Evaluation team due on campus for 3-day visit

By Candace Meares
Texan Staffer

The WTC campus will be visited beginning Wednesday, Sept. 22, by a review team from the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board (THECB).

As an entity, THECB reviews on a continuing basis the vocational instruction and student services areas affecting these students in Texas community colleges.

Traditionally, a six-member team visits each of Texas' community and technical colleges every five years as part of a regularly scheduled review.

While here, team members will be reviewing such local vocational programs as computerized business technology, criminal justice, golf and landscape technology, vocational nursing and welding.

In addition, the group will study programs which affect these areas to include the administration of federal programs which aid vocational students such as the Carl Perkins grant and federal Pell grants.

Campus publications, such as the college catalog, and the fiscal budgets related to vocational instruction will be reviewed also.

Planning for the THECB visit on the WTC campus has been carried out mainly by WTC Vice President Bettie McQueen and two WTC Deans, John Gibson, Dean of Vocational Instruction, and George Cormack, Dean of

Campus systems called Y2K ready

By Josh Burney
Texan Staffer

College officials say WTC is almost fully prepared for the problems possibly arising from the Millennium date glitch, also known as the "Y2K bug."

Computer programmer/analyst Sam Lujan, along with WTC comptroller Charles Meek, have coordinated the Y2K system update.

"The mainframe is ready," Lujan said last week.

To students this means they don't have to worry about losing transcript information or course credit records maintained by the college.

Accounting and billing information is also safe, Lujan said.

The Y2K bug is a computer glitch which pertains mainly to computer systems built in the 1960's and 1970's.

To contend with high memory costs, programmers commonly used a six digit field to describe the date so as to reduce data storage requirements.

If these systems are used after New Years' Eve 1999, the date Jan. 1, 2000 will be translated to a six digit field as "01-01-00", which the computer recognizes as the year 1900, setting the stage for a number of potentially large miscalculations.

Lujan and Meek began preparing for the Y2K system overhaul back in 1997.

Although the work isn't necessarily difficult, Lujan said that

Instructor's artistic interests began early

WTC's new ceramics instructor says he has been interested in art "since elementary," but didn't take his first ceramics class until high school.

Shane Christensen, 30, has moved to Snyder from Pennsylvania with his wife, Lisa.

She is working part-time for the college also, teaching aqua-aerobic classes and serving as the new supervisor of the WTC pool facility.

Christensen remembers, "I took my first class in ceramics in high school because my sister took it and said she liked it."

He attended high school at Westwood High School in Mesa, Ariz. until his junior year. After finishing high school in Utah, he went on a two-year mission to Korea with his church.

He attended Dixie College for two years before going to Southern Utah University, where he met his wife. After graduating in 1997, he moved to Pennsylvania to complete his graduate studies at Edinboro University. He finished in August.

Although he taught some during his graduate studies, this is his "first real job." When asked what made him choose WTC, he laughed, "They offered me a job."

He explained he had offers

SGA gains new advisor, new office, new officers

By Shana Parkerson
Texan Staffer

WTC's Student Government Association (SGA) is starting a new year with a new advisor, a new office, as well as new officers and members.

The new advisor, Debbie Duddleston, accepted the position as Director of Student Activities along with her current position of Director of College Relations on Aug. 20.

Duddleston's new responsibilities includes student activities, cheer leading sponsor, SGA advisor, college programming and entertainment and recruiting new students to the college.

"I don't want any student to say there is nothing to do on campus because all the opportunities will be available.

"I plan to keep the activities on the rise and possibly improve things," explained Duddleston.

Duddleston's position of Director of College Relations includes coordinating college advertising and public information releases for the college.

She also conducts on-campus recruiting visits.

"As the Director of College Relations I would like to see more high school visits to the campus because I feel that if we can get them here we can sell them the campus."

Duddleston shares an office with Gayla Leary, her assistant, who is over intermediate sports, and Kassie Upton, the college's traveling recruiter.

Carpet project near end

LRC 2nd floor gains makeover

By Lisa Moore
Texan Staffer

The new carpeting project in the WTC Learning Resource Center (LRC) is expected to be completed within the next two weeks, college officials say.

