NAACP President Derrick Johnson's Response to the Results of the 2018 Midterm Election

President and CEO of the NAACP Derrick Johnson issued the following statement regarding the results of the 2018 midterm election:

"This was a remarkable wave of grassroots activism that swept across the country - with women and people of color leading the way. From a U.S. House of Representatives that reflects the will of the people to the passage of Amendment 4 in Florida, which restored voting rights to convicted felons, this election was an overwhelming rebuke of Trump and Trumpism, and a show of support for candidates who look like America and campaigned on a bold, forwardlooking and inclusive vision.

But let's be clear, voter suppression played a huge role in the silencing of the political voices of the Black community and all people of color. As we saw in Georgia and Tennessee, Republicans engaged in a massive voter suppression strategy that has included further rolling back the Voting Rights Act.

Now we must hold all elected accountable as we fight to ensure that the democracy works for everyone. We must also prepare for the 2020 Census and the imminent threat that the 2020 Census will substantially undercount African-Americans and other people of color in communities throughout the United States. Such a dramatic undercount will especially dilute the votes of racial and ethnic minorities, deprive their communities of critical federal funds and undervalue their voices and interests in the political arena. We can't let this administration use yet another mechanism to devalue and stifle the voices of people of color. We will continue to resist attacks on our communities, will fight for fundamental structural changes to our political system to restore the balance of power back to the people, and we will propel a visionary movement in 2020. The NAACP will continue to energize voters to turn out and elect individuals that will stop the divisive policies and rhetoric that has loomed over this country for the past two years. We will not let this election distract or dissuade us.'

Founded in 1909, the NAACP is the nation's oldest and largest nonpartisan civil rights organization. Its members throughout the United States and the world are the premier advocates for civil rights in their communities. You can read more about the

This acceptance does not mean changes still won't happen for Dunbar, but will give more available options and may give more time for a decision to be made on the process for that change.

An Appreciation Reception To Thank Veterans

It was a very good afternoon for Veterans who were in attendance for the Reception for Veterans at the Mae Simmons Senior Citizens Center on Thursday afternoon, November 8, 2018, beginning at 2:00 p. m.

Speaking to the Veterans was Sheryl Hamilton who read the following statement: "We are here this afternoon to welcome and show appreciation to you this day. We want to thank and honor you for your bravery and commitment to keep us free and safe. Blessings and Honor."

Several Veterans spoke to those in attendance and told them how much they appreciated this reception. They wanted to let those know who were in attendance it meant a great deal to them.

All Veterans wanted to let those who prepared and sponsored know how important this event was and what it meant to each of them.

Also, several Veterans shared with those in attendance some of their experiences they will never

Pasadena Single Mom of 5 Passes Bar Exam After Graduating Law School

HOUSTON, TEXAS -"Never give up, do not give up." Ieshia Champs is a tireless inspiration to all Texas moms. Champs, a single mother to five children has achieved another milestone, passing the bar exam after graduating from law school with honors. Ieshia studied nonstop to achieve this latest top honor, and was elated over the

"God allowed me to pass the bar exam!! Hallelujah God! All the glory belongs to You!!! Today God has ordained me: Attorney Ieshia N. Champs!!!!"

When she graduated Thurgood Marshall School of Law from TSU earlier this year, Champs said it was her children who helped her make it happen.

"From foster care to a high school dropout to jurist doctorate. I cannot believe it. The hardest part has been trying to maintain grades, maintain the information and then maintain trying to be a mother to my 'children."

It has been a whirlwind of blessings since the photo was snapped and shared. Champs tells FOX 26 News the picture almost didn't happen.

"I didn't even want to participate in the photos, I was just that tired, I was like I wanted to sleep and my pastor at church said, 'No, you need to take them. It will give you the energy that you needed."

On top of the photo gaining national attention, Champs was thrust into the spotlight on the "Steve Harvey" show. Harvey gave her a life-changing graduation present -- a trip to Jamaica for her family and $10,000.

Battling the odds as a single mother to five children and going back to school, Champs thanks her family, her church and God for what she calls her greatest accomplishment. After receiving thousands of messages, she now serves as an inspiration for others to go back to school.

