by highlights of lace beads and sequins. Sleeves puffed at the shoulders dropped to fitted lace embellished with pearls and sequins. The back featured a deep V design filled with illusion and lace.

Layer upon layer of chiffon ruffles cascaded down the back of the full skirt into a cathedral train. The bride carried a cascade of peach, white gardenias, white gardenias and white fresa.

Matron of honor was Gina Allen of Odessa, cousin of the bride. She was attired in a floor-length gown of blue moire' taffeta with a blue and peach-flower design. Teressa Scharfenberg of Midland was bridesmaid and wore a matching gown in peach with peach and blue flowers.

Flower girls were Brittany Nichols of Odessa and Lauren Allen of Midland.

Wesley Walker of Abilene served as best man with Mitch Clark of Midland as groomsman. Ushers were Devin and Bryan Allen of Midland, brothers of the bride. Ringbearer was Chase Nichols of Odessa.

Male attendants wore black tuxedos with peach or blue cummerbunds and bow ties while the groom was attired in a white tuxedo jacket and black slacks.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall.

The bride's cake was a three-tiered square Italian cream with accents of peach blossoms and cupid pillars. Ruffles of lace and frosting completed the design. A family heirloom topped the confection.

The groom's cake was of chocolate in graduated tiers. The swirled chocolate frosting was accented by milk chocolate leaves highlighted with silver dragees.

Following a wedding trip to Inn of the Mountain Gods in Ruidoso, N.M., the couple is at home in Midland.

The bride and groom attended Angelo State University. The bride is employed at Midland Memorial Hospital and the groom is with the Mission Country Club in Midland.

Group helps to rebuild life following death of a spouse

PITTSBURGH (AP) — When Ruth Buckley's husband, Frank, died five years ago after a two-year battle with leukemia, her first reaction was relief.

"He had been suffering for so long, I was glad it was over," she said. "I thought I was all right for the first year afterwards. I thought I had everything under control."

But Mrs. Buckley's relief finally turned into depression, fear, panic and concern over the future of her six daughters.

So she turned to the THEOS Foundation, a national group formed 25 years ago in Pittsburgh for widows and widowers. The name stands for "Those Who Help Each Other Spiritually."

Today, Mrs. Buckley, 57, is program chairwoman for the group, which has a membership of about 20,000.

"You experience this hole in your life," Mrs. Buckley said recently. "I think that what happens is that over time you gradually fill the hole. The hole is still there, but now I have new friends...new involvements that I didn't have five years ago."

Personal experience has enabled Mrs. Buckley to answer one of the most frequently asked questions within the group: How long does it take one to get over the grief?

"I think it's safe to say that a person never gets over grief. They learn to deal with it," she said.

THEOS offers grieving husbands and wives emotional support as they rebuild their lives.

"Our chief message is a non-verbal one. At a time like this, you're likely to feel that no one understands your grief — not your relatives, not your children, not your best friends. In THEOS chapters, you will find people who understand," she said.

THEOS was formed by the late Bea Decker, a native Pennsylvanian who returned to the Pittsburgh area after her husband died while the family was living in Chicago.

"At the time she knew she needed some kind of support because she was left with three children to raise," said Sue Rumbaugh, THEOS executive director.

A small group of widowed friends who met monthly in downtown Pittsburgh soon grew large enough to form smaller suburban chapters. Today, there are THEOS chapters in most major cities, Ms. Rumbaugh said.

The group encourages members to have faith in a higher power, although it is non-religious and does not require membership in any religion, she said.

Chapter leaders are careful to prevent monthly meetings from becoming merely social hours, Ms. Rumbaugh said. Members are encouraged to share feelings, experiences or information.

Outside speakers are invited to teach members the ABCs of survival after the death of a spouse, giving advice on everything from how to handle depression to how to handle finances, Mrs. Buckley said.

"Everything changes. You enter another whole realm of life," she said. "Your housing, work and financial situations change, your relationships with your children change, your friends change."

After the death of her husband, Frank Buckley, 64, a psychologist, after 25 years of marriage, Mrs. Buckley said she had avoided making some of those changes.

Gifted 13-year-old ponders his future

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Avrom Faderman is only 13, so he isn't in a hurry to graduate from Fresno State University. He does expect to be in graduate school by the time he's old enough to drive, though.

