

Marchers aiming at regional event

The Black and Gold Snyder High School marching band will take the field at 3 p.m. Saturday in Wichita Falls for the regional marching contest.

Snyder will be among six Class AAAA bands competing at Memorial Stadium in Wichita Falls and will be the last of the six to march.

Two will be chosen to advance to the state marching finals slated Nov. 7 in Austin.

On Saturday, there will be eight regional contests throughout Texas similar to the one in Wichita Falls. From these events, 16 AAAA bands will qualify for the state finals.

The Wichita Falls AAAA competition will begin at 1:40 p.m. The order of performance for these bands will include Berger, Cleburne, Burkburnett, Dumas, Denton's The Colony and Snyder.

Band director Walter Reneau said the band will leave at 9 a.m. Saturday for Wichita Falls.

TDC halts furloughs

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Violent and habitual criminals will not be furloughed from the Texas Department of Corrections until officials can evaluate the controversial program, a committee that oversees the prison system has decided.

The three-member panel, headed by Texas Board of Corrections chairman Charles Terrell of Dallas, voted to temporarily ban furloughs for murderers, rapists, armed robbers and habitual drug dealers until a Nov. 14 meeting in Austin when the full nine-member board can discuss the matter.

The decision Thursday came amid Republican criticism of a similar furlough program in Massachusetts, the home state of Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis.

The TDC has furloughed about 4,600 inmates since January 1987. Fourteen escaped during their leave and seven more committed crimes on furlough, officials said.

Jim Lynaugh, director of the TDC, said he did not know how prisoners would react to the temporary halt of furloughs.

"The inmates that do go on furlough look forward to it. They are very protective of the program. They return simply because they want to go again," Lynaugh said.

"I don't know how many will continue to serve their time and get out as early as possible or how many, in essence, will say, 'Well, you are not going to give me an award. I'm going to be bad, beat on everybody I see.' My guess is probably not very many will act up," Lynaugh said.

Terrell said that because the Massachusetts furlough program took on such a high profile in the presidential campaign he decided to find out whether Texas had a similar program and was shocked that it did. He ordered an end to the weeklong program for murderers earlier this month.

Oinker ousted

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who keeps a 700-pound pig at her house faces up to a $200-a-day fine if her pet porker isn't moved to the country.

City officials say they'll enforce an ordinance against Victoria Herberta, who has kept pigs at her home since 1984.

"We can laugh about it and look at it as comical," says Robert Armstrong, head of the city's animal control office. "But we don't have to live next door to a pig."

OSHA fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Occupational Safety and Health Administration today fined John Morrell & Co. $4.33 million, the largest fine ever against a single employer, for what the agency said were hundreds of "willful safety and health violations" at the meat-packer's Sioux Falls, S.D., plant.

OSHA said Morrell knew as early as 1984 that working conditions at the plant were causing "serious and sometimes disabling cumulative trauma injuries" but did nothing to change those conditions.

Delta trial

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The pilot of Delta Flight 191 was flying illegally at the time his jetliner crashed at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport, a Federal Aviation Administration official says.

Audie W. Davis, an FAA medical certification officer, testified Thursday that the medical certification of Capt. Edward M. Connors was invalid because the pilot had failed to note prescription drugs and hospital stays on his application for certification.

The applications are submitted after pilots take required physical examinations at six-month intervals, he said.

The jetliner crashed while attempting to land in a thunderstorm in 1985, killing 137 people.

Guidelines okayed to offer incentives for new physicians

General guidelines for incentive offers expected to be made to recruit both an internal medicine specialist and a general surgeon here were approved Thursday by the Cogdell Memorial Hospital Board.

Simultaneously, income estimates that both specialties might be expected to generate "toward operating expenses" at Cogdell were quoted, figures which indicate income to expenses represent approximately a four-to-one ratio.

The board unanimously approved requests submitted by Administrator Tom Hochwalt for both positions.

For the internists position, he recommended a "net income guarantee" of between $65,000 and $85,000 for the first 12 months of practice and, for the surgeon, a similar guarantee of between $90,000 to $110,000.

Regarding the income the hospital might expect to realize from the addition of the two posts, he estimated both might individually contribute from $413,000 to $419,000 annually through admissions and other services at Cogdell.

