Bringing arbitration into bargain has bosses bothered about bill

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

If state Senator Oscar Mauzy (D-Dallas) has his way, most public employees in Texas will have the right to collective bargaining — much to the chagrin of public employers.

It's not collective bargaining per se that bothers them. It's the provision in Mauzy's bill that calls for compulsory and binding arbitration in the event of negotiation deadlocks.

Strikes and lockouts would be expressly prohibited, with arbitration serving as the ultimate method of resolving differences that couldn't be worked out at lower levels of negotiation.

Basically, the bill, which has little support, would allow public employees — except elected and appointed officials — to form organizations whose representatives would be empowered to intercede on behalf of their members when it comes to "questions of wages, hours, and other conditions of employment."

IN DEFINING PUBLIC employees, Mauzy's bill says they include everything from the state itself to "(any) municipality, county or other political subdivision of the state of Texas...."

A special three-member board — complete with subpoena power — would be appointed by the governor (with the advice and consent of the Senate) to oversee the establishment of employee organizations and "provide mediation and conciliation, fact-finding, or arbitration services...." The board would be composed of a representative chosen by employers, one selected by an employee organization and one representing the public. Failure to comply with an order from the board could result in contempt of court action.

Negotiated agreements between employers and employee organizations must be reduced to writing, and "every negotiated agreement must contain a grievance procedure that includes arbitration procedures and a provision guaranteeing due process for a person who files a grievance" — something employees in the private sector generally aren't entitled to.

EMPLOYERS WOULD be obligated to deduct organization dues from employee checks and remit them to

Holy Land playing host to faithful

JERUSALEM (AP) — Christian faithful celebrate Christ's resurrection at the cave revered as his tomb Easter Sunday, capping a colorful Holy Week of devotions for the tens of thousands who made a pilgrimage to the Holy Land.

The Latin Patriarch of Jerusalem, Monsignor Giacomo Giuseppe Beltritti, celebrates a Pontifical High Mass at sunrise after a procession from the patriarchate to the centuries-old Church of the Holy Sepulchre in the heart of Jerusalem's Old City.

The Holy Week pilgrimage, beginning last week with a Palm Sunday procession from the Mount of Olives to the Old City gates, has been a rich religious awakening for some.

"I feel I can die now. I've seen everything. I'm satisfied," said Virginia Barger of New York City, one of an estimated 20,000 pilgrims who walked the Via Dolorosa, the Way of the Cross, on Good Friday.

"I did nothing but shed tears as long as I've been here — just picturing what our Lord went through, what he suffered and how they crucified him with all the blood running down his face from the thorns," Mrs. Barger said in a quavering voice.

Protestants, who cannot conduct their own services in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre because of a 100-year-old arrangement sharing the massive structure among the Latin and Eastern Orthodox churches, celebrate Easter Sunday outside the walls of the Old City at the Garden Tomb.

Some Protestants believe the skull-shaped hill under the Garden Tomb is the original Calvary where Christ was nailed to the cross. But most scholars accept as authentic the traditional site of Golgotha under the roof of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, identified in 325 A.D. by the Roman Empress Helena.

Eastern churches celebrate Palm Sunday as the Catholic church concludes its Holy Week, and Jews mark the first day of the eight-day Passover holiday remembering the Exodus from Egypt by the ancient Israelites and symbolizing Jewish freedom.

In the Galilee city of Nazareth, where Jesus grew up, nearly 20,000 Christian Arabs say they are muting their festivities this year in solidarity with the mourning Arabs of a neighboring village, Kfar Yassif.

Two village Arabs were killed last week in a feud with another village resulting from a squabble at a soccer match. Nazareth Arabs said Israeli police could have prevented the violence.

A dawn candlelight mass, the Blessing of the Fire, at the marble mausoleum covering Christ's tomb attracted about 500 pilgrims Saturday. The ceremony celebrates the light Jesus shed on the world.

An unusual pilgrimage by a lay ministry from Brea, Calif., drew a wide following on Good Friday. The group brought their semiprofessional Passion play to the Via Dolorosa, and claimed to have seen a miracle.

Moments before the group walked up the Street of Sorrows re-enacting Christ's Passion, an Arab boy with a badly cut hand left a trail of blood drops on the narrow footpath. Discovering the wet blood, the pilgrims cried tearfully that it was Christ's blood sent from heaven, whether or not it had come from a human hand.

"It was a miracle," said Tim Ballard, 19, who portrayed Jesus dressed only in a sheet around his waist and who shuddered with tears under his cross when he saw the fresh blood.

Let's keep the faith

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — This third Sunday in April is a time for rejoicing, for it is one of those rare occasions when Easter and Passover are celebrated the same day.

In one of history's most glorious and holiest days, both Christian and Jew participate in the spirit of renewal of faith in ourselves and our futures. Celebrants of Easter and Passover memorialize two of the greatest victories in the chronicles of mankind.

Jews engaging in the rites of Passover are inspired by their ancestors' exodus from Egypt, a triumph of freedom over bondage. On this Easter Day, Christians bow in Resurrection prayers, celebrating the triumph of life over death.

Those of different faiths are as one today in our devotion to freedom of worship, our loyalty to popular government, and in our insistence on continuing inquiry into the mysteries of the world of science.

The remarkable recovery of President Reagan from the assassination attempt and that of his wounded colleagues are an inspiration to us all. The capable performances of all members of the president's staff in the aftermath of the shooting surely marked one of the American government's finest hours.

The successful space trip by John W. Young and Robert L. Crippen should teach us all a lesson in the art of perseverance. The planning that went into that project, and the dramatic results, were a great boost for America's morale and bodes well for our future.

No one could have watched the good ship Columbia and its epochal flight and brake to a stop at Edwards

Air Force Base in California without feeling a moment of exhilaration, and a renewed dedication to the pioneering spirit that has made America what it is.

There is no more appropriate time to nourish this spirit, and renew it, than on a day like this, when we salute the values and qualities we hold so dear. Faith in ourselves and our religions is what built this country of ours, and will strengthen its character in the years to come, if we keep the faith.

Washington D.C.: Scrappy city of startling contrasts

EDITOR'S NOTE: Reporter-Telegram political writer Lana Cunningham recently spent several days in Washington visiting government officials and attending a briefing on the President's economic package. This article concerns the mood of the city and its attitude toward the proposed budget.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

WASHINGTON — The sun glances off the heavy granite walls of the Russell Senate Office Building, casting rays of warmth over the few straggling employees running to grab their transportation home.

As the sun drops lower, the walls change to a golden glow and then deep pink. Inside the Russell Building — with tall mahogany-colored doors standing in regimented rows like soldiers guarding each senator's headquarters — the multi-colored halls grow quiet. The stillness is broken only by the security guards making their rounds and calling out numbers if the office is occupied or empty.

A building which hours earlier was the scene of loud voices behind those closed doors and scurrying feet echoing down the hallways had, with the end of the working day, fallen silent.

Like one thin slice out of a whole pie, the Russell Building stands as an illustration for the rest of Washington, D.C. It is a city of contrasts, of opposites that sometimes appear to mesh but never do.

own ideology that flows in countering directions.

Washington is a city of monuments — whether it be to gaze upon or work in — each built to last into eternity. And while the beauty of the architecture is not to be denied, those structures reflect a feeling of awe, power, strength.

The U.S. Capitol is the center of Washington, of the nation, of the political battles whose outcomes determine the fate of each individual.

The White House, too, falls within the category of opposites. From the outside, it has a gentle aspect to it with the landscaping surrounding The Home of The President. But on the inside, there lies the strength of the country and the iron-fisted appointees who surround him and carry out his will.

Not far from the granite and marble monoliths is the countryside surrounding D.C., as different a picture from downtown as black and white. The rolling hills soften the landscape with the spires of giant trees gently massaging the sky.

The cherry blossoms were perfect this year, Washingtonians say. They was just the first in a long line of colors and blooms which begin to flood the countryside every spring.

Just like numerous other parks, the Lady Bird Johnson Park winds along the Potomac while tourists and residents alike dawdle in the warm spring sun. The setting is quiet, peaceful.

BACK DOWNTOWN, cars, taxis and buses roar down the thoroughfares, honking at others who get in their way. People rush from one building to another, barely glancing at those who pass by. And under the ground, the Metro subway rumbles swiftly from stop to stop, squealing brakes announcing its arrival in the cavernous openings.

For a city that decides all policy, all rules, to govern the 225-plus million people in this country, it is the most isolated metropolis in the nation. It knows not what the little man does.

But the people who work there seem to love it. The Capitol-area guards in each building joke with tourists and workers. The taxi drivers chat about the beauty of Washington. The bus drivers cheerily call out "good morning," and "have a nice day," to the riders.

The enlivening atmosphere also means this city loves nothing better than a good fight. They scrutinize each round, each detail, as a battle builds on the Hill. The fight can be between senators and congressmen, between the Hill and the White House or among various in-house factions.

In past years, the battles had centered on bills which would affect a segment of the population, such as the Windfall Profits Tax and its bite out of the oil industry.

BUT THIS YEAR, the fight centers on legislation that will affect every American — President Reagan's "economic recovery program." Designed to hurt all and help all, the program first brought much support from the Republicans and conservative Democrats and many doubts from others.

In past weeks, those growing concerns of "others" have been spreading and each day the battle scene changes. Some days, Reagan is ahead by gaining two steps in the House. Another day, he falls behind with a negative vote from a subcommittee.

As one congressman, and then another, comes forward with his own economic program, the White House staff quickly analyzes it and puts forth a rebuttal, comparing the two plans point by point.

Last week, the swift reaction came on Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., who called for few spending cuts and less of a tax cut.

The White House, in rebuttal, pulled in regional and national media on Income

Epilepsy: The stigma often as serious as the seizure

West Texas Epilepsy Association offers variety of assistance

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

It came without warning. "One minute she was standing normally by the couch. The next minute, she started to holler, her eyes rolled back and she fell. Then she stopped breathing and turned blue. We rushed her to the hospital."

Mrs. Bill Kelleher well remembers her daughter Jessie's first epileptic seizure. Jessie was 10 months old then. She's 9 years old now.

Since that first seizure, life has been a series of frustrations for the Kellehers, who have experienced the same confusions typical to all families who have a member with epilepsy.

"They've had to cope with the stigma associated with someone who has epilepsy," according to John Relaford, executive director of the West Texas Epilepsy Association.

The association, located at 3610 W. Wall Ave., represents a 17-county area of West Texas. It is set up to provide information, referral and program implementation.

ALTHOUGH EPILEPSY is generally feared as a contagious disease, Relaford said it is more often an acquired, non-contagious "symptom" of a disorder of the central nervous system.

Epilepsy is not a disease or disorder, he said. "It's a symptom just as if you have the flu and you get a fever. It is generally believed that an epileptic seizure is caused by abnormal electrical activity in the brain."

"The number one obstacle to overcome is the lack of understanding about epilepsy and what causes it," said Relaford.

"Second most difficult problem we have is getting people to admit to having epilepsy."

The Kellehers, who are residents of Monahans, have never tried to hide Jessie's disorder from her, according to her mother. But they, nevertheless, have had problems.

"After her first attack, she went through two weeks of intensive tests at the St. Louis Hospital in Missouri," said Mrs. Kelleher. "Then the doctors said she was just spoiled, wanted attention, and to slap her on the hiney and she'd be OK."

"IT SEEMED THE more tests she had, the more seizures she would have. Then she broke her collarbone and had a grand mal seizure in the emergency room."

"Then they said she was definitely epileptic, but advised more tests, and then said she wasn't epileptic. We were getting very frustrated."

According to Relaford, it is fairly common for young children to have seizures which may not be diagnosed as epilepsy.

At five years of age, Jessie was finally diagnosed as definitely having epilepsy, said Mrs. Kelleher. She has been under treatment since that time.

Physicians are not sure why Jessie has epilepsy. "As a child, she fell down a lot," said Mrs. Kelleher. "The doctor said that was a sign of something." She always had skinned knees, and has suffered a broken elbow, and even two broken collarbones. She also had extremely high fever during one point in her infancy, which has been correlated with persons who have epilepsy.

"WE KNOW THAT epilepsy can be related to damage to the central nervous system, defects in the brain present at birth; head injuries that can occur at any age; poisons, including alcohol; diseases such as measles and encephalitis; disorders of the circulatory system; tumors, usually in the brain; and poor nutrition or disturbances in metabolism," said Relaford.

He added that anyone can develop seizures at any time, but most often they first appear early in life — as in Jessie's case.

Her frustration now? "Her teacher says it is one of a child sitting in a classroom, able to do the work and not doing it," said Mrs. Kelleher.

Jessie's grades are not particularly good. They range from a B in mathematics to a C in social studies and an F in reading.

"I don't understand it. School is evidently frustrating to her," said her mother.

"Her teacher says that Jessie is bright, but just sits in the class and daydreams."

SHE SAID THAT the daydreaming could possibly be a form of an epileptic seizure. "Her spells now seem to be like time lapses," she said. "I've watched her. I will tell her she has 10 minutes to make her bed and get ready for school. I would go into her room and she would just be half-way through the job. After watching her a few times, I saw her working normally, then she would suddenly stop for a minute or so and just stand there and stare. Then she'd snap out of it and go back to working normally."

Jessie, however, has not been diagnosed as having anything but a grand mal seizure, the most severe type of epilepsy.

There are three basic types of seizures, according to Relaford.

"In a grand mal seizure, the person becomes unconscious, falls down, goes in a convulsive state, and becomes rigid. His limbs may flail, he may salivate or urinate and possibly have irregular breathing, he said."

This type of seizure usually lasts no more than a couple of minutes.

"The petit mal seizure, another type, can be so minute that no one will even notice," said Relaford. "This seizure is hard to spot," he said. "A person's eyelids may simply shut for a minute."

IN THE THIRD type of seizure, psychomotor seizures, the person may experience a period of mental confusion followed by pointless movements, pain, dizziness or irritability. These may last up to 20 minutes.

"Mrs. Kelleher said that Jessie has no trouble learning, apart from her daydreaming and evident boredom with school. "She also has no trouble relating to other people and has no problem making friends," she said.

The family doesn't advertise the fact that she has epilepsy, however. "She was going to be a Blue Bird when we lived in Ohio, but the leader refused to let her join the group because she was afraid Jessie would have a seizure and she wouldn't know what to do. So we haven't told her

"We know that epilepsy can be related to damage to the central nervous system; defects in the brain present at birth; head injuries that can occur at any age; poisons, including alcohol; diseases such as measles and encephalitis; disorders of the circulatory system; tumors, usually in the brain; and poor nutrition or disturbances in metabolism."

Brownie leader here."

Her physical education teacher in Monahans was afraid at first for Jessie to overexercise, added her mom. "I told her not to be afraid; though, because she plays baseball, rides her bicycle and is so active, anyway. She's never had a seizure during exercise."

Her mother believes that Jessie knows herself well enough by now to know when she is about to experience a seizure.

"SHE TAKES HER medicine without any problem and we never let her go anywhere without her sister," her mother added.

Some epileptic seizures are controllable, according to Relaford. Some 50

NTSB now investigating collision of airplanes

LOVELAND, Colo. (AP) — An eight-member National Transportation Safety Board team has taken over the investigation of the collision of a commuter airliner and a plane carrying skydivers that killed 15 people.

All 13 people aboard the Air U.S. twin-turboprop Handley Page Jetstream en route from Denver to Gillette, Wyo., were killed Friday. Four of the skydivers parachuted to safety, but two others were killed.

"Some of the team will probably spend all day until daylight ends at the crash site. Witness interrogation will be involved and we will be involved looking at the air traffic control environment and circumstances that applied here," said NTSB spokesman Ira Furman.

Paul Kari, a spokesman for the Federal Aviation Administration in Denver, said the Air U.S. plane was flying under instrument rules and was in radar contact with FAA air traffic controllers.

"There is nothing conclusive yet" on final radio transmission from either plane, according to an NTSB investigator who asked not to be identified.

Furman said conflicting reports of the altitude the planes collided at, 13,500 feet and 8,000 feet, could both "be right. It depends on how you use those terms, whether you're talking about distance above the ground or above sea level. The ground level out here is about 5,500 feet."

An autopsy was expected on Air U.S. pilot Jay Lebowitz and copilot Dennis Beavers, both of Sheridan, Wyo., Furman said.

The commuter plane apparently flew northward for half-a-mile before plunging into the earth, said Garry Mucho, a regional NTSB investigator. He said parts of it were driven 20 feet into the ground a mile southeast of the Loveland-Fort Collins Municipal Airport.

The Cessna's wreckage was spread over a half-mile radius about a half-mile farther south.

Plane crash kills four

CUERO, Texas (AP) — Four members of a Brazoria family were killed Saturday when their single-engine airplane crashed during heavy rains on a ranch 15 miles northeast of here, officials said.

The dead were identified as 43-year-old Charles Ray Bridewell, Martha A. Bridewell, 35, and the couple's two children, 4-year-old Johnna and 14-year-old Cindy.

percent of all epileptics can gain complete control of seizures with the proper use of drugs, he said.

But the drugs are expensive. Jessie was first administered phenobarbital when she was young, but her medicine has since been changed to Dilatin, an anti-convulsant drug. There is a risk in that, however.

"The doctor told us that if she took the medicine for more than two years, she ran the risk of having a malformed fetus at childbearing age. I just hope she will understand then that there was no other choice — she either took the medicine or had seizures," said Mrs. Kelleher.

Because the Kelleher family is living on a limited income, they are receiving help from the West Texas Epilepsy Association. Anyone with epilepsy, regardless of income, can receive assistance from the association in various ways, however.

"We want to get both financial assistance for the Kellehers and proper medical diagnosis and treatment for Jessie," said Relaford.

"WE ARE WORKING on getting the papers signed by all the necessary authorities so that Jessie can get proper treatment right away," he said.

"We haven't done much in years except see that she gets her medicine because of all the frustrations and because we just couldn't afford it," said Mrs. Kelleher.

Jessie's father, Bill, suffered a stroke in 1976 and draws disability. Apart from that, the only other income to the family is social security for the two daughters and Mrs. Kelleher, which amounts to approximately $75 a month.

"It has been so frustrating," said Mrs. Kelleher. "First Bill and I would get bawled out by the doctors in St. Louis because Jessie wasn't being treated for having a grand mal seizure. Then they would turn around and say we were crazy for putting her on phenobarbital and 'making a drug addict' out of her when she wasn't having a seizure. Then they would say she wasn't really an epileptic, that she was just spoiled and wanted attention. That went on for years."

She's also gone through endless tests, such as brain scans, EEG, skull X-rays, psychological testing, etc.

"We swore we'd never put her through that again, but if she could get proper help, we would," said Mrs. Kelleher.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Approximately two weeks ago, the Kelleher family moved to another state. Assistance for the family through the West Texas Epilepsy Association thus ended.

Answer Line

P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702

If a person makes a will in one state and dies in another state, where should the will be probated? — Mrs. S.G.

ANSWER: Rosenele Cherry, Midland County clerk, says wills are probated in the state of residence at the time of death.

I have an elderly friend, who is blind and on a limited income. She only receives $11 for food stamps each month. What are the guidelines determining how food stamps are issued? — Mrs. S.W.

ANSWER: The U.S. Postal Service distributes the number of stamps according to information received from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The number of stamps, according to the Department of Human Resources, is based on a chart, which is determined by the number of persons in the family and the financial conditions.

ATTENTION: It has been called to Answer Line's attention that B&D Manufacturing Co. of Midland has "changed hands," and the business no longer purchases used paper.

There is the Tice Co., located between Midland and Odessa, which does purchase used paper on certain days of the week. The telephone number for Tice Co. is 367-4372.

The city has told me an adobe house at 500 Holmesley St. would be completely demolished. The roof of the house has been removed, but the walls remain and could collapse at any time, possibly falling onto my property. What can be done about it? — F.E.

ANSWER: George Medley with the city of Midland reports further demolition work on the house is being done.

I live in an apartment complex, where we were told there would be a pond. The pond area has no water and is filled with debris. What recourse do I have? — J.B.

ANSWER: The manager of the apartment complex you mentioned says that the wrong type of plastic was used to line the pond, but work on the pond should be completed in the next two to three weeks.

For about one year I lived at some Midland apartments just off North Garfield. During the time I was living there, I did some repair and construction work for the man who was the manager. In return, he reduced my rent one month. Shortly after that, a new manager was hired, and since the records did not show full payment of my rent, I had to pay or be evicted. So I paid. I then submitted a bill for the work I did.

I moved out of the apartment Dec. 31, 1980. The manager inspected the apartment and told me it was satisfactory and that I would receive my deposit in the mail. She told me that she did not have the authority to write checks or return deposits — only the owner, who lived in California, could do that.

I have submitted a second notice bill for my work and inquired several times about my deposit, but I still have not received either one.

Can you help me with either of these matters? If not, what should I do? — T.V. Jr.

ANSWER: Jetta Shewmake, president of the Midland Apartment Association, says you can go to a Justice of the Peace. She also said for you to call her at 694-6460 and she will discuss the situation with you.

District 16 legionnaires, auxiliary to meet later this week in Alpine

ALPINE — Legionnaires and auxiliary members of The American Legion 16th District, comprised of 17 counties in West Texas from Midland to El Paso, will assemble here April 25-26 for their annual Spring Convention. Russell Larsen, 16th district commander announced.

All activities will take place in American Legion Post No. 79 Home located at 306 W. Avenue D, with registration to begin at 10 a.m. Saturday. Other Saturday activities will include an American Legion Leadership Course from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m., Joint Legion and Auxiliary Banquet and Session at 5:30 pm. and the annual convention dance at 9 p.m.

Sunday registration will continue in the Post Home at 9 a.m.

Larsen will present special recognition to posts that have outstanding membership recruitment records this year.

Posts and their commanders are: Alpine 79, O.C. Smith; Big Lake 253, W. Guy Day; El Paso 36, D. ## School trustees to meet Tuesday

School trustees face a largely routine agenda Tuesday when they meet in regular session at 1:30 p.m. in the administration building, 702 North N St.

Among the items up for consideration and possible action are procedures for controlling drugs and alcohol on the high school campuses, reviewing the operations of the on-campus suspension center, reorganization of the board of trustees, and authorization for the sale of buses. The public is invited.

Unitarian-Universalist Church

FUNDAMENTALLY CHARACTERIZED BY THREE PRINCIPLES:

Complete mental freedom rather than bondage to creeds or confessions; Unrestricted use of reason rather than reliance on external authority or a traditional past; A generous tolerance of differing views and usages rather than insistence upon uniformity in doctrine, worship or church polity.

Worshippers should take an umbrella

Bright sunlight cascaded across Midland and the Permian Basin Saturday afternoon for the first time in several days.

Additional showers and thunderstorms may be forthcoming, however, as the National Weather Service has issued a 20 percent probability of precipitation for today.

Following an early morning shower in portions of the Tall City, the 24-hour rainfall total rose to .17, bringing the monthly total to 1.48 inches and the yearly total to 3.27 inches.

Saturday's high was a mild 77 degrees, far short of the blazing 97 recorded in 1948.

The low tonight should dip into the mid 50s, while partly cloudy conditions will allow the mercury to reach the mid 80s Monday.

Extended forecasts

West Texas: Partly cloudy with chance of showers mainly north, turning cooler midweek. Highs mid to upper 60s mountains to upper 80s Big Bend, cooling by Thursday to near 60 north, low 70s south and low 80s Big Bend. A scene of tranquility — the nation's Capitol building sparkling in the warm spring sunshine while a tourist lies on the ground, soaking up some of the air. But inside the House and Senate chambers, a battle is brewing over the President's economic package.

Tax Day to sell their program, claiming it has a far better price tag than Jones'.

Washingtonians now are sitting on the edge of their seats, watching each step as the lines advance and retreat. Even though they, too, will be hit by whatever program is adopted, their favorite pastime is to find ways of poking fun at the two sides.

Two economic reporters who work for a specialized business publication, Rebecca Pearl and Susan Rasky, recently put together a collection of songs in which they changed the words to familiar tunes to fit the situation up on the Hill.

"SConRes Number 9," sung to the tune of "Love Potion Number 9," refers to the label given Reagan's budget bill in the Senate.