Avrom, who will begin his junior year this fall, said he'd like to take a wide range of classes for personal enrichment before moving on to graduate studies in math or theoretical physics at a major university such as the California Institute of Technology or University of California at Berkeley.

"I plan to go to a large university for graduate school, but I should be older — at least old enough to have a driver's license," he said.

In California, that age is 16, so for now, Avrom plans to satisfy his abundant intellectual curiosity with studies in foreign languages — German, French and Hebrew — classical music, literature and a computer game called "Interactive Fiction."

"It's puzzle solving — it doesn't involve reflex action," he said. "I'm remarkably poor at video games."

Such understatement is typical for Avrom, who enrolled at Fresno State after spending one year at a high school in this city 200 miles southeast of San Francisco.

Students such as Avrom present special challenges, said Deanne Schilling, a professor in the Advanced Studies Department and coordinator of Fresno State's special education program.

"The tongue-in-cheek term 'severely gifted' correctly implies that many, but not all, such students do face greater challenges in terms of finding social peers, emotional peers and academic peers," Ms. Schilling said.

"The challenge for parents and society is to see that these students don't remain diamonds in the rough — to see that we provide experiences to allow their brilliance to shine for the rest of the world to see," she added.

Avrom's fertile mind sets him years ahead of his contemporaries, but he doesn't feel isolated. He plays down his talent.

While in Vienna with his mother, an English professor at Fresno State, Avrom took the Scholastic Aptitude Test. On the verbal section he scored 600 and posted a score of 700 on the mathematical section on a scale of 800.

"The scores are very good, but not outstanding per se," he commented.

"In my case, I would not say that my intellectual ability has robbed me of my childhood," Avrom said. "I would say the idealized version of childhood robs others of their intellectual ability."

"Society has placed great emphasis on children as sweet little lambs. That can encourage kids to concentrate on being innocent and that can stifle their creativity. I haven't been robbed of my childhood — just a traditional childhood, and I don't need one."

For the time being, there's no stopping Avrom's ample appetite for knowledge for the sake of knowledge. He prefers math and theoretical physics over engineering or applied physics because theory isn't bound by the limits of technology.

"I'm interested in finding out about the world as opposed to ruling it," he said.

By Donny Brown

About the worst a former roommate of our's could muster up was the word "dookie."

He was referring to a biological function—at least we think he was—but his use of it was called into service as an expletive.

As a result, inconsiderate drivers challenging him for the turning lane might be referred to as "dookie-heads."

A professor who required a term paper over Christmas break was said to enforce "dookie rules."

And a day which might be described by lesser minds as just plain awful was to him simply "dookie."

Did we mention that his avoidance of more mainstream cuss words seemed at times to border on the obscene?

As a teenager, the first bit of racy stuff we were allowed to sneak by the parents was the utterance, "Gahh."

It served as an expression for a multitude of emotions. Surprise and fear, anger and alarm, awe and wonder. In the back of our minds, we realized it was a contraction for the diety in whose name we were solemnly warned to never take in vain. Unfortunately, the warning label often went unheeded.

"Gahh!?" we asked in defiance, "What's wrong with saying that?"

Columns-Cartoons-Look Back-Letters-Quotables

As for our own parents, Dad's favorite exclamation was the well-used catchall, "godawmighty!"

We have a favorite memory of his using it one afternoon in 1964 when yours truly secured Pop's assistance after running out of gasoline.

Some how or other, we managed to spill gas while priming the carburetor, which was followed by a backfire through same to ignite the spillage, which melted all of the engine wiring and burned an ugly blister on the car hood.

When the flames began to lap between hood and fender, Dad said, "Godawmighty, run get that garden hose."

Looking back, we believe his brevity in word selection was admirable.

Two years spent with the U.S. Army opened up new avenues of obscenity.

In an earlier column, we mentioned the drill instructor who informed us on the first day of basic training that we would be run the next morning until our breath smelled like...

Five years have gone by since we first mentioned that story, and the time has yet to come when that allusion can be printed in a family newspaper.

And it was about this time—1971-73—when four-letter words began to be commonly aired in movies and some magazines, "Rolling Stone" being, depending on your personal perspective, the best or worst example.

Reference the second, a friend later mentioned it seemed the magazine had a policy that a particular four-letter attention-getter, the "ei numero uno" of cuss words, should appear at least once per page.