As explained by Hochwalt, it is hoped the hospital would not actually be out any large expense through the income guarantee since it is expected the physicians could actually generate these amounts through their practice.

At any time the "net income" rather than the amount billed fell below this guarantee on a monthly basis, Cogdell would agree to pay the difference.

On months where this net income rose above the guaranteed amount, the physician would agree to pay back this sum toward any previous supplements from Cogdell.

Hochwalt noted it is hoped the physician would be able to exceed the guarantee within three months of opening a practice.

Board member Roy McQueen asked Chief of Staff Paul Thompson how the existing medical staff would view such an arrangement, and Thompson called the proposal "totally appropriate."

He noted also the medical staff's belief that such an arrangement would have "no net liability" to the hospital.

In addition to the income guarantee, the board approved 12 months of free office space plus "reasonable moving expenses" as incentives.

In addition, the doctor would be committed to repay any amounts received from Cogdell if they left their medical practice within 36 months "unless for valid reasons," it was noted.

Last Oct. 4, the board employed the Houston firm of Whitaker, Fellows and Associates for the two physician searches.

It was noted Thursday that to See SEARCH, page 11

HALLOWEEN AHEAD — Matthew Midkiff, John Gainer, Nathan Midkiff, Jensen Gainer and Michael Midkiff were all decked out in Halloween finery for all scheduled Saturday. These will include the Stanfield Halloween Carnival in the coliseum ag annex, where this group was photographed, the North Elementary Halloween Carnival and the Ira Halloween Carnival. Other holiday events are due here Monday also. (SDN Staff Photo)

Carnivals offer spooky weekend fun

Scurry County Halloween carnivals begin here Saturday with other Halloween-related events spilling over into Monday and the official All Hallows Eve.

The longest running of the Snyder-based events will be the seventh annual Stanfield Halloween Carnival, due Saturday in the ag annex of the Scurry County Coliseum from 6 until 9:30 p.m. Also on Saturday, a school Halloween Carnival is planned by the North Elementary Parent Council from 7 until 10 p.m. at the school campus. This will mark the second annual carnival at North.

Ira public schools will host its annual carnival Saturday also. It will be staged at Ira at the old gymnasium with booths to open at 6 p.m.

Saturday's first Halloween-related event, however, will be at 2:30 p.m. as the Snyder Nursing Center, where a costume contest for kids age 10 and under will be held.

Three winners will be chosen and prizes of $15 for first, $10 for second and $5 for third given. Treats will be given out to all participants.

Saturday will be only the start of Halloween activities, however.

On Monday, the Hermligh schools will hold its annual carnival from 6 until 8:30 p.m. at the high school building and gymnasium; and the American Legion Ladies Auxiliary in Snyder will offer a "safe Halloween" party at 1800 Ave. R. from 6:30 until 8:30 p.m. There will be no charge for admission and games and refreshments will be offered.

On Saturday night, however, Scurry County youngsters will have their choice of carnivals.

For the Stanfield event, new attractions added this year will include a basketball free-throw booth with members of the Western Texas College men and women basketball teams assisting.

In addition, sack races will be offered. See HALLOWEEN, page 11

The feller on Deep Creek says, "The greatest danger is not aiming too high and missing it, but aiming too low and hitting it."

Keeping tabs on our neighbors:

Gene Dow, in the Colorado City Record, told about observing a youngster on the playground. Dow figured the little guy is going to make a great politician when he grows up.

The youngster got into an argument with some boys on the playground. Not only was he outnumbered, but the opposition was twice his size. Some thought he lacked good judgement when he drew a line in the dirt and dared them to cross over it.

When they did, the little boy just smiled and said, "Now you're on my side."

Larry Crabtree, in the Vernon Daily Record, says this year's political campaigns can be easily summed up. "Government and politicians are confronted with the problem of how to get the people to pay taxes they can't afford for services they don't need or want."

O. G. Nieman, in the Hereford Brand, told about a top-level political gathering. It was in the private dining room of a posh hotel.

The group, all of the same political persuasion, needed to hash out some differences, and they didn't want any leaks—especially to the nose press. After lunch and the good ole boy routine, they started to get down to business when someone noticed a waitress off in a corner reading a magazine.