Midterm elections: Georgia voting machines fail in majority black neighbourhoods sparking voter suppression claims

Several voters in majority black neighbourhoods throughout Georgia complained of broken voting machines during Tuesday's midterms among other issues perceived to be an attempt at voter suppression - an issue which plagued the main race in the state between Democrat Stacey Abrams and Republican Brian Kemp.

Ms Abrams, who was vying to become the country's first African American female governor, refused to concede to her opponent and the state's current secretary of state, saying votes "remain to be counted" despite more than 99 per cent of precincts having reported their results.

Her campaign is waiting for absentee ballots, particularly in heavily Democratic counties.

Mr Kemp's government office is in charge of monitoring state elections, including his own race, and critics have cried foul over missing power cords for ballot scanning machines and waits of up to three hours to Georgia's secretary of state, in his official capacity, had previously closed 8 per cent of the state's polling places, citing fiscal concerns. Ms Abrams and others have said the efforts served to disenfranchise voters of colour.

In two instances rulings from federal judges were required. In one, approximately 3,600 new US citizens had asked for their ballots to be counted. The state's 159 separate county boards of elections use motor vehicle records to determine voter eligibility, but the records had not been updated with these voters' new citizenship status.

It resulted in their voter registrations initially being rejected. The judge ruled voters should be allowed to cast a ballot if they provide proof of their citizenship to a poll worker.

The second ruling said that more than 50,000 absentee ballots, filed by voters who are travelling or stationed abroad, should be counted after being initially rejected.

YOUTH AND THE CHURCH

This past weekend I attended a religious retreat at my church home. I always thought of a religious retreat as being away from home and experiencing relaxation and some solitude. This retreat was more of a learning experience rather than one of relaxation, solitude and soul searching. As old as I am, I am always up for new educational experiences, even though many of them bring us back to where we started.

One of the main focuses in this experience was concerned about why our young Black people are not attending church. My home church is Methodist so there are perhaps many reasons why the youth does not attend, coming from the connotation 'method.' Our youth often compare most modern day churches with the Baptist denomination as a large number of Black people attended some form of Baptist church and our children associate with Baptist youth. My daughter found more in the Baptist church when I would not transfer my membership because the pastor whom she had known and loved since birth was moved to another church which is Methodist tradition. Her friends were Baptist and she enjoyed their church more so I agreed for her to go since she was still worshiping in a church.

Youth today is more observant of the church and church members. One participant in our retreat stated that before we make changes to keep youth in the church, we need to know what they want first. I agreed with that totally and as a result, I decided to ask a young lady whom is on the roll at our church what it will take to get her back to church. The first thing she said was, "The old ways are not working for youth today." She stated that churches do not need a building fund as much as they need an education fund. She felt that there are students in the congregation who do not have the money to complete an application for college, let alone pay tuition and that the African American churches are helping students anymore like they used to do. She also said that she does not like it when they baptize babies during the church service. I told her that this is a part of the methods of the church. She said that the Baptist do not have baptism during service and especially 'bastard babies.' She felt that baptism of a baby should be a ritual between the parents and godparents, not the church as a whole. She felt that single mothers are being praised. She also felt that the older people of the church judge youth instead of trying to understand them. They act like they themselves do no wrong but the youth is never right. She said that she does not need the church for her eternal salvation as long as she acts and walks like Jesus would have her do. She said that the church does not listen to the youth, and they want to be heard. With these words, we old people need to get 'in cinque'

BLEXIT – Returning to our Roots?

We had it right the first time. After hundreds of years of brutal and inhumane slavery Blacks decided to rise up and fight for their freedom. It didn't take many; just a few who were pure at heart. By the mid-nineteenth century a leader arose. His name was Frederick Douglass. Born a slave he defied the system and whipped his white master's ass and walked off the plantation forever. This was not enough for the natural born leader. He helped create an abolitionist movement designed to rid our nation of enslaving African Americans.

It was through these efforts that a great movement was forming. Evolving from the abolitionist movement a new political party was formed after a major conference in Ripon, Wisconsin. Mr. Douglass was a major principal in this movement which would be called the Republican Party. The party grew with the abolishment of slavery being a large part of its platform. The resolve he had when he walked off that plantation never faded. In one of his most remarkable speeches he admonished any "half-steppers" and encouraged his members to stay strong:

"If there is no struggle, there is no progress. Those who profess to favor freedom, yet deprecate agitation, are men who want crops without plowing up the ground. They want rain without thunder and lightning. They want the ocean without the awful roar of its many waters. This struggle may be a moral one; or it may be a physical one; or it may be both moral and physical; but it must be a struggle. Power concedes nothing without a demand. It never did and never will...Men may not get all they pay for in this world; but they must certainly pay for all they get."