With the advent of pay television and uncut movies in the home, the last bastion fell. If it's R-rated, "HBO will show this movie only at night," but somewhere along the way a PG-13 label has come to guarantee a bucket full of plain, old fashioned cuss 'in.

Which is a long way round to say we have completed the sowing cycle and we are about to reap its harvest.

The nine-year-old has learned how much fun it is to watch Mom and Dad writhe and shake when he recites out loud his newfound vocabulary.

It marks the first visitation in the "sins of the father" category, and we can only offer up one more semi-cuss word as both a request and a comment.

Lord help.

Country Life

By Deanie Francis Mills

It had not been a very good day.

To our family, just about the most important horse show of the season is the show held right here at the Scurry County Coliseum on the last day of the fair. It is also the hardest, mainly because my husband, Kent, is president of the fair board, and so is virtually absent for days before the fair, helping with preparations, while I'm at home, trying to get the kids ready to show. There is halter to practice and reining patterns to learn and something called "leads" which absolutely must be gotten, come hell or high water, when a horse lopes or the judge may fall into a deep swoon.

Since my husband travels more and more these days, it seems, it fell to me and the kids to try to prepare for this big event in the weeks preceding it. My daughter, who is eight, rides the big black, and is virtually taken care of in all events. She may not always win, but she will do well and will be safe.

It's my son who has the problem. He's mounted on a young, nervous horse who travels like a dream at home but falls apart at the seams, stitch by stitch, whenever he is hauled away to a strange area — and no arena is stranger than the Ag Barn during the fair, what with its crowing roosters and kids popping firecracker-things and loud announcers and who knows what-all. Last year he reared straight up and nearly fell over backwards atop my equally frightened young son. At the last show, Gebo bucked Dustin right off.

So we spend more hours than I can count here at home, talking about self-confidence and positive thinking and taking command of our fears and the like, which sounds great in our living room but unravels just like Gebo in a show ring. My son is 11 years old. If you have ever raised a son past this age — and survived it — you know what I'm saying here.

In spite of all these drawbacks, my son's hard work did pay off, in that there was no bucking or rearing in this show and his horse responded much better to his control; but unfortunately, the two worried participants were too fretful to notice. There were tears and sulks — from the kid AND the horse — fits pitched and trophies lost and even one trophy — second place in a line-up of 13 — won. (Western Pleasure, thank you.)

Even so, it was not a very good day.

By the end of it, I was fed up and more ready to quit on the whole thing than even my anxious son. On the ride home, either we didn't speak or I lectured — angrily. He argued. I snapped. My daughter, who'd brought home a boxful of trophies, retreated into the shadows.

It was that kind of evening.

I was unloading the big black from the trailer when my son materialized at my elbow. "I'll put him up," he said.

I hung around, digging my toe in the dirt. When he got back from the barn, I said, "Have you seen the new toadstools?" The grass was glistening under an already heavy dew. We crouched together and examined this rare treasure. Cricket sounds were everywhere.

"Look at that big, fat moon," I said. Its light spilled out over the pastures with reckless abandon — absolutely no modesty, that moon.

"You can see Mars, there," I pointed out. "This is the closest it's been to our planet in 12 years, I heard."

"Can I look at it with my binoculars?" he asked, and I nodded.

It was almost October. The cool country night held us spellbound beneath a harvest moon, and everywhere were the crickets. There were no man-made sounds.

That merciless moon outlined my son's thin shoulders, stooped over from his not very good day. I put my arm around them and squeezed. "In spite of everything," I said, "I was proud of you today."

He gave me one of those sideways 11-year-old looks. "I can be angry and frustrated with you and still love you, you know," I added.

A quirky smile smoothed out his face. "Can I still ride Gebo?" he asked.

"Anytime you want." We headed slowly for the house, talking softly and touching. It was time, we knew, to encourage his sister on her very good day.

There's a certain power and magic in a country night, especially when the moon is reckless and the crisp air is flirt-

SUNDAY September 25
Longtime Western Texas College history and government professor Dr. Franklin Pruitt, who announced his retirement this fall, was honored with a reception Sunday at the Christian Student Center on campus. A large crowd turned out to honor Pruitt, who was given a souvenir case of campaign buttons as a going away gift.

