'Charley's Aunt' Opens, Runs Through Saturday

Wednesday night, WTC Theatre Arts Department opened its season with "Charley's Aunt" by Brandon Thomas. The show will run three more days: Thursday, Oct. 25; Friday, Oct. 26; and Saturday, Oct. 27. Curtain time is 8:15 p.m.

The Victorian farce played before a large, appreciative audience. Because of the nature of the play, and especially the actors, a slightly different show will be presented each night. The players add something different each evening to keep the play fresh. Cast members are Joe Stubbs as Brassett, Mack Walker as Charley, Greg Nelson as Jack, and Jamie Boren as Lord Fancourt Babberly.

Retha Boyd characterizes the Brazilian lady, Donna Lucia, and Donna Cullar plays her niece, Ela Delahay. The cast of "Charley's Aunt" is backed by an extensive crew. Although space does not permit a detailed list of names, they are a vital and necessary part of the production.

Heads of crew include Clayton Black, technical director; costumes, Retha Boyd; lighting, Jay Burney; stage crew, Steve Sallee; make-up, Carol Posey; stage manager, Kenny Patrick; and sound, Linda Vincent.

Tickets will be on sale through Saturday, priced at $1 for students and $2 for adults.

"This is the first time we have offered photo packages for student purchase," said Mr. Mike McBride, yearbook sponsor. "We feel the packet fills several needs, besides supplying photos for the yearbook. If the plan is successful, we will continue to offer the service. But if student interest wanes, we discontinue it."

All-Campus Fair Set Nov. 8

Mrs. Mickey Baird, Director of Student Services, has announced that there will be an all campus fair November 8, in the Central Courtyard.

Each club or organization on campus is responsible for having one contest and one booth for the activities.

According to Mrs. Baird, "Each contest should be centered around a fun, athletic theme, while the booth is for use."

Points will be given to the finalists in each event, according to the rank that they finish. At the end of the day these points will be totaled and the club with the most total points will be the most olympic organization on campus. Three persons per club may enter each event, so that separate organizations may use their talent to the best advantage.

Opening festivities will begin Nov. 6 with the first annual "Mr. Olympic Legs" contest, sponsored by TSEA, at 9:30 a.m. in the Fine Arts Theater.

If you or your organization has any ideas or suggestions, contact Rick Medford, President of the Student Body, or an Inter-Club Council member.

Property Prankster Fall Planetarium Shows Set

..Recently something has been added on the WTC campus.

..Vandalism, a word used most often to describe juvenile delinquency, has become a minor problem on a campus virtually devoid of such childish action in its three-year history.

..Referring to the legal aspect of destruction of property, Dr. Duane Hood, Dean of Student Services, gave the following excerpt from the (soon to be published) Student Handbook:

..Destruction of Property:

..(a) Negligent Destruction—destruction, damage, or defacing of college personal property due to negligence. (minor offense—full restitution required)

..(b) Willful or Malicious Destruction—damage, defacing, removal of college or personal property by a student, student organization, or group of students with malicious or willful intent. (major offense: normal penalty—restitution plus severe disciplinary action)

..Writing on bath room walls would be a good example of mischievous vandalism. What examples I have seen on various partitions, however, have shown the ignorance and lack of poetic ability needed even to produce good graffiti!

..Then there are the various shrubs, bushes, and plants that have mysteriously moved from the spot in which they were placed.

..Some might consider this a mischievous act—but when the cost of planting the landscape is considered, one must realize that the rape of our campus beauty is a malicious act and an insult to the total student body.

..And, in accordance, the footprints, trash, and other not-so-mentionable objects found in the flower beds are not considered vandalism, but look back at the definition mentioned above. Now add the definition of "stupid" and "inconsiderate." Then ask yourself, "Am I guilty?" May your conscience be your guide.

..Has anyone seen the statue that was in the flower bed on the left as you enter the Student Center? The last time I saw it, the lady holding the vase lay in three pieces on the ground.

