Texas Tech great Sheryl Swoopes joining Lady Raiders basketball staff

Lady Raider Basketball Great Sheryl Swoopes will join the program as the Director of Player Development, Head Coach Candi Whitaker announced Wednesday afternoon, July 5, 2017.

"I am thrilled to welcome Sheryl back to Texas Tech as our program's Director of Player Development," Whitaker said. "She brings a wealth of experience playing at the highest level and will be an outstanding resource for our student-athletes. Sheryl's passion for our program and for impacting young players will be extremely beneficial for our continued growth. She is a fantastic addition to our staff."

In her role, Swoopes will focus on creating and implementing a plan to help develop each student-athlete personally, academically and athletically. She will work closely with various departments within Texas Tech Athletics, including academic services, sports performance, and sports medicine and will assist the coaching staff in breaking down film and preparation of game strategy. In addition, Swoopes will assist the Red Raider Club, Marsha Sharp Center for Student Athletes and Kirby Hocutt in community outreach and serve as the color analyst for televised games.

"I couldn't be more excited about joining Texas Tech and the Lady Raider program. I am very grateful to Coach Whitaker for giving me this opportunity and I am looking forward to working with the players and staff," Swoopes said. "My role as Director of Player Development gives me an opportunity to do what I love and help the players develop both on and off the court."

Swoopes is the most decorated athlete in Texas Tech history. In just the last two years, she has been inducted into the Women's Basketball Hall of Fame and the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame.

With her induction into the Basketball Hall of Fame last year, Swoopes became the first Texas Tech basketball player – men's or women's – to achieve this honor.

Along with the National Championship crown, Swoopes guided the Lady Raiders to the Southwest Conference regular season and tournament championships and the national championship crown her senior season and was named the Naismith College Player of the Year and the WBCA Player of the Year. She averaged 28.1 points per game that year, which ranked second nationally.

As a Lady Raider, Swoopes set 30 different women's basketball records, including four Final Four records, three NCAA tournament records, four NCAA championship game records and eight Texas Tech school records, including the single-game school record for points (53), which still stands. Her No. 22 jersey was retired on Feb. 19, 1994.

In 2003, Swoopes was inducted into the Texas Tech Hall of Fame for her outstanding career with the Lady Raiders.

Swoopes was one of the first players to sign a WNBA contract. She was a three-time WNBA MVP, two-time scoring champion, four-time WNBA champion, three-time defensive player of the year and six-time all-star. FAMILY

Somewhere, some time ago, someone told me that "Family is everything." I also hear this when I watch one of my favorite soap operas. Family means everything to Victor Newman in this saga, The Young and Restless. It is a common statement throughout the story regardless to the circumstances and often leave me feeling like it is literally a figure of speech; a hyperbole.

Be it as it may, we are all a member of some kind of family. There are strong, loveable and sensible families. There are weak but stable families and there are dysfunctional families. The sad thing about American families today is the fact that there are too many that are definitely dysfunctional. It is from the effects of dysfunctional families that so many social problems arise in a society causing a community or neighborhood to have to garner the resources to combat disorder at the expense of good, respectful and law abiding citizens. Oh, how wonderful it would be if we could maintain enjoyment of our personal resources if we did not have to pay for the social disorder where we live.

We go to church or some worship place on Saturday, Sunday or whatever day our religious affiliation calls for and we get down on our knees and pray and sing hallelujahs to the God we serve and then we leave, go home and do the same thing again that we just prayed and worshiped about that we wanted to be better. We fail to take action with the support of our Savior, to make a difference. Sometimes prayer without action on our part does not get an answer.

We have to attempt to instill in our family members the guidelines for right and wrong. Praying about it alone may not have an effect. We have to talk about what needs to change and be positive about wrongdoings and the effects that they have on our families and society as a whole. When we do not explore the big pictures of keeping peace at home and in our society, our children especially fail to understand and that is one reason that America is building more jailhouses and prisons than public schools. Where there is unconditional love in a family, you can generally find a family at peace. The family members help each other. I am not saying that they do not have some misunderstandings, but they care enough about each other to reconcile their differences and keep the peace. They solve their problems and society does not have to use community resources to find the solutions for them. We MUST get 'in cinque' and have more love in our families and point the way to peaceful growth and understanding. Let love blossom and keep life wholesome.