MONDAY September 26
With the close of the 23rd annual Scurry County Fair, the 8th annual Deep Creek Domino Championship winners were Joe Rollins and Delbert Hataway, who won the finals round over James Goss and Albert Malone.

The third place team was comprised of Doyle Wemken and Bus Laster; and fourth went to Ronnie Lewis and Richard Chambers, it was reported Monday.

Scurry County commissioners Monday dispersed $8,018 in interest revenues from the County Available School Fund to the Snyder, Hermleigh and Ira school districts.

County Judge Bobby Goodwin reported the amount that the $121,000 fund had produced during the past year, upon which the court voted to give $299 to Hermleigh, $7,285 to Snyder and $434 to Ira.

The allocation is based on average daily attendance for the districts.

City council members Monday night decided to investigate planting trees at the north end of the landfill site west of Snyder to satisfy the concerns of a landowner who has been asking for the construction of a fence.

Landowner John Short appeared with former city councilman Don Gressett, County Commissioner Ted Billingsley and Sheriff Keith Collier, who owns and leases land in the landfill area, to discuss the city's commitment to build a fence eight years ago and various concerns related to the landfill.

TUESDAY September 27
Sheriff Keith Collier Tuesday said he is hoping for witnesses to come forward who saw two or more men who are believed to have committed three burglaries in Scurry and Borden counties late Sunday or early Monday.

Two barns and a shop were hit, with a total estimated loss of $7,000 in farm-related equipment.

Thirteen people were honored for their dedication to blood drives, with two receiving pins for having donated five gallons, as 128 pints were collected in a Tuesday United Blood Services drive at Towle Park.

Drive officials reported that 145 people registered Tuesday.

Calling it the most important economic issue facing the state, State Rep. Rick Perry of Haskell Tuesday called on local citizens to demand passage of a bill to reform Texas workman's compensation laws.

The Democrat, a member of the Joint-Select Committee on Workman's Compensation in Texas, spoke to about 65 persons gathered in the Fine Arts Theatre at Western Texas College.

SDN Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

I would like to address the example people set for the children. When school started, we all received papers of instruction as to what was expected of ourselves and our children as far as the school was concerned. The number one is the issue I would like to address. It is stated as follows:

—1. Important: No Parking In School Driveway, 7:45 to 8:15 a.m. and 2:30 to 4 p.m. This is for bus loading ONLY!

And the list goes on with 17 statements.

Every day cars are packed in this drive at Northeast Elementary until if you park out on the street, you can't see your child and he can't find you. You almost have to get out of your car and get your child. I have called the principal about this to no avail.

Last year, the children were not allowed to cross the road unless the parent was there to cross with them and if not, they had to go to the crossing. What happens if the child gets hit in the school drive? Also, this teaches the child that rules are to be broken. I would dare say if items four, six or seven or any others were not adhered to, it would be brought to our attention or upheld.

Why not this important one?

Men don't want to plea bargain

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — More than half the defendants in the alleged gang rape of a San Diego woman are not interested in plea bargains despite a conviction and maximum sentence recommended for the first man to face trial, lawyers said.

"They were adamant that they do not wish us as their attorneys to seek plea bargains that would require them to plead guilty," attorney Albert A. Pena III of Corpus Christi, who with San Diego attorney Nago Alaniz represents five of the 10 men indicted, said Thursday.

One client, Orlando Garza, 24, of San Diego, was convicted of sexual assault Tuesday. A jury recommended the maximum 20-year prison sentence for Garza.

After the conviction, Assistant District Attorney Rodolfo Gutierrez, chief prosecutor in the Garza case, said he expected a "long line" of defendants seeking plea bargains.

He is Only a Boy
Please don't curse the boy down there,

He is my son, you see;
He's only just a boy, you know,
And means a lot to me...
I did not raise my son, sports fans,

For you to call him names;
He may not be a superstar,
But it's a high school game...
Please don't curse the boys down there.

They do the best they can;
They never tried to lose a game.
They're boys and you're a man...

The game belongs to them, you see,
And you are just a guest;
They do not need a fan like you,
They need the very best...

If you have nothing nice to say,
Please leave the boys alone.
And if you can't enjoy the game,
Why don't you stay at home?

So please don't curse those boys down there.
Each one's his parent's son;
And win or lose or tie, you see,
To us they're "Number One!"