Work on recovering the second floor of the LRC—a project involving some 1,300 square ft.—began July 19 and was originally expected to be completed around the opening of school.

Work delays have held up the project, however, including a longer than expected wait for the original carpet to be delivered.

Some of the carpet also had to be removed after it was initially installed.

This carpet was deemed defective—it had a wavy or uneven surface—and it was ultimately ripped up and new carpet ordered.

Cost of the project is set at some $14,700.

From 10 to 12 workers have been involved with the effort.

Cindy Fritz, campus technician, has been working with the contractors during the project.

"Hopefully, in about a week we will be able to move the books back on to the shelves," she said last week.

Since work began, the library shelves, or "stacks," have been temporarily stored on the outdoor patio areas around the second floor of the LRC.

The books themselves have been stored in adjacent classrooms and in other storage areas at the facility.

"Once the stacks are back in place it will still take about five to six days to get the books in place," Mrs. Fritz said.

Work to replace the stacks had begun last Friday

She helped with the removal and relocation of the books this past summer.

The books were stored "in the same order they were on the shelves," she said.

The disruption on the second floor caused the relocation of several WTC classes, including all

The first-ever Internet-based course offered to students at WTC is Janet Halbert's 1302 English class.

Students get on-line during their free time and complete the day's assignments through e-mail, bulletin boards and a chatroom.

The 22 students enrolled in the class found out about the Internet linkup at their first class meeting.

B182, 7Dust albums give great sounds

Right off the bat I want to let you know what to expect from my column this semester. If you're looking for some reviews of Ricky Martin, Britney Spears, The Backstreet Boys, or another teen sensation, pop act, or one-hit wonder, look elsewhere. This is the place to find out about the latest and greatest metal, punk, industrial, alternative, and underground bands. I'm also going to try to throw in a couple of country albums as well.

There were a lot of great releases over the summer, and there are plenty more hot acts slated to release albums in the fall. With this in mind, I plan to review two albums per issue: one summer release and one new release. I'm also going to try to stay on top of the dates for the release of albums. Nine Inch Nails will release their (its) first studio album in five years tomorrow (September 21). This is a double CD and is entitled The Fragile. Garth Brooks performing as Chris Gaines will release The Greatest Hits of Chris Gaines on September 28. Other groups planning fall releases include Pantera, Korn, Rage Against the Machine, Creed, Foo Fighters, Smashing Pumpkins, 311, Marilyn Manson (a live album), and hopefully Tool, although we might have to wait for 2000 before we see that one.

Blink 182 - "Enema of the State" - Blink 182 is a pop-punk trio that has just recently become a major player in the punk scene. They burst onto the scene in 1997 with a major-label debut, Dude Ranch, and a couple of big time radio hits, "Dammit" and "Josie." Then we fast forward past the year-and-a-half or so of touring, and get to the beginning of this past summer. The boys of Blink started off the summer with a bang, recruiting a new drummer and releasing Enema of the State to almost instant rave reviews, and then touring all summer in support of that album on the Warped Tour, the summer festival a la punk rock. In addition to the rave reviews of the entire album, radio stations, along with MTV, picked up the first single, "What's My Age Again?" and began playing it at a very high rate. Yes, the past couple of years has definitely been a blur to this pop-punk group.

I emphasize the phrase pop-punk. This is not attitude-laden, middle fingers up, green mohawk punk rock that earned the genre the "anarchy" affiliation. Enema of the State is a collection of satirical, Generation X love songs set to some of the catchiest music I've heard in a long while.

The performances by all three members of Blink on this album are some of the tightest, most solid sounds I've encountered. It's amazing how the addition of just one member, in this case the drummer, can dramatically affect the overall sound of a band. Dude Ranch is definitely a good album, but it's not good all the way through. It seems to just have some diamonds in the rough. Enema is a total listening experience from start to finish.