"Ron took the budget up to Capitol Hill, He knew that it would be a bitter pill. But he added up the numbers and thought they looked just fine. Said what I want is SConRes Number 9."

"They sat down, turned around in less than a wink. Said they'd pass it fast or else it would sink. They pushed those Democrats right to the brink. Held their noses, closed their eyes, Put it in ink."

"Then something happened late one Thursday night. You should have seen it, what an awful sight. For when it came around to final voting time, The GOP rejected SConRes Number 9."

THE LAST LINE refers to a recent Senate Budget Committee vote in which the package was defeated and forced a setback in the time schedule.

Everyone has his or her own thoughts about the economic plan. A taxi driver gliding through bustling traffic said he came to Washington from Dallas during the Depression under President Franklin D. Roosevelt. He passed a Civil Service exam and his future for the rest of his working life was sealed. Retired, he makes a living as a taxi driver.

Asked his opinion of the economic plan, the driver began chuckling, pulled the car to a swift stop in front of a government building and said, "Here's your stop. He, like the rest of the country, is waiting for the next move."

Bosses bothered by bargaining bill

the organization. And either party to an irreconcilable dispute is entitled to request the appointment of a three-member, ad hoc arbitration panel.

"An impasse in the collective bargaining process occurs if the parties do not reach a settlement of the issue or issues in dispute by way of a written agreement within 60 days after initiation of the collective bargaining proceedings," notes the bill.

The arbitration panel would consist of an employee representative, an employer representative and a third party chosen by mutual agreement of both sides.

In the event there is no agreement on who the third member should be, the employer-employee board would furnish a list of seven qualified arbitrators and each side has the opportunity to strike names until only one name remains on the list.

Within 10 days after conducting a hearing, a majority of the arbitration panel is required to reach a decision and that decision "is final and binding on the parties" and "any award of the panel is retroactive to the expiration date of the last contract."

JUDICIAL REVIEW of the panel's decision is provided for in the bill. But that review is restricted to determining if the panel exceeded its authority or if its order "was procured by fraud, collusion or similar unlawful means."

The court could not set aside arbitration awards on any other grounds.

Although Maury's bill appears radical and raises the hackles of many state and local officials, a similar, relatively limited version of it has existed in Texas for some time now. Under provisions of that law, cities with a population of at least 10,000 persons can opt to provide their police and firefighters (other public employees are excluded) with collective bargaining rights via local option elections.

Voters in San Antonio, Laredo and Corpus Christi are among those who have chosen to allow their police and fire departments such rights.

"THERE'VE BEEN NO tax increases due to collective bargaining in those places," said Richard Kessles, technical advisor for the International Brotherhood of Police Officers in Austin.

"And it eliminates the pressure of strikes and walk-outs, something public employees tend to want as time goes on and frustrations build. In the past, it's been a sort of collective begging process."

"I'm a former police chief myself (he declined to say where) and it's degrading to have a city manager come in with your budget already filled out. Collective bargaining allows frustrations to be vented on both sides, since management can also take their issues to the table."

"Oddly enough, it's probably meant more to cities than the police because it takes the heat off city hall. If blame is to be cast, the arbitration panel gets it."

"Mauzy's bill would simply extend collective bargaining to all public employees without having each city go through a lengthy, expensive election. I don't see it wreaking havoc with taxes."

But it's not taxes that public employers fear so much. It's loss of control and some concern that the mandatory arbitration feature of the bill usurps their constitutional authority to decide budgets and set taxes accordingly.

If, for instance, an arbitration panel decides the employee group is to get a 25 percent pay hike when the governmental body insists it can only afford 12 percent without an increase in taxes, isn't the panel in effect setting higher tax rates?

DESPITE THE local composition aspect and ad hoc nature of the arbitration panel, officials argue that such is the case.

"Yes, it still takes away a city council's legal responsibility to set taxes and it diminishes local power over local affairs," said Assistant City Attorney Brian Martin of Midland.

City Manager James Brown concurred, adding "Binding arbitration is onerous to me. It means letting someone else make the decision. In this case, (the third member of the panel) would probably wind up making the decision."

While officials in Laredo, Corpus Christi and San Antonio agreed there haven't been any tax increases due to collective bargaining, they say it has caused some grief and extra expense.

"It's worked reasonably well here," said Elmer Buckley, special assistant to Laredo's city manager. "But it has weakened the authority of the police chief and his commanding officers (an apparent reference to disciplining the department)."

"As for pay, we're into our second two-year contract with the police and fire associations and weren't able to grant them any more than other city employees received this time. The associations went along with us."

Corpus Christi Administrative Assistant Skip Noe: "We've had collective bargaining since 1975. It creates some disparity between police and firefighters and other city employees — not a great one, though. I'm not against collective bargaining as such. It can be a good thing. But it lessens management prerogatives and the best situation is not to have it at all."

San Antonio Personnel Director Chuck Speed: "We've had five annual contracts to date. It's increased the cost of services but not taxes — so far. We've had to pay for the cleaning and maintenance of police and fire uniforms, something other city employees don't get."

"And we've had to pay for college credit hours and also provide a clothing allowance for (plainclothes) detectives."

"ON THE POSITIVE side, it allows the police chief to appoint the first two positions under him. Before, under state law, written examinations and seniority determined the appointments."

"Without a doubt the typical police officer is pleased with collective bargaining. It gives him more power. Cities, however, would get out from under it if they could."

"If I had my way I'd choose a 'meet and confer' law. There'd be no written contract or compulsory arbitration. Sure, it would leave employees with no actual power. But that's the classic dilemma: Is employee power appropriate in the public sector?"

"It's different from the private sector. Raising the price of a car is not like raising taxes. People raise hell when their taxes go up."

Fears of what effect Mauzy's bill might have on taxes and local power structures may be premature. The bill has been tied up in committee since Feb. 2, something that doesn't bode well for its passage.

Furthermore, the bill lacks a companion measure in the House. In the words of Midland lawyer Ralph Noyes: "That's like a plane with one wing. It's bound to crash."

Refugees overturn cars, throw rocks in Chaffee disturbance

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — About 75 to 120 Cuban refugees threw rocks and overturned three cars Saturday night in a disturbance that left one refugee shot and several military personnel with minor injuries, authorities said.

Mike Sweeney, director of public affairs for the State Department's Cuban-Haitian Task Force, said the disturbance began about 5 p.m. CST at the military base and was still "bubbling" three hours later.

The base houses 2,700 refugees. "It's definitely quieting down," Sweeney said. "It is calming, but it is bubbling."

Sweeney said a federal protective service officer shot a male refugee who was attacking another Cuban. Sweeney did not know the refugee's name or condition. The refugee was taken to St. Edwards Hospital at Fort Smith. Sweeney said authorities were not sure what triggered the disturbance. Bill Howard, another official in the public information office, said refugees shook the gate fences in an attempt to escape from the compound, but he said no one escaped. Sweeney said officers forced the refugee back with tear gas.

Howard said officers had evacuated the base of all civilians. "It's quiet and there's still some unrest, and people are still nervous," Howard said. "It's the aftermath, and their adrenalin is pumping right now."

Bedford woman killed in crash

ODESSA — A Bedford woman was killed and her husband and a passenger injured in a head-on collision at 6:50 p.m. Saturday on University Avenue near its intersection with Mockingbird in Ector County.

Dead is Dorothy Maxon, 62, driver of a car which collided with a pickup driven by Charles Oliver Thomas of Odessa.

In undetermined condition at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital are Ethel Bogner, 88, with fractures of both arms, and Byron Wayne Maxon, 65, in intensive care with a fractured hip and reported head injuries.

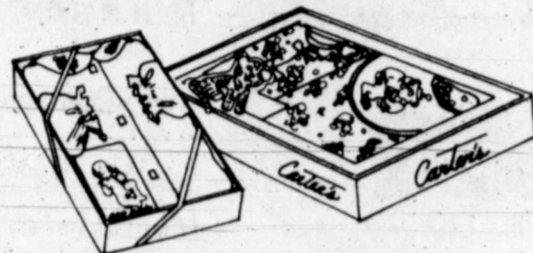

According to the Department of Public Safety, the accident occurred when the eastbound Thomas vehicle went into a skid in trying to avoid a third vehicle stopped in the street to make a left turn. The Maxon car was traveling west at the time. Thomas escaped injury.

DEATHS

Emly Atkinson

Emly Atkinson, 69, of 2603 Hodges St., died Friday in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Monday in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian Church with the Rev. Ray Riddle, associate minister of First Presbyterian Church, officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Atkinson was born July 5, 1911, in San Antonio. She grew up in San Antonio and attended school at Incarnate Word College. She worked in San Antonio for Edgar Tobin Aerial Surveys, the Army Map Service and Brooke Army Medical Center. She married James C. Atkinson in 1930 and they moved to Midland in 1949. She worked for Midland Savings Association immediately after its inception until 1970 when she resigned as vice president to accept a position as branch director in Corpus Christi for the Small Business Administration. She later became district director of the SBA in Marshall and then of the Dallas district office. The Dallas district office recently received an award as the outstanding district office of the SBA. She retired in March of this year, returning to Midland.

She was a deacon of the First Presbyterian Church, past officer of the Altrusa Club of Midland, Inc., past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, past director of both the YMCA and Red Cross and the first woman to serve on the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission. She was an officer in the Federal Employees Association in both Corpus Christi and Dallas.

Survivors include a son, Harold Atkinson of San Antonio; a daughter, Mrs. William A. Heck of Midland; and five grandchildren.

M.W. Collie Jr.

M.W. Collie Jr., 71, of 2605 Bedford Ave., died Thursday in a Tyler, Texas, hospital.

Services will be at 10 a.m. Monday at the First Presbyterian Church Chapel with Dr. Robert Boynton Smith officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be Jack Saxon, Bill Kerr, Walter B. Holton, Bob Dean of Pecos, Bill Franklin and Ed Reed.

Nickolas Varga

Nickolas G. Varga, 67, of 918 N. Weatherford St., died Friday in an Odessa hospital.

Services are pending at Thomas Funeral Home in Midland. He was born Oct. 13, 1913, in Mexico and had lived in Midland since 1959. He was a veteran of World War II. He was a construction worker. He was a member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Andrea of Midland; four sons, Alfonso Vargas, Able Vargas and Martin Vargas, all of Midland, and Frank Vargas of South Carolina; a daughter, Aurora Rodriguez of Midland; and 13 grandchildren.

'Andy' Green

Donald "Andy" Green, 12, of 2814 Emerson Drive, died Friday in a Midland hospital.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Monday in the sanctuary of the First Baptist Church with Dr. Daniel Vestal officiating. Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Andy was born Sept. 25, 1968, in Houston. He moved to Midland with his family three years ago from Denver, Colo. He was a sixth grade student at Pease Elementary. He participated in football, baseball and bas-kettball. Survivors include his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D.W. Green of Midland; a sister, Lee Green of Midland; and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Allen of Weatherford and Mrs. W.A. Anderson Lovington.

The family requests that memorials be directed to West Texas Boys' Ranch.

Poland's communist leaders choice of reformist trend angers Soviet brass

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Faced with rising discontent, Poland's communist leaders put the shattered economy on the back burner, took the road to reform and sparked stern criticism from the Kremlin Saturday.

Within three days and 30 miles, two events occurred that bolstered the reformist trend begun by striking shipyard workers in the Baltic port of Gdansk last summer.

The Communist Party sanctioned the first national meeting of Communist reformers Wednesday in Torun who demanded sweeping democratization of nearly every facet of party life.

Two days later in Bydgoszcz the government agreed to prepare the groundwork for registration of a private farmers union by May 10 after seven months of delays and over the objection of party leader Stanislaw Kania.

"Torun must have shown the party and the government what they are up against," said one Western observer. "Ageing to register a (private) farmers union is a huge blow to both the party and the Soviets."

In Moscow, Kremlin spokesman Leonid Zamyatin charged in a nationally televised speech Saturday that counterrevolutionary forces were trying to "further destabilize" the situation in Poland.

He also said statements by Western leaders against a crackdown in Poland amounted to "direct interference" in the country's affairs. He said the warnings were made "against taking measures to introduce proper order."

Most Western observers feel the possibility of Soviet intervention has diminished in the two weeks since Warsaw Pact maneuvers ended. But they say communications gear the Soviets installed during the exercises is still here.

One analyst called registration of the farmers union "another big concession and probably the most important development since registration of Industrial Solidarity last November."

Solidarity, the first labor union free of party control in the Soviet bloc, claims 10 million of Poland's 18 million industrial workers. The farmers' union claims 800,000 of Poland's 3.5 million private farmers.

Kania opposed the farmers' union on grounds it created a political force in the countryside. That analysis was bolstered by a Western observer who characterized the farmers union as the first legally recognized "free enterprise organization," since most of Poland's farmers are self-employed.

The Polish Communist Party's Central Committee meets this week and a final decision is expected on proposed election reforms allowing an unlimited number of candidates to vie for seats at the party congress expected by mid-July.

If the proposals are adopted, many party members predict that delegates elected from the grassroots instead of imposed from above will replace the leadership and put a new face on the party. This will cap the reform drive that began with the strike wave last summer.

However, after nearly 10 months of grappling with strikes that began when the government raised meat prices, Poland's leaders still face an economy in tatters.

Some analysts say the economy, saddled by a $24 billion debt to the West that is currently being renegotiated, appears to be the major factor.

Food, including meat and sugar which are subject to rationing, is in short supply and long lines are now a familiar sight.

"All the kitchens are green," said one Pole, noting that at least some vegetables are available now, but expressing a general feeling of frustration.

The government probably will have to raise food prices soon, some observers say. The price of chicken, for example, has not changed in 10 years.

Past attempts to raise food prices, in 1970, 1976 and 1980, have led to what one official calls "social tensions." They included riots in Gdansk in 1970 and in Radom in 1976 and last summer's strikes.

Now, the government appears to be embarking on a media campaign to prepare the population for a rise that may come later this year.

Officials silent, waiting for cancer equipment decision

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

In the aftermath of three days of heated testimony in Austin, the two hospitals involved in a struggle for "state of the art" cancer therapy equipment have adopted a muted stance as they await a decision from the Texas Health Facilities Commission.

Odessa's Medical Center Hospital officials took a lot of heat from the officials from Midland Memorial Hospital while in Austin presenting their application for a 6 Million Electron Volt linear accelerator before the THFC.

Some 24 Odessans arrived to show their support in Austin and 14 of them testified to that during the three-day hearing. Much of the additional support came from the Women's Auxiliary members, who plan to donate the machine to the hospital, if MCH wins the approval of its certificate of need for the equipment.

Fewer Midlanders showed up for the hearing — seven — and even fewer testified their opposition to a second 6 MEV to be located in the Health Systems Agency-12 — six.

With final proposed findings of fact due to arrive at the Commission from both attorneys by May 8, a final decision may be slow in coming. Hearing Officer Kevin A. Reed said Wednesday he expected to have his recommendations on the case to the three-member board of commissioners by mid-May. The Commissioners, however, may take as long as mid-summer — or longer — in rendering their decision.

Odessa's attorney Joe Webber spent his time building a case for MCH on grounds that the current Teratron-80 cobalt unit has aged beyond its functional years. In addition, Webber drew testimony from witnesses to attest to undue pain and complications for patients upon further use of the 10-year-old machine.

Fred Davis, Midland's attorney, countered Webber with testimony of increased financial strain on the operation of the soon-to-open Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center. Davis further brought out capabilities of the cobalt machine, which seem to be essential to a well-rounded cancer care program for the patients of HSA-12.

Relying on testimonies from physicians, financial experts and laymen, both parties to the application could expect to win. Only the three commissioners who were not present at any of the hearing can decide which will, however. The transcript of testimony, the findings of fact and the recommendation from Reed are all the commissioners will see. There will be no screaming on the transcripts, no hard-line questioning in the findings of fact and no angry faces to sway the board. Only words on many pages will force a decision on the emotionally charged subject.

Perhaps Dr. Merrick Reese of Dallas stated Odessa's contentions best on the first day of testimony. A member of the medical oncology group from Sammon's Cancer Center in Dallas, Dr. Reese has been delivering care to Odessans one day a week since September 1979.

Dr. Reese said plainly, the 6 MEV "is a better way of delivery for the therapeutic modality. The technical data has represented to me that the 6 MEV is superior to the cobalt machine. It's a better mousetrap."

"Those people we see now" in both Odessa and at Baylor Medical Center in Dallas, he continued, "all have serious skin reactions, but they seem to have less reactions when treated on the high-energy machines."

"I don't look at this (application) as a duplication," Dr. Reese testified. "They are maintaining the status quo at Medical Center Hospital, but they will be able to do it better (if MCH gets the 6 MEV)."

The opposition to the application was probably best expressed in terms of financial loss by Medical Consultant Jack Massimino of Salt Lake City, Utah. Representing MMH, Massimino presented study findings he recently completed on the financial impact the additional 6 MEV would have on the Allison Center.

The vice president of health services for John Short and Associates, Inc., Massimino testified "it's not a medical issue, it's an economic one." Showing figures he computed in his survey in February, Massimino concluded the financial impact to the Center could be considerable.

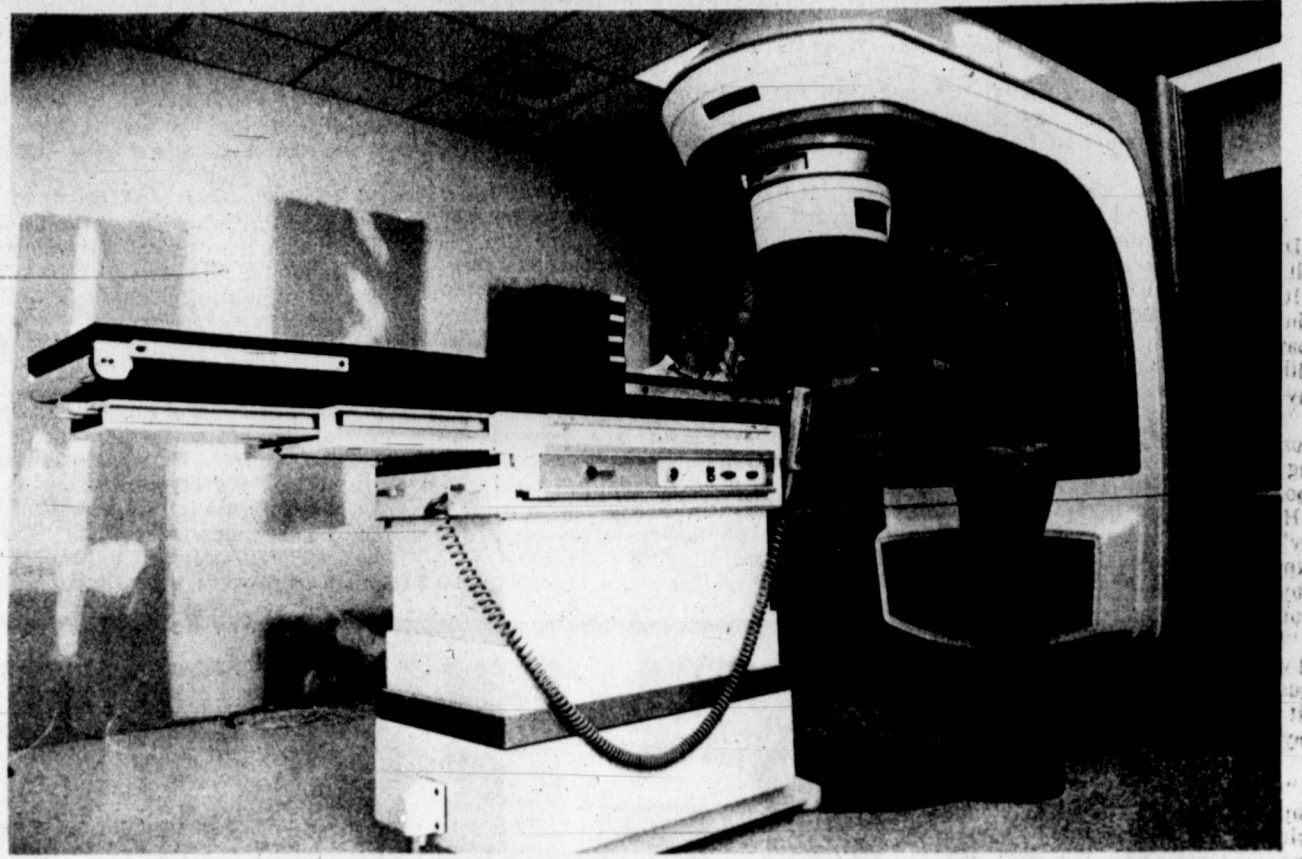

Officials for the Allison Center expect to bring in revenues around $535,000 for the first 12 months of operation at the Center, based on 10,700 radiation treatments given at $50 each. With contractual allowances, the total drops to $509,525. Adding salaries, supplies, depreciation and other expenses, the revenue is cut to a first-year overall deficit of $261,000, Massimino said.

"They (MMH) assumed there would be some financial impact (of the Odessa machine) and they hired me to determine whether there would," Massimino testified. Based on a loss of 1,000, 2,000 or 3,000 radiation procedures, Massimino figured the revenue loss to MMH to average $37,000 with each 1,000 procedures.

Specifically, if the Allison Center loses only 1,000 procedures to MCH, revenues would drop to $485,000 before expenses resulting in the deficit of $298,949 after expenses.

A loss of 2,000 procedures means an income of $435,000 and a deficit of $336,789 after expenses.

If physicians at the Allison Center provided 3,000 fewer radiation treatments than budgeted, the total revenue would drop to $385,000, creating a deficit of $374,629 after ex-

Odessa's application for a 6 MEV was what prompted the three-day hearing last week before the Texas Health Facilities Commission in Austin.

By a mere 3,000 fewer procedures, the Allison Center could stand to lose twice as much as it makes the first year of its operation. All either hospital can do now is wait.

—Wait for the testimony to be transcribed.
—Wait for the hearing officer to re-read the transcript and the findings of fact and make his recommendation.

—And wait for the verdict from the commissioners in Austin.
If the final decision is not to the liking of either side, a district court case could flare the battle into yet another round — and more waiting.

Afghan hijacking foiled

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Afghan authorities foiled a plot by Moslem rebels to hijack an Afghan airliner and force it to fly to Pakistan, Radio Kabul reported Saturday.

Two men and a girl armed with grenades and accompanied by a small boy boarded the plane at Kandahar Wednesday, but "due to the vigilance of security forces" they were discovered before the airplane took off for Kabul, the Afghan capital, according to the broadcast monitored here.

It identified the would-be hijackers as trainees of Burhanuddin Rabbani, a Pakistan-based Afghan exile leader. The broadcast quoted the three as saying Rabbani told them when they landed at a Pakistani airport "they would be received by international media and world press."

They also were told the planned hijacking was "in cooperation with Pakistani authorities," Radio Kabul said.

Rabbani heads the Jamait-i-Islami, a militant exile group based at Peshawar, Pakistan. Radio Kabul described him as "a criminal who is supported by the imperialism of America, Chinese chauvinism and the reactionary circles of the region."

An Afghan source in New Delhi expressed doubt about the report. He said no Kandahar-Kabul civilian flight was scheduled Wednesday.

The plane that normally would have flown that route had been used to transport Soviet soldiers wounded in a rebel raid against their unit near Kandahar airport, the source said.

The Soviet Union has an estimated 100,000 soldiers in Afghanistan helping that country's Marxist regime battle the anti-communist, Moslem rebels.

Midlander's novel published

Second book deals with change

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Dr. David Caffey, who always plans to have one more story to tell, has authored another book: "The Old Home Place."

It's a family tale that begins in antebellum Mississippi and ends up on frontier farm land in Jones County in West Texas. It tells America's rural-to-urban change. For material to work on, Caffey drew on historical documents, records and hearsay.

Mainly, I grew up in a family of storytellers," Caffey said in explaining the background of his second book.

His first, "Head for the High Country," published in 1973, dealt with his experiences as a ranger at Philmont Scout Ranch in New Mexico from 1965 until 1977.

"It was not a history," said the 47-year-old Caffey, who is director of student activities at Midland College. "It was just memories more than anything else."