She was told it was a private meeting and she would have to leave. But she didn't budge.

"If you don't leave right now, I'm going to call the manager," said one of the political brass.

"That's when she put down her magazine. 'Look, I'm only here because I have to be.'"

"You have to be here?"

"Yep, I'm responsible for the silverware."

ER staff problem has temporary aid

A temporary arrangement designed to relieve the three local physicians who agree to be on call for the Cogdell Memorial Hospital emergency room has been reached, but the facility's chief of staff told the hospital board Thursday he believes the situation, unless changed, will be ultimately "more than we can do."

The number of physicians agreeing to be on ER call has been cut in half in recent months, going from six to three. The losses have occurred with the moves from Snyder of Drs. Harold Miller, Mark Pate and, most recently, Neil Gibson.

This leaves family practitioners

Drs. Paul Thompson, Bid Cooper and James Burleson staffing the ER on weekdays.

On a rotating basis, they are on call for a 24-hour period for patients arriving at the ER who do not have local family physicians. The majority of such cases, it has been noted, are indigent.

Dr. Stanley Allen is also on call for ER duty involving his specialty, bone surgery.

Thompson told the board Thursday that he and his fellow physicians have received an agreement from Drs. W.B. McSpadden and Robert Pierce to provide ER coverage for one night a week on a rotating basis.

Parolee sentenced

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A jury has set death by injection for a Texas prison parolee convicted in the abduction, sexual assault and strangulation death of former Clear Lake Shores City Council member Elizabeth "Libby" Jones.

Jurors took just 55 minutes Thursday to decide that Timothy Lane Gribble should die for the September 1987 death of Ms.

Jones.

Gribble, 25, showed no reaction when state District Judge I. Allan Lerner announced the jury's decision.

He was on parole for a 1983 rape conviction last year when he killed Jones, a 36-year-old computer specialist involved in the space shuttle program.

Local teachers attend confab on War on Drugs

Nine teachers from Snyder recently attended the Texans' War on Drugs Annual Adult Leadership Conference Oct. 20-22 in Austin. They are Mary Jimm Floyd, Brenda Goldsmith, Jo Ann Ham, Joan Morley, Margaret Presswood, Paige Shaw, Rebecca Thornton, Steve Tyler and Janet Wesson.

Over 200 concerned members of Texas communities, as well as individuals in the field of education, mental and physical health, government, business, and law enforcement came together to learn and share new drug use prevention strategies as well as hear representatives from the national arena.

Gov. Bill Clements addressed the conference during opening ceremonies, along with John C. Lawn, administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Headquartered in Austin, with regional offices throughout the state of Texas, Texans' War on Drugs works to raise public awareness of the harmful affects of drugs and to promote a drug-free lifestyle.

Some South Africans, newly returned from Hitler's Third Reich, played key roles in organizing secret organizations such as the Broederbond, which sought, while citing God's approval, to justify the white-supremacy core of Afrikaner mythology, says National Geographic.

Letters to editor...

To the editor:
I have attended all of the home games of the Snyder Tigers this year, and I would like to make some comments about our band. I sit at the games each time and listen to various ones around me making comments about the half-time show and the bands participating that night. These are not real bad things but just put downs of the bands. Not one time have they considered that there are parents of band kids sitting nearby, even as we sit there proudly with our buttons on our shirts with our children's pictures on them.

I realize that many people do not appreciate music and marching as much as others, but don't these kids deserve our respect and support for the good job they have done. My son was very disappointed with the crowd response at the last home game. He said Andrews responded more than the home crowd did. The band kids began working in August and have worked constantly since—every morning at school and some evenings also. They won a Division I in marching Saturday in Abilene and were picked to advance to regionals in Wichita Falls this Saturday. This is just another year of many that they have been awarded a Division I for their hard work and dedication.

Wake up, fans, let's show these young men and women that we appreciate a job well done whether it is sports or not. Let's give them a send-off to regionals Friday night that they will remember as they compete Saturday afternoon. Zelma Irons 2903 Ave. W Snyder, Tex. 79549

Although the South hand was minimum in high-card strength, the seven-card suit made it a good hand for an opening bid by anyone's standards. When South chose to freely rebid three hearts after East's two-spade overcall, it became easy for North to ask for aces and bid the slam.