To Who It May concern:

I am writing this letter to all the tax paying citizens of Snyder who value their freedom. The main issue is our FREEDOM. This freedom concerns smokers and non-smokers. Anyone who owns a business here should have the freedom to decide if they want to put up a smoking or non-smoking sign. After all it is their money, sweat and tears that went into building this business.

Many, many men lost their lives so that we could have this freedom of choice, be it smoking or anything of this nature, so for five city councilpersons and 150 signatures to be able to take this freedom from us is ridiculous and UNCONSTITUTIONAL. If we don't group together and stop government, be it local, state or federal, from interfering with what we have worked so hard for it will soon be controlling our every move. Our freedom is being taken from us a little piece at a time and soon there will be none left.

The city council meeting I attended on Sept. 12, 1988 was a joke. They may take your freedom lightly but I don't. They did not look at both sides of the issue as far as I am concerned. I was verbally attacked and ridiculed. Outside one lady informed me of how long there had been a smoking ordinance in New York. I informed her that this was Texas and we didn't like people messing with Texas nor with our freedom. I guess some of our city council persons think smokers and or business owners don't vote. I don't know, but they did have their minds made up on how they were going to vote before I got there. I also believe that our policemen are underpaid as it is and should not have to waste our tax money and their time on something like this should their services be needed.

On Monday, Oct. 3, 1988 city council will meet again at 6:30 p.m. at city hall to take a final vote on this ordinance. The ordinance will regulate smoking in public meetings, public places and places of employment. This ordinance will carry a penalty of being guilty of a Class C Misdemeanor punishable by not more than $200 and not less than $1 as set by a judge or jury. A person commits an offense if at a public place or at a public meeting area smoking in a non designated smoking area. If the smoking person is asked to extinguish smoking materials or move to designated smoking area by ANY person and the smoker refuses then the person asking can file a complaint. The owner or the person in charge of the business will violate this ordinance if they refuse to ask a smoker to extinguish smoker material if a customer requests they do so.

There is eight pages to this ordinance so I can't have it all printed. It is definitely putting restrictions on the freedom of smokers and non-smokers. There are only 36 cities in Texas that have this ordinance. We still have a choice in this matter of our freedom of rights. So as free Americans let's work together for a free United States of America. Let's not let government or anyone else take complete control of us. Some laws are necessary as we all know and agree with but this is not one of them. Let your councilpersons and elected officials know you are against this ordinance and its violation of your rights. If you have any questions or want to get involved please call me at 573-4246. AND COME TO THE MEETING MONDAY, OCT. 3, 1988 at 6:30 p.m.

Thank you for your time,

Poem Causes Hunter to Lower His Gun and Raise His Sight

DEAR ABBY: For years, I used to shoot birds — just for sport. I am enclosing the poem that convinced me to give up that sport. Some people may think the poem is "corny," but it had a powerful effect on me.

I came across it in the Chronicle, in Crested Butte, Colo. It was written by Lem Ward Crisfield, M.D.

DISARMED IN WISCONSIN

A HUNTER'S POEM
A hunter shot at a flock of geese
That flew within his reach.
Two were stopped in their rapid flight
And fell on the sandy beach.
The male bird lay at the water's edge

And just before he died
He faintly called to his wounded mate
And she dragged herself to his side.
She bent her head and crooned to him

In a way distressed and wild
Caressing her one and only mate
As a mother would a child.
Then covering him with her broken wing

And gasping with failing breath
She laid her head against his breast
A feeble honk ... then death.
This story is true though crudely told

I was the man in this case.
I stood knee deep in snow and cold
And the hot tears burned my face.
I buried the birds in the sand where they lay

Wrapped in my hunting coat
And I threw my gun and belt in the bay
When I crossed in the open boat.
Hunters will call me a right poor sport

And scoff at the thing I did.
But that day something broke in my heart
And shoot again? God forbid!

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old boy and a sophomore in high school. I have many friends and I recently heard a rumor about one I care for. Someone told me that he is homosexual. I really don't want to be swayed by rumors, but I don't know how to ask him if it's true.

I have nothing against gay men, but I don't want to make the mistake of giving him the idea that I am interested. What should I do?
TROUBLED IN TUCSON

DEAR TROUBLED: In answer to your question, I will tell you what not to do: Don't ask him any questions concerning his sexuality, don't believe rumors — and never repeat them.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 75-year-old widow. My husband died last year, leaving me fairly comfortable, but not rich.