"HIGH COUNTRY" focused on the impact which backpacking, camping, relative isolation and self-reliance, and the semi-wilderness of the mountains has "on people, young people in particular," he said. The book, published by Abingdon Press in Nashville, Tenn., is "still in print."

As the book's author, Caffey impishly noted that he has "first choice" on any leftover books, and after that, "they end up out on shelves at K-Mart (department store)."

It took Caffey 1½ years to write "Home Place," a 224-page, 1.95 hardbound book published by Eakin Press of Burnet.

The book, written in narrative form, delineates the Caffey family's struggle "to sink roots and build a productive life" on the farm frontier of Jones County. The farm-scene sketch on the book's cover was created by Marilyn Todd.

Caffey's stories deal in part with the rustic life of the early 20th century when rural communities thrived, depicts the struggles through the Great Depression, and then characterizes the rise of technology and the gradual demise of the old-style rural community.

"It's just a coherent, chronological account of the family coming to the frontier and establishing the farm under the old lifestyle — large families, school, church, general store," he author said.

CAFFEY RECOUNTS the rise of industrialization and urbanization and then characterizes the crumbling of those "old lifestyles" in rural America and the loss of the home place.

David Caffey

"I enjoyed finding out more about the Depression and what changed the old lifestyle and drove it out of existence," Caffey said in an interview just after he had presented a copy of the book to the Midland County Public Library.

"He's a real professional," Dr. Jerry Hickman, president of the Friends of the Library and a political scientist at Midland College, said of his friend and cohort.

"Home Place" stories are in the Fred Gipson-J. Frank Dobie tradition, notes the book's promoters, and "sketches colorful characters forged out of the rugged life." Those characters include the likes of Groundhog Ryan, Dolly White, Uncle Fletcher and Slicker Boyd.

"Human interest and historical interest blend to produce a book that is both entertaining and information."

Caffey's book is regional in treatment and subject and probably will be just as restrictive in sales.

"It's going to sell well beyond their (the publisher's) guarantees," he said.

But Caffey said he's not interested in making a windfall return on his investment.

"I DON'T THINK I'll ever recover my expenses," he said. "It's really not an economic, profit-making (venture)."

"I've just about written that aspect (the money motive) off," said Caffey, who writes for the sheer enjoyment and toil of writing and then seeing his name and thoughts in print.

"I write what I want to write and then find the market for it," he candidly said of his approach to Caffeyized literature. "If I really wanted to make money, I'd find out the market and then write."

Caffey's actions bear out his intentions. He has started research into his third book, which is far afield from his other works.

"It has to do with management and leadership — the humanistic approach to management," Caffey said. As outlined, the book will "help people achieve" management expertise.

"(The work will project) a philosophy, all right," Caffey said. "But I certainly hope it comes down to practice, too."

He has been pondering the management subject for about five years.

"It (the research and writing) is pretty slow going now," he allowed.

For now, he has the comfort of writing just for his own fulfillment.

"I write about what I want to," he said. "I don't feel bound to write what I know about...relating to (academic) degrees."

Caffey holds the doctorate in higher education from Texas Tech University.

If his singleness of purpose were only money, then Caffey speculated that he might write on "sex, dieting and how to become a millionaire."

For now, though, his pure interest is in "the satisfaction of creating" books of his own choice as long as he can find a willing publisher.

Eight gypsies charged

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Eight Polish "Gypsies" being held in the Guilford County Jail have been charged by the FBI with interstate transportation of stolen goods.

The charges, filed Friday, specify about $89,000 in jewelry and silver stolen from homes in Jackson, Miss., and Atlanta, and stem from an extensive, multistate investigation into the group's possible connection with an operation that smuggles illegal aliens into the country and employs them in a nationwide burglary scheme.

The group, police call "Gypsies," are in jail in lieu of bonds ranging from $10,000 to $50,000 and face state charges of possession stolen property.

All eight of the "Gypsies" claim they can't speak English, police said, and police have been using a Polish-speaking professor at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro as an interpreter.

New airline may serve area

The Permian Basin will likely get another airline flying out of Midland Regional Airport in 1981.

Sun Air, Inc., a new airline headquartered in Hurst, is in the process of acquiring Texas Aeronautic Commission approval for low-fare, "high frequency" DC-9 service between 15 cities in the state, with initial operations scheduled for Midland, Amarillo, Dallas-Fort Worth (via DFW airport), Houston (Hobby Airport) and San Antonio.

The TAC hearings are set for May 7, with final route approval expected by mid-June.

Tentatively scheduled for service, as population and business activity warrant, are Beaumont, Corpus Christi, Laredo, "The Valley," San Angelo, Abilene, El Paso, Lubbock, Wichita Falls and Austin.

The new air carrier held its first annual board meeting March 30 and also announced the signing of a contract to purchase four DC-9, Series-10 jet aircraft, which feature new Hitec wide-body interior kits that provide closed-bin storage for carry-on garment bags. Sun Air's predominant interior color will be teal blue.

One of the planes is scheduled for delivery July 15. The other three are expected to be received Aug. 31.

A new headquarters building is under construction across the street from Sun Air's current headquarters in Hurst. The new headquarters is scheduled for occupancy July 1.

Sun Air also is looking at prospective sites for a maintenance base. Under consideration are

D-FW airport, San Antonio International and Meacham Field at Fort Worth.

L.H. "Jim" Jamison, former director of maintenance for Texas International Airlines, has been named director of maintenance for Sun Air.

The company expects to hire some 230 employees by Sept. 1.

In explaining why the firm chose the Permian Basin to be included in Sun Air's plans for initial flight service, company spokesman Jim Paul said Friday:

"We've done extensive market analysis and Midland-Odessa is a natural tie-in with the business communities of Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth. Midland-Odessa is also under-served in air service. Our fares will be competitive with other airlines."

Airlines currently serving Midland are Southwest, Braniff, Continental and Texas International, with American Airlines scheduled to begin service in early June.

German students attend convention

German students from Midland and Lee High Schools and Midland Freshman School attended the Texas Association of German Students convention and competition held recently at The University of Texas at Arlington.

This contest is made up of the best of high school students competing in athletic and academic competitions. Approximately 1,200 students took part with 63 schools being represented.

Lee High School students placed in the following events:

In athletics, Brenda Johns took first place in the girls 13 mile bicycle race completing the race in 50 minutes. Roger Kuykendall took third place in the boys 13 mile bicycle race with a time of 40 minutes and 25 seconds.

Roger Kuykendall and Leticia Barrera completed the 5 mile hike and this along with the bicycle races placed Lee High in an overall second place in the athletic events.

In color photography, Marilu Hastings won second place with a photograph she made while in Switzerland.

Tim Green and Rodney Mack won first place in group classical music.

Lee High School's Pass Auf team advanced to the quarter-finals before being eliminated. This event is a competition of teams answering questions concerning the culture of Germany. The team was made up of Eric Fryar, Tim Green, Rodney Mack, Susan Pullig and Steven Samuels.

In the academic area, Tommy Pollard won sixth place in second year spelling and Suzanne Johnston won 4th place in third year spelling. Steven Samuels won third place in second year poetry reading while Eric Fryar took second place in third year poetry memorized. Fryar also won second place in prose reading for third-year students.

Midland Freshman School students Beth Butler, Wendy Pruett and Nancy Newman won third place for their skit.

Reagan may lift grain embargo soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said Saturday that President Reagan possibly will lift the partial embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union within the next two weeks, if the president is convinced that the Russians are not about to intervene militarily in Poland.

Baldrige, who made the comments in an interview on the Cable News Network, is the highest-ranking administration official to confirm that the president is about to lift the embargo, which then-candidate Ronald Reagan criticized during last fall's campaign.

Administration sources who asked that their names not be used said last week that Reagan was ready to lift the sanctions which former President Carter imposed in the wake of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan in December 1979. Reagan promised during the campaign to lift the embargo if he were elected.

"I think that as soon as he (Reagan) feels that there's a real sign that the Russians, that he can make up his mind that the Russians most probably will not invade Poland..." Baldrige replied when asked if the embargo was about to be lifted.

The commerce secretary said "possibly" when asked if Reagan might take the action "in a week or two."

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Saturday no decision had been reached on whether to lift the embargo, adding that the subject was not even discussed at the most recent Cabinet meeting last Thursday.

Baldrige declined to comment when asked whether the Soviets had set the stage for lifting the embargo by giving assurances recently that no intervention is imminent.

2,000 protest U.S. action in El Salvador

NEW YORK (AP) — A crowd of about 2,000 packed Dag Hammarskjold Plaza outside the United Nations building Saturday to protest United States policy in El Salvador.

Chanting "No Draft, No War, U.S. out of El Salvador!" four groups of banner-waving marchers converged at Bryant Park, then marched across town to the U.N. building to listen to several speakers, including Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., former Rep. Bella Abzug, and musicians Pete Seeger and Richie Havens.

Weiss, who served as master of ceremonies for the rally, told the crowd, "We are here today to say our policy is a wrong policy and it's opposed by the American people. Some of us believe the problems in El Salvador have been orchestrated by the Reagan administration to justify its bud-

He said President Reagan was violating the War Powers Act by sending military advisers to El Salvador, and said Congress is taking steps to prevent further U.S. military action in the small Central American country.

Mrs. Abzug drew applause by saying, "The people who want us to go into El Salvador are the same crazies who got us in Vietnam."

Wadley-Barron Park may soon be haven for canoeists

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A lake is coming to town. And instead of having an occasional and inconstant pond that's a haven for frogs and mosquitoes, Midland is destined to lay claim to a permanent lake that could be a sporting pond for canoeists, kayakers, sail boaters, fishermen, park wanderers and dreamers.

That time may come after September, when Wadley-Barron Park should be a bona fide lake bordered by a grassy shoreline and trees.

The Midland City County has awarded a $166,500 contract to South Texas Construction Co. to excavate the north end of the playground, commonly known as A Street Park, and to turn the five-acre park into a three-acre lake.

"What we're going to do," said City Engineer George Medley, "is to make a lake out of it instead of a park."

Recently, the park, one of 35 in the city, has just been an oversized mud hole — a holding pond for runoff from yards and streets — fed by rains and the rising water table.

FROM TIME-TO-TIME, the park, depending on whether it's wet or dry, has been a site for music playing, guitar strumming, Frisbee throwing and chasing, ball playing, leisure time, jogging and a relaxing atmosphere despite the automobile traffic on the four streets bordering the park in east central Midland.

By mid-May, however, the park will cease to be so restful and free from the downtown commotion of a booming city.

Ravenous earth-moving machinery will be gouging hunks of bog and dirt from the park to create the lake.

Dump trucks will be making about 1,500 round-trips to haul off 23,000 cubic yards of earth in making way for the lake, which will be about 14 feet deep when full.

The dirt will be trucked about 2½ miles north to a "hole in the earth" owned by Clayton W. Williams Jr., Midland rancher-oilman-investor-developer.

WITH THE ADVENT of the lake may come new and revised city ordinances not only affecting Wadley-Barron Park, but others in the city. The park, which as late as the early 1950s, was on the outskirts of town and was a part of the golf greens of the Midland Country Club, which since has been relocated to farther north of town.

The City Council is considering: —Permitting sail and paddle-type boats in the lake. Motor boats, except for models, would be prohibited. Boating is outlawed in any of the city's play lakes, including Wadley-Barron, Grafa, Cowden and Hill. Occasional boating, however, apparently is viewed as a recreational luxury in the wake of downpours and gully-washers in usually dry West Texas. The anti-boating ordinance is rarely — if ever — enforced.

—Fishing would be permitted, as the city's Parks and Recreational Department will be stocking the "tank" with fish, including those which feed on mosquito larvae.

—The anti-swimming, anti-wading ordinances would be upheld; they would tend to prevent the city from being liable in case of drowning and injuries.

Councilman Tom Sloan is vociferously in favor of maximum recreational — and safe — use of the parks.

"I THINK SINCE they're public parks, they ought to be used by the public," argued Sloan in a recent council meeting.

"But not for just any purpose," countered conservative Mayor G. Thane Akins.

Purposes currently permitted for park use include kite-flying and control-line model airplane flying as long as the miniature aircraft and kites and their strings and tails aren't near power lines.

Texas Electric Service Co. (TESCO) cautions kites and model airplane

"fliers" to stay clear of the lines, which could disable the craft and their operators.

"We ought to send a letter to TESCO to bury their lines," wryly said Sloan, and thereby eliminate electric power-related dangers.

Sloan, still expressing dissatisfaction with the anti-recreational ordinances, harped on the regulation prohibiting roller-skating on the sidewalks.

"That's another city ordinance I don't like," he said. It's also one that's not enforced.

Another ordinance regulates model airplane flying. Flying of radio-controlled model aircraft within the city limits is outlawed, as the frequency transmitted from ground to the models could interfere with people-carrying aircraft in overhead traffic patterns.

CITY PARKS and Recreational director Wayne Kohout pointed to the potential dangers in model aircraft flying and to the engines' penetrating sound, which some neighborhood residents may find annoying.

Councilmen are to discuss the pros and cons of park-related ordinances in weeks to come. Predictably, some proposed and revised ordinances will deal directly with the in-town lake at Wadley-Barron Park.

"If you're going to have a lake," reasoned Sloan, "you ought to use it to the fullest extent."

Gun owners favor licensing, survey shows

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans continue to favor licensing owners of handguns, but they don't think stricter gun control laws would have prevented the recent assassination attempt aimed at President Reagan, an Associated Press-NBC News poll says.

Interestingly, even gun owners favor tougher licensing laws. But gun owners don't think stricter laws would reduce the number of murders, while non-owners do believe that would be the effect.

The five-acre Wadley-Barron Park in east central Midland will be more of a wavy lake than a grassy park by September, when work is to be completed on the proposed lake. The park is bordered by Cuthbert and Harvard avenues and by A and B streets. Excavation is to begin in mid-May. About 15 elms trees in the right background will be removed to make way for the enlarged pond.

Kermit safe despite broken foot, arm

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Miss Piggy was fit to be hog-tied and San Antonio citizens were hopping mad. Kermit the Frog had been kidnapped and police, fearing the worst, said he might even have croaked.

"I'm just heartsick about dear Kerm," wailed Miss Piggy in a statement published by the San Antonio Express and News.

"Why would anyone want to hurt the poor darling?" she moped, jumping to conclusions.

But by Saturday, the 13-foot-tall, shaggy green version of the world's most famous frog was safely back at San Antonio's Witte Museum, slightly worse for wear with a broken right foot and broken right arm.

Kermit, the affable star of "The Muppet Movie" and "The Muppet Show" had been on display at the museum's front entrance column, hanging by wires. Museum officials reported him missing Friday night.

"We're just glad he's back," said a San Antonio police dispatcher. "Everybody's been so worried about him," she said, adding that there had been hundreds of inquiries about Kermit's safety.

And what brilliant piece of detective work led to the frog's freedom?

"Some people came back from vacation and he was just sitting in their front yard," said the dispatcher, who declined to give her name.

"We don't know why someone would take him."

Kermit is part of a traveling exhibition, "The Art of the Muppets" which opened April 4 at the Witte Museum, said John Regnier, museum public relations director.

The exhibition has

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Looking for a great place to go fishing? Well, April is peak fishing time in Texas. In today's column, we'll highlight some of Texas' finest fishing reservoirs.

AMISTAD — This border reservoir, half belonging to Texas, the other half to Mexico is probably in its prime about now. Most fish species, with exception of sunfish have almost completed spawning procedures and are now on the forage kick.

Black bass fishing (largemouth and smallmouth) should be active and feeding in shallow waters. Crank baits in shad and crawdad colors are best fished off points. Topwater baits work fine over the moss beds early in the morning and late evening. For the smallmouth bass fanciers, small jigs, plastic worms and small crank baits work well fished near sharp, rocky drop-offs and rocky canyon walls.

Striper fishing, well it's a hit or miss proposition. However, watch for feeding birds. You might accidentally catch a mess of big Amistad stripers.

Walleye fishing is prime. Troll live nightcrawlers or hellbender or bomber lures across rocky and sandy points on hold on.

Catfishing for blues, channel and yellows begin to pick up about this time of year. Best bet is to bait a hole two or three days prior to fishing. Then by using your favorite stinkbait, bottom fish for the whiskered critters. You could load the boat.

HUBBARD CREEK — This windy reservoir near Breckenridge is primed for crappie fishermen. Crappie are spawning in the shallows and the avid barndoor crappie anglers can catch a mess on small yellow and white crappie jigs are ideal baits, as well as small live minnows.

Black bass fishing is also good on spinnerbaits and plastic worms or lizards fished off points, in brushy flats and the back ends of coves prove quite exciting at times.

Trotliners after those big yellow or flathead catfish often snag some monsters in April. A perch-baited hook is, by far, the best yellow catfish bait around. It's also a good month for baited trotlines with smaller baitfish for catches of blue and channel catfish.

POSSUM KINGDOM — It's white bass month at this North Central Texas reservoir. Whites and sandies have completed their spawn and now roam in huge schools in search of forage. Many old timers claim that April is the best month on Possum Kingdom for any type of fish, but best for white bass. The Peanut Patch region of P.K. ranks as top spot on this scenic lake.

Crappie fishing is also good docks and boathouses with live minnows or small jigs.

Black bass fishing (largemouths, smallmouths and spotted) is good. Larger female bass are still on the nest and chances of catching a wall hanger are excellent. Fish the Cedar Creek, Caddo Creek and Costello Island regions of P.K. for best black bass action.

TWIN BUTTES — Near San Angelo, produces some nice stringers of walleye, white bass, crappie and black bass in April.

For the black bass enthusiasts, fish the thick stands of plum thickets. These areas are hard to fish from a bass boat, but those who fish in tubes, etc. often bring in some braggin' sized stringers. Jigs and plastic worms seem to be the preferred bait.

Crappie fishermen, concentrate in the same area as the bass fishermen, but apply your secret crappie fishing tactics.

Concentrate white bass efforts near the dam and at the south end.

TOLEDO BEND — You simply wouldn't believe the bass and crappie catches coming from this East Texas water impoundment in April. Fishing guides out of every marina report catches day-in and day-out, like most of us couldn't believe.

Net 51 wins
MCC Scramble

The team of George Tope, D.D. Farris, Bob Dean and Rex Rowland won the Midland Country Club Scramble Golf tournament Saturday with a net 51 after firing a best ball 61. The tournament was held in two divisions. The results:

Bears' Payton NFL'S best paid

Quarterbacks made the most money in the NFL last season, but Chicago Bear running back Walter Payton was highest paid at $475,000, $74,975 more than runnerup Bob Griese of Miami. Johnny "Lam" Jones of the Jets is the highest paid receiver at $264,236 and Alan Page of the Bears is the highest paid defensive lineman at $233,333. The study compiled by the NFL Management Council for the NFL Players Association, does not list names, but ranks salaries according to position and years of experience. Yet some salaries can be matched with players.

The player with most years of experience, 16-year Denver quarterback Craig Morton, drew $231,667 while Jim Hart, next, got $250,000. A 14-year running back, Dallas' Preston Pearson, made $101,250.

Pleasant Colony overtook odds-on favorite Cure The Blues in the final eighth mile to win the Wood Memorial Saturday at Aqueduct, winning by three lengths over Highland Blade while Cure The Blues was third.

The NCAA post-season football committee voted against the Fiesta Bowl's (Tempe, Ariz.) move to New Year's Day. Fiesta officials were surprised by expect the decision to be reversed.

Guillermo Vilas defeated Adriano Panatta 6-2, 6-2 to gain the Monte Carlo Open tennis finals while Jimmy Connors led Balazs Taroczy 6-1 in a rain-interrupted match that will be completed today.

Jo Ann Gaynor, Arlington, Texas, owner of a horse linked to a grand jury probe into alleged race fixing at the New Orleans Fair Grounds says she was offered a $25,000 bribe to implicate a high-ranking officer at Louisiana Downs. The bribe offer was followed up by threats if she failed to say falsely that the horse, By Gem, was owned by Vince Bartimo, president of Louisiana Downs.

Chen Tze-ming shot a 70 Saturday to lead the Korea Open by three strokes with a 209 after three rounds. Amy Alcott shot a one-under 72 for a one-stroke lead in the second round of the Mitsukoshi International golf tournament. Czechoslovakia held off a Canada for a 7-4 win pool "A" of the World Hockey Championships at Goteberg, Sweden, while Russia defeated Sweden, 4-1. Jim Lyttle slugged a two-run homer, his third of the Japanese League baseball season, leading the Hiroshima Toyo Carp to a 6-1 victory over the Yomiuri Giants Saturday. Aston Villa defeated Nottingham Forest 2-0 to open a three-point lead over Ipswich, 2-0 loser to Arsenal, in English League soccer.

Danielle Rieder of Switzerland and Ron Shaver of Canada won gold medals in the women's and men's figure skating competition at Jaca, Spain, Saturday. Jamie-Lynn Kitching, Canada, won the silver and Theresa Romano, U.S., won the bronze while Michael Tokar won the men's silver.

State will appeal extension of bilingual education

By The Associated Press

Texas Attorney General Mark White says the state has no choice but to appeal a federal court order extending bilingual education to all public school grades by 1986, a program the court hoped would help end a "deep sense of inferiority, cultural isolation, and acceptance of failure," by Hispanics in Texas.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice Friday ordered public school districts to extend bilingual education from kindergarten through fifth grade by next fall, and to all 12 grades by 1986.

He denied a state request to wait until the end of the current legislative session to propose its own bilingual education plan, and he rejected a more limited plan submitted Thursday by Gov. Bill Clements' task force on bilingual education.

White said he planned to seek a stay Monday of Justice's order pending an appeal to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

"We'll spend more time training teachers to speak Spanish than to reach the students who need English," said White. He said the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund estimated 20,000 teachers would be needed to comply with Justice's order. "This will force the Texas public schools to spend a tremendous amount of money to recruit and train these people. I don't think that is the purpose of bilingual education."

"It's tragic to see public school policy set in the courts. We are required to appeal it," the attorney general said.

Bilingual education now is offered only through the third grade in most Texas public schools. State estimates show about 40 percent of non-English speaking students — about 90,000 youngsters — receive no bilingual instruction.

White said he found no fault with extending bilingual education through fifth grade, but did not agree that it was necessary to provide bilingual instruction in such courses as math and science in upper grades. "I feel by training the younger Mexican American children in English as they come into the system, Texas public schools will be doing the education job for which they were established," he said.

Judge Justice had ruled in January in an 11-year-old discrimination lawsuit filed by the Justice Department that there was proof of "pervasive, invidious discrimination against Mexican-Americans throughout the State of Texas."

"The deep sense of inferiority, cultural isolation, and acceptance of failure instilled in a people by generations of subjugation, cannot be eradicated merely by integrating the schools and repealing 'no Spanish' statutes," his opinion said, referring to a state law against Spanish teaching repealed only a decade ago.

Wilma S. Martinez, president and general counsel of the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund, praised the judge's Friday ruling, MALDEF, also representing the American GI Forum and the League of United Latin American Citizens, intervened in the case in 1975 and with the Justice Department submitted the basic program model adopted by the court.

White said the Texas Education Agency was preparing a report for release Monday.

Compromise sought in civil rights suit

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' top officials say they are assured by the U.S. Attorney General's office there can be a compromise in the civil rights suit that seeks widespread changes to the state's prison system.

"We have concluded that there is much room for compromise, allowing Texas great flexibility to adopt practices and implement structural changes in the way Texas thinks best," said a letter received Friday by Gov. Bill Clements from U.S. Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults.

On Friday, Attorney General Mark White hand delivered a letter to Federal District Judge William Wayne Justice in Tyler saying he had been authorized by Schmults to ask for a 30-day delay before Justice enters a final judgment.

"Both the state and the United States have agreed to approach such negotiations with a sense of compromise and flexibility," White said.

Clements said he and David Dean, the governor's general counsel, would meet with U.S. Attorney General William French Smith in Washington on Tuesday afternoon to discuss negotiations in the case.

There has been no reply from Justice to the 30-day delay request.

Texas Department of Corrections inmates filed the civil rights suit in 1972. After a lengthy trial, Justice ruled in 1980 the prisoners' rights were being violated by the TDC but he has not issued the final order telling the state what it must do.