..Seems a shame that someone has no more pride than to do a childish stunt like that.

..I thought that college-age people were supposed to know better than the average juvenile delinquent. But please, do not run over me with your bicycle or motorcycle as you zoom around the sidewalks of the campus.

..Try to be more considerate of your fellow students, and your home-away-from home. We all live here.

..By the way! If you decide to take a few shots at the rabbits that feed on campus during the night, don't! That's a state offense!—

You may draw a moral from this story:

A small town near Coleman, Texas was called 'Satanta' after an Indian chief who was no longer hunting scalps. The name was sent to Washington to be registered with the Postmaster General. The handwriting was poor, and 'Santa Anna' was recorded.

The town is still known as 'Santa Anna.'

Santa Anna made a great contribution to American culture.

After his capture at San Jacinto, the Texicans, as they called themselves, noticed that he spent a great deal of time chewing something that he didn't swallow or spit out. In response to questioning, he gave the Gringos the formula for chewing gum.

Incidentally, the original name of Santa Ana, California (the Californians can't spell) was 'El Dulce Nombre de Jesus de los Temblores—The Sweet Name of Jesus of the Earthquakes!

Western Texas College's new planetarium is now open to the public for shows at 2:30 and 3:30 each Sunday afternoon.

Director of the planetarium is Mickey Schmidt, formerly of Lamar, Colorado, who plans and presents the programs there. Planetarium shows are changed every two months. The current show is entitled "Skies Over Snyder," and introduces visitors to the planetarium and gives them a view of the local skies with a commentary on the most prominent stars at this time.

Scheduled for the months of November and December is "Stars Over Bethlehem."

Tickets may be purchased before each show in the Learning Resource Center. Admission for planetarium shows is $1 for adults and 50c for children, with a maximum admission of $2 for families.

One may call or write Dr. James Tully, director of the LRC, for arrangement of special showings in the planetarium.

CLOTHING CAPER

'But I Don't Want Flairs, Morris'

BY BOB MIKE BURTON

Do you remember how indignant clothing manufacturers were a couple of years ago when the girls refused to give up their miniskirts? It seems that the magnates had learned to like to dictate to us, the public.

Even now, after the battle is over and the girls are wearing anything they want, the socialist pigs are dictating.

If you don't believe me, try to by "a solid color pair of pants, preferably dark, with straight legs and a watch pocket. Blue jeans are out because I insist on wearing work pants on dress occasions and 'levis' don't work out at dress functions."

"No such thing," insisted the salesman, when I went shopping recently.

"I'm wearing them," I returned.

"I'm wearing them," I returned.

"Hmmm...I haven't seen that style in five years."

"They've worn well."

"What make are they?"

"Yours."

The smile that lit his face was something to see; I would have paid cash money to see it.

However, smiles could not get what I wanted. I had better luck at the next place:

"This is it."

"Is that the only color you've got?" I asked.

"Yes, Sir."

"What do you call that color?"

"Flamon!"

"In my youth, that was fire engine red! Goodbye!"

"We have what you want," said the spokesman for the next store, "except for that watch pocket."

"Why?"

"Pocket watches weren't in style when these pants were made."

"Oh."

In the next joint, a character approached me and said:

"Pants! Pants! You need pants? Course you need pants! Otherwise you wouldn't be here, because that's what we're here for! You need pants, we got pants. Now name your pants!"

I did, then passed my hand before his face to see if he was still there.

He wasn't.

I pinched him. No dice. I slapped him, and he fell to the floor. He just lay there.

I took it that he had fainted from shock and that my pants were not around. I took a kick to make sure, then took my leave.

A salesgirl got me to sacrifice "straight legs".

Maybe it was her persuasive reasoning (or her green eyes) that got me to try on some "flairs," but nothing she could do could get me to buy the things:

"My waist is up here, not down here."

"That's the only style we have with your specifications."

"Godbye!"

"But, Sir! They are very sexy!"

"Particularly if I bend over."

"It's good material."

"Hmmm...good mess of new shirts—extra long..."