Of course I've mentioned "What's My Age Again?" as the first single, but it's also one of the best cuts on the CD. The album starts off with an adrenaline rush cut, "Dumpweed," with its rabid drumbeats and equally as intoxicating guitar riffs. Other surefire keepers include "Don't Leave Me, Sevendust - "Home" - The sophomore curse is a strange concept that plagues most bands. This concept is basically the idea that when a debut album is very successful, the second (sophomore) album tends not to be as popular. Since the release of the debut disc from Sevendust (the album is self-titled), this band has done nothing but explode. The rap/metal revolution has thrown Sevendust into the spotlight as the "carriers of the torch," the ones to take heavy music into the next generation. Sevendust was certified double-platinum, the band served a headlining stint on the Ozzfest Tour, they played numerous other shows by themselves and even earned a slot on this past summer's Warped Tour (like the above Blink 182) in preparation for the release of Home. The question then was whether the sophomore curse would quarantine Sevendust.

One quick spin of Home and the answer is resoundingly clear. Sevendust trampled all over the sophomore curse and released one of the most thoroughly entertaining albums of the year. I waited for this album all summer, and I can honestly say it was absolutely worth it. Home is not only one of the heaviest albums that's come around in a while, but also one of the most satisfying. In fact, I think anyone would be hard pressed to find fault in this disc at all.

From the get go of this CD, Sevendust cuts right to the chase. The opening track, "Home," is a drudgingly slow rocker that gives the effect of having some two ton heavy thing set right on your head. Sevendust goes on to rip through twelve other extremely heavy, catchy, and all around good songs before the experience of Home is over. The best of these gems are "Rumble Fish" (thanks S.E. Hinton!), "Crumbled," "Headtrip," and the first single released to radio, "Denial." This album also features an absolutely mind-blowing performance from female singer Skin from Skunk Anansie. Finally, the production work is A+ on this album. My compliments to Toby Wright, whose credits also include Korn's Follow the Leader, and with the success Home is destined to experience, his name should be showing up a lot more frequently.

It seems that these days, a lot of bands blow up at the beginning of their careers and then fizzle out within a year or two. The really good bands are the ones that get better over time and build up a bigger and bigger fan base with each subsequent album and tour. These are the bands that really make waves and are then referred to someday as "classics." Remember the name Sevendust; it's definitely here to stay.

THE BLAIR WITCH PROJECT. Three student filmmakers entered the Maryland woods to shoot a documentary and were never heard from again — until their footage was found a year later. A grabbing concept and a deceptively simple idea. R. 4 stars. 1:27. — M.C.

BOWFINGER: One of Steve Martin's funniest projects in which he plays wannabe film director Bobby Bowfinger. Eddie Murphy has an even better part, or parts, as the Ramsey brothers: paranoid action movie star Kit and under-achiever Jiff. It's a charmingly screwy farce about moviemaking errors. PG-13. 3 stars. 1:37. — M.W.

ARLINGTON ROAD. Despite its first-rate cast (Jeff Bridges, Tim Robbins, Joan Cusack, Hope Davis) and snazzy handling, "Arlington Road" is a would-be classy, overcontrived topical thriller about bombplots and anti-government groups. R. 2-1/2 stars. 1:57. — M.W.

PTK Millennium project planned for November

By Kacy Henard
Texan Staffer

"The past is a prologue to the future" will be the theme of a day-long Millennium project on the WTC campus Nov. 3.

Phi Theta Kappa, headed by Carolyn Osborn, along with the WTC Faculty Association, and Student Government have proposed an idea called the Millennium Project.

The Millennium Project will be an all-day symposium. It will be comprised of lectures from faculty members and outside speakers regarding the Millennium.

Speakers will be addressing subjects such as economics, history, medicine and technology, and how these relate to the new Millennium, which will begin Jan. 1, 2000.

There will also be "fun activities" throughout the day, Mrs. Osborn said, such as dancing and movies.

She said the reason for this project is "Phi Theta Kappa is on a mission to promote scholarly pursuit on campus and WTC needs some recognition of the Millennium."

Phi Theta Kappa is taking the leadership role in the Millennium," she said.

She noted that the event is not yet completed and there will be further details in the near future.

Evaluation team will arrive for review visit Wednesday

The review board is slated to arrive this Wednesday around noon and is scheduled to eat lunch at the Scurry County Museum.

The rest of Wednesday the group will be in a board meeting reviewing prepared material. On Thursday the group will interview administrators and faculty members of the college.