In February, the state agreed to a number of issues involved in the suit including improvement in health care, care of handicapped prisoners, solitary confinement, use of harmful chemicals and work safety. No agreement was reached in negotiation with U.S. attorneys on size of cells, number of inmates per cent, staffing patterns and the size and location of prisons.

Clements said Friday that on March 13 he asked a delay of at least 30 days and proposed compromise talks on federal demands for single cells for inmates by June 1982, locations of prison facilities near cities with more than 50,000 populations and limiting capacity of prison facilities to 500 inmates.

Schmults told Clements the three areas had been discussed with the department's civil rights attorneys and they were willing to negotiate further.

"I want to assure you that it is not this department's policy to impose unreasonable and unnecessary conditions upon the discretion of elected state officials," Schmults said in his letter to Clements.

Clements said he believed the Justice Department's response was "a very positive indicator" of a willingness on the part of the Reagan administration "to work with the state of Texas to resolve the litigation."

Atlanta police working on drawing

ATLANTA (AP) — Police are working on a composite drawing of a man seen picking up the retarded black who became the first adult to be listed among the city's 23 murdered young blacks, The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution reported Saturday.

The drawing is based on a description given by a woman who said she saw 21-year-old Eddie Duncan getting into a vehicle on March 20, the night he disappeared, the newspapers said in their combined Sunday editions.

However, Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown on Saturday denied any knowledge that such a composite was being prepared. And police spokesman Roger Harris said the task force probing the 23 slayings and two disappearances of young blacks since July 1979 would have no comment on the report.

Duncan was the first adult to be added to the task force list. His body was found March 31 in the Chattahoochee River in Douglas County, southwest of Atlanta. The cause of death has not been determined.

The body of another retarded black man whose case is being probed by the unit, 20-year-old Larry Rogers, was found April 9 in an abandoned apartment complex. A composite of a man who was seen picking up Rogers in a green car was released April 7, but police say the man has not been located.

MC offering unusual summer short course

"Trick or Treat" is coming to Midland College early this year due to an unusual short course dealing with the performance of magic.

Introduction to the Art of Magic starts June 9 and offers a comprehensive study of conjuring and prestidigitation.

James Bramlett, director of the MC Department of Community Services which sponsors MC short courses, said of the course: "We've been able to include more than is generally available to the novice. Our instructor, Scott Wells, leads students through many avenues of magic, treating them first to a demonstration of a trick and then allowing students to perform the feat themselves."

Tricks with cards, coins, novelties and ropes are part of the subjects covered in class, according to Bramlett. Those will be followed by an introduction to stage tricks: mentalism performances (mind reading and hypnosis), levitations and suspensions and escape tricks involving handcuffs, chains, straitjackets and boxes.

Wells discusses the power of suggestion and how it relates to magic performances, ways to develop the magician's character and demeanor, how to make presentations to children's or adult audiences, methods for opening a program, building an act and closings.

Bramlett pointed out that the course does not begin until June 9, but students need to register no later than May 26. Books must be ordered and in students' hands prior to the first class meeting.

Classes are scheduled 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays over a period of six weeks. Course fee is $15.

Students will be given course book titles and ordering instructions as they pre-register. Book costs will be about $15 total. Registration is in progress now in room 156 of the Midland College Administration Building between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. weekdays, including the noon hour. Beginning May 18, pre-registration hours will be 7 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

More information may be obtained by calling 684-7851, extension 147 or 216.

FIRST RATE INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES FROM FIRST NATIONAL

There are many ways you can put your money to work at First National.

30-Month Certificate*

It's a savings certificate everyone can afford. For a $500 minimum deposit we pay the highest rate allowed by law, compounded quarterly for an effective yield of 12.28%. The interest rate in effect at the time you buy your certificate is guaranteed for the 30-months you own the certificate. This rate is effective through April 20, 1981.

6-Month Money Market Certificate*

No other bank or savings and loan offers a higher interest rate on six-month money market certificates of $10,000 or more. All the more reason to keep your savings as well as your checking at a full-service bank. The six-month CD interest rate changes weekly and the current rate is valid only through April 20, 1981.

*FDIC Insured to $100,000.

*Regulations require that the penalty for early withdrawal be collected from the principal if the Certificate of Deposit has been on deposit less than the prescribed penalty period.

First National now has a certificate with a 14 day maturity. See our investment officers for more information.

The Woodlands, Texas Drilling Foremen

Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. is experiencing unprecedented growth! Our record 1981 capital budget of $456 million earmarks over $250 million for exploration and development. We have operations spanning the United States, and anticipate a continuous extension of our holdings.

Our startling growth rate means growth for our employees as well, and has created additional openings for Drilling Foremen to be based at our corporate headquarters in The Woodlands, Texas.

Under direction of the Drilling Superintendent, you will oversee the drilling of oil and gas wells and/or remedial drilling work, either onshore or offshore. Other duties will include reviewing drilling programs, insuring availability of equipment as needed, and supervising the safe and economical progress of the well.

Mitchell employees enjoy an excellent salary and benefit package which includes company-paid hospitalization and life insurance with dental coverage, relocation assistance including mortgage interest differential, company car, stock ownership plan and more. Plus, your office in The Woodlands is only minutes from Houston, the nation's fifth largest city and home to leaders in education, athletics and the arts.

If you qualify, call Bill Weatherall COLLECT (713) 363-6670, or send your resume in confidence to Mitchell Energy and Development Corp., P.O. Box 4000, The Woodlands, Texas, 77380.

Petroleum Engineers

Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. is experiencing unprecedented growth! Our record 1981 capital budget of $456 million earmarks $91 million for exploration and $165 million for development. We have operations spanning the United States, and anticipate a continuous extension of our holdings.

The principal area of Mitchell Energy's exploratory and developmental activity lies in Bridgeport, Texas: an area just west of the Dallas/Ft. Worth metroplex. Undertakings here include the drilling of more than 200 wells annually, in addition to extensive secondary and enhanced oil recovery projects. In order to maintain our present level of activity and spur new growth, we need several staff level Engineers — Production and Drilling — to add to the Mitchell team.

Candidates should have a BS degree in Engineering and 5 years experience, including responsibility for drilling and completions, workover, secondary recovery, economic analysis, equipment design, and preparation of engineering reports.

Mitchell employees enjoy excellent salaries and a benefit package which includes company-paid hospitalization and life insurance with dental coverage, relocation assistance including mortgage interest differential, company car, stock ownership plan and more. Plus, you will enjoy the fast-paced lifestyle of the nearby Dallas/Ft. Worth metroplex: home to major sports teams and leaders in education and the arts.

If you qualify, call Bill Weatherall COLLECT, (713) 363-6670, or send your resume in confidence to Mitchell Energy and Development Corp., P.O. Box 4000, The Woodlands, Texas, 77380. Do it today!

EASTMAN WHIPSTOCK...

LEADERS IN DIRECTIONAL DRILLING

We're the first, the largest, and the best!

The first deviated relief well was guided by John Eastman in 1934. In 1972, almost forty years later Eastman merged with Whipstock Incorporated, it's major competitor. As a subsidiary of Petrolane Incorporated, Eastman Whipstock is still growing and pioneering new technology in directional drilling. The following is a career opportunity available at Eastman Whipstock.

DIRECTIONAL DRILLER TRAINEES: Our Midland district operation has an immediate need for directional driller trainees. Specific requirements for the positions include a minimum of 2 years drilling rig experience and deep hole drilling experience below 15,000 feet. On site training will encompass utilization of Eastman Whipstock's tools and specialized directional drilling concepts.

Interested and qualified applicants should contact: Dick Giffhorn or Ray Warner at P.O. Box 5577, Midland, Texas 79704, 563-0511. An equal opportunity employer, m/f.

is what we're after!

Dynamic growth by a major manufacturer of industrial products has created the need for an individual with the ability to sell and the skill to motivate and teach others to sell.

If selected, you'll be with an organization where the management trainees have the potential to earn over $25,000 in the first year, enjoy an excellent benefit program, and have unlimited opportunity for personal and professional growth.

If you're confident that you have leadership and sales management qualities, please call:

HOW DO YOU FEEL?

How would you feel if you were really important to a company? How would you feel if a real small company was just beginning to grow and really, really needed you? If you are ambitious, impatient, restless, outgoing, want more for your family, and you really want to make $23,000 your first year, then KEEP READING.
 We are a tiny, recession free, industrial chemical company that wants to grow, and we need more sharp people.
 Who are we? Good question. We're UNI-LAB CORPORATION. Small? Yes. We did one million dollars our first year, two million dollars our second year, four million last year, and will do seven million in 1980.
 Growth in management? Honestly, it is unbelievable with us. We really believe in those we select and we promote quickly. What kind of industry is the Industrial Chemical field? The most exciting field of all. Every business uses some form of industrial chemicals and we provide the expertise and the product.
 You ask, "Do I need prior experience?" Our answer: "We prefer you to have little or no experience, but a lot of drive."
 We are looking for ambitious people to work in the Midland area, who want to better themselves. If you can see yourself in this ad, it doesn't cost you a penny to call me. I'd love to talk to you about a career.

Famous baritone to perform with local opera

Baritone Matthew Murray of New York City will perform the lead in the Midland Opera Theatre's production of "The Merry Widow" slated for public performances at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., Saturday and April 26.

Performance times are 2:30 and 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 7:30 p.m. April 26. Tickets, priced at $8 for adults and $5 for students, may be purchased at the theater's box office. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

"The leading male vocalist originally cast for the part was transferred out of state on one-day notice after we had already begun rehearsals and no other local singer was available," explained Dr. Charles Lawson, Midland College music faculty member and general director and conductor for the opera.

"This forced us to look outside the community and there were no performers available within the state that we could obtain on such short notice. We feel that the addition of Murray will be a tremendous asset to the production."

Murray's professional debut was with the Mini-Met at Lincoln Center as Saint Ignatius in "Four Saints in Three Acts" and as Aeneas in "Dido and Aeneas." He has appeared in leading operatic roles with major companies including the Metropolitan Opera at the Forum, the Saint Paul Opera, the Minneapolis Civic Opera, the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston, the Metropolitan Opera in the Parks and the New Hampshire Music Festival.

He was chosen to play the leading role of Aaron Burr in the first performance of Al Carmines' "The Duel" and performed three premieres of Giancarlo Menotti's "The Egg," first at the National Cathedral, then at Spoleto-USA and later at the Festival dei Due Mondi in Italy.

He also has been heard with the Brooklyn Lyric Opera and with Sarah Caldwell and her Opera Company of Boston. He has performed in concert with the Brooklyn Philharmonic, Tulsa Philharmonic, Opera Orchestra of New York, Friends of French Opera, Palm Beach Symphonette and the Northeast Harbor Music Festival in Maine.

Soloist for almost a decade at Saint

Patrick's Cathedral in New York, Murray has also performed frequently at Saint Mary's Episcopal Church and was seen on national television when he sang before the Pope at Shea Stadium. He appears annually as soloist on the live NBC-TV telecast of the Christmas Midnight Mass from St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Born and raised in Minneapolis, Murray holds a bachelor's degree in music from the University of Minnesota, where he studied composition with Cominick Argento and Vittoria Giannini; and a masters in voice from the Manhattan School of Music, where he was a pupil of the baritone John Brownlee.

He performs works from six centuries of composers in all European voices and in Russian.

Trained as a composer, Murray has led choruses, plays piano and organ, is proficient on the clarinet and guitar, and teaches master classes and workshops on vocal guidance and training.

Last year's opera production of "Die Fledermaus" had two public performances and they were both sold out. This year there is an additional public show.

Matthew Murray

Where have all the viewers gone?

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Observers of television, insiders and outsiders, are spending a lot of cocktail dialogue on the subject of the networks' dwindling share of the prime time audience. The favorite question: Where are the viewers going?

New Technology zealots claim the answer is obvious. With nearly 18 million homes hooked into cable, they say, networks have to lose audience.

Detractors of the New Technology are currently in vogue. They like to go on about how tiny is the percentage of American homes equipped with video cassette units or hooked into cable. They have other suspects in the prime time audience theft — ranging from a new interest in books (is it possible?), to improved programming by independent stations, to amateur athletics.

Sound reasoning, all around. But to the other question, less asked but no less central — Why? Why are viewers fleeing network TV at the slow-but-sure rate of 1, 2 or 3 percentage points every three months?

The question has become passe in Hollywood, possibly because its answer is taken as an incontrovertible truth, beyond discussion. The answer, the simple truth, is that most network television, the front-line, day-to-day product, isn't very good.

To put it another way, here are some prime time attractions, as described by network publicists:

From ABC's "That's Incredible!" — "A Spectacular Team of Amputee Skydivers Sets a New Mid-air Record" — "Because each member has either an arm or a leg amputated, the (human star) formation was particularly difficult to achieve because of the aerodynamic effects on their different body shapes... Several of the one-legged club members carry their aluminum peg legs during free-fall and land perfectly on one leg before attaching the aluminum peg leg and walking away."

And — "A professional motorcycle stuntman challenges a speeding car to a daring duel inside a tunnel of fire; a victim of the mysterious fiery force known as spontaneous human combustion and one of its few survivors relives his terrifying experience." (A rather rare affliction, a science writer assures me.)

From ABC's "Vegas" — "Insane Performer Believes He Is The Real Wayne Newton..." Or at least, eccentric.

From NBC's "Friday Night at the Movies" — "The Harlem Globetrotters on Gilligan's Island." Relevancy makes a comeback.

And this from CBS, regarding an episode of its series "Flo" — "Just as a beer-loving tour group is due to visit the Yellow Rose, Flo learns to her horror that a vital part of the bar — the rest rooms — really belong to Randy's dad... and he's offering them for sale."

That's why.

There were 3 conditions to the $5 million dollar inheritance, and they had to be bathed twice a week.

New actor an uncommon man

NEW YORK (AP) — Early in his acting career here, Philip Anglim went to Joseph Papp's Public Theater to audition. He ventured a passage from Shakespeare's "Richard II."

"That's smashing, smashing," declared the lady running the audition. "But can you play the common man?"

Tough question. To date he's starred as: — A young Charles Adams in public TV's "The Adams Chronicles."

— John Merrick, the grotesque freak with the inner beauty, in Broadway's "The Elephant Man," for which he got a 1979 Tony nomination and which he's taped for a showing on ABC-TV next fall.

— The guilt-ridden main man in "Macbeth," that bloodiest of Shakespeare's major tragedies.

This is quite a lot for a man who is only 27. But being a Yale man as given to modesty as to sentences that parse, he doesn't gloat or suggest that maybe the Public's auditions lady goofed in rejecting him.

"I had a great problem when I came to New York in 1974. It was that there was a type of actor — best typified by Al Pacino — that was very much in vogue and still is in vogue.

"Not that it's wrong; great talents like Al Pacino should be in vogue. But there was a definite style, calling for a kind of urban street ethnic kind of actor. I tried very hard to be that.

"I wouldn't shave, I wore old blue jeans and work shirts," adds Anglim, well-mannered and from the upper middle-class of San Francisco, where his father is a lawyer and his mother an art dealer.

"But I was never very good at convincing people... and what she (the auditions lady) was saying was: 'You sound too well trained, this is not the kind of Shakespeare that we do.'"

So it's only now he's making his New York debut in a Shakespearean role. His "Macbeth," co-starring Maureen Anderman, is the first play ever staged by Sarah Caldwell, the famed opera director.

It's been noted Anglim is one of the youngest Macbeths in some time. He's researched the matter and found that in the 1920s and 1930s his role "became the province of middle-aged men.

Performing nightly at the Holiday Inn's Lusty Lady Lounge is A Touch of Class Duo, Larry and Mary Hauer, through May 2. The selections they perform include pop, rock, country and disco and appeal to those who like to dance ballroom style as well as two-step and disco.

Music led to marriage for performers

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

The group set up auditions. The hoped-for end result — a guitarist.

Finally, New Yorker Larry Hauer, who was living in Tucson, Ariz., at the time, was selected. His decision to join the group altered his lifestyle for his "I will" later became "I do." The year was 1975.

Today, Larry and Mary Hauer, originally of San Jose, Calif., are Oklahoma residents. They are currently performing through May 2 from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Holiday Inn's Lusty Lady Lounge. Billed as the "A Touch of Class Duo," the music they play varies from rock to easy listening, from country to pop, depending on the listener's preference.

"We were auditioning guitars and I liked him well enough to marry him," Mary said between sets Friday night. They both laughed.

Not only are they from opposite sides of the continent, their backgrounds are quite different.

Larry, who lived in New York City from "age of zero to 15," is not from a family that is music oriented.

However, his brother did have a guitar that an aunt had given my family have a dance group that does exhibitions of traditional Indian dances," Mary said, adding that other family members are deep into performing gospel music.

"While I was growing up, my mother played the organ in various restaurants. And from the time I was a little girl I have performed the Filipino tina-kling or bamboo dance," she added.

This particular dance takes great balance, coordination and quick reflexes, for it is done very fast and gracefully.

The Hauer's feel they may someday incorporate Mary's dance background into their performance. And, as lovers of jazz, old and new, they hope to "fuse jazz together with other styles of music."

Although jazz has a "good harmonic structure which is always expanding, it is a subtle, sensitive music actually designed for people who sit and listen."

And it is not the best choice to play in a lounge atmosphere because most have come to relax, have a few drinks and dance. Friday night's audience was no exception.

The Hauer's know how to please a dance seeking crowd, whether it be ballroom dancing, disco or country. They do it all. They also play rock and have performed heavy metal rock on certain gigs; however, Midland's Lusty Lady is not one of those engagements.

Although she plays the flute and electric piano, so far they have not incorporated either into this act.

Both sing and Mary plays the electric bass while Larry plays the electric guitar. Their equipment includes an electric drum box, which has a synthesized beat. This helps the two create the sound of a complete band.

She has a versatile voice and uses her range to its maximum. Her voice is as lovely when she is singing "I Know I'll Never Feel This Way Again" as it is in "Faded Love." She also does a nice rendition of "Funky Town" and "Blue Bayou."

Perhaps one of the nicest selections they perform together is "After the Loving." Her voice provides a harmonic background for his singing.

Although the acoustics could be better, the Hauer's create a nice sound. Each selection is touched by their style and none is a straight take-off of the popular rendition.

With each song they play, there is "A Touch of Class."

him. Larry watched him practice and his fascination grew. He couldn't resist. He had to play.

He overcame what for some might seem like an insurmountable obstacle.

"My brother is a natural lefty. I'm not. Since I used his guitar first and began learning by watching what he was playing, I play a left-handed guitar like a right-handed person. It's a habit in my brain I can't break," Larry said.

Mary, on the other hand, grew up in a music-based family.

"My dad (Navaho Indian) makes drums. Some members of

'Uncle Floyd' develops cult following

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Frank Sinatra first broke hearts from a roadhouse near Hoboken, where he sang and waited on tables for $25 a week. Rock star Bruce Springsteen conquered the Jersey shore playing two-bit bars before record companies took notice.

The Garden State's newest folk hero, 29-year-old Floyd Vivino, has emerged from similarly humble beginnings. As star of television's zany "Uncle Floyd Show," Vivino has developed a cult-like following that includes thousands of viewers in the New York City metropolitan area.

Five nights a week, loyal fans fiddle their TV dials seeking hard-to-find UHF channels in New Jersey and New York for an hour of side-splitting vaudeville, slapstick, corn and off-the-wall humor.

Children still watch "The Uncle Floyd Show," which originally was intended for kids, but it was their elders, relishing the frequent double entendres, who got the show going in a big way.

Part of the charm of "Uncle Floyd" is the rawness of the package. The funniest bits often are the ones with the mistakes left in.

"I think with a couple of million bucks, we can have a first-class production," Vivino says good-naturedly.

The actual budget, however, is best defined by the shoestring carried by Oogie, Floyd's orange-haired, wise-cracking puppet. Until a year ago, in fact, the studio consisted of a 16-by-20 converted living room in West Orange, N.J.

Vivino, clad in outlandish porkpie hat, flashy plaid jacket and striped bowtie, often plays the straight man in conversations with Oogie or in bantering with the puppet's five wacky sidekicks.

Vivino also possesses a diverse repertoire of characters himself. There's Don Goomba, for example, an opening his new supermarket. With a wad of cotton stuffed into his mouth, he promises, "We're gonna have express lanes, six items or less. But we're gonna enforce it. Six items or less or we'll break your legs."

Country stars to perform

The Midland-Lee Youth Centers are sponsoring an 8 p.m. May 9 Chaparral Center concert featuring country singers Tom T. Hall and Bill Anderson.

Tickets go on sale Monday at Chaparral Center, Music Haul and Endless Horizons in Midland. Tickets also will be sold in Odessa at Endless Horizon and Flip Side Records.

The concert is the annual fund-raising event of the year for the centers. Even though the centers are built next to each high school and their activities center around school functions, they are not a part of the school district. The money from this concert will go to maintaining the centers.

"The Uncle Floyd syndicated reruns like "Loony" Skip Rooney, a member of the "Uncle Floyd Show" cast. "We're the only ones in the country doing bits and sketches," says a local level."

Boy's Club Week to begin

A pool tournament on Monday will kick off a week-long series of special Diamond Jubilee events for the Midland Boys Club as over 750 members begin celebrating National Boys Club Week.

The week's festivities officially begin today for more than 1 million youngsters in some 1,000 Boys Clubs of America across the country. The young people also will be commemorating the Boys Clubs of America's Diamond Jubilee — a year-long series of national events marking the 75th anniversary of 53 independent Boys Clubs joining to form the national organization in 1906.

"We are proud to have been a part of that tradition since 1964, the year we joined the Boys Club movement," said Nick Sanchez, executive director of the Midland Boys Club.

The club has a full slate of special activities scheduled throughout the week including a pool tournament (for boys and girls ages 6-18) on Monday, arts and crafts on Tuesday, volleyball tournament and West Side Lions Club Show at Midland High on Wednesday, arts and crafts and pee wee softball game (Half Park) on Thursday, disco dance at Boys Club on Friday and roller skating 9:45 to 11 a.m. on Saturday.

Sanchez cordially invites everyone in the community to stop by the Midland Boys Club this week to get a first-hand view of the services and opportunities the club is providing for the youth of the community.

Palestinians reject Common Market peace proposals

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — The Palestinian parliament-in-exile has rejected Mideast peace proposals from both the Common Market and the Soviet Union, informed sources said Saturday.

The 314-member Palestinian National Council, meeting here for the past week, was expected to announce the rejection in a communique later Saturday, they said.

The sources said the Council rejected the European initiative because it ignores Palestinian "rights" and does not recognize the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people.

The initiative was formulated last summer when the Common Market said the Palestinians, including the PLO, should be involved in peace negotiations. But it stopped short of giving the recognition the PLO seeks.

The sources said Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's proposals for an international conference on the Arab-Israeli conflict also have been rejected.

"The fact of the matter is Brezhnev's proposals do not differ much from the Geneva conference and U.N. Security Council Resolution 242, which recognize the state of Israel," one source said.

The sources also said the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist group led by George Habash, rejoined the 15-member PLO executive committee, the guerrilla movement's highest policymaking board.

Mountaineer Lou Whittaker, whose most recent expedition was an attempt to climb K-2, the world's second highest mountain, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at Midland College.

Mountaineer to speak at MC

Washington mountaineer Lou Whittaker, who is planning a 1982 assault on the north face of Mount Everest, will speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Roadrunner Room of the Administration Building at Midland College.

Whittaker's appearance is co-sponsored by the Midland College Student Activities office, Ski Skeller of Midland and Jansport. His talk is free and open to the public.

Whittaker is a 51-year-old mountain guide who will be attempting to lead the first American expedition from China up the north face of the world's tallest peak. Lou's twin brother, Jim, was the first American to reach the summit of Everest, climbing in 1963 from Nepal on the south face, which was then the only approach.

The north slope has been climbed successfully by at least one Chinese team, a Japanese team and by a German mountaineer.

Whittaker says he plans a very strong team, but light in equipment. "We're going to be light and lean — humping our own loads without high altitude porters and only a couple dozen oxygen bottles. But all of us are professional mountain climbers. This is what we do every day."