For the defense, an opening diamond lead would have been the killer, but West cannot be faulted for leading his partner's suit. Weinstein won dummy's spade ace and quickly played the A-K of clubs, pitching a spade. Then he ruffed a club with his seven of hearts. He could now give up a diamond and then play ace of diamonds and ruff a diamond, eventually banking on a successful heart finesse, but he saw a much better play. He simply led the jack of hearts from his hand. If hearts split 2-1, he could give up a trick to the heart king and then get to dummy with the queen to ruff one more club. Then the lowly six of hearts in dummy would be an entry to run the clubs, on which he would get rid of his diamond losers. And so it was. West won the trump king, but that was the only trick for the defense.

Peter Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our daughter has crooked second toes. The doctor said it was because she was born breech. Now she's 4, the toes are getting worse and the doctor says nothing can be done. Is he correct?

DEAR READER: Whether your daughter's toe deformities are due to a congenital malformation or to the breech delivery, she can be helped. Ask your doctor to refer her to a pediatric orthopedic specialist who can advise you about corrective surgery.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Our mother, 89, has been diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease. She is convinced someone is stealing her clothes, money and food. She hides her food all over the house and got food poisoning after eating something she'd hidden. We kids are scattered all over the country and, in all honesty, two weeks of her is about all I can take. What are our options?

DEAR READER: In this era of an aging population, your concerns are not unique. Many families experience similar problems with elderly relatives who are losing the ability to care for themselves.

Alzheimer's disease and other similar conditions often affect a person's cognitive abilities: paranoia, confusion, belligerency, forgetfulness and loss of judgment are the hallmarks of a mental aberration called organic brain syndrome.

You have several options that you should explore in depth with your mother's physician.

First off, you need to know whether your mother's mental condition is truly permanent. Alzheimer's disease, a type of mental deterioration of an unknown cause, is untreatable. However, many similar ailments do respond to therapy. For instance, vitamin deficiency and hypothyroidism (underactive thyroid function) can cause dementia. So can certain drugs that are in common use in the elderly, including medicines for heart disease and high blood pressure.

Second, the doctor may be able to prescribe medication, such as tranquilizers, to reduce the severity of your mother's mental deterioration. With supervision and therapy, she may be able to continue to live alone.

Third, look into resources in her community. Visiting nurses, municipal social workers, mental health clinics and other agencies may be helpful. Remember that if your mother is a threat to herself — as she seems to be — you may have to obtain legal counsel to protect her and to appoint a conservator to look after her needs.

Finally, you should consider nursing-home placement. As in the previous options, your mother's doctor can be of real value. If your mother is too confused and disoriented to function independently even with home care, if she is unable or unwilling to keep track of her medicines and personal hygiene, if she cannot reasonably purchase and prepare nutritious meals, she will need institutionalization.

I believe that, in most communities, a concerted effort by family, clergy and medical professionals will usually help families with a demented relative. It's important to remember that you are not alone. Other families have the same problem; appropriate help is available through the family physician who can act as both a guide and a coordinator.

For more information, I am sending you my Health Reports "What You Should Know About Nursing Homes" and "Alzheimer's Disease." Other readers who would like copies of either should send $1 for each one with their name and address to P.O. Box 92369, Cleveland, OH 44101-3369. Be sure to mention the titles.

Ailing Stormie undergoes first tests

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Doctors continued a series of tests on Stormie Jones today to determine if her body is rejecting her transplanted liver, but hospital officials said a wide range of drugs can be used before another transplant is considered.

Stormie, 11, of White Settlement, Texas, a Fort Worth suburb, was listed in fair condition at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh after returning to the transplant center on a commercial jetliner Wednesday evening. She underwent the world's first heart-liver transplant in a 16-hour operation Feb. 14, 1984.

"We haven't said it's rejection," said hospital spokeswoman Sue Cardillo. "We're going to evaluate her totally. Most rejection episodes can be treated with medication."