The successful ending of the Civil War was greatly aided by leaders such as Frederick Douglass, Abraham Lincoln and others of the same ilk. America was soon blessed with a worthy disciple of the Frederick Douglass mantra. It would not be long when the wisdom and teachings of Booker T. Washington would be known to all - especially southern Blacks. Education and entrepreneurship are the keys to Black success. He would stress that if we formed our own businesses and simply did business with each other, not only would Blacks survive; they would soon

Mr. Washington would become one of the greatest leaders and spokesperson for African Americans. Like Frederick Douglass, he too would be summoned by American presidents for advice. In 1900, he founded the National Negro Business League which was a "Chamber of Black Business owners" ten years before the U.S. Chamber of Commerce was formed.

Black conservatism and probusiness carried us through many tough times. From Abraham Lincoln to Theodore Roosevelt, Black conservatives prospered and were considered "the enemy" by Democratic racists such as President Woodrow Wilson. The Ku Klux Klan prospered during this era especially in the Deep South and Midwest.

There would soon be another tactic to check Black conservatism. A liberal movement was formed in upstate New York known as the Niagara Movement. They propped up a Negro spokesman to rival the teachings of Booker T. Washington. W.E.B. Dubois would start the NAACP to teach democratic principles to Blacks and oppose what Frederick Douglas and Booker T. Washington stood for.

To our detriment the Democratic Party would successfully woo the majority of Blacks during the Franklin Roosevelt administrations. Blacks left the principles such as entrepreneurship and conservatism and began to cling to the liberal, hedonistic ways that would cause us to leave our farms and businesses and move to urban centers up North and out West. They even formed a new group called the National Urban League which would promote the "Great Migration" that led to the formation of urban ghettos and governmental dependence throughout Black America.

We have been lost! Maybe that is about to turn around. Recently, a new movement was introduced called BLEXIT. The organizer, Candace Owens, says

Board of Trustees meeting synopsis -Thursday, October 25, 2018

At their meeting Thursday, October 25, 2018, the Lubbock ISD Board of Trustees recognized three students for their selection into the National Hispanic Recognition Program (NHRP) and 14 students who were named as National Merit Commended Scholars in the 2018 National Merit Scholarship Program. Also recognized were four Lubbock ISD staff members who recently received statewide awards from the Texas Classroom Teachers Association (TCTA). The board also recognized Lubbock ISD for its superior rating by the Financial Integrity Rating System of Texas (FIRST), in addition to adopting a new health insurance and prescription plan for employees. The board also named Beth Berridge as the new principal of Wheelock Elementary School.

The 2018 NHRP Hispanic Scholars are all from Lubbock High School: Maria Beusterien, David Caycedo and Cecelia Johnke. Paige Langford is a Na-Merit Commended Scholar from Monterey High School, and the other National Merit Commended Scholars are from Lubbock High School: Leyna Caglar, Sarah Cheatham, Cecelia Johnke, Anna Jones, Monona Khare, Titus Lie, Inde Panigrahi, Caleb Powell, St Sheng, Ashton Smith, Vivek

Rev. Edward Canady, Pastor Lubbock, Texas

The St. Matthew Baptist Church is located at 2020 East 14th Street, where the proud pastor is the Rev. Edward Canady, who has been preaching God's Word for 50 years!

Again, the members must say, What a wonderful time we had at the St. Matthew Baptist Church. Praise God for the Word!

Sunday morning, November 4, 2018, services begun at 10:10 a.m. with our pastor, Rev. Canady, and Sister Annie Menton presiding.

The subject of our Sunday School lesson was "Sibling Rivalry."The scripture text was Genesis 25:19-34.

Genesis 25:19-34 - "And these are the generations of Isaac, Abraham's son; Abraham begat Isaac.

"And Isaac was forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife, the daughter of Bethuel the Syrian of Padanaram, the sister to Laban the Syrian.

And Isaac entreated the Lord for his wife, because she was barren; and the Lord was entreated of him, and Rebekah his wife conceived.