Already selected for Whittaker's team are Seattle lawyer Jim Wickwire, 40, and Dr. Edward Hixson, 39, physician for the U.S. Ski Team and the expedition's doctor. Deputy leader will be Chris Kerrebrock, 25, New York; Phil Ershler, 29, Bellevue; George Dunn, 27, Seattle; Eric Simonson, 25, Tacoma; and Marty Hoey, 29, of Wauna, the only female member of the team.

Six other climbers will be selected later. With the exception of Wickwire and Hixson, all the team members have worked for Whittaker as guides at Mount Rainer, Mount McKinley and in South America.

Whittaker, who has climbed Mount Rainer more than 130 times, also will be at Ski Skeller, Oak Ridge Square, at 4 p.m. Wednesday for a free seminar on backpacking.

U.S. reportedly to stop selling nuclear fuel to Indian facilities

MADRAS, India (AP) — The United States has decided to end an agreement providing nuclear fuel to an Indian power plant because the Indians refuse to open their nuclear facilities to international inspection, the independent newspaper Hindu reported Saturday.

It said the United States plans to insist on continued control of spent fuel from the plant, despite its repudiation of the 1963 nuclear cooperation agreement with India that was to expire in 1983. The used fuel can be reprocessed to make plutonium for nuclear weapons.

In Washington, a U.S. official speaking with reporters before the Hindu story was published said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and visiting Indian Foreign Minister Eric Gonsalves had been unable to resolve the nuclear-fuel issue during a conference Friday. He said talks on the dispute would continue.

He bears with heavy, hot costume 'just for fun'

By BILL MODISSETT
Staff Writer

When "Boomer" crawled over the centerfield fence last year and ran onto the Midland Cubs diamond, the legend began.

This year the legend continues as Boomer's friends — young and old alike — grow in number.

Boomer's cuddly blue fur is familiar to all those loyal Cubs fans who frequent Cubs Stadium on warm spring or summer evenings. But the fans know only one side of Boomer — the costumed mascot of the Cubs who delights fans and foes when the Cubs are "at home" on Friday and Saturday nights.

Boomer unmasked is the essence of Boomer minus the costume. He's Phil Huchton, a 32-year-old Midland graphics consultant and lover of people and fun. When you're a giant blue bear that hangs around a professional baseball diamond, you have to be a lover of people and fun.

PHIL, WHO was born in Stanton although his parents lived in Forsan at the time, has been a Midlander about two years. Meet him casually and ask him what he does for a living and he'll say he "does PR work for the Midland Cubs." Phil explains that such a reply is a lot easier than trying to explain that you are the costumed bear mascot for a baseball team.

Midlander in Profile

When he moved to Midland and saw that the Cubs didn't have a mascot, Phil approached the team's management and suggested one. It just so happened that The First National Bank was thinking about sponsoring a costumed mascot — sort of Midland's answer to the San Diego Chicken — at that time. Boomer was born.

The decision on using a bear as the team mascot was obvious. The team's nickname is the Cubs. Boomer was given chaps, a vest and a hat — rounding out a distinctive "western" flavor.

While being Boomer is fulfilling for Phil, the costume does have its drawbacks, he notes. One is the weight — about 40 pounds dry. It's made of a fur-like material about the weight of a quilt.

FANS WHO were at Cubs Stadium when Boomer made his grand entrance last year and who think they saw him nearly fall as he came over the fence were exactly right. The costume is extremely bulky, Phil notes. It makes it difficult for him to see or hear.

"I can be in for maybe 20 minutes — 15 minutes if it's really hot," Phil said in noting the costume's limitations. The costume, however, is fully washable.

Reactions to Boomer vary. Most children — and adults — like Boomer. But some kids are scared.

Speaking of children, Phil said, "Their first time they have to stand back and study it just a little bit."

But even when small children aren't expecting to encounter a giant blue bear at the baseball park, "generally they'll just take me for a big, friendly teddy bear," Phil chuckled.

AND PHIL DOESN'T tire of being Boomer. "It's fun. It's about the closest you can get to running away and joining the circus," he noted.

Being a fun-loving person, Phil knows all about running away to join the circus. He did it just a little later in life than most and it wasn't exactly a circus he joined. Phil was attending Texas Tech University at the time. He dropped out to join a traveling chimpanzee show. But that didn't work out so he returned to Tech and ended up getting his bachelor of arts degree.

Now, as Boomer, Phil gets his kicks making others smile. "It's a fantasy for me," he notes, but is quick to add that in reality it's a double fantasy — one for him and one for the fans. Nobody really "sees" Boomer. After his appearance he can walk back into the stands and be a part of that action without even being noticed.

Phil has performed a lot of alterations to the Boomer costume just to make it "liveable." Still he has to watch his step. He's particularly careful when up in the stands since the costume restricts vision to either side or behind him. And when youngsters dart in front of him there can be a collision.

THE COSTUME TAKES more "body movement" than one might think, Phil explained. He must move the entire upper half of his body just to get Boomer's head to nod affirmatively.

For Phil, much of the excitement at Cubs Stadium is baseball and he's sold on the Cubs and sold on baseball. "It's just great family entertainment," he said.

And that's what being Boomer is all about — helping people to enjoy themselves. "It's good to give people a reason to laugh," he said.

Phil admits he wouldn't mind seeing Boomer gain the popularity enjoyed by the San Diego Chicken, that notorious fowl from the West Coast. But he notes that it's a different ballgame here in Midland.

"The chicken's got enough clout that the umpires will let him get away with a lot," Phil noted. The Cubs' management, Phil said, has instructed him to stay out of major altercations and he complies.

But there's also the fact that San Diego is a lot larger than Midland and the difference in the type of entertainment the two mascots try to provide. The chicken caters more to the adult crowd, Phil noted, while Boomer provides "family" entertainment.

"There probably won't ever be another chicken," he noted.

Go to Cubs Stadium and join in Phil's fantasy. He may not talk to you. Silly, bears can't talk. But chances are you'll get a bear-hug.

Talk about a bear hug...

Getting a hug from this bear is an experience this woman won't soon forget. For Phil Huchton, resembling a giant teddy bear is just one of the burdens (or benefits) of his job that he takes in stride.

New Mexico inmates hospitalized in stabbings

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Alcohol may have prompted the latest eruption at the violence-plagued State Penitentiary in which seven inmates were stabbed, a prison official said Saturday.

The prison was the scene of a bloody uprising Feb. 2-3, 1980, in which 33 inmates were killed by fellow prisoners. Since then, six inmates and a guard have died violently, all but one stabbed to death. There also has been a rash of non-fatal stabbings.

John Ramming, aide to Corrections Secretary Roger Crist, said the latest stabbings were committed by other inmates in a maximum-security unit in a disturbance that started when the prisoners in Cellblock 6 refused to return to their cells about 11 p.m. Friday.

"It is suspected alcohol was involved in the inmates' initial refusal to lock down," Ramming said. "The inmates appeared to be under the influence of alcohol in their original refusal to go back to their cells."

"We have no idea at this point if it was homemade or brought in. It's just suspected," he said. State police said there were no guards in the block at the time and "control was regained" by midnight.

Ramming said that the prison was quiet Saturday and that Warden Harvey Winans and state police were investigating the cause of Friday's violence.

Hotel moves its guests

NEW YORK (AP) — The fire-plagued Statler Hotel said Saturday it is moving about half its guests to other hotels, closing kitchens, reducing elevator service and refusing reservations in order to reduce power consumption.

The hotel said the power reduction was requested by Consolidated Edison, which was checking power transformers for possible water damage from a fire early Friday that forced about 1,500 guests to flee the mid-Manhattan hotel.

The fire started in a pantry near a ballroom two stories above the main lobby. It was the second at the hotel in as many weeks.

The cause of the fire was not officially determined, but the New York Daily News quoted Deputy Chief Fire Marshal Anthony Romero saying the fire had been set.

Nineteen people were treated at the scene for smoke inhalation and 20 others were taken to hospital emergency rooms for treatment. Three policemen and six firefighters were among the injured.

Mrs. Rado Archer pauses to pet her pooch in the entry way of her home on 3503 Cardinal Lane.

Hidden behind the walls of wealth and prosperity in Midland are homes of beauty and uniqueness that rival even Dallas and Houston.

Marti Plake and Mrs. Wayne Stringer discuss plans for the tour.

Midlanders will once again have a chance to peek inside the homes of some of Midland's wealthiest during the annual Parade of Homes sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club.

The event, in its twelfth year of operation, will be April 26 from 1-5 p.m.

All proceeds from the tour of homes will go to the Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP) in Midland.

Tickets are $5 for the entire tour. To obtain tickets, call 694-6573 or 685-0837. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Co-chairmen of the event are Mrs. David Mims and Mrs. Mark Withrow.

The four spectacular homes on view are varied in design and style, ranging from "avant-garde of the fifties" and Hill Country ranch house, to Southwestern contemporary and country-style French.

Rado and Janice Archer have resided at 1201 Douglas for the past two years with their two children Alyssa, 10, and Rado Jr., 5 years old.

He is an owner of SWADCO, an oil operation here. She is active in community projects, as a singer with the choir at the First Baptist church, voice teacher at Midland College and The University of Texas at the Permian Basin, and guest artist throughout the United States.

Built in 1958 by Houston architects, the house is interspersed with 18th Century antiques, including a Louis XV commode, 18th century Marie Antoinette bust, 1905 Wolff-Pleyel-Lym piano in 18th century style, antique Queen Anne chairs and Louis XVI breakfast.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Stringer, 3503 Cardinal Lane, was built in 1980-81 by Casabella Homes, a company owned by Mrs. Stringer who also is an interior decorator. Her husband is in the oilfield servicing business.

The house sits on three acres of land, and overlooks a duck pond and pecan orchard. Mrs. Stringer's Indian ancestors are reflected throughout the home in the many artifacts, paintings and arrowhead collections.

Exterior of the house owned by Gene and Joyce Sledge, No. 7 Hawthorne, is of stone from Dryden, Texas. It complements the Hill Country ranch house with stone and plants native to Texas.

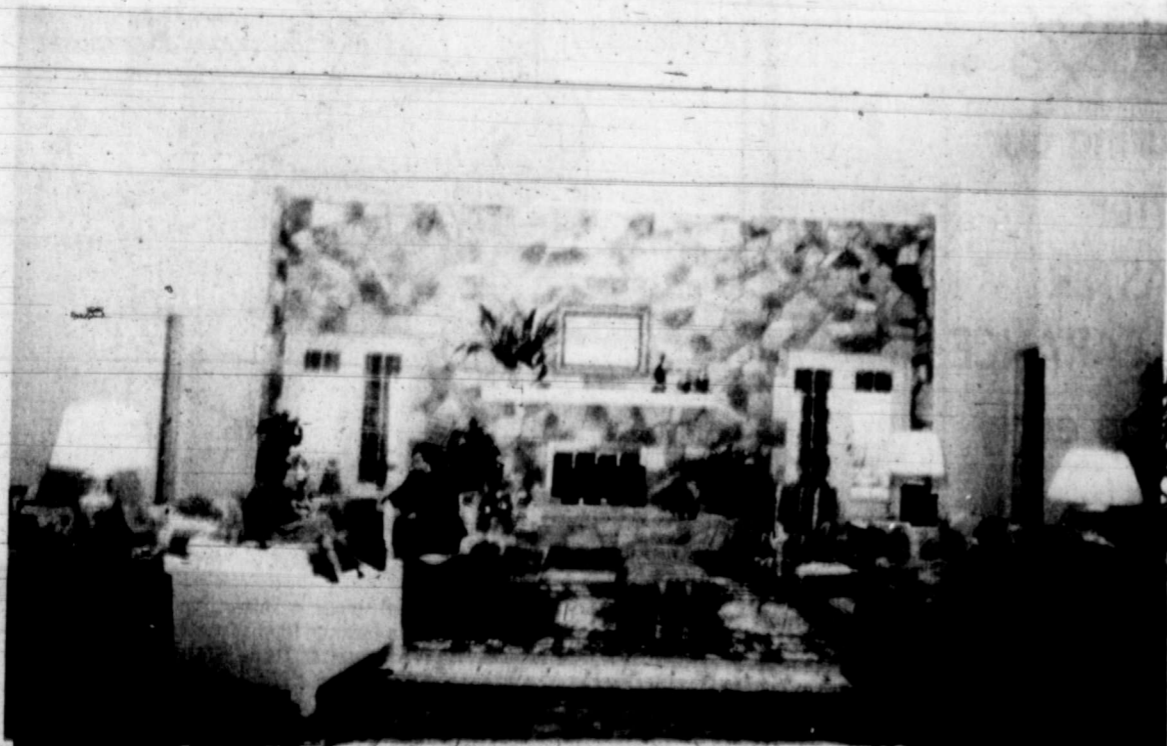

Architect was Doug Nolan. Mrs. Sledge designed the home herself for family living at home with privacy.

Sledge is an independent drilling contractor. They have three sons, David, Steve and Mike.

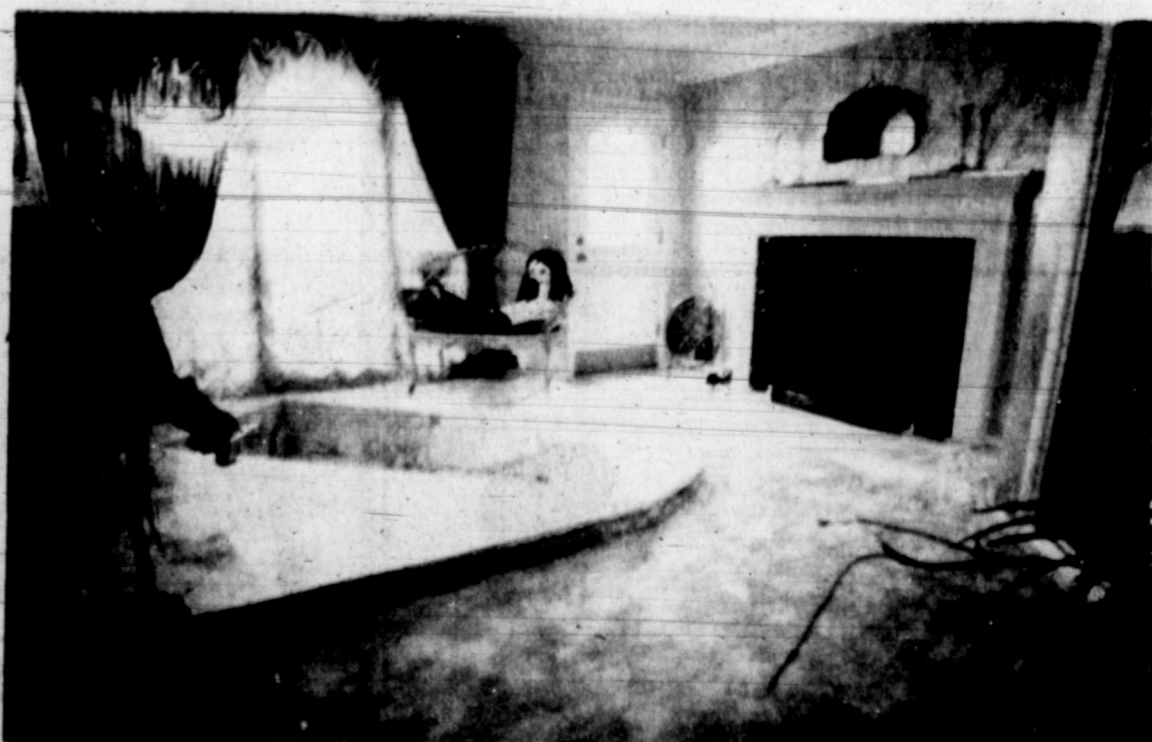

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Dawson, No. 4 Santa Anita, reside in a home of stained glass, antiques, and antique reproductions. An outstanding feature of the home is an amethyst crystal fireplace in the bathroom and a winding stairway in the entrance hall.

The house was designed and decorated by Tela.

A parade of homes

Home of Mr. and Mrs. Gene Sledge, No. 7 Hawthorne, is designed after a Hill Country ranch house. Shown are Brenda Faught and Mrs. Sledge.

What is more luxurious than a crystal fireplace in one's bathroom? Owners are the Gary Dawson's, No. 4 Santa Anita.

Dusty manuscripts recall drama of frontierwomen's lives

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Theoline Plummer, a young doctor's wife in the Kansas frontier town of Muscotah, was a little surprised when a tall, "ungainly-looking woman" showed up at her door asking for lodging one night in the late 1800s.

Mrs. Plummer and her husband noticed that the woman slept with her heavy satchel near her head, within easy reach. They thought her "a queer duck," but probably all right. When they awoke in the morning, she had vanished.

It was not until later that they learned the visitor had been the notorious outlaw, Jesse James. That anecdote about life on the frontier is a rare glimpse at a lighter moment in the struggles of pioneers to expand the United States westward.

Sixty years ago, Kansas feminist Lilla Day Monroe, an attorney and fighter for women's suffrage, began soliciting and collecting memoirs of women's lives as pioneers. Some 800 stories were indexed and filed, but they gathered dust in a filing cabinet until her great-granddaughter, Joanna Stratton, found them in her grandmother's Topeka, Kan., attic in 1975.

Ms. Stratton, 26, has edited the women's recollections into a montage of frontier glimpses entitled, "Pioneer Women: Voices from the Kansas Frontier," published last month by Simon and Schuster. The manuscripts are to be donated to the Kansas Historical Society.

"When people think of the pioneers, they think of women totally confined to the home, bound by a stereotype," Ms. Stratton said in a recent interview. "But in reading these manuscripts, I was surprised how really spirited and independent many of them were. Living on the frontier required a certain tenacity and independence."

Those qualities won the pioneer wife a respect and equality not accorded her Eastern sisters, Ms. Stratton said. She said the first woman mayor of an American town was Susannah Salter, in Argonia, Kan., in 1887. Women also won the vote earlier in the frontier states than they did in the East, she notes.

The stories tell of plagues of grasshoppers descending on a settlement, the insects so thick they blacked out the sun, their weight breaking branches of trees where they clustered to devour anything edible.

There were prairie fires that glowed on the horizons and threatened to wipe out a family's progress with a single change of the fickle winds. Blizzards, floods and tornadoes added to the perils. And loneliness made it all more difficult.

"It makes our troubles and problems seem so minimal," Ms. Stratton said. "Yet these women were very modest. They didn't look upon themselves as being particularly courageous."

One of the most dramatic stories Ms. Stratton discovered was that of Anna Brewster Morgan, who was captured by Sioux Indians in 1868 in north-central Kansas.

During a long captivity, Mrs. Morgan adjusted to life in an Indian village and eventually accepted a chief's proposal of marriage, "never expecting to see a white person again," recounted a neighbor who heard the story in a rare moment of reminiscing by Mrs. Morgan.

But the woman was shocked one day when her brother walked into her tent and saw her sitting there in Indian garb. Her brother, who was with the forces of Gen. George Custer, freed Mrs. Morgan in exchange for captured Indian warriors. But, she later confided to the neighbor, "I often wished they never had found me."

A few months later, Anna Morgan gave birth to a child fathered by her Indian husband. The child died at the age of 2, and the mother was believed to have died eventually in an asylum.

The story is one of the most poignant in the collection, which Ms. Stratton calls "a look at a generation of women that is unique."

AT WIT'S END

Those swinging singles

By ERMA BOMBECK

Someone did a survey on singles and found out they don't "swing" as much as marrieds.

Is that supposed to give me something to live for? Besides, I don't for a minute buy it. You think I'm naive?

I've seen all those Jill Clayburgh movies where she's breaking away and starting all over again. That girl never has to do so much as carry her own matches. She goes into a bar, takes out a cigarette and is illuminated like a shrine.

Taylor's honored with open house

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stanton Taylor, 1700 W. Francis, were honored with a 25th anniversary open house Saturday afternoon in their home.

Hostesses for the occasion were Fonda Lesley, Karen Lesley and Barbara Lesley.

Taylor and the former Frances Burris were married April 19, 1956, in Lovington, N.M.

They lived in Midland until November of 1969, when they moved to Bedford. The couple returned to Midland in 1971.

The Taylor's owned Shamrock Service Station and Frances' Beauty Shop. They are members of Oaklawn Baptist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have three children, Danny Ray Lesley of Shallowater and Troy Dennis Lesley and Alan Ross Lesley, both of Midland. They also have six grandchildren.

Teens need exercise instead of fad diets

A hint to those weight-conscious teenagers comes from Dr. Johanna Dwyer, president of the Society for Nutrition Education... EXERCISE.

Dr. Dwyer points out that anywhere from 3 to 15 percent of adolescents are obese, but that the basic problem is not energy intakes, but energy outputs.

In fact, she says, very large short falls may be observed when comparing energy intakes to Recommended Daily Allowances, especially among girls 12 to 17 years of age.

Thus, she concludes that altering lifestyles to include proper diets with more exercise and not "fad" diets is the answer to sustained weight control.

Children's clothes are big business this season

By BETTIJANE LEVINE
The Los Angeles Times

Probably the best-dressed — or at least the most-dressed — baby in the world is a 2-year-old Atherton, Calif., boy whose father (a Saudi prince) buys two custom-made wardrobes for his son each year. Last fall's $8,000 wardrobe included 85 outfits with every piece, including socks, monogrammed.

"Business is better than ever right now," says Marion Peak Jennison, whose Mon Petit Chou company makes the little prince's clothes. "And it's not just oil-rich immigrants or movie stars pounding at my doors. It's ordinary people who want baby clothes that will become heirlooms. There is a big search by parents these days for quality and tradition."

Children's-wear executives of major department stores say they agree. They are "trading up" for spring, they claim, concentrating on kids' clothes that offer high quality, traditional styling and — unfortunately — escalating prices.

"Prices are going up tremendously in all areas of kids' wear for spring," says Johanna Layton, merchandise manager of children's wear at Bullock's, a major Southern California department store chain. "Awareness of designer labels has spread all across the board. Such names as Izod, Calvin Klein, Gloria Vanderbilt, Ralph Laurn will be as available for kids as they are for grown-ups. It's a search for better merchandise and design — for a look that's passed down from father to son, mother to daughter."

This is not exactly good news to parents already at their wits' end over their children's unseemly interest in Gloria Vanderbilt rather than Mother Goose — parents who cannot easily afford the current prices of clothes, much less the more-expensive ones they'll be seeing this spring.

LAYTON SUGGESTS that children's current preferences for designer labels is a direct result of their "independence and their participation in the shopping experience" at an earlier age than ever before.

In fact, many retailers report that designer-label merchandise has stolen the children's-wear business right out from under the noses of venerable children's-wear manufacturers who've been making small-size clothes for up to 50 years.

But there are limits to the designer mania. Stores report there are prices beyond which parents will not go. Gloria Vanderbilt children's jeans, for example, have been best sellers at almost every store in which they're carried. But when Vanderbilt blouses arrived this year, at about $32 each, they did not sell well.

"The quality has to support the label and the price tag," says one retailer who asks not to be identified. "And Vanderbilt blouses simply did not stand the test."

One label that did stand the test is Izod — the firm that makes classic knit shirts with little alligators on the chest. Izod shirts, says Layton, are the "single largest unit seller for boys and girls in every size" at Bullock's stores. Stephen Summerfield, vice president and children's merchandise manager at Saks Fifth Avenue, explains the Izod phenomenon:

"It's a good example of what we'd call fine quality at a fairly high price — but not an insane price. Izod offers a consistency that parents have come to count on. When they pay $15 for a short-sleeved Izod girl's shirt, they know it will last long enough to be passed to a younger sister. It will wash well, it's classic enough so that it won't look ridiculous next year."

SUMMERFIELD SAYS SAKS is not falling head over heels for designer merchandise this spring because "most children's styles should not mimic adult styles. And that's especially true at Easter."

Peter Starett, divisional merchandise manager of the St. Louis-based May Co. stores, says designer names for kids will be around for some time to come — but with some revisions.

"Designer blouses didn't sell for fall," says Starett, "so prices are lower for spring." (Gloria Vanderbilt tops were priced at about $25 last year at the May Co.; this year they'll be priced in the high teens, Starett says.) And though designer jeans have been best sellers at the May Co., Starett says everyone realizes the trend can't last forever. "Most designer-name children's-wear firms are diversifying, getting into fashionable sportswear looks for kids rather than just jeans," Starett explains.