No-Shows Have Stylists Tearing Out Their Hair

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1988 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I've never seen in your column. I am a hairdresser and today I was stood up again. People call and make appointments but never call to cancel, and the time I've booked for them is wasted unless I get a "walk-in." I'm especially mad right now because this lady was booked for a perm, which takes twice as long as a regular set, so I'm really out two appointments!

I am very accommodating. I've come in early and stayed late, and even come in on my day off for some clients. Some people are so inconsiderate, it's maddening. I've had women come in half an hour early while I'm eating my lunch, and they expect me to hurry up so they can get out early.

Sorry I got so carried away, Abby. I just want to know how other hairdressers handle no-shows. Some physicians have started charging patients for an office visit if they don't call and cancel 24 hours ahead of time. I would love to do something like that.

How do other hairdressers handle this problem?

GETTING ULCERS

DEAR GETTING: It all depends. The busy hairdressers who are always booked can afford to be independent. They can (and do) charge a "no-show," and I think they should. In fact, a "no-show" should insist on paying the hairdresser for the time wasted.

However, the average hairdresser lacks the courage to charge for the hole in his book — which also puts a hole in his pocket. It's not fair, and this is a plea for women to be a little more considerate. No-show? Pay the dough.

DEAR ABBY: Every time you advise someone to seek professional help, I cringe. I don't think you realize that even with "sliding fees," the cost is still out of reach for some people.

My daughter, who is 10 years old, desperately needs psychiatric treatment. Our insurance covers only 10 visits a year, and the psychiatrist said she needs at least two visits a week for three years! He offered me a special rate of $50 per session. Abby, I make $275 a week and I can't afford even one session a week.

When will insurance companies realize that mental illness is just as serious as physical illness? My daughter's problems are not going to go away if left untreated, but I am powerless to help her. Her father deserted us, so I am alone.

POOR WORKING MOM

DEAR MOM: A great tragedy in these enlightened times is that some still fail to recognize that emotional illness is just as important as physical illness. Please don't give up because you cannot afford the professional help your daughter needs. Contact your county or state mental health services. The United Way will make referrals for free or low-cost mental health care. There is low-cost counseling available through some local YWCAs. Treatment within your ability to pay is available. Good luck.

Foreman KO's Fulilangi, wants Tyson

MARSHALL, Texas (AP) -- Former heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman repeated his wish to fight current champion Mike Tyson after winning his 58th career match with a knockout of Tony Fulilangi.

"Heck, I'm champion of the world," Foreman said after Thursday night's second-round KO. "Right out there is a good indication of what I can do to Tyson."

Foreman sent Fulilangi reeling to the canvas at 2:26 of the second round.

The win was his 13th consecutive by a knockout since coming out of retirement in March 1987. The 40-year-old Foreman boosted his career record to 58-2 with 55 KOs.

Fulilangi's record dropped to 39-4-2.

Fulilangi, a 216-pound ring veteran from Tonga, was sent to the canvas three times in the second round by Foreman, who weighed a hefty 250 pounds.

But Foreman said after the fight that he is in the best shape of his career.

"I'm a better fighter now, than I have ever been in my life," Foreman said. "I could have lost weight, but I started thinking why would a lion lose weight to fight a house cat. If you're a bigger guy, you hit harder."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $1 million check written by Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, purportedly for the contract murders of singer Frank Sinatra and three publishers, was really just a practical joke, Flynt's lawyer says.
"The allegations are totally unfounded," Flynt's attorney, Alan Isaacman, said Thursday. "Back in November 1983 Larry Flynt had a dinner party and gave out, as a joke, million-dollar checks to about half a dozen people."
But Los Angeles County Sheriff Sherman Block said he was taking the matter seriously.
"I've been led to believe that Larry Flynt has a propensity to try to harm people he sees as his enemies, whether (over) business arrangements or whatever," Block said Wednesday.
No charges have been filed. Sheriff's Capt. Robert Grimm said an investigation is continuing.