And the children strugshe said, If it be so, why am I thus? And she went to inquire her. Two nations are in thy womb, and two manner of people shall be separated from thy bowels; and the one people shall be stronger than the other people; and the elder shall serve the younger."

The Sunday School lesson was taught by Rev. Michael Mentor who did a splendid job in his presentation. Closing remarks were made by Pastor Canady.

Pastor Canady and Rev.

Mentor entered the Church with the Choir singing "Because of Who You Are."

The Sunday morning devotion was conducted by Sister Menton and Sister Canady.

The morning sermon was delivered by Rev. Edward Canady. His dynamic sermon was entitled "Restore The Joy of Thy Salvation." His scripture text was Psalm 51:12.

Psalm 51:12 - "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation; and uphold me with thy free spirit."

The morning annoucements gled together within her; and were read by our First Lady, Sister Shirley Canady, who always does an outstanding job telling of upcoming events. She also

It is of significant importance if you are in attendance. You see, when we sit down and study together much is learned together.

Shall we look forward to seeing you next Wednesday?

You are invited to attend Bible Study on Wednesday evenings at 6:00 p. m.

Everyone is invited to attend. There is always a great deal of information taught to those who are in attendance.

Shall we expect to see you on Wednesday evenings?

Let us not forget those who are sick and shut-in at this report. Today it may not be you, but who knows who will be sick and shut-in next time.

"I don't understand how you vote for Amendment 4 but then don't vote for a governor to ensure the implementation of Amendment 4," said Michelle Sherfield, a Gillum supporter attending his election night party at the candidate's alma mater, Florida A&M University. "I can't rationalize how you do one but don't do the other.'

"It's a grand irony," said Marcia Owens, an environmental sciences professor who released her class early Tuesday to attend the Gillum party. "When they announced that Amendment 4 had passed, we said: 'If only we'd had those votes for this election."

Neil Volz, the political director for the Florida Rights Restoration Coalition, the primary group backing the amendment, said he was not surprised that people would back Amendment 4 as well as the state's GOP nominee for governor.

"This is a movement from people from all walks of life. Republicans, Democrats, independents and people who have no party. It's been that way since the beginning," he said. "It's no surprise at all to us. We knew that people who supported both governor candidates were going to be supporting Amendment 4."

DeSantis had opposed the proposal. "An appallingly high percentage of people who get out of prison as convicted felons re-offend," DeSantis said.

But it was not a major element of his campaign, and voters likely did not see a strong link between the two.

In Pasco County north of Tampa Bay, for example, De-Santis won 57 percent of the vote, while Amendment 4 won 61 percent approval. In all, in only six of the state's 67 counties did the proposal receive less than 50 percent of the vote. It's not clear voters would have paid DeSantis much mind even if he had made opposition to the amendment a major issue. In 2002, Florida voters approved a constitutional amendment requiring the reduction of classroom sizes in public schools, even though then-Gov. Jeb Bush was energetically campaigning against it. "It's big for him, man," defensive lineman Tyrone Crawford said. "I'm happy for Dez. I got to hook up with him a couple of weeks back, and I saw the way he looked and he was. He looks like an animal right now. I'm just hoping for the best for him. He's a good friend of mine."

The Cowboys released Bryant on April 13 to save $8 million against the salary cap. He had remained unemployed until this week, though Elliott suspects "it's taken this long on his end, not because teams haven't wanted him."

The Browns and Ravens offered Bryant contracts. He turned them down.

Now, as an added bonus in joining the Saints, Bryant gets a chance to face his old team. The Cowboys host the Saints on Nov. 29.

Dez Bryant had many reasons to sign with the New Orleans Saints. But it also seems like a good bet he checked the Saints' schedule, too.

in April. He said being cut by the Dallas Cowboys was personal. He wanted to land in the NFC East, to play Dallas twice a year.

No NFC East team signed Bryant, so he settled for the next best thing. New Orleans plays at Dallas on Nov. 29. That's a Thursday night game.

A motivated Bryant, returning to Dallas with one of the best teams in the NFL, on prime time? Yes, please.

Jason Garrett was asked about having to face Bryant. The Cowboys did Bryant no favors by waiting weeks into free agency before they cut him. The market was pretty dry at that point for Bryant and it took until Wednesday for him to sign with the Saints.