Lila Ryan, divisional merchandise manager for children's wear at Robinson's, another Southern California chain, takes a somewhat sociological approach to children's clothes.

"We're merchandising old-fashioned tradition for spring," Ryan says. "We'll present clothes from the small, fine firms that produce quality clothes that aren't remotely similar to clothes for grown-ups."

"Quality creates its own status," Ryan says, "and we will offer designer names only where we feel they have exceptional quality."

Children's-wear prices at Robinson's will be a tad higher than last year's prices — as they will be at most other stores. But Ryan believes parents are ready to shell out if they get their money's worth. And she has research to back it up.

"MORE WOMEN ARE WAITING until their 30s to get married. They're mostly wearing traditional white gowns for their weddings. There's a big increase in first births of children among older women. These new mothers are working women, they're more mature, more prepared to have kids. They've waited; they've worked the cost of the children into their budgets. They have a real desire to raise a family, and raise it in the right way. That means tradition. These people also are buying our best china, our best silver, our costliest furniture. They're not going to stint on their kids' clothes. They've made the commitment."

Ryan is not opposed to designer-name clothes. "Jordache is still a very viable name in our store. And there's a Calvin Klein customer in kids' wear because the mothers buy the name for themselves." But quality and an old-fashioned approach to little-kids' clothes is Ryan's prime concern, she says, because "that's the direction in which our whole society is going."

Minister finds sanctuary in a world of glass

By GEORGE ESPER
Associated Press Writer
JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) — When the Rev. George Hilsdorf goes on retreat, it isn't always to the monastery.

His sanctuary often is a world of glass menageries, swizzle sticks and goblets that he makes as a hobby.

For nearly half of his 69 years, Hilsdorf has been teaching chemistry at St. Peter's College and, when he gets tense, he works with glass.

"When you get uptight, when the pressure is on, when you can't sit down and study or correct papers, you do something else," he says. "Some people go to a show. Some people do this or that. But I like to go up and work with glass.

"You have to be a teacher to understand that there are times when you have too many things to do for the time available. At least you feel that way.

"You're worried about something that's going to come up a month from now. It's kind of silly but it's human. And maybe if you have failed to meet deadlines ... you'd be amazed how many deadlines teachers have to meet."

Semi-retired and teaching chemistry only part time, Hilsdorf was asked this semester to share his knowledge of glass in a non-credit workshop, "Artistic and Scientific Glass Blowing," which was open to the public but limited to eight students.

Hilsdorf also has studied the history of glass as a pastime.

"I'm no great scholar but I've read a lot about it," he says. Six people are enrolled in his class, including an electrician whose father had been a glass blower, a woman grammar school teacher, a retired plumber and a priest.

"We got six," he says. "I was amazed. I didn't expect to get one. Ask yourself who would be interested in this kind of thing. You have to reach these people. The people who signed up heard about it only because of the extraordinary publicity in the newspapers. They had been looking to find some course like this. Few are available."

Hilsdorf says glass blowing can be done at home.

"The equipment they would need is not that much."

The Jesuit priest also visits high schools to give demonstrations to students.

Certain operations are done by machinery but the complicated glassware is still done by hand, a lot of it down in South Jersey."

Hilsdorf became interested in glass while he was doing graduate work at Canisius College in Buffalo, N.Y., in the early 1940s. His professor had worked as a glass blower in Rochester to put himself through college.

Hilsdorf had to use glass for vacuum experiments. Since the college didn't have a glass blower, he had to make his own. He developed the hobby out of necessity.

"Once you start working with a medium like that and you develop a little bit of skill, you enjoy doing it and you want to make things," he says.

Hilsdorf will turn 70 next November and will retire permanently in June 1982.

What will he do? "I may continue fooling around with this kind of thing," he says.

Judge Culver to speak at Secretaries Day Luncheon

Judge Barbara Culver will speak at the Professional Secretaries Day Luncheon on Wednesday in honor of Professional Secretaries Week, April 19-25.

The judge was appointed three years ago to fill a vacancy for the 318th

District Court in Midland and ran unopposed for a four year term as judge of this court in 1978. She is a native Texan, born in Dallas. She received a bachelor of arts degree in journalism from Texas Tech University and earned a law degree from Southern Methodist University.

Judge Culver has served as a party delegate to the state convention, on numerous professional law committees and on several community boards of directors. She served as Juvenile Court Judge in Midland County from 1963 to 1978 and is also a member of the Permian Basin Juvenile Council.

Also during the luncheon, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association will announce the 4th Annual Energy Secretary of the Year Award. The award was originated to honor the many dedicated and hard working secretaries in the oil and gas business.

Class focuses on ways to ease job-related stress

PROVO, Utah (AP) — As men and women wrestle with job commitments and family responsibilities, tensions and problems can escalate, say faculty members of Brigham Young University.

In an effort to head off family stress and discord, BYU's School of Management is following the lead of two Eastern universities, Harvard and MIT, in helping future businessmen and women and their spouses deal with job-related family stress.

Twenty couples, all graduate students in the School of Management and their spouses, are taking the new course, "Work, Career and Family: Integration or Battleground." The class will explore job mobility and relocation, business travel, dual-career families, and family goals vs. career goals.

The course evolved at BYU because increasing numbers of MBA students found the demands of their graduate work making substantial claims on their family time.

Dr. Thomas DeLong, professor of secondary education, is team teaching the class with his wife, Camille, a marriage and family therapist in private practice, and Dr. Paul R. Thompson, assistant dean of BYU's Graduate School of Management.

Here's the answer
By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — The brass knob on our door has become tarnished. How should I remove the old finish and what should I use to put on a new finish?

A. — Brass generally is coated with lacquer when new. To remove it, use lacquer thinner. Lacquer thinner is volatile and flammable, so use it with care where there is plenty of ventilation and no open flame. You may have to go over the knob two or three times. Once all the old finish has been removed, clean and rub the brass thoroughly to get off any dirt and fingerprints that might have attached themselves to the metal while you were taking off the finish and polishing the knob. Once you are convinced that the knob is spotless, apply a coat of lacquer diluted 50 percent with lacquer thinner. Allow to dry and apply a second and possibly a third coat of the lacquer mixture.

Q. — The outside of our house is badly in need of painting. It has what my neighbor calls an alligator surface. Must it be scraped off or can we paint over it?

A. — You didn't give enough details, such as the kind of wood, the kind of finish, etc. But an alligator surface can occur from a variety of reasons, among them putting on too heavy a coat over one that has not dried thoroughly. Generally, an alligator surface requires that all of it be scraped off before repainting. The one exception is when the cracks are very thin and there is no indication that water has seeped through them. In that case, a sanding may be sufficient before repainting.

Q. — About two years ago we finished a bedroom bureau with varnish. It still looks fairly good and probably would be all right with a cleaning. However, my husband has read about how wonderful polyurethane varnish is and now he wants to refinish the bureau with it. I maintain that it isn't necessary — that the finish won't look much different anyhow. Can you straighten this out for us?

A. — This reply has nothing to do with straightening out anything, but will attempt to give you the facts and nothing more. There is no doubt that polyurethane varnish is an excellent product. It is fairly easy to apply, dries more quickly than conventional varnish and is very durable. Also, it is more expensive than regular varnish. If the cabinet still has a nice appearance and does not show any sign of deteriorating — which it shouldn't — there does not seem to be any reason to refinish it.

Clean teeth don't decay

Dr. Michael C. Alfano, director of Fairleigh Dickinson University's Oral Research Center in New Jersey, reports that studies now show "no direct relationship between the sugar content of foods and dental caries."

"There is a lot more to dental disease than just a sweet tooth. Contrary to popular belief, many other characteristics of a food or beverage are just as important, if not more so, than the sugar content," said Dr. Alfano.

One point that he makes is something that should be kept in mind whenever the subject of dental caries is discussed — "a clean tooth never decays."

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Remove shine from slacks with vinegar

DEAR HELOISE:

Who can afford to replace a pair of slacks that have become shiny when the rest of the suit is still in perfect shape?

Is there any way to remove the shine so a little more wear can be gotten before the rag bag gets the slacks? — M.A.M.

The reason the slacks are shiny in the first place is that the fibers have been mashed down, either from being pressed too hard with a hot iron or from everyday wear and tear from sitting. You might check that office chair to make sure the cushion isn't soiled, causing damage, or be sure there is a cushion in that chair, as this sometimes causes the shine on pants.

To remove shine, dip a terry cloth in pure white vinegar, wring it out and rub the daylight out of that shiny spot. Rub north and south, then east and west. This should release most of those mashed-down fibers and give your garment a shine-free finish.

Don't press the garment after giving it this treatment, as you'll just press the nap down again. Let it dry. The vinegar will not leave an odor.

Depending on the degree of damage, you might try what professional drycleaners use: a very fine grade of sandpaper (double 0 — finer than an emery board). By gently rubbing the fine sandpaper over the shiny area, it will loosen some of the fibers in the threads so they stand up, restoring the fabric's original appearance.

Just a word of caution, though: Before using the sandpaper, consider the degree of damage, weave of fabric and color.

Hope this saves that suit, and have a good day! — Heloise

HIGH AND DRY

Dear Heloise: One Easter morning,

'Junk food' a myth

Dr. R. Paul Abernathy, director of the Department of Foods and Nutrition at Purdue University's School of Consumer and Family Sciences, says "there is no valid definition for a 'junk food' or a 'nutritious food.'"

Many foods commonly lumped into the junk food category are actually more nutrient-dense than foods considered nutritious, he points out.

Another of Dr. Abernathy's theories is that one reason for the increase in lifespan of the average American since 1900 is the variety and moderation in the daily diet.

He says that a diet based on a variety of foods almost assures a good balance of nutrients. Thus, there is a place for those "enjoyable" foods...confections, potato chips and other things that some people call "junk."

When I was about to hide eggs for my little 3-year-old, I discovered the grass was still damp.

Not wanting the eggs to get wet in case the colors should run, I thought about some bright yellow golf tees I had.

They made perfect little "egg stands" and the "hidden" eggs were easy to spot by my little toddler. — Margot L'Heureux

Now that's an "egg-ceptional" idea! — Heloise

TRAVELING 'BRIGHT'

Dear Heloise: With the gas prices soaring these days, instead of putting all my hard-earned money in the gas tank, not to mention the lack of exercise from driving everywhere, I put my car in the garage.

Now I ride my bicycle nearly everywhere I go. But I was ashamed of the rustiness — of the bike, of course — so one afternoon I began cleaning it up and trying to remove the rust spots. No luck!

That evening, while cleaning a greasy pan with a soap pad, the thought crossed my mind that it might do as good a job on the bike.

First thing the next day I again tackled my bike, this time using the soap pad. Cleaned the tires, the frame and the chrome!

Now I ride around with a shiny bicycle and am staying trim, to boot! — Peddling Along

I admire your determination and enthusiasm. Keep it up and hopefully the rest of us will catch up. — Heloise

CHECK THE FREEZER

Dear Heloise: With vacation time just around the corner, I know a sure way to check when you return to see if the electricity has been off, thawing the food in your freezer then refreezing it.

Before you leave, empty a tray of ice cubes into a shallow pan. If the electricity was off long enough for the ice cubes to melt, they will refreeze into a solid mass of ice. Then you'll know! — Virginia

Send your favorite travel hint to Heloise care of this newspaper. She can't answer your letter personally but she will use the best trip tips received in her column.

Lifestyle guidelines

The following are suggested guidelines for publication of stories in the Lifestyle Department of The Midland Reporter-Telegram:

Information for our Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Tuesday; or two days before publication in a daily paper.

Engagement announcements must appear at least four weeks before the wedding date. Wedding stories must be submitted within a week of the event.

Engagements, weddings, anniversaries and club notices must be submitted in writing. All materials should include the name and telephone number of the person submitting them. The Reporter-Telegram has forms for engagement and wedding announcement stories.

We cannot mail pictures or forms to persons living within Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication.

Only the bride's picture will be used with both the engagement and wedding announcement.

Pictures should be black and white, preferably glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but they may reproduce poorly. Good reproduction cannot be assured when color prints are used. In general, snapshots are not acceptable.

There is no charge for publication of pictures and stories.

Girls in unique program

"Caterpillars and Butterflies" is a unique program offered to mothers and daughters, kindergarten through seventh grade, at Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

"Program is based on the principle that as caterpillars turn into beautiful butterflies, God wants little girls to become Christian women," explained one of the mothers involved in the program.

The Bible verse Psalms 139:14, "I am fearfully and wonderfully made," serves as the motto for the group. The group also has its own song and special t-shirts.

The mothers use a planned curriculum and adapt it to the age level of their daughters. "Spiritual, social, and physical development are areas explored together by mothers and daughters," said a program spokesman.

Groups meet weekly for meetings and outside activities. Each meeting includes a devotional planned and presented by a mother and her daughter, refreshments prepared by a mother and daughter and a lesson planned by the mothers.

Program was begun two years ago by four mothers and their daughters and has grown to include almost 25 girls and their mothers. It was started as an alternative to other girl's clubs in order to bring the girls and their mothers closer together, according to a group member.

Depression-era kitchen secrets recorded for future generations

By SUSAN STOLER
AP Writer

SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Few modern cooks would return to the days of backyard hog-killings, wringing chicken necks or rendering lard.

But for the curious and those who remember such once-routine, rural activities of the Depression, author Louise Blackwell Dillow has recorded them for posterity.

Her "Mrs. Blackwell's Heart of Texas Cookbook" recalls days of growing up on a farm near Corsicana when the only store-bought things were flour, salt, sugar, coffee and tea.

"My whole memory of my mother is her preparing food. She did that all day long," said the retired child welfare worker who was born fifth of nine children.

Published by Corona Publishing Co. of San Antonio, the book's first printing of 6,000 copies is being marketed only in Texas.

The project started strictly as a way to preserve family recipes.

Once on a trip home to Corsicana, Mrs. Dillow drove around to see the numerous homes she had lived in when her father was a tenant farmer. Hardly anything remained.

She and her sisters began reminiscing about their mother's well spread table and soon regretted that few family recipes were written down.

She took it from there, collaborating with an older sister, Deenie B. Carver, on the cookbook which combines anecdotes of growing up with recipes from a country kitchen.

"I don't expect people to try everything," Mrs. Dillow said during an interview on her beachfront condominium.

"Lye soap is one of the 'good ol' days' products that I've never had a hankering to go back to," she writes.

In a section on chicken, she adds, "The gizzard was a coveted piece of chicken in the Blackwell family until someone told us that eating gizzards would make a girl's breasts grow bigger."

The Blackwell family boasted seven girls and two boys.

Mrs. Dillow went off to Mary Hardin Baylor College in Belton for a bachelor's degree, attended the University of Chicago and earned a master's degree from Howard University in Washington. She worked in child welfare departments across Texas, married and reared three children in the Washington, D.C., area where her husband worked for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

They retired to this South Texas resort where he died less than a year ago.

She said she had to leave the cotton fields of North Central Texas to appreciate her childhood but she does not paint a rosy picture of the Depression.

"We knew we were poor and we didn't like it. My parents were always wanting to do better for us. We came out all right in spite of it, not because of it," she said.

Meals were cooked on a wood-burning stove and there was no electricity.

"If it got too hot in the summer, we'd get in the Model T, if we could afford the gas, and take a drive to let the breeze cool us," she remembered.

Beef could not be stored long and the family would eat steaks.

"Can you imagine," she said.

Chicken was reserved for Sunday dinner. Pork was the second-favorite meat, often consumed with red-eye gravy.

Other regular fare at the eight-foot-long table were fresh vegetables from the family garden, potatoes, rolls, cornbread, pies, cakes and cobblers.
Her favorite recipes remain beet pickles, Sunday chicken and coconut cake.

TSS suspected in high school queen's death

DALLAS (AP) — An 18-year-old high school homecoming queen has died after a two-week battle with what doctors suspect was toxic shock syndrome, a rare disease linked to the use of tampons.

Julie Thrash, a senior at DeSoto High School, became ill after returning March 30 from a church-sponsored ski trip to Red River, N.M.

Two days later, suffering from nausea and running a high fever, she was admitted to Charleton Methodist Hospital's intensive care unit.

"All indications point to toxic shock syndrome, but the final laboratory work has yet to be completed," her parents, Lefty and June Thrash, said in a prepared statement issued after Miss Thrash's death early Wednesday.

An autopsy report is due Friday, officials said.

Three other Texas women are known to have died from the disease since researchers at the federal Center for Disease Control linked it to tampon use last year.

It's 'Secretaries Week'

President Ronald Reagan has proclaimed April 19-25 as National Professional Secretaries Week, which will be honored this week in Midland.

"Secretaries Week provides a special opportunity to recognize the invaluable contributions of the nation's secretaries to American business and government," he said in a prepared statement. "They deserve our respect and admiration for their dedication to a trying and difficult profession."

Also saluting Secretaries Week on the state and local level are Gov. Bill Clements and Midland Mayor Thane Atkins. In proclaiming April 22 as Professional Secretaries Day, Clements urged all citizens to recognize the efforts made by secretaries in the operation of industries, education, the government and the professions.

While Professional Secretaries International (formerly the National Secretaries Association International) will sponsor the designated week on a national level, the Permian Chapter of PSI and the Tall City Chapter of PSI will honor the week locally.

The theme of the Permian Chapter, PSI's Professional Day Luncheon is "Secretaries are Professionals Too." The chapter invites all area secretaries and their bosses to attend the luncheon, April 22. Judge Barbara Culver will be the speaker and the Permian Basin Petroleum Association will announce the winner of the 4th Annual Energy Secretary Award.

For more information, contact Caroline Belew at 682-9779 or Nelda Timberlake at 682-1657.

CLUB NEWS

SAND & SEED GARDEN CLUB

A bonsai tour at the home of Wanda and Buddy Ice of Odessa followed the regular meeting of the garden club in the home of Frankie Stanley. The Ice family has an extensive collection of bonsai trees, many of which grew in a specially designed bonsai house.

The slash pines which the club planted at the Senior Citizens Center are doing well, it was reported. Next meeting of the group will be 9:30 a.m. May 14 at the home of Sharon Dunnam, 2206 Stanolind, and will include installation of new officers.

There will also be a horticultural tour of a landscaped lawn and a luncheon at Green Tree Country Club.

Moskowitz show

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — An exhibition of recent paintings and drawings by New York artist Robert Moskowitz is being shown at the Walker Art Center through May 10.

Romanian artists

CHICAGO (AP) — The first American tour of the work of the Romanian artists Ritzl and Peter Jacobi is being shown at the Museum of Contemporary Art through June 14.

The museum says "the Jacobis have gained world recognition for their revolutionary use of fiber in three-dimensional forms. This exhibition shows the personal structures and techniques they have developed over the past decade since their emigration from Romania to West Germany."

Teri Thomas, new volunteer, right, practices for the American Cancer Society Residential Crusade with Liz Chancellor, crusade chairman.

American Cancer Society sets Residential Crusade

American Cancer Society Residential Crusade begins today and will last through April 27.

Volunteers will be visiting homes in their own neighborhoods to present educational material on cancer and to raise funds for the Cancer Society in Texas.

One of the major reasons for the crusade is to provide important information on safeguards against cancer, according to Delia Presley, Midland Unit Director of the American Cancer Society.

Ms. Presley and Liz Chancellor, residential crusade chairman, also noted that a volunteer will be presenting information on how the funds raised will be used in Texas. Ms. Presley pointed out that all the money raised in Texas will be used in Texas alone.

Of every dollar raised, 38 cents will be used for cancer research. Thirteen cents is earmarked for professional education, fellowships and services. Twenty-four cents of every dollar will go toward public education.

Also, 22 cents will be used for providing cancer patients with various services, which include comfort items, sickroom equipment, information/guidance and rehabilitation. Ms. Presley noted that these services are free and are available to all cancer patients, regardless of income. A portion of this 22 cents is used for providing cancer detection for the public.

Six cents of each dollar will pay for program development and administration, and 11 cents will be used to defray costs of the actual crusade.

This adds up to $1.14. The additional 14 cents reflects increased research allocations to Texas by the National Cancer Society.

For more information on the crusade or available services, contact Ms. Presley at 683-7346.

Spruce up your home's exterior with a coat of protective stain

By DENISE FOWLER
Copley News Service

Ah, spring! It's the perfect time of year for sprucing up your home inside and out. Take advantage of the long cool days and get projects out of the way before the lazy days of summer arrive.

If, for example, you have a home made of natural wood which has never been painted, you may want to give it a coat of protective stain. According to Minwax Co., a manufacturer of wood finishing products, natural wood homes require a little special care. To keep wood looking beautiful, it has to be protected against the wilds of weather and wear.

If your wood home is new and has never been given a coat of protective stain, or if it's been several years since it was last done, this may be the year to consider it. Take an objective look at the outside of your house and don't forget to include decks, railing, fencing, even outdoor furniture. Does the wood look a little gray and faded, a little "the worse for wear?"

Remember that your house is continually exposed to cold, biting winter winds, months of hot, dry summer weather and rainy, muggy springs. These can all take their toll on natural wood.

If you have a little bit of the do-it-yourselfer in you, you can easily give new life to your wood home with no expense other than what you pay for materials.

Your first step should be a visit to your local expert, usually found in a hardware store, home center or paint store that carries a full line of exterior wood finishes and related products.

There are generally three types of exterior wood finishes: clear preservative for the natural look of wood, semi-transparent which colors the wood without hiding the natural grain and texture and solid color which subdues the grain while enhancing the wood's natural texture. Choose a penetrating finish that is going to give the optimum protection against moisture and fungus. These are the two biggest enemies of exterior wood — moisture can cause the wood to warp and crack and fungus can result in rotted, decayed wood.

Pick a day for applying the finish that is clear and warm, but not too hot. Before applying an exterior wood finish, make sure the wood is clean and dry. Then use either a brush, roller or sprayer, depending on the texture and type of siding. Rollers work well on smooth surfaces, brushes are better for shakes and clapboards. Start at the top of the house and work down. Careful application ensures that the finish will seal every crack and crevice in the wood.

This summer electricity will cost at least 50% more than last summer.

Here's why:

- All the fuels we use to make electricity are more expensive. As longstanding contracts for low-cost natural gas expire, new gas costs a lot more, and the price keeps climbing. Even lignite coal, our most economical fuel, is becoming more expensive.
- Since last summer, a rate increase has been approved and gone into effect.
- You'll see the full effect of these increases — fuel costs and the rate increase — this summer when electricity usage is at its highest level.

Here's what you can do to help hold down your bill:

- Leave your air conditioner off unless you really need it. It probably uses more electricity than your lights and all your other appliances combined.
  - When you're away from home, turn it off.
  - At night, unless it's really hot, turn it off. Try sleeping with open windows and a fan to circulate the air.
- Turn off anything that's not in use.
- Live a little warmer. The higher you set your thermostat, the more electricity you'll save.
- Use fans to keep air moving. It feels cooler.
- When the air conditioner is on, keep your cool inside. Close windows, doors, blinds, draperies and fireplace dampers.
- If you're installing or replacing an air conditioner, be sure it's energy-efficient. Use the "Energyguide" on every new unit to compare. It may cost more, but it will help you hold down your electric bills.
- Weatherstrip, caulk and insulate. Call us for free booklets that show how to do it, or to learn when we'll have an "Operation Tighten-Up" workshop in your neighborhood.

DEAR ABBY

Husband's pep partner fast losing her cheer

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I've been married for five months and I'm just about all in. I think my husband is trying to set a record. You never saw a guy with so much pep!

I said to him last night, "I do believe you married me just to have somebody to sleep with regularly." He said, "Sure, dummy. What else would a man get married for?"

I took it as a put-down. He said it was a compliment. What would you call it? — LUCILLE

DEAR LUCILLE: Stupidity.

DEAR ABBY: I recently met a man who is charming, attractive, intelligent and holds a responsible position at a bank. We've dated several times and relate to each other very well, but he has one strange idiosyncrasy that bothers me. He will not shake hands with anyone. It's very awkward when someone extends a hand to greet him and he keeps his arms folded. He compensates with an enthusiastic greeting and a very warm smile, but he will not shake hands!