The preliminary report from the visiting team will be written Friday morning and the group is expected to depart from the WTC campus around noon that day.

The team is made up of two THECB members and four "peer members" comprised of vocational faculty or administrators from other Texas educational institutions.

From THECB, Irma Berry is the team leader and Bill Dickson is in charge of the fiscal review.

Peer members include Leticia Rendon from Midland College, who is in charge of reviewing "achievement and contract training" at WTC as well as the Continuing Education programs.

Richard C. Jolly, also of Midland College, and Donna Price-Zuniga, from Lee College in Houston, will review WTC's technical programs and instructors.

Duane Durrett of Weatherford College will be examining WTC's student services areas.

Texan staff for '98-'99 returns five, adds five

As the fall semester begins, the staff for The Western Texan begins with five returning sophomores and five entering freshmen.

The newspaper is distributed six times each semester—every other Monday during the term. The first issue was Sept. 20 and, after today, subsequent issues are slated Oct. 4, Oct. 18, Nov. 1, Nov. 15 and Nov. 29.

The newspapers are distributed free of charge at the following areas: dormitory, Student Center, LRC, Fine Arts Building, and Buildings 7A, 7B, 2A, 2B, and 2C.

Returning sophomores include Ben Brown, a graduate of Snyder High School and the son of Donny and Judy Brown. For the Texan, Brown will be handling layout of page 2—which consists of movie and music reviews—and will be taking photographs this year.

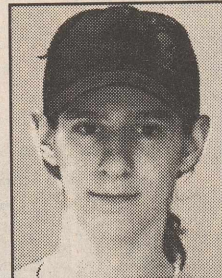

John Gutierrez Jr. is the son of Juan and Mae Gutierrez. He is a graduate from Snyder High School. He will be writing sports news and laying out the sports page each issue.

Chris Halbert is the son of Bill and Janet Halbert. He is a 1998 graduate of Snyder High School. For the second year, he will be writing music reviews for page 2.

Shana Parkerson is the daughter of Melisa Kurklin and the late Dwight Parkerson. She is a graduate of Snyder High School, where she was the assistant editor of her school paper. At WTC, she is active in the Student Government Association, serving as its parliamentarian this fall.

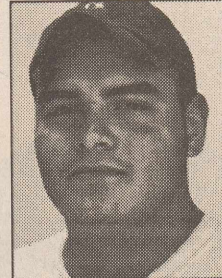

Kacy Henard is a sophomore at WTC and beginning her first year as a staff writer. She is a 1998 graduate of Tatum High School in Tatum, N.M. Her parents are Oscar and Carolyn Henard of Tatum. Kacy is active in Phi Theta Kappa and is a member of the WTC rodeo team.

introductory computer classes here, which were moved to the Workforce Development Center.

The college's GED program—through which individuals earn their high school equivalency diploma—was affected also since its offices and classrooms are located on the second floor.

A History 1302 class which was to be videotaped out of the newly completed WTC classroom/studio was moved also since the classroom area now has books stored in it.

The carpet which was replaced dates to the construction of the college itself and was said to be "20-plus" years old.

Work to move the library shelving and books was completed this summer by the summer work crew of students employed through the Student Services Division.

that this was an on-line English course, there was a lot of shock on the faces and jaws dropped to the floor," said Instructor Halbert, "but now, the students seem real excited about it."

The class is not completely Internet based. For example, students still have to attend class on test dates, but this on-line class serves as the first step towards what Mrs. Halbert believes is the future of education.

"It's been a terrible hassle, but it's been really fun," she said.

Halbert took a course at the Virtual College of Texas over the summer as her training to teach via the Internet.

She adds that she hopes to teach all of her future classes in this way.

Next semester she plans to offer technical writing and business communication, as well as English.

Though password protected, inquiring students may log on to Mrs. Halbert's 1302 English class at www.webct.com.

The Virtual College of Texas has also received a TIF grant to make instruction available for other community college instructors in Texas and faculty members at WTC have been given the opportunity to receive this training.

Dean of Instruction Jim Palmer has asked interested faculty members to contact him with up to four faculty members to receive the training.