I have five children and five grandchildren. Three of my children have children, and two have none by choice, and I am reasonably certain that they will never have any.

Do you think I should distribute my estate equally among my five children? Or should the three with children receive more? All my children are equally dear to me, and my grandchildren have done much to brighten my life.

What would you do if you were in my situation?
PERPLEXED

DEAR PERPLEXED: I would leave each of my children an equal amount. I would then leave each of my grandchildren an equal amount.

DEAR ABBY: We are heartbroken. Our beautiful, 24-year-old, college-educated daughter is engaged to marry a man who is old enough to be her grandfather. (He just turned 65!)

This will be "Mary's" first marriage, and "John" is twice divorced with grown children. Mary says they will probably have no children because John already has his family. She says she doesn't care. She "loves" him. Mary is our only child, so our dream of having grandchildren will never be realized.

John is a very nice man, and we have nothing against him. He is good to our daughter and will be a good provider, but, Abby, when Mary is 40 years old, he will be 81 — if he lives that long. They may have a few good years together, but in the end she will end up being a nurse to an old man.

What can her father and I say or do to prevent our daughter from making this terrible mistake?
HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Mary is an adult and has the right to make her own decisions. Who can say what is best for another? Your daughter must do what she thinks is right for herself. If, as you say, she is making a "terrible mistake" — then it is she who will pay the price.

Even though you aren't enthusiastic about your daughter's choice, please try to be more supportive, and don't put a damper on what should be the happiest day of a young woman's life. It's not the number of years we have, but the quality of those years. Who knows how many years any of us has?

DEAR ABBY: You frequently advise readers to seek "professional help" when they are confronted with a difficult problem in their lives. On one occasion, I was able to turn my life completely around with some helpful guidance that helped me work my way through a devastating situation. Therefore, I wonder how you feel about the public outcry that automatically condemns any public figure who has sought such help?

Good times are back in Johnson space center

NASSAU BAY, Texas (AP) — In a community where the main street carries the designation "NASA 1," there's little doubt about what makes this suburban Houston area hum.

This week, instead of the usual signs outside strip shopping centers, out-of-town visitors are single out for special greetings and the crew of the Space Shuttle Discovery is wished good luck.

This is the home of the Johnson Space Center, which directs the nation's manned space flights, including Thursday's successful Discovery launch.

"Welcome National Press. Go

Discovery!" proclaims the sign outside a Shakey's Pizza Parlor just down the street from the Johnson Space Center.

"We just want to welcome everybody into Houston," Craig Seneca, general manager of the restaurant, said. "Go Discovery! It was great."

Dr. Gott

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am writing to give another plausible explanation for the "warm and tingling" feeling some people experience during an X-ray examination.

First, there are people who can feel the warmth that is generated from the collimator light, the visible beam of the machine which enables the technician to "focus" the X-ray machine prior to taking a picture. If the part to be X-rayed is covered, the person no longer feels the heat.

Second, during most radiologic procedures, a device called a "reciprocating bucky" is used. This is made up of a tray that holds the film beneath a grid. The grid is a metallic board with strips of lead to decrease scatter radiation. During X-ray exposure, the bucky vibrates in order to eliminate "grid lines"; this could cause tingling.

Finally, during dental X-rays, parts of the machine lie against the cheek, people who experience a vibration of the tube housing may incorrectly attribute the sensation to X-ray energy.

In none of these situations is the patient feeling X-ray radiation.

DEAR READER: Thank you for your perceptive comments. Perhaps your explanations will alleviate some patients' anxieties.

DEAR DR. GOTT: A year ago I suffered pretty major injuries in a car accident. Before, I was never sick. Now, I'm in constant pain, depressed all the time, and cry at the drop of a hat. Am I nuts, or could my depression be due to the accident?

DEAR READER: Symptoms such as yours are common after serious injuries. In fact, post-traumatic stress reactions may occur after a variety of life-threatening situations. Aside from the pain, discomfort and disability that result from physical injury, patients may suffer from emotional ups and downs, forgetfulness, lack of concentration, depression, sudden attacks of anger, loss of stamina, and feelings of unwellness. In most patients, these symptoms regress with time.

You are not nuts. I strongly urge you to address these symptoms with your doctor. He or she may wish to prescribe medicine, such as pain relievers and anti-depressants, to help you get through this difficult time. For more information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Living With Chronic Pain." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1 and their name and address to P.O. Box 91369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the title.