Authorities allege Flynt wrote the check on Nov. 14, 1983 to Mitchell L. WerBell for the slaying of Sinatra, Playboy Publisher Hugh M. Hefner, Penthouse Publisher Robert Guccione, and former TV Guide Publisher and U.S. Ambassador Walter Annenberg.
"I think he was just a little crazy," said Guccione, who added he does take the threat seriously. "It was a very irrational act because neither Hefner nor I compete with his magazine ... And if you factor in Annenberg and Sinatra, it becomes even more irrational. For me, I just put it down to Flynt's obvious dislike for me."
Said Hefner: "When you're a celebrity and controversial, you wind up on one of those crazy lists with Reagan, Sinatra and the pope."
Sinatra's publicist, Susan Reynolds, said the entertainer had no comment.

Rescuers to give whales another chance to reach sea

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — Two whales slowly wending their way through arctic ice encountered new trouble as a channel cut by two Soviet icebreakers began to freeze over. Rescuers said they would make one last-ditch effort to free them.

As night fell Thursday in sub-zero temperatures, rescuers left the California gray whales in a breathing hole just 330 yards from the open sea, a distance that federal whale biologist David Withrow called "essentially one long dive."

Twice Wednesday, the giant mammals traveled more than 300 yards under the ice to reach new breathing holes, he said. But they appeared reluctant to traverse the distance Thursday.

Rescuers said they would make one final effort to free the whales by cutting a second pathway through the ice off the northern Alaska coast to open sea. After making two or three runs, the Soviet icebreaker Vladimir Arseniev and its companion ship, the Admiral Makarov, were to depart for their home port of Vladivostok.

The whales' condition appeared worse after they struggled through the slush and ice left in the icebreakers' wake Wednesday night and Thursday. Both bled from multiple but superficial cuts.

Rear Adm. Sigmund Petersen of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said the icebreaker likely would move to within 10 to 20 yards of the whales.

"This should free them," said Ron Morris, the rescue coordinator. "Hopefully the whales will see the opportunity to leave."

Petersen said the Soviet crews were "ready to go home." Their ships had been at sea for nearly six months and were diverted for the last three days to assist the whale-rescue effort.

Weather permitting, Morris said, he would fly out to look for the whales today. If they remained in difficulty, he said, another plan would have to be developed.

"We're here until those whales depart from the area," Morris said. But he said that if it was evident the whales had reached open water, then "that's all we're going to do ... the whales are on their own."

The whales were caught in the arctic ice for nearly three weeks by an early freeze, halting their annual migration to their winter home off Baja California. A third trapped whale disappeared last week and is presumed dead.

The mammals' plight triggered a massive rescue effort involving chain saw-wielding Eskimos and the Soviet icebreakers that captured worldwide attention. The effort has cost an estimated $1.3 million.

Rescuers thought that after the icebreakers broke a channel to open water Wednesday the whales would resume their migration. But the pair lingered and parts of the channel refroze.

The eventual fate of the creatures may never be known because scientists turned down the option of attaching radio transmitters to them. Some rescuers said they'd rather not know what happens to them.

The temperature hovered at minus 15 degrees Fahrenheit Thursday night, quickly refreezing escape channels cut by the Arseniev. The plunging temperatures also were beginning to put a glaze of ice on the open water to which rescuers were trying to lead the whales.

National Weather Service ice analyst Gary Hufford said the whales had shown an ability to break newly formed ice, so he remained optimistic they could survive if they got beyond the remnants of the pressure ridge crushed earlier in the week by the Soviet icebreakers.

When rescuers found the whales early Thursday, they were maintaining a small breathing hole about 1½ miles from where they were last seen Wednesday night.

Concerned with the whales' inability to negotiate the partially refrozen channel, Eskimo laborers cut more than three dozen new breathing holes in a path toward open water. The whales followed dutifully, and were resting in the last breathing hole when darkness fell.

The Eskimos were prevented from moving further because the ice was unstable as a result of the icebreakers' earlier efforts.

Aerostat being prepared for Marfa

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — U.S. Customs officials have long been frustrated with how easily drug smugglers can get into the United States, and they hope to turn the tables with the deployment in early December of giant radar balloons over Marfa, Texas, and Deming, N.M.

The helium-filled, silver balloons, called aerostats, will float about 2½ to three miles above the earth. Their radar will sweep the sweep the air and ground below them in an effort to detect drug smugglers' planes and land vehicles, U.S. Customs spokesman Charles Conroy said.

The Custom service's first aerostat was deployed about six months ago over Fort Huachuca, Ariz.