Beyond the Rhetoric

by Harry C. Alford

When the Obama White House Attacked the NBCC - Part 3 (final)

In reflection of the Obama Administrations there appears to be a constant flow of deception, immorality, and plain out corruption. Oh, I guess you can add heartless too. We, the strongest and most economically viable nation in the history of mankind would tacitly sit on the "side lines" and tried to lead from behind. Russia, North Korea, and a plethora of terror groups had a field day during the Obama years. They saw the weakness in his reasoning and played it like a finely tuned piano

The contrast between now and then are startling. Once again, the United States is starting to be respected world-wide. Our military is returning to full strength and is not afraid to flex some "muscle" when needed. Wall St. is at an all-time high and our Fortune 100 corporations are starting to invest increasingly. New jobs are being created from those indicators. I thank God for getting through that period of "rot". The Obama legacy is cracking in many pieces.

I cannot understand why a White House administration tried to destroy the association that my wife and I founded, nursed, and grew to international prominence. Our intent and purpose were clear and noble: "The purpose of the Chamber shall be to teach capitalism and expand access to capitalization, technical support, procurement opportunities, effective networking, and sharing of information for Black owned businesses and other minority owned businesses as well as the African descendent community. The main vehicle of disseminating information concerning this purpose is through the Black chambers lo-

THIS N THAT while riding with relatives on last weekend in West and South Lubbock it came to mind as what could be done in EAST LUBBOCK to change our posture as we appear today..... Of course there are others who live on the EAST SIDE OF LUBBOCK who feel the same..... THIS N THAT really believes there are many EAST LUBBOCK RES-

Of course THIS N THAT doesn't have all the answersbut will be willing to do what it can to HELP DEVELOP EAST LUBBOCK in a very positive pos-

Of course EAST LUBBOCK has made many POSITIVE CONTRIBUTIONS the City of Lubbock but brings about a change and we need to sit down collective and see which way we need to travel collectively..... THIS N THAT would like to ask one question; ARE THERE THOSE WHO WANT TO SERVE IN A CAPACITY TO DO SOMETHING COLLECTIVELY FOR EAST LUBBOCK?If so please advise THIS N THAT if you want to be part of doing something collectively... cated throughout the United States and the entire Black Diaspora and via mass marketing. A strategic plan drives the activities. The Chamber is non-profit, nonpartisan and non-sectarian and abides by the rules set forth via IRS 501(c)3 classification". Why would anyone want to attack that?

Filing suit was the right thing. We found out who was behind it all and made them stop, for the most part. Why did they think they had to spend millions of dollars and face embarrassment from time to time? We were doing God's work and they were acting like the Devil. Of course, we were going to win.

The litigation process was friendlier than we expected. The law firm for the defendants were professional. They had to put pressure on their client to settle. We didn't think much of it at the time. However, the main lawyer for the opposition, who was a motorcycle enthusiast, was killed the following month after settlement by a car that pushed him off the road mysteriously. This reminded us of what we learned about the opposition at another time in the past.

Times are getting back to normal. Our growth, especially on the international theatre, is steadily growing. Columbia, Cuba, Ghana, Nigeria, Senegal, and other nations are on our "radar" for making big impact. Man, I love this mission! Our two sons now have their MBA's (from John Hopkins and Babson College) with concentrations in entrepreneurship. They are now giving us free consulting services and keeping us at the "Tip of the Spear" regarding proper trends and relativity.

We have established communication with personnel in the new White House and are meeting the new executives at the agency level as the Senate confirms them. Everyone is so pleasant! This is obviously an administration that believes in good business inclusive of small business.

At last, we can get back to doing what we do best - Empower and inspire Black owned businesses. That is our obsession and nothing is going to take that away from us. We look forward to returning to the White House Christmas activities.

We knew it wasn't going to be easy but why did a Black president have to be the biggest adversary. That is the way it went down. Frederick Douglas told us it would not be easy. I remember this famous quote of his:

"If there is no struggle, there is no progress. Those who profess to favor freedom, yet deprecate agitation, are men who want crops without plowing up the ground. They want rain without thunder and lightning. They want the ocean without the awful roar of its many waters. This struggle may be a moral one; or it may be a physical one; or it may be both moral and

KKK Supporter Called Out for Wearing Dreadlocks

By Sheryl Estrada

Social media users are abuzz about the irony of a photo of a Ku Klux Klan supporter at a rally in Charlottesville, Va., wearing dreadlocks — a hairstyle culturally associated with Black people, and a style for which Black people are often discriminated.