According to The American Lung Association, about 54 million Americans smoke (33 percent of adult males, 28 percent of adult females and approximately 20 percent of all high school seniors). Blacks have a higher rate of smoking than whites. Better-educated white-collar workers are less likely to smoke. Cigarettes are the most heavily promoted product in the United States: Tobacco companies spent more than $2 billion in advertising in 1984.

A heavy smoker can waste more than $1,000 annually just on cigarettes. During his lifetime, he will puff away $34,000 in extra medical bills and lost income.

The good news is that 85 percent of smokers would like to quit; one out of every three smokers tries to break the habit each year and, fortunately, people are increasingly successful in this endeavor. More than 40 million smokers have kicked the habit. Since the mid 1960s, smoking has declined in all population groups, with the notable exception of teen-age girls.

This is a welcome trend in view of the fact that cigarette-smoking is the single most important cause of preventable morbidity (sickness) and premature mortality in the United States. Cigarette addiction is a major factor in lung cancer, emphysema, chronic bronchitis, coronary artery disease, stroke, peripheral vascular disease, still-births and low birth-weight infants.

The best way to stop smoking is never to begin in the first place. (Parents take note and watch your role-modeling.) However, for those individuals who want to break the habit, several resources are available. These include: self-help books and tapes (available from The American Lung Association and in bookstores), physician counseling (often with drug therapy, such as nicotine gum and clonidine), hypnosis and behavioral modification (such as aversive conditioning), worksite anti-smoking programs (offered by many public agencies and private companies), and group counseling (supervised by several organizations, such as the American Cancer Society and Smoke Enders.)

A person can modify his or her behavior in conjunction with one or more of the above resources. Here are some suggestions that I have modified from The American Lung Association's guidelines:

Before you quit:

1. Change to a brand of cigarettes that you don't like.

2. Put your cigarettes in a different place each day. Make it difficult to get them and matches/lighters.

3. When you smoke, remove yourself from the room. Leave your work-place, the telephone, the television set and go to a different location, preferably the garage, the bathroom or out-of-doors.

4. Take a long drag on a cigarette and hold it in for 30 seconds. Notice the bad taste. Focus on the negative sensations.

After you quit:

5. Discard all cigarettes, ashtrays and lighters.

6. Use deep-breathing exercises to help you overcome the urge to smoke.

7. Avoid activities — such as drinking alcoholic beverages or coffee — that may tempt you to smoke.

8. Play with paper clips, rubber bands and other small objects to occupy your hands.

9. Chew sugarless gum.

10. Frequently sip water or juice.

11. Snack on low-calorie foods, such as raw vegetables, to ease the urge to smoke.

12. Avoid smoking after meals by brushing your teeth, using mouthwash or going for a walk.

13. When you have a "craving attack," time how long it lasts and try to wait it out by focusing on other activities, such as work or (non-cigarette) problem-solving that may need attention.

14. Exercise. Physical activity is a good substitute for smoking and will tide you over a "craving attack." Any sort of exercise will reduce the smoking urge and direct you toward something other than cigarettes. Exercise will also help keep your weight down and improve circulation. Regular physical activity, before or after work, for instance, will reduce nicotine craving and take up time that you might otherwise use for smoking.

Remember that the most successful stop-smoking programs use a variety and combination of methods. Don't limit yourself to any one technique. Remember also that cigarettes are an unequivocal waste of money and good health. Don't be suckered in by advertising that mistakenly portrays smokers as debonair, trim, gregarious and socially acceptable people in control of their lives. The reverse is true. Recent studies have suggested links between nicotine addiction, depression, poor self-image and lack of assertive skills. You don't want to be one of those folks, do you?

Rocket boosters work flawlessly

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The redesigned booster rockets that lifted Discovery into orbit with an awesome show of fire, smoke and power were being towed in the Atlantic Friday back to Cape Canaveral for a thorough inspection.

The rockets, the redesigned first cousins to the booster that destroyed space shuttle Challenger, appeared to work flawlessly Thursday when they vaulted American astronauts back into space again after 2½ years.

But some watching the launch got a scare when they thought they saw flames from the side of a booster. Engineers said what they saw was caused by a phenomenon of physics and did not mean the shuttle was in danger.