He has held my hand (in a movie) and doesn't seem afraid to touch me, but his refusal to shake hands with people puzzles me. Is there something seriously wrong with him? I am very much interested in this man, and he seems equally interested in me. — CONCERNED IN SYRACUSE

DEAR CONCERNED: The man is clearly a mysophobic — one who has an abnormal fear of contamination. He needs to shake hands with a competent therapist.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are to be married soon, but we have one large problem. Religion!

I love my church and my religion. He never goes to his church and doesn't really care about it. When we get married, he wants me to change religions because he doesn't like what mine is. He says he will give up his religion for any other if I will also give up mine. Abby, for him to give up his religion is nothing big, but for me to give up mine would be like giving up a very important part of my life.

I told him, "No, I will not change, and I am not asking you to." I don't care if he stays what he is, but I want to stay what I am.

I truly love this man, Abby. Do you think I am right in saying no? — ALMOST MARRIED

DEAR ALMOST: Yes, unless you want to be married to a man who is selfish, unfair and insensitive to your spiritual needs.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from BETHLEHEM, PA., about a woman's insensitivity to her mother's suicide threat, touched me deeply. Nine years ago my mother — in a "middle-age menopausal depression" — DID commit suicide. She never threatened, she just took her life without warning. It was a shock from which my father, my sister and I will never recover.

Consider this letter a plea to depressed, suicidal women and men to swallow false pride and ask for psychiatric help and family understanding. The best definition of suicide that I've ever heard is, "It's a permanent solution to a temporary problem." — C.K. IN SAN FRANCISCO

The group met in the home of Nada Davis. Next meeting will be a workday.

WESTERN HO-DOWN

Take Off Pounds Sensibly (TOPS) Chapter 122 held a Western-Ho Down social recently, including scenes of a sing along around the campfire, tables decorated with red and white checked tablecloths and old lanterns.

Winner of the "Best dressed oldtimer" award was Rita Richardson. Club's best loser for the week was Sheirran Hughes. Barbara Lasater gave a speech on "This is Your Life."

TOPS meets at 7 p.m. on Thursdays. For additional information, contact Priscilla Davis at 694-6742.

NEWTIMERS BRIDGE

Newtimers Bridge Club met at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Game results were: Juanita Hodges, first; Louise Morris, second; and Phyllis Stine, third. Guests were Gail Travis, Pat Weyle and Jerry Chapman.

RANKIN BRIDGE

An Easter theme was carried out when Velma Lane entertained the Rankin Bridge Club in her home.

High scorer for the afternoon was Jean Fitzhugh. Other winners were Margie Smith, second; Maydelle Jackson, third; and Sug Bloxom, low scorer. Guests were Ms. Fitzhugh, Bess Thompson and Mildred Workman.

PROGRESSIVE STUDY CLUB

Members of Progressive Study Club met at Museum of the Southwest for a tour of the current exhibits. Now showing is the "Eiteljog Collection," a display of paintings by the Taos painters; prize winners in arts and crafts by students in Midland schools; and an exhibit of "light" art.

Mrs. Joe Rhodes and Mrs. R. F. Mathews were hostesses. Guests were Mrs. Gus Jones and Mrs. P. D. Green.

Slow down and enjoy food

Did you know that it takes a full 20 minutes for your stomach to give your brain the message that it is full? For speed eaters, this becomes a real problem that manifests itself at the waistline. In 20 minutes, a top notch speed eater can consume a large pizza or eat seconds of everything and still get a dessert in. Slow down!

If necessary, use a 20 minute timer at first. Make sure your mouth is empty before you take another bite. Lay your eating utensil down between bites and don't even pick it up until you have swallowed. Remember, you can only taste the food while it is in your mouth. Slow down, enjoy eating and you will eat less.

Psychiatrists studying infants with mental problems

Doctors subject children to intensive therapy at early age

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — "Willie" was only 4 months old, but his face wore a worried expression out of harmony with his age. His mother smiled and hugged him close, crooning softly. But he arched his back, held himself away from her, and stared stubbornly over his shoulder in the opposite direction.

At 4 months, when a baby should be in love with the world, Willie refused to look at any human face.

"The baby is honest," Dr. Stanley Greenspan said as he watched the videotape of the infant and his mother. "He'll carry the history with him. He won't perform for the camera."

Willie was perhaps the most troubling of the 100 "high-risk" infants being studied at a mental health research center in Adelphi, Md., where Greenspan and other psychiatrists are delving into the core of the human personality. Their goal: to learn whether babies whose early development is being derailed by a bad relationship with their parents can be identified, and to try to prevent permanent damage to the infants' intellect and emotions.

Psychiatrists approach babies with methods very different from the couchside analysis and dream interpretation that have come to symbolize orthodox psychotherapy for adults. Yet, Greenspan and other specialists say that a baby only a few months old can have mental problems just as real as an adult's, and potentially more crippling. Since babies can't talk, the specialists watch for warning signs such as failure to make eye contact, lack of interest in the world, refusal to eat, constant crying or sleeping, even repeated vomiting. Such symptoms have many causes — but in some babies, they are evidence of a dangerously disturbed parent-infant relationship.

Therapists working in experimental programs such as Greenspan's treat each infant with tactics tailored to the baby's particular problem, level of development and family environment. Therapy can include adding or subtracting sensory stimuli, exercising overly tense muscles, providing affection or communication that is missing at home, and counseling parents about their infant and their own reactions to him.

What happened to Willie and his mother, as recounted by Greenspan and glimpsed in videotapes that chronicled their progress over the following year, testifies to the promise of this new branch of science. The success of experimental therapy for them, and for other vulnerable babies and mothers, could influence future efforts to prevent child abuse, learning disorders and juvenile delinquency. As health planners consider the costs and benefits of psychiatry, some predict that early infancy may turn out to be one period when careful evaluation and counseling — whether by a doctor, nurse, psychologist or social worker — can make a difference. Others worry that the cost may be too high, or that babies or parents might suffer from being labeled as problems.

The U.S. surgeon general, child psychiatrist Julius Richmond, believes research such as Greenspan's helps doctors learn how to identify infants who face the greatest risk of intellectual and emotional damage. He agreed that for the most disturbed, intensive early therapy may prevent problems later. But he said that might take years to find out.

"One needs to be very cautious about interpreting experiences in the early weeks and months of life as being 'critical,'" he said. "I would not suggest that it's ever too late."

Beyond reaching babies who need their help, Greenspan and other specialists hope to unify knowledge about babies' physical, mental and emotional growth, about how each baby differs from others even at birth, and about how his interactions with his parents can nourish — or stunt — his unfolding personality.

Willie's mother came to the mental health center before his birth. Workers at the clinic, a research outpost of the National Institute of Mental Health, had let Prince George's County, Md., nurses and social workers know that they were looking for troubled mothers: those with a history of child abuse or neglect or severe mental illness, or children with serious emotional problems. Willie's mother had been abandoned as a baby and beaten as a child. Now she was pregnant. She arrived at the clinic uncertain what she was looking for, and ready to trust no one.

A social worker on Greenspan's nine-member staff began seeing her before the baby's birth, and a psychologist and a nurse trained to work with infants examined Willie at birth and one month later. His muscles were more tense at birth than are most babies' and he tended to arch his back and turn his head. To his mother, his rigidity could mean only one thing: her baby was rejecting her. She became nervous, then angry. When Willie cried, she ignored him — sometimes for hours.

By one month of age, Greenspan recalled, Willie clearly was looking away from his mother. "It was quite a worrisome situation. The mother was suspicious, guarded and paranoid, and here little Willie was not a baby who looked at you, 'trusted' you."

From the beginning, Greenspan's team concentrated not just on the baby or the mother, but on how they responded to each other. They took into account the growing recognition that babies are people, capable from birth of observing the world and reacting to it.

"It started with people realizing that infants were a lot more complicated than anybody had given them credit for, and were having a lot more effect on everybody around them," said Dr. T. Berry Brazelton, a Harvard Medical School pediatrics professor who is another pioneer in the field. "It was kind of a revulsion from blaming the parents for everything."

In Willie's case, the problem began when his mother misinterpreted behavior that simply reflected the level of development of his nervous system. His arched back and tense limbs did not mean that he was rejecting her, but that his brain was still too immature to control his muscles.

Babies are born, according to Greenspan, with brains that are still growing rapidly and that each day form new connections between millions of nerve cells. Many nerves are not yet coated with myelin, a protective sheath that speeds the electrical impulses that make us feel, think and move. Just as newborns are not able to talk or sit up, it also takes time for their nerves to mature so that they can control their muscle tone and screen stimuli from the outside world. This process continues apace for the first two years of life, and is not completed until adolescence.

While a "normally competent" newborn baby may become startled and cry a few times if he hears a rattle, he tunes the noise out if it continues. But Greenspan said some babies are not able to do this.

Despite the popular emphasis on "stimulating" babies with noise, touch and color, "some babies need just the opposite of stimulation," he said. Ordinary noise levels, bright light, or even being touched on the legs or buttocks, can make them cry constantly and tense their muscles. "They look like they're in a panic state," Greenspan said.

"Most grow out of it. It seems a temporary inability to establish a threshold. But for mothers for whom that wasn't recognized, there could be a severe problem in the early relationship."

Greenspan's treatment of Willie and his mother began with a thorough evaluation of both. Besides doing a physical examination that included tests of the baby's nervous system and his IQ, the clinic staff videotaped Willie and his mother and "scored" how the two were getting along.

Psychiatrists who specialize in the study of infants divide the early months of a baby's life into overlapping stages. While the doctors differ on details, they agree on the basic sequence. A baby approaches each stage with his own physical resources and personality, and at each stage his progress is influenced by his environment — chiefly, the response of his parents.

For instance, Greenspan said, the first stage, starting at birth, requires the baby to learn self-regulation: eating and sleeping in cycles, learning to screen out a sensory barrage so that at times he can be alert without crying. How quickly he progresses may depend on whether he was born prematurely, how healthy and relaxed his mother was during pregnancy, and how she handles him in the early weeks.

Many babies, he said, can be calmed by a soft, rhythmic voice or by being rocked gently in rhythm with the mother's heartbeat or their own. But a mother who responds to crying by talking loudly, roughly bouncing the infant or jabbing a bottle in his mouth can make it harder for him to calm down.

Willie's rigidity and hypersensitivity to stimulation meant that when he was not sleeping, he was crying. His mother made matters worse by ignoring his tears. Both were ill prepared for what Greenspan considers the second stage, a period lasting from about one to six months of age, when most babies become fascinated with the world, and especially with the person who cares for them.

One of Greenspan's videotapes shows a normal baby during this stage. As his mother talks softly to him, his eyes are fastened on her face, and he wears a look of utter fulfillment. "This is the epitome of what we all yearn for in life, to have someone look at us that way," Greenspan said.

That is why the tape of Willie at 4 months frightened the psychologists. His refusal to look at his mother was the most abnormal act a baby his age is capable of.

The staff responded by assigning one therapist to Willie's mother and another to Willie. The infant specialist — a pediatric nurse trained to work with babies — devised a game. Since Willie ignored real faces, she drew a face on a piece of cardboard and got him to watch that. Then she would lower the cardboard face to reveal her own.

But Willie's mother was lagging. In one part of the tape, as Willie played with a therapist, he kept glancing at his mother and smiling. Once he reached over and touched her knee. But she sat smoking and staring sullenly away from him. When he reached out, she withdrew her hand.

At 8 months, "he was the more persevering," Greenspan said. "He would not tune out or turn away when the mother would withdraw."

But the team's approach seemed to be succeeding. The mother's therapist had helped her find a new apartment, and as they drove around the neighborhood, she had at last begun to talk about her sense of isolation. She could cope with her own moodiness more easily and take care of Willie even when she felt like tuning him out. Greenspan and his staff were encouraged.

They took advantage of her new receptiveness to involve her as much as possible in Willie's sessions, and her own therapist talked with her about three times a week. It paid off: The videotape done when Willie was 13 months old showed a heartening change. This time, Willie's mother looked happy and interested, helping him play with wooden pegs and talking to him on a toy telephone.

"At this point, they met each other," Greenspan said. "The nice thing was that Willie was ready to meet her."

Without the help of the infant specialist, Greenspan believes Willie might not have been ready. "The youngster at each stage has to be met with those environmental nutrients needed for the developmental task," he said. When a mother with severe mental problems has a new baby, "you can't take two or three years to do intensive psychotherapy. You want to do something more quickly."

Greenspan acknowledged that the treatment given to Willie and his mother would be expensive if they had had to pay for it. He said that the therapists' time alone, in a program as intensive as this one, would cost at least $5,000 a year for each family. And for most mothers and babies, it would be overkill. Yet, when a parental relationship is extremely abnormal, he believes it may be cheaper in the long run and more effective to offer psychiatric help soon after a baby's birth than to wait for a learning disorder or emotional problem to surface years later.

Brazelton, the Harvard professor whose research in infant psychiatry grew out of his experience as a pediatrician, believes that programs such as Greenspan's are too expensive except for extreme cases. But he said he is impressed with the long-term benefits of offering even minimal instruction and counseling to mothers who are very young, disadvantaged, or have little knowledge of babies and parenthood.

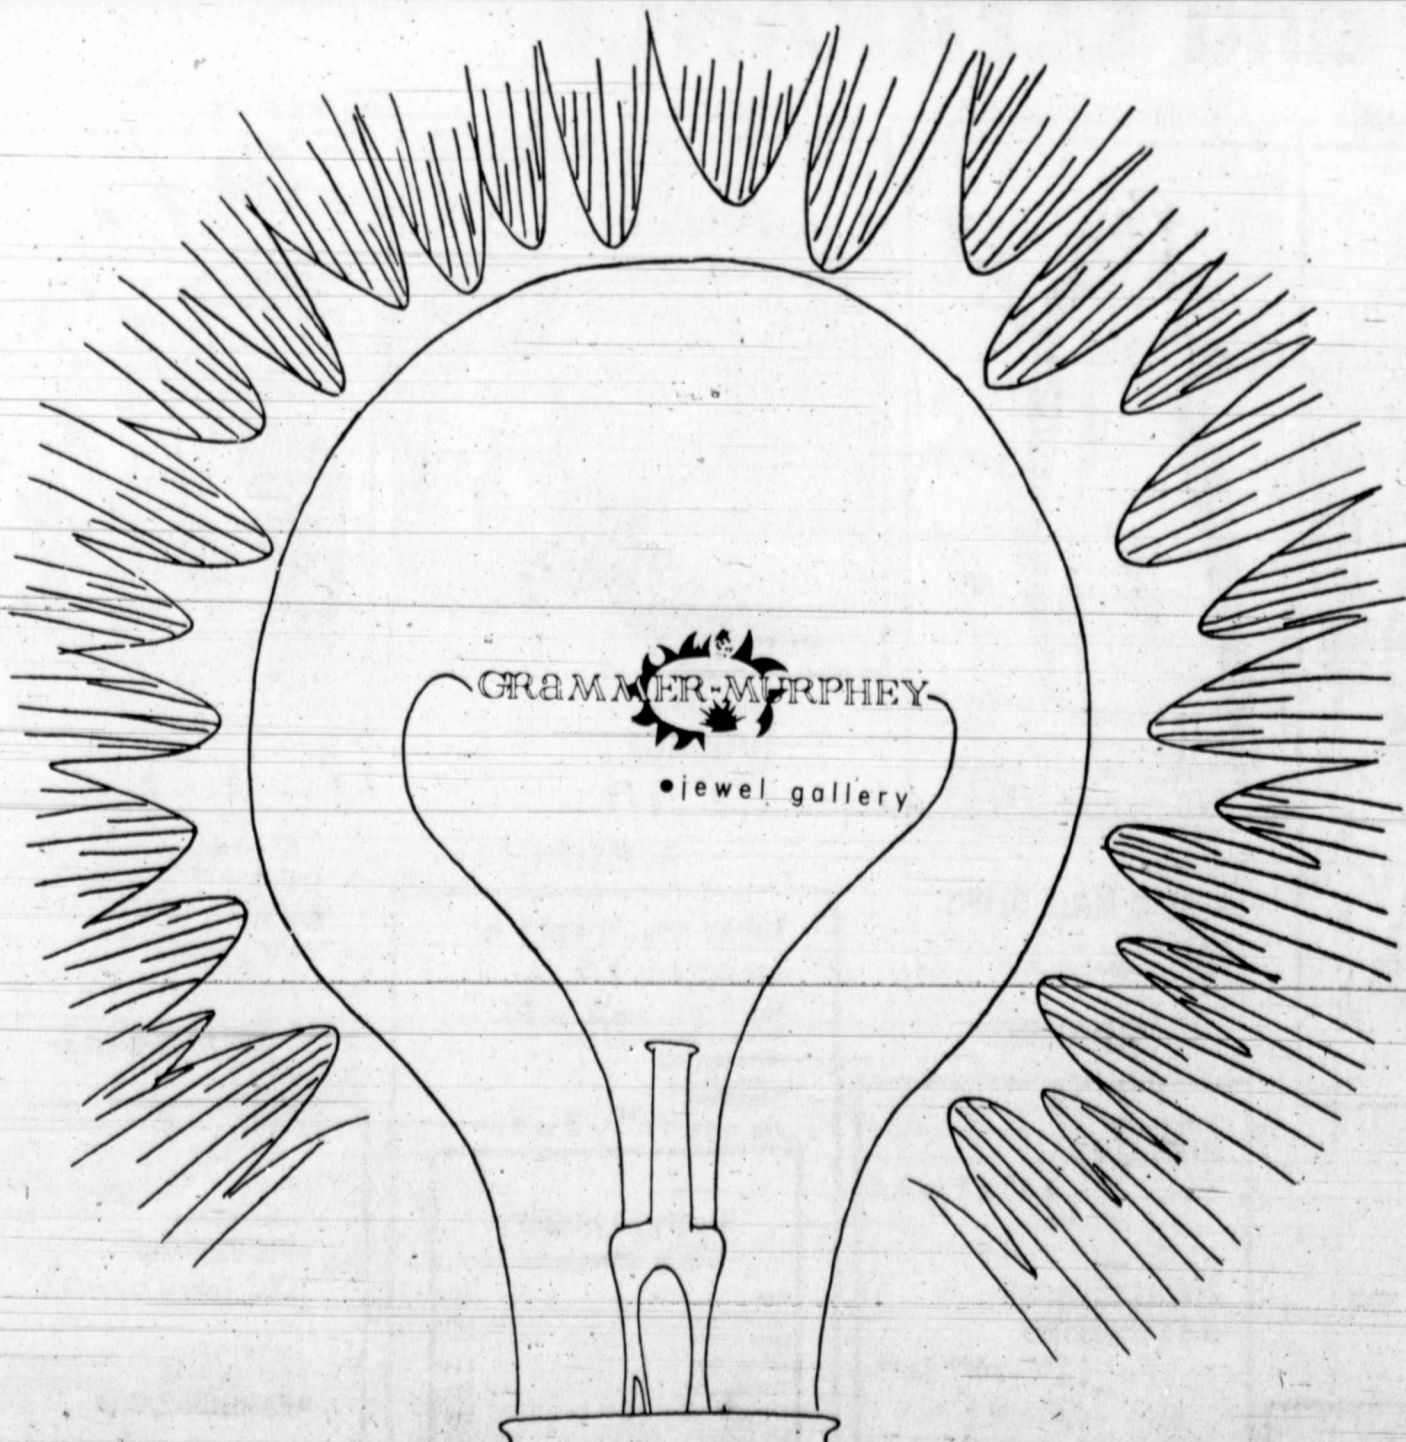

"The professional question, in terms of social policy ... is, are these the kinds of programs we need to have?" Greenspan said. "My own feeling is, there's no choice. Because if you don't work with Willie and his mother now, you'll wind up working with Willie and his mother when he's in school, using much more resources, with much less chance of a positive outcome."

"That, he found interesting," Greenspan recalled. Willie played the game tirelessly, and in a few weeks began to prefer a human face to the cardboard one.

While the specialist saw Willie three or four times a week — playing the game, rocking him, gently exercising his muscles to relax them — his mother's therapist tried to talk with her two hours a week about her own feelings. But his mother was moody and unpredictable. Some days, she wouldn't let the therapist into her house. It was several months before she would play the face game with Willie herself.

On the videotape made when Willie was 8 months old, he looked much more normal. He had progressed successfully into the stage, lasting from roughly 3 to 10 months of age, when a baby starts learning to communicate with the outside world. He could bang a bell gleefully, knowing the action would produce a noise. Although his movements were sometimes jerky, his control of his muscles had improved dramatically. Most important, he had learned who his mother was.

That was an important landmark. By 8 months, most babies develop what is called "stranger anxiety": they distrust people

Enigmatic Austin chalk gives life to small communities

DALLAS (AP) — Just as magically as Ray Holifield first drew oil from the enigmatic Austin chalk, the sleepy communities above the fractured limestone have been transformed into a bustling metropolis.

Another Texas oil boom was underway, and Holifield, son of a Missouri sharecropper, was widely acclaimed as the genius behind the prosperity that lessened U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

The Austin chalk, so named because it outcrops near Texas' capital city, had been largely ignored by oilmen because it is somewhat akin to a plastic table top in porosity and permeability. Wells drilled into it came in strong, but the slightest adjustment in equipment or even a shifting wind could cause the wells to stop.

Disgusted wildcatters and major oil companies gave up on the Austin chalk, believing the chalk too unpredictable to invest time and money.

But when Middle East oil first was cut off and demand for domestic oil increased, a few hardy drillers returned to the trend, which runs from Mexico to Florida, to try once again to retrieve its valuable, honey-colored oil.

"Back in the old days, everything was low-priced, so you only went for high volume and high deliverability," said Holifield. "Most of those easy fields have been discovered. So if you want to find much oil and gas today, you've got to go to something that was passed by many, many times before."

In 1975, two oilmen persuaded Holifield, a geologist, to look at a well near Giddings in central Texas that still was spewing after two years — even though it stood smack in the middle of the chalk.

Holifield, who had spent most of the early 1970s searching for oil in fractured reservoirs for various Middle Eastern countries, became convinced similar fracture systems trapped oil near faults in the chalk.

He devised a secret method of interpreting seismic data — sound waves that bounced off various layers of rock when dynamite was set off underground — to pinpoint spots where oil was likely hiding.

Holifield convinced his three major clients to combine his seismic findings with fracturing — a process in which large amounts of water and sand are pumped into a well hole to force oil out of fracture systems clogged with drilling mud and natural debris.

The treasure of the chalk was found.

Using Holifield's secret method, the three companies hit oil with nine of 10 wells they drilled. Seven of every 10 became commercial producers. And by the end of 1978, the three owned half of the 150 producing wells in the field.

Although Holifield had kept his findings quiet for fear large companies would gobble up all the oil leases in the seven-county field, the word soon got out and Giddings was transformed into an old-fashioned oil boom town.

By early 1979, the number of operators in the Giddings area had risen from fewer than 30 to more than 100, with oilmen coming from hundreds of miles away to cash in on the boom.

An estimated 7,500 newcomers quadrupled the local population, and lodging became so scarce that people were sleeping in their cars and in tents in the oil fields. One enterprising businessman began converting turned-over oil storage tanks into $24-a-night motel rooms and another built his own trailer park.

Field laborers who showed up for early breakfast at local grills found employers would compete for their services.

Giddings bank deposits grew by $1 million a month, but oilmen were not the only ones getting rich. Some property owners became overnight millionaires.

The boom created a new set of problems for the area, however, as crime kept pace with the rising cost of living. In Lee County, the sheriff's department reported a 100 percent increase in cases of disorderly conduct and simple assault in 1980, and small gangs began to roam the oil fields, stealing equipment and oil.

Locals accused oil companies of knocking down trees, breaking fences, polluting creeks and spoiling deer stands. The pipeline companies, who came in armed with the right of eminent domain and began digging up property, received even more criticism.

And soon, other geologists discovered how to use seismic to locate oil.

The Giddings field — 80-to-90-miles long and five-to-10-miles wide — has produced more than 30 million barrels of oil and 60 billion cubic feet of gas since Holifield's first wells were drilled. He estimates the field may hold 250 million barrels of oil and a half trillion cubic feet of gas.