On Saturday, July 8, 2017, a few dozen members and supporters of the North Carolina-based Loyal White Knights of the KKK shouted "white power" at a rally to protest against a city council decision to remove a statue honoring Confederate General Robert E. Lee.

DeVanté Cunningham, a recent graduate from the University of Virginia, took the photo of a KKK supporter wearing dreadlocks and a shirt with several Klan symbols.

"Me and my friend were in total disbelief," Cunningham told BBC Trending. "We really couldn't believe we had just seen a Klansman with dreads. We're looking at the KKK here, and dreadlocks are basically a symbol of African culture. It was really weird to see."

The white supremacists at the protest brandished Confederate flags and signs with anti-Semitic messages, while hundreds of anti-KKK protesters waved signs denouncing racism. The groups were separated from crowds by a ring of fencing and a heavy police presence

Later police fired tear gas canisters when some protesters refused orders to disperse. Twenty-three people were arrested, but officials could not confirm their affiliations, according to Reuters.

Cunningham said he attended the rally to show his opposition to KKK supporters.

"I was angry that they were coming to a place that I have called home for the past six years," he told BBC Trending. "So I knew that whatever counter protest was going to be happening, I needed to be there."

The photo of the unidentified man went viral on Twitter.

Social media users were confused as to why a supporter of the Klan, identified as a hate group by the Southern Poverty Law Center, would choose a hairstyle with a connection to Black culture.

Many summed it up as cultural appropriation. The term is used to describe when a marginalized culture's creations are used, borrowed and imitated by a privileged culture, many times for profit, without a true understanding or respect for its history and traditions.

In 2015, at age 16, actress Amanda Stenberg, who was in the film "The Hunger Games," posted a video on YouTube called "Don't Cash Crop on My Cornrows," discussing Black natural hair in mainstream culture and explaining her thoughts on cultural appropriation.

Though a white male KKK supporter seemingly appears comfortable wearing dreadlocks while promoting racist ideals, many Black men and women are still questioned by society when choosing to wear the hairstyle.

In the 2015 book "Twisted: My Dreadlock Chronicles," author Bert Ashe chronicles his journey to wearing dreadlocks. Ashe, an associate professor at the University of Richmond, wavered for 20 years before he decided to grow out his hair.

Black women have been marginalized for attempting to wear dreadlocks in the workplace. For example, Chastity Jones received a job offer from Catastrophe Management Solutions (CMS), an insurance claims processing center, in 2010. When Jones refused to get rid of her dreadlocks, the job offer was rescinded.

The U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission filed a race discrimination lawsuit against CMS on behalf of Jones in 2013, stating, "Dreadlocks are a manner of wearing the hair that is physiologically and culturally associated with people of African descent."

Thought For The Week: 'Looking for someone who won't disappoint your look to Jesus.'

Why DeAngelo Williams refuses to play for the Cowboys

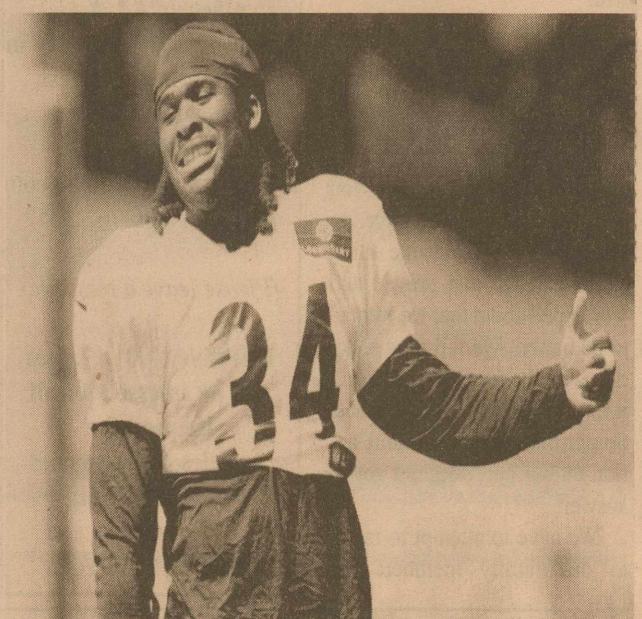

You've got to love a guy with principles.