The course will begin Oct. 1 and end Dec. 10.

Instructors learn how to set up a web site, create a course syllabus, assignments and tests, and to research and find links to other helpful sites on the Internet.

They learn also how to set up online communications for students, such as e-mail and chat rooms.

from several other schools, but he wanted to teach at a community college to start his teaching career. Community colleges provide a more well-rounded education and give students "the chance to make up their minds about what they want to do," he said.

After he traveled to Snyder for his job interview, he and his wife decided that this was where they wanted to be. "I'm happy to be here and I like the place," he said.

His goal while at WTC is to "educate people and have them enjoy it."

Christensen has received several honors as an artist. He was in a show two years ago sponsored by the National Council on Education for the Ceramic Arts; received an Honorable Mention award from Art of Pennsylvania for a tea pot; and participated in several student exhibitions in college.

He has also been invited to display pieces at the National Functional Ceramics Show next spring at Wooster, OH.

Students interested in Christensen's work can view it in the Fine Arts building where it is on display in the gallery.

Items on display include a ginger jar measuring more than 2 ft. in height and several small teapots that are "functional," he noted.

SGA officers sworn-in

The association's new office is located upstairs in the Student Center.

The office will be used for executive board and general meetings. The SGA meets every Wednesday at noon to organize and discuss upcoming events that benefit the students.

Preparation for Y2K said near end here

Continued From Page One the work has been "long and tedious" due to the sheer size of the project, which involved updating every system on campus.

He estimated it took a full two days just to update the mainframe.

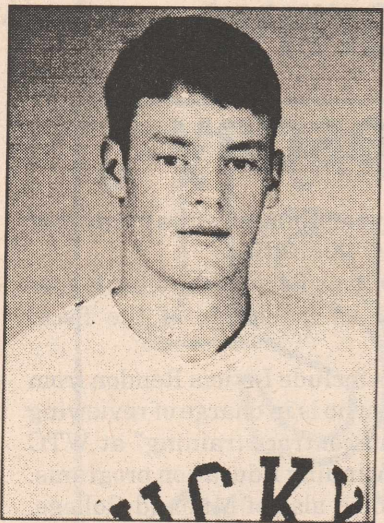

The work still to be completed is predominately "cosmetic," he said. Every two digit year field on every form and application must be changed to a four digit field.

As of now, final testing, which will mostly involve testing of in-house "custom" software dealing with registration, transcripts, and billing, is scheduled during the Christmas school break in December.

WTC Golf team places 3rd at Invitational

By John Gutierrez
Texan Staffer

The WTC golf team played at the Rocky Thompson Invitational Sept. 11-12 in Paris, Tx., finishing 3rd—one shot short for 2nd and five shots out of 1st.

Coach Milton Ham noted an unusual incident perhaps affected his team's play. He noted one of his players—Michael Hanson—was hit in the head with a golf ball on the 12th hole of his final round.

"We don't make excuses," he said, then noted that Hanson was 2 under par before being hit. After the injury to his forehead, he finished with 5 bogies which took him from 68 to 73, 3 over par.

The five shot difference would have tied the team for first.

The final scores for the game were Martin Gustafson, 75-72, Scott McLaughlan 72-75, Jason McGrath 77-67, Cory Mahaney 74-75, Michael Hanson 69-73. Michael Hanson made All-tourney Team. Total team score was 290-287 with a total of 577.

The Midland final score was 293-279 with a total of 572 to win. Lon Morris had a score of 289-287 with a final score of 576 to finish second.

The Western Texas College golf team has 16 players this year. Five of these are international players including Steven Fraser and Scott McLaughlan, both of Scotland; Martin Gustafson of Sweden; Michael Hansen of Denmark; and Jason McGrath, Canada.

Other members and their hometowns are: Clint Crow, Loop; Andy Hawkins, Lamesa; Brandon Hicks, Loop; James Higdon, San Angelo; Jeremy Jones, Lamesa; Rudy Gamboa, Big Spring; Cory Mahaney, Tulia; Brad Nutt, Bastrop; Regi Roberts, Coahoma; Chad Sauntry, Missouri City; and Kory Williams, Stanton.