"There's less material so they're cheaper."

"I'll bet suspenders are extra."

"Everyone will see these pants and know that you are a man of distinctive taste." (She was desperate, otherwise she wouldn't have made a blunder like that!)

"Ma'am?"

"Sir?"

"Why are you trying to sell me these ungodly pants?"

The last place had only flairs. I tried on a pair that struck me as funny — the cuffs seemed large enough to fit Bob Clifton's (The Round Mound of Sound) middle.

The salesman saw me emerge from the dressing room with the legs flapping and popping.

"You around horses much?"

"No."

"Good. You'd spook them!"

I took a liking to this guy and tried on another pair. These were better and I sold out, even though they don't do much in the line of holding up tired socks.

As I left, I asked, "Has anyone in this industry thought of catering to the customer's image...?"

If a paper prints jokes, some readers say it is silly. Without humor, readers say the paper is too serious.

If you ask for stories from others, you are too lazy to write. If you do not ask for stories, you are fond of your own stuff.

If you print pictures, you waste good space. If you do not print pictures, the newspaper is dull.

If you do not print contributions, you do not appreciate the value of news and you spurn genius. If you print all contributions, some says the pages fill the junk.

If you print something a reader doesn't like, you can be charged with radicalism, fascism, liberalism, conservatism or any other kind of "ism" except Americanism.

Now, very likely, someone will say that his viewpoint was swiped from some other newspaper. It was.

Any WTC coed interested in forming a crew is asked to contact Mrs. Mickey Baird, director of student activities, or Pam Block, editor of the WESTERN TEXAN, as soon as possible. A twirling background is desirable.

Those selected will be dressed in a blue, green, and white uniform and featured at home basketball games. The twirlers will twirl to records and tapes.

Golden Success

This story comes to us from the Panhandle. Whether you believe it or not is for you to decide:

An eccentric oil baron recently decided to have indoor plumbing installed in his home.

After the plumbers and carpenters and electricians left, he invited friends over for a dedication ceremony. The proceedings went well until it was discovered that there hadn't been any wind that day and there was no water with which to operate the contraption.

However, the problem was solved by filling the tank with champagne.

The flush went on as scheduled.

MOVIE SCENE

'Romeo And Juliet' 'Mackintosh Man'

"ROMEO AND JULIET"

Returning to the Cinema Theatre for its second momentous showing is "Romeo and Juliet."

Shakespeare's classic romance comes to life in a modern young person's interpretation as the most durable love story ever written.

When first released, "Romeo and Juliet" was greeted with international praise and it made world-wide stars of its two performers, Olivia Hussey and Leonard Whiting. They were the youngest performers ever to play the star-crossed lovers professionally.

The goal of Director Franco Zeffirelli was to retain all the great scenes and speeches of Shakespeare's play while translating much of the "stage traffic" into fast-moving screen action.

Casting of such young stars was a daring experiment, but true to the essence of the story of vibrantly alive lovers destroyed in a senseless war of their elders.

Performances for "Romeo and Juliet" will be nightly at 7 o'clock with only one showing due to its length.

THE MACINTOSH MAN

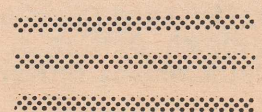

Coming soon to the Cinema will be "The Mackintosh Man," showing October 31-November 6.

"The Mackintosh Man," a Newman-Foreman production for Warner Brothers, is a story of high-level crime and international intrigue involving the theft of a fortune in diamonds and the escape from prison of a top political figure whose allegiance is a puzzle to more than one government.

Although better known to the cinema-going public as a world-famed actor, Paul Newman stars as Rearden, the jewel thief.

Other actors and actresses in the unique film are Dominique Sanda as Mrs. Smith, James Mason as Sir George Wheeler, Harry Andrews as MacIntosh, Ian Bannen as Slade, Michael Horden as Brown, and Nigel Patrick as Soames-Trevelyan. "The MacIntosh Man" is a daring and interesting film.