DeAngelo Williams, a multi-dimensional, utilitarian running back who totaled 343 yards on 98 carries in nine games for Pittsburgh last year, is looking for a job. And while backs of his age and skill set don't necessarily have the pick of teams from which to play, they can't always afford to be choosy, either ... which makes his staunch refusal to play for four specific teams a bit fun to consider.

Speaking to ESPN's Adam Schefter, Williams ran down the list of reasons for why a team might get stricken from his play-for list. First up, Carolina, Williams' home for the first nine years of his career. Williams' time in Carolina ended ugly, and so he won't be going back.

"I had no problems with getting fired, but there are things that went on there that I didn't like—and I still don't like to this day," Williams said. "There's no point in me going back there. You're an ex for a reason, right? You don't go back to exes, and that's just where I'm at there."

Next, Cleveland. That's just simple numbers. "They don't have a history of winning," he said. "I'm not sure about all of the championships they won before the Super Bowl, but in my lifetime, I haven't seen them have a winning season." (Fact check: Cleveland went 10-7 in 2007, and we assume Williams is older than nine years old. But the point stands.)

DeAngelo Williams

With the Browns, it wasn't personal. But with Jacksonville, the next team on Williams' no-play list, it got personal in a hurry: "I can't think of anything positive about that organization outside of the fact that they have pools in the stadium."

But it's Williams' takedown of the Cowboys that's the most fun. A child of the '80s and a fan of the 49ers, Williams said he couldn't see himself wearing the Dallas star ... primarily because of the Dallas fans.

"The Cowboys, they win. They just don't ever show up during the playoffs," he said. "They always disappear in the playoffs. I've got a great depiction of the Cowboys' fan base. During the regular season last year, they were on Cloud Nine. You couldn't tell them anything because they were going to win the 'ship—that's all they said. Fans just got extremely super annoying. Then, the minute they lose, they either got cheated, somebody was hurt—the excuses start flowing. It's just amazing to me. That fan base just in general can't handle defeat."

Man, that's simply awesome. We hope Williams catches on somewhere if only to listen to the Dallas fans show their appreciation. And if not, he's always got wrestling to fall back on.

White Maryland Student Indicted in Black Army Officer's Murder

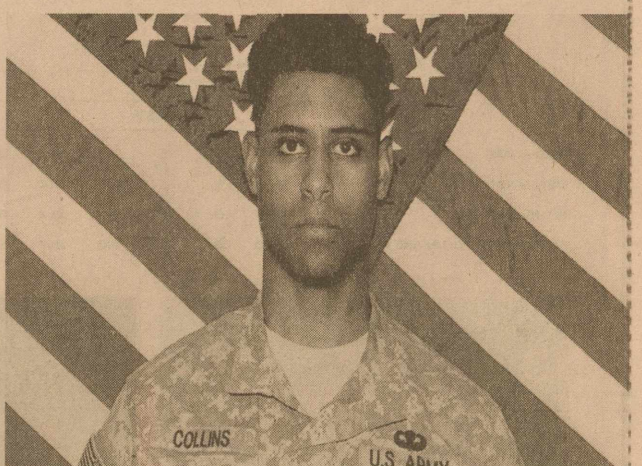

(Reuters) — A grand jury indicted a white former University of Maryland student for murder on Thursday in the stabbing death of a Black U.S. Army officer that is still being investigating as a possible hate crime, authorities said.

Sean Urbanski, 22, of Severna Park, Md., who was a member of a racist Facebook group, was indicted for common-law murder over the on-campus death of Lt. Richard Collins III in May, said John Erzen, a spokesman for the Prince George's County state's attorney.

"Right now, the investigation into the motive, including whether it was a hate crime, is still ongoing," Erzen said in a telephone interview.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was helping police analyze Urbanski's digital devices. "We expect that to conclude in Witnesses have told police that an intoxicated and incoherent Urbanski approached Collins and two friends on a campus sidewalk early on May 20.

He told Collins, who had been commissioned as a lieutenant a few days before, "Step left, step left if you know what's good for you."

When a puzzled Collins said, "No," Urbanski stabbed him in the chest. Collins, 23, died a few days before he was to graduate from Maryland's Bowie State University.