NASA engineers who directed an $800 million redesign and testing program to correct the flaws found after Challenger are eager to take the rocket hulls apart to see how well they worked.

The boosters burned for two minutes, four seconds Thursday, then separated from Discovery. They parachuted into the Atlantic and landed just eight miles from two recovery ships, the Liberty Star and the Freedom Star.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It might not be a smart move today to serve as peace-maker between two dissenting factions. There's a possibility you could catch it from both ends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Don't do anything today that could earn the scorn of companions — such as altering plans to placate your needs but not theirs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) "Let the majority rule today" should be your credo. Things that are for the good of the group will bring harmony; divisiveness will invite dissension.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If your attitude is negative today, tasks that you normally handle with relative ease could turn into real headaches. Don't make life tougher than it is.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try to be discriminating today regarding your associations. If you get involved with someone who has a bad reputation, it could reflect on you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) If your emotions become too dominant today, it could cause you to behave unattractively. Let your common sense and logic take precedence over feelings.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your first thoughts might not be your best today. Be careful that you do not jump to conclusions. Take time to assess critical situations from all angles.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In order to keep your financial affairs in good order today, prudent management will be required. Don't let your extravagant inclinations lead you astray.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) In order to get others to do your bidding today, you will first have to set the proper example. If you are too assertive or demanding, it will only create friction.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Sometimes it's wise to keep what you know to yourself — this could be one of those days. If you feel you must confide in someone, be sure it is a person you can trust.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Take into consideration the desires and needs of others today. If you attempt to manipulate people, you could be the one who will suffer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Someone who is nosy, and not necessarily working in your best interest, might try to pry confidential information from you today. Don't respond to questions without thinking.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) To be on the safe side, check things out for yourself today rather than rely on the recommendations of friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Do not be supportive of an outsider's position that diametrically opposes your mate's. Even if you disagree with your spouse, show accord in public.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Carefully size up the people you're involved with today. If you're wishful instead of logical, you may attribute qualities to them that they do not possess.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) In business matters today, small details should not be taken for granted. They could turn out to be a thorn in the lion's paw.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Harmony in your household could be disrupted today if you find more reasons to criticize than to praise. If you can't be tolerant, at least be quiet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If an associate goes out of the way to be helpful today, be sure to acknowledge the gesture, even if it is small.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) For the sake of your budget, you must continue to keep a tight reign on your finances today. Small extravagances could add up to a large total.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You are endowed with an awareness for details today. However, be careful it doesn't become an obsession.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, if you find yourself in the company of a sensitive friend, weigh every word with care. Caustic remarks could leave scars.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Seek companions who are as generous as yourself. You won't have respect for anyone who tries to lean on your credit cards.

If you're unhappy with your seating arrangement, call us.

A lot of people diet and exercise to improve their shape, only to find that one or two problem areas persist. But now there's a fast and effective way to correct that.

It's called liposuction.

Liposuction is an effective way of dealing with excessive deposits of fat that are concentrated around the hips, thighs, buttocks, abdomen, arms, or chin. And it's routinely performed at the St. Mary SurgiCenter by Lubbock's leading board certified plastic surgeons. Liposuction isn't a cure for obesity or a substitute for weight loss.

This surgical procedure is not only effective—it's also quick. Most operations are performed on an outpatient basis. Best of all, liposuction is permanent; even if you start to regain weight, the fat won't become concentrated in that particular area.

If you'd like to alter your figure in any way, liposuction might be right for you.

For more information, call the St. Mary SurgiCenter at (806) 793-8801. We can send you a brochure that will provide detailed information on liposuction. And, if you're interested in improving your shape through this procedure, we can arrange for you to have a consultation with a board certified plastic surgeon.

So call us today, or mail the coupon to the address below. And see what liposuction can do for you.

I'd like to know more about liposuction. Please send me a copy of your free brochure.

CONQUER OBESITY

595 overweight people treated by the Nutrition Dept. of Tulane U. easily lost 5 to 10 pounds every month. They changed their eating habits from heavy evening meals and snacks to a heavy morning meal, a modest lunch, and a light afternoon snack, with no change in the total daily calories. They also were not to sleep for at least 8½ hours after the last meal of the day. Apparently daily activity worked off the big breakfast, while sleeping on an empty stomach avoided the fat buildup.