"You'll have to ask him," Garrett said about Bryant being motivated to play the Cowboys, via David Helman of the team's site. "I love Dez, wish him nothing but the best."

Snarky Cowboys fans might wonder if Garrett, on the hot seat coach against Bryant and the Saints by Week 13.

ALL ARE WELCOME: COME AND WORSHIP WITH US!

A Patient-Centered Approach to Medicare Drug Reform by Dr. A. Mark Fendrick

Article Submitted by: Emily Troisi, Keybridge Communications

The Trump administration just proposed sweeping changes to Medicare to curb program spending.

The suggested reforms might accomplish that goal in the short term. But as Dr. A. Mark Fendrick, the director of the Center for Value-Based Insurance Design at the University of Michigan, argues below, the reforms would severely restrict seniors' access to lifesaving medications today -- and stifle research into tomorrow's cutting-edge treatments.

The Trump administration has proposed sweeping changes to Medicare to curb taxpayer spending on prescription drugs. These include price setting, revamping how doctors and hospitals acquire drugs, and changing how physicians are reimbursed for medicines.

The changes apply to "Part B," the component of Medicare that covers medicines administered in a health-care facility, like gene therapies and advanced treatments for cancer. Today, physicians purchase these medications directly.

These changes may reduce short-term expenditures, but will restrict access to lifesaving medications.

The Trump administration's proposal, which is being pitched as a five-year experiment in half the country, has three key components.

First, it would set prices on Part B drugs. Rather than the current program, which sets Part B reimbursements on the average U.S. sales price of a drug, the government would index payments to a drug's average price in 16 foreign markets with socialized healthcare systems.

Second, it would revamp the process for acquiring medicines by injecting a middleman between physicians and manufacturers. These vendors would purchase Part B drugs from manufacturers, bill Medicare and distribute them to doctors and hospitals. The administration believes middlemen will negotiate better discounts from manufacturers.

Finally, the proposal would alter the reimbursement formula for doctors. Rather than receiving a 4.3 percent markup, which is designed to cover handling, storage, and administration, doctors would receive a flat fee for each dose administered. Critics of the current formula suggest that doctors are incentivized to prescribe expensive drugs in order to maximize their payout.

The international pricing index makes little sense. Most of those 16 countries keep prices artificially low by restricting patients' access to care.

Nearly 90 percent of new treatments introduced worldwide between 2011 and 2017 were available to Americans. In Japan and Canada, fewer than 50 percent of new treatments were available; in Greece, only 14 percent were.

History suggests that inserting more middlemen into the drug pricing equation won't curb costs. The U.S. government tried this approach from 2006 to 2008, when Medicare contracted with vendors to buy Part B medications. The government did not save money, and the program was axed amid disputes over contracts and low participation.

What's more, a flat fee could force some doctors to close their doors. Eighty percent of oncologists already say that reimbursement cuts impact their ability to sustain their practices.

A clinically driven approach that ensures seniors have access to high-value medicines and eliminates the use of care that does not improve health could save billions and improve the health of seniors.

Take "value-based insurance design," or V-BID, a private-sector driven strategy with bipartisan political support. In V-BID programs, patient cost-sharing for certain highly effective drugs and procedures are eliminated or reduced to encourage their use - even if those services that are initially expensive.

Slowing the growth of Medicare spending is imperative. Before we implement policies that deny seniors access to effective treatments, a focus on the identification and elimination of no-value care should be a priority.

Dr. A. Mark Fendrick is the director of the Center for Value-Based Insurance Design at the University of Michigan, where he is also a professor of internal medicine in the School of Medicine and a professor of health management and policy in the School of Public Health.

MEMBERS OF THE TEXAS SOUTH PLAINS HONOR FLIGHT READ TO ELEMENTARY SCHOOL STUDENTS

A Huge Thank You to the Texas Tech Education Department/ELPN for partnering with the members of the Texas South Plains Honor Flight....a GRAND time reading to wonderful young people at Hodges Elementary School.

We were greeted by the members of the Student Council, who were great guides for our time on campus. I shared the classroom with my dad, Honorable T.J. Patterson, Sr..... Vietnam Veteran.

Thanks Ms. Ruiz for sharing your wonderful class with us. "Blue Sky...White Stars" by Sarvinder Naberhaus, illustrated by Kadir Nelson.