Police arrested Urbanski on the University of Maryland campus in a Washington suburb.

A police investigation showed that Urbanski was part of the Alt-Reich group on Facebook, where members post disparaging material about African Americans, Jews and others.

him. When he asks what agency she works for, she responds: "I'm the state attorney".

The officer immediately launches into an explanation for the stop, explaining that he ran the tags on her car and received no result.

Ms Ayala asked: "What was the tag run for?"

The officer then begins to stumble, saying: "Oh we run tags through all the time, whether it's a traffic light and that sort of stuff; That's how we figure out if cars are stolen and that sort of thing."

He added: "Also, the windows are really dark. I don't have a tint measure but that's another reason for the stop."

The State Attorney, visibly annoyed, asks for the officers' cards. Neither have them available, so they write their contact information on a piece of paper.

Orlando police department said that it "allows the running of tags for official business only, and this is done routinely on patrol".

"In regards to the video, which was released by the Orlando Police Department last month, the officers stated the tag did not come back as registered to any vehicle. As you can see in the video, the window tint was dark, and officers would not have been able to tell who, or how many people, were in the vehicle," a statement said.

No complaint has been filed over the stop, police said.

Ms Ayala, a career public defender, ran for state attorney on a platform of transparency and a promise to bridge gaps with communities of colour.

In a statement to The Independent, Ms Ayala said she has "violated no laws".

"The license plate, while confidential was and remains properly registered... The tint was in no way a violation of Florida law... Although the traffic stop appears to be consistent with Florida law," the statement said.

"My goal is to have a constructive and mutually respectful relationship between law enforcement and the community, Ms Ayala added. "I look forward to sitting down to have an open dialogue with the Chief of Orlando Police Department regarding how this incident impacts that goal".

Ms Ayala recently made headlines for refusing to pursue the death penalty in the murder trial of Markeith Loyd, who is accused of killing Orlando Police Lieutenant Debra Clayton and his pregnant ex-girlfriend, Sade Dixon.

Police Pulls Over Black Woman In Florida Who Was A State Attorney

Florida Governor Rick Scott removed her from the case for what he called her refusal to "fight for justice".

Ms Ayala has asked the state Supreme Court to block Mr Scott's decision.

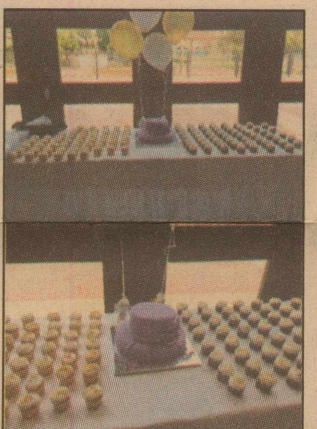

In April, the State Attorney's office reported she had received a noose in the mail, accompanied by a disturbing letter. The office said Ms Ayala frequently receives hate mail, often expressing racist sentiments.

Safety City Hosts Summer Nights Drive In

Gather up the kids and head over to Safety City on Friday, July 21, 2017 for Summer Nights Drive-In from 8:00 - 10:30 p.m. Guests are welcome to arrive early, bring their skates, bicycles, battery-powered cars, and big wheels and ride around Safety City. Our featured presentation is "Cars", and it will begin at dusk or approximately 8:45 p.m. Kids will be able to park "cars" in front of the screen to sit in just like a real drive-in movie or bring blankets and lawn chairs for more comfortable seating. This event is free and fun for the whole family.

Located inside Clapp Park on 46th Street and Avenue U, Safety City is a unique, miniature town where throughout the school year students learn hands-on the rules of pedestrian, bicycle and traffic safety. For more information, call Kayla Daniels at (806) 767-2712 or (806) 775-2670.

The 2015 Inc. 5000

Inc. Magazine ranks the Reagor-Dykes Auto Group 1,426 among top 5000 fastest growing privately held companies in America. The RDAG also ranks No. 1 among auto retailers with 291% growth from 2011 to 2014.

"I am really excited about this recognition from Inc. Magazine. The day we opened in 2003 we wanted to be the best place to do business and the best place to work in the car business. Our goal today is the same but we have more people on the team now than we did in 2003. I feel if we treat people better than everyone else growth is inevitable. This recognition is affirmation that we have no limits if we continue doing things the right way and working hard every day!" -- Bart Reagor