But he points out that "trying to predict the reserves in the Austin chalk is almost impossible unless you tell me what the price of oil is going to be."

Conoco chief wondering about price decontrols

By MAX B. SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — H.K. Bowden wonders if there is sufficient national determination, both in government and in industry, to permit oil price decontrols to work.

The Conoco Inc. executive said such a question exists despite current record level drilling operations offering proof of positive response to the incentives of decontrol.

"On the government side, there continues to be a plethora of laws, rules and regulations that regulators can invoke almost at will to short-circuit the intent of the decisions made at the top," he said.

"Particularly at some lower levels, there is the clear impression very little has changed."

On the industry side, he added, there are a lot of people who have never known anything but controls during their careers.

"Controls have rewarded mediocrity and created vested interests," he said. "Our industry has lost some of its daring."

The return to the free market, Bowden said, exposes such attitudes and interests to the cold wind of market competition.

"For some companies and some individuals, the impact will be painful. The inefficient will not survive."

Bowden was vice president for Conoco's logistics and downstream planning group until his recent selection as chairman of the firm's marketing subsidiary in the United Kingdom.

He said a rash of refinery closings followed President Reagan's Jan. 28 executive order terminating oil price controls eight months ahead of schedule.

"They include not only small privately owned refineries which were offsprings of federal controls, but also older inefficient refineries of major companies," he said.

"But painful as it is, this rationalization of our industry needs to happen, needs to run its course, to insure a strong, healthy industry to serve the need of the public efficiently."

History shows, Bowden said, that the inefficient will not pass quietly from the scene.

"They will be working hard to protect themselves from competition while laying claims to the federal till," he said.

"It is clear, therefore, decontrol will not be smooth sailing."

Obstacles will be many, he said.

"And I can just hear some government, industry, media, and consuming sector talk about the 'good old days' of controls," Bowden said.

Construction has begun on Mid-America Petroleum Inc. corporate headquarters in Midland on 700 N. Carrizo, the northwest corner of Louisiana and Carrizo streets. The 25,000 square foot, two-story masonry structure was designed by Peters & Fields, Architects and will be constructed by HBF Construction Inc. Features include three atriums, wood-burning fireplace in the executive suite and 80 parking spaces. The complex will be ready by 1982. Mid-America also has offices in Dallas, Houston, Oklahoma City and Denver, and explores for oil and gas in the major basins.

Longacre to speak at SEPM meeting

Susan Longacre, a senior research scientist for Getty Oil Company's Research Center in Houston, will be the guest speaker for the noon luncheon of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists Tuesday, April 21 at 11:30 a.m. at the Midland Hilton.

Mrs. Longacre will present a program on the "Dolomite Reservoirs from Permian Biomicrites." The presentation will be derived from whole cores taken in the North McElroy unit of Crane and Upton Counties.

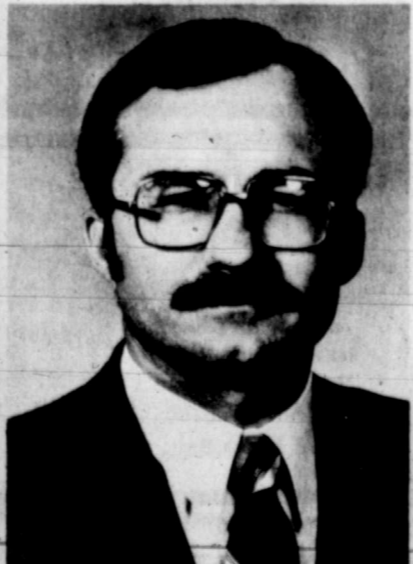

Using this rock data, she was able to differentiate the many dispositional facies within the productive Grayburg formation.

Mrs. Longacre determined that diagenesis of the dolomite and structural movement provided the hydrocarbon entrapment in the North McElroy field.

The West Texas Wash on Wheels method is to inject sand into high pressured water. Water heated to 180 degrees is pumped up with 1,800 pounds of pressure. The acid wash used by West Texas Wash on Wheels can remove excess mortar and cement from new buildings and homes, too. It cleans bricks in a matter of minutes. West Texas Wash on Wheels can even haul water to oil rigs where no outside water is available for a thorough degreasing job of all oil equipment. Able to haul some 8,080 gallons of water, West Texas Wash on Wheels can work a full half-day at a rig before needing to return for a water refill. And Collier says the degreaser is excellent for oil equipment. "This degreaser slicks it right off," Collier said. West Texas Wash on Wheels can wash just about anything from large moving vans to airplanes to oil field equipment. And Richard Collier gives free estimates on all his work, too. Give him a call for your cleaning needs at 694-4244. West Texas Wash on Wheels can make your things sparkle.

Hearing ordered

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. District Judge Robert Porter has ruled a full hearing must be held to determine if the Securities and Exchange Commission violated the financial privacy of the millionaire Hunt brothers in its investigation of last year's silver market collapse.

Association to meet Thursday

The Permian Basin Petroleum Association's annual 20th meeting will begin Thursday at the Inn of the Mountain Gods in Ruidoso, New Mexico.

The two day meeting will start with registration 2 p.m. Thursday followed by the President's Margarita Reception sponsored by Cardinal Surveys Co., Fort Worth Pipe and Supply and The Permian Corp. at 6:30 p.m.

Dinner will follow and the main speaker will be ARCO board chairman Robert O. Anderson. The dinner has been sponsored by the Odessa and Southeastern New Mexico banks. The diners will be entertained by Los Latinos.

Friday morning breakfast, sponsored by CPI Oil & Refining Inc., will be from 7:30-9:30 a.m. and the early risers can hear WeCTOGA president Harry Bettis at 8:45 a.m. discuss political action committees and the need to raise $150,000 lobbying fund.

Luncheon, sponsored by the Lone Star Co., will be at noon. New Mexico Congressman Joe Skeen will be the speaker.

The annual reception, sponsored by Brio Petroleum Inc. and The Western Co. of North America, at 6:30 p.m. will usher in the annual banquet sponsored by Dresser Titan division and Magco-Bar Group of Dresser Industries Inc.; and Runnels Mud Co. of Runco Inc.

New officers and directors will be elected, outgoing ones recognized and the coveted TOP HAND award presented. Last year's winner was Eddie Chiles.

Dean C. Hamilton, an independent geologist, has announced the opening of his new office in Oil and Gas Building Suite 503.

Hamilton is representing the Kimbark Oil and Gas Company of Denver, Colo. His prior affiliations were with Wiser Oil-Zinn Petroleum as a consulting geologist; Texas Pacific Oil Co. Inc. with positions in exploration, development and international and Pan American Petroleum Corporation.

His professional affiliations are American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the West Texas Geological Society.

Harken Oil & Gas, Incorporated has announced the recent promotion of Gerald E. Stengl to vice president — chief geologist of the company.

Stengl joined Harken in July, 1980, as West Texas Division Exploration manager in Harken's Midland office.

Before joining Harken, Stengl was employed by Natomas North America in Midland, by Pennzoil and by Shell Oil Company. He received his masters degree in geology from the University of Texas in 1954.

A resident of Midland, he is a member of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralists and is publications chairman of the Southwest Section of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Robert B. (Bob) Porter has announced he will open offices in mid-April as an independent petroleum geologist.

Porter has been associated with William B. Wilson & Sons, Inc. as an exploration geologist since April 1980.

Prior to that time he had been employed by the Texas Pacific Oil Company until being transferred to Midland in 1960 as New Mexico District Geologist. Porter had worked for Texas Pacific for 26 years when he took early retirement in April 1980, at which time he was regional exploration geologist for the Midland Region, covering West Texas-New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada and California.

Porter will devote most of his attention to prospect generation in the Permian Basin complex, but also plans to pursue a program of frontier area projects.

A member of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists and the West Texas Geological Society, he will be located at 1204 Vaughn Building.

Porter is a native of West Texas and received a B.S. degree in geology and mineralogy from Southwestern University at Georgetown, and his masters degree in geology and petroleum engineering from the University of Texas at Austin.

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists will hold its annual meeting by presenting a symposium at the Midland Center in Midland on Thursday followed by a two-day field conference to the Marathon area April 24 through 25.

The symposium will focus on the overall economic geological potential in the Presidio-Brewster County region with emphasis on the hydrocarbon potential (or lack of) in the Marfa Basin and Marathon area. The field stops will include Leonard Mountain and Persimmon Gap with Bruce Pearson, independent geologist, as field trip leader. All of these stops are new and will not overlap our 1978 SEPM field trip to the Marathon area.

Field trip transportation will be made by automobile.

New exhibit on display

Now on display at the Petroleum Museum is "Toys and Games", an exhibit of the traditional toys and games enjoyed by native Spanish and Indian residents of New Mexico.

Included in the exhibit are toys and games ranging from hand-made pull-toys to children's singing games and adult betting games.

According to the museum's assistant director Ed Rowland, "the Indians and isolated settlers did not have access to toy stores or our readily available means of entertainment, so they created their own from whatever they had on hand."

Included in the games such as "Hob", played by tossing stones and corn at a pot or tin can, "Willow Darts", "Coyotes and Hens" and "New Mexican Checkers."

"Toys and Games" is circulated by the Museum of New Mexico in Santa Fe. It will remain on display at the museum through April and May. The Petroleum Museum is open Monday through Saturday from 9 to 5 and on Sunday from 2 to 5. Admission is $1.50 for adults, 75-cents to children under 12 and free for pre-schoolers.

Oil Industry Notes

MGF Oil Corporation has announced proved reserves of oil and gas, as determined by independent petroleum consultants, increased substantially in 1980 as well as the company's undeveloped acreage position.

R.O. (Jack) Major, president and chief executive officer, said MGF's proved oil reserves increased 30 percent in 1980 to 3,773,408 barrels contrasted with 2,899,077 barrels in 1979.

Proved gas reserves increased eight percent to 27.9 billion cubic feet in 1980 from 25.8 billion cubic feet in 1979.

In addition, MGF acquired NFC Corporation on Jan. 16, 1981 and the results of independent petroleum consultant's estimates of proved oil and gas reserves as of Jan. 1, 1981, were 921,679 barrels of oil and 27.3 billion cubic feet of natural gas.

Major also noted that MGF increased its acreage position in 1980 to 699,082 gross acres and 548,438 net acres.

In addition, 136,000 gross (58,000 net) acres were acquired in the NFC transaction, bringing the total acreage owned by MGF on a pro forma combined basis to 835,082 gross (606,438 net) acres.

Included in these numbers are 270,111 gross and net acres in Montana and Arizona for which applications for federal oil and gas leases are pending.

At year-end 1979, MGF held 321,815 gross and 204,742 net acres. Major noted that MGF will continue to aggressively acquire undeveloped leases in 1981.

AUSTIN — Two funds for the Department of Geological Sciences at The University of Texas at Austin were approved Friday, April 10, by the UT System Board of Regents.

The Arno P. (Dutch) Wendler Professional Development Fund was established with $14,085 from various donors. Income from the fund will be used to support graduate students in the Department of Geological Sciences who represent the department at professional meetings where they present scientific papers and participate in panel discussions.

The fund honors the late Dr. Wendler, a geophysicist who received a bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from UT Austin. At the time of his retirement from Exxon in 1970, Dr. Wendler was senior petroleum scientist and the first person to receive that title at Exxon.

The Regents also accepted a gift of $10,000 from Dr. Richard R. Bloomer of Abilene to establish the Fund for Motivated Students in the Department of Geological Sciences.

Income from the fund will be used to assist the undergraduate and graduate students who do not have outstanding grades, but who are highly motivated, show mature judgment and demonstrate financial need.

The donor earned a Ph.D. from UT Austin in 1949 and is an independent geologist in Abilene.

FORT WORTH — The Western Company of North America announced today that it has ordered construction of a new semi-submersible drilling rig to be built by Far East-Levingston Shipbuilding Ltd., in Singapore.

The rig will be operated by Western's wholly owned offshore drilling subsidiary, Western Oceanic, Inc.

The new Pacesetter IV will be an enhanced version of the company's current semi-submersibles.

It will be initially outfitted to work in water depths of 1,500 feet with drilling capabilities to depths of 25,000 feet.

The new rig is scheduled for delivery to Western in May 1983, at a cost of approximately $100 million.

The Western Company also provides well cementing, fracturing and acidizing to domestic oil and gas operators.

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Robert H. Willis, chairman of the American Gas Association, speaking to the annual meeting of the Gas Appliance Manufacturers Association, said "gag laws which prevent utilities from promoting new, more efficient gas appliances should be repealed" and "gas utilities are operating with hands tied behind their backs."

"Reacting to a shortage that never really existed in the mid-'70s, many state legislatures passed laws effectively outlawing utility promotion activities as an expense for rate making. Utility gag laws hurt the national interest. They hurt the consumers and they hurt the utilities," he said.

The nation has substantial supplies of natural gas available today and an even greater potential for the future. This supply availability, combined with improved efficiency of gas appliances and equipment are two powerful arguments for the increased use of gas energy which is good for America's economy and for consumers' budgets, Willis said.

Willis predicted the gas industry and appliance manufacturers were about to enter an era of expanding sales and increasing appliance efficiencies.

One of the largest customers of the insurance industry is the oil companies who spend hundreds of millions of dollars annually insuring their massive offshore platforms.

Senior vice presidents of Marsh and McLennan, Inc., Russel F. Sammis, Warren T. Petersen, John T. Sinnott and Leo R. Whalen will discuss the availability and pricing of insurance for offshore operations at the 13th annual Offshore Technology Conference in Houston May 4 through 7.

The petroleum industry purchases offshore structure insurance to protect against such risks as platform damage, pollution caused from uncontrolled oil flow, cost of bringing a well under control and removal of wreckage or debris.

Offshore rigs have become an expensive item to insure.

"The values of offshore platforms have risen so much that the amount of insurance can't go that high," Sammis said. "The maximum amount of insurance is $1.5 billion while structure values have risen to $2 billion."

"On the average, rates on an offshore structure equal one-half the value of the structure," Sammis said.

America becomes world coal leader

Hearst News Service
The world reaction to the soaring price of crude oil, which doubled in price in 1979 alone, has been to turn to coal and to America, which has a third of the world's supply.
In 1980 we exported 90 million tons of it. Right now there are more than 200 ships waiting in our coal ports at Hampton Roads, Baltimore, Philadelphia, New Orleans and Mobile to be loaded, largely with inadequate and antiquated equipment.
And to put the last straw on the back of our endangered camel, there is a coal strike. As usual, But the coal strike, as threatening as it is to the countries that seek to depend upon us for their energy, is only a small part of the problem.
Actually there is plenty of coal in the non-union and un-struck strip mines in the Western states — if it could be transported on our deteriorated railroads to our inadequate coal docks.
It is simply that America is not ready for this sudden return to the coal age. We have the coal, sure enough, but there is no way we can handle the demand.
It is not that we haven't had plenty of warning. The move back to coal was a logical outcome of the Arab oil embargo of 1973 and it started almost immediately in many European countries. In the U.S. it was more gradual, and it took seven years for our coal consumption by utilities to go from 389 million tons (1973) to 565 million tons (1980).
Over all, we used 708.8 million tons last year. Jimmy Carter's projection was production of 1.25 billion tons by 1985. Most analysts doubt this will be achieved or that such a vast tonnage could be used.
If America is to become the world coal supplier that it should be, we must start at once to modernize our coal ports, as well as the federal bureaucracy which has been holding up such work for years with red tape, environmental snags and funding blocks.
In Baltimore, as an instance, plans for port modernization have been held up by the bureaucrats for more than 10 years. It could be another six or seven before the work finally gets under way.
A critical need in most of our coal ports is channel dredging so that the new super-coaliers of 100,000 deadweight tons and up can be accommodated. Such vessels are now being used in the South African and Australian coal trade and significantly reduce costs.
U.S. exporters say that the only way we can get a share of this expanding market is to dredge our harbors and channels.
It is expected that the Reagan administration will support congressional action on this. One proposal is to spend some $2.5 billion over the next 10 years or more, but to make the port users foot the bill by assessing fees on the tonnages.
The government traditionally has borne the costs of harbor and channel dredging, but many consider the market approach more reasonable, and certainly it would be in line with the Reagan budget policy.
Among our largest overseas customers for coal are France, Holland, Denmark, Spain, Ireland, Italy and Japan. Their coal-fired power plants begun in the wake of the Arab embargo are now coming onto line as the steam-coal market is expected by analysts to expand dramatically over the next decade.
Domestically, the coal demand has been increasing but at nowhere near the pace hoped for by government and industry officials. After the oil embargo, millions were sunk into new mines in an ambitious expansion program. But the demand didn't happen and last year alone some 200 mining firms went bankrupt.

Strike brings back memories

PATOKA, Ind. (AP) — Coal miner John Hull kissed his wife Karen goodbye early one February morning in 1978, put on his jacket, paused for a moment and came back and kissed her again.
Today, three years later, Karen Hull remembers that extra kiss. Hull, a member of the United Mine Workers, never made it home.
On Feb. 3, 1978, midway through a 111-day UMW strike, Hull was killed in an exchange of gunfire at the non-union Bowersock Mine. Men at the scene told Mrs. Hull her husband was shot as he stood on a knoll between the non-union miners and UMW pickets who had been trying to shut the mine down.
A grand jury returned no indictments. No one was ever charged with Hull's slaying.
"I've been on that hillside with him a thousand times in my dreams during the past three years," Mrs. Hull, 34, said this week. And now the current United Mine Workers strike is bringing back the memories.
Curled in an armchair in the rural Patoka home Hull built in 1975, his snub-nosed, blue-eyed widow talked about the curly-haired miner who loved his family, his friends and his union.
Their's was a high school romance between a shy country girl of 14 and a handsome 16-year-old who "drove too fast, drank a little beer and liked too many girls," she recalled.
But his good looks and good humor captivated her, and in the summer after her sophomore year, the summer Hull graduated from high school, the two teenagers eloped.
She was pregnant by year's end. They found an apartment, son Robbie was born and his young father took a job in a Princeton factory.
It was Mrs. Hull who persuaded her husband to become a miner. By 1968, they had a second child, a daughter named Maxi, and needed the higher pay and benefits the mines offered. Hull went to work in an AMAX mine in Oakland City.
Their early married years were stormy, Mrs. Hull said. Hull provided well and worked hard, but having played hard and married young, he couldn't seem to settle down. He spent more time with his friends than with his family. And his allegiance to his union made him miss too many birthdays and anniversaries.

As difficult as it was, "my husband and I were the very best of friends," she said. "He'd tell me the truth about things and I'd bear with him."
Pasted together with love and patience, their fragile bond held. "I told John I had one dream in life," she said. "I wanted a home, and I wanted him to settle down and act like he loved me."
In 1975, Hull set to work on the house — and himself. "When we built that home, he decided it was time to grow up," Mrs. Hull said. From then on, his pickup truck rattled into the driveway after work every day.
Late on Feb. 2, 1978, Hull had a call from a fellow miner. He hung up the phone, cleaned his .22-caliber handgun and put it in his truck.
His wife asked about the gun. "I said, 'If you go out in the morning, and they see you with a gun or your friends with guns, somebody's bound to get hurt.'" Hull told her he probably wouldn't even take the gun out of his truck.
After Hull kissed her goodbye, she went back to bed. But she woke feeling nervous, and when two of his friends drove up, she knew something was wrong. By the time she reached the doctor who confirmed the news, the story of her husband's shooting death was already on local radio stations.
Friends drove Hull's truck home. When Mrs. Hull and her son looked inside, they found his gun, still loaded, under the seat. He had never taken it out.
For weeks, "I screamed and I cried," his wife said. "I guess I just went crazy. But I found that you can't stay crazy. You either have to get better or worse."
Time helped, she said, as did writing him letters, tales on lined notebook paper of love, grief and bitterness.
She was bitter, she said, when she learned Hull's mine had closed and realized he had

Big oil companies are under fire for buying mining, mineral concerns

Hearst Special News Service

Nothing could have been more predictable. The big oil companies — everybody's favorite whipping boys — are coming under fire for buying up so many of America's leading mining and mineral concerns. This is said to be a bad thing (albeit the pundits in question specifically disclaim anti-industry sentiments), proving once again that "Big Oil" has too much money and too little concern for the national interest.
Too much money — perhaps. The public, at least, probably thinks so, and the latest round of acquisitions presumably operates to institutionalize the oil windfall profits tax beyond any legislative recall. But as for the national interest, just as good a case can be made that the oil companies are serving it rather than ignoring it.
The acquisition trend itself is indisputable. Standard Oil of California has offered $4 billion for Amax, a major coal and hard mineral producer. Standard Oil of Ohio is buying Kennecott Copper. In 1979, Standard Oil of Indiana acquired Cyprus Mines; and back in 1977, Atlantic Richfield took over Anaconda (Copper), while Union Oil bought MolyCorp, a leading producer of rare earth. If one heeds the rumors, even more such acquisitions are in the works.
To which I say: Good.
The complaint seems to be that the oil companies should use their huge, decontrolled profits to explore for and produce energy, and not get into other businesses. I have even seen one or two of journalism's sages embellish this point by saying that oil industry spokesmen all but promised, during the windfall profits tax debate, that they would use the money, if spared from the windfall levy, to search for and develop more energy. Well, the tax passed; Congress said, "We don't need you to take that money and spend it on exploration. We'll take it for use in Washington." Under the circumstances, the petroleum industry is hardly breaking faith.

True, the objections to oil companies investing their profits in unrelated businesses do make sense in some cases — as when Mobil buys Montgomery Ward, or Gulf Oil considers getting into the circus business. They clearly have no expertise there, no contribution to make.
But it's hard to see how such grouching is relevant to oil company investment in the minerals business. First off, it's a trade they know; they're already in the petroleum side of the minerals game. And secondly, more and more experts are starting to say that besides an energy crisis, aggravated by our substantial dependence on OPEC oil, the United States also faces an increasingly dangerous strategic minerals crisis.
Quite a few of the materials U.S. industry requires for high technology — chromium, tungsten, titanium, molybdenum and others — come in substantial or large part from overseas, not least from Southern Africa. These supplies could easily be cut off by wars or revolutions.

The joy of Easter

Thousands of Midlanders will make their way today to their places of worship to celebrate the Resurrection of the Savior, Jesus Christ.

The message of Easter is as eternal as the hope it offers, the reality that the Lord "is risen" as He promised. Easter celebrates the rebirth of the entire world in the fullest sense. It is at this time of the year that life begins anew and with the pureness of a newborn lamb we once again start on our course through this life.

Yet we do not have to face the battles of this life alone. The story goes that on the eve of a crucial battle, the Roman Emperor Constantine saw a vision of a flaming cross in the heavens. On the following day his forces won the battle and Constantine, being convinced of the truth of Christianity, ordered that the cross be emblazoned on his arms along with the inscription "in hoc signo vinces" — by this sign thou shalt conquer.

The truth of that inscription, still seen today, has been reaffirmed through the ages in the eternal struggle of the human condition.

The thousands of Christians in Midland today will join with millions throughout the world in celebrating the joy that is Easter. It is a joyous celebration of the triumph of hope over despair. The cross — originally a symbol of agony and death — has become a symbol of the power of faith.

On this Sunday morning the joy of Easter is around us. We can share in it and realize the promise of spiritual rebirth and eternal life that it brings.

Joyous Easter!

A job worth doing

Christmas in April, Midland's volunteer housing repair project, has a big job to do this year.

Since the project was started in 1973, it has grown virtually every year. In all, the Christmas in April project has been responsible for the repair of more than 500 homes of elderly or physically handicapped Midlanders, most of those homes being located in south and east Midland.

Recipients of the Christmas in April generosity must be 60 years old or older or physically handicapped and unable to work. They have to own their home and they must be living on a fixed income.

Basically, the recipients are in need of the help offered by considerate and compassionate Midlanders. If the help isn't forthcoming through Christmas in April, they likely won't get any help.

But help has been there in the past. Midlanders have responded to the need with their dollars and with their labor. In 1979, for example, Christmas in April resulted in the repair of 56 homes at a cost of $16,500. Last year a total of 88 homes was repaired at a cost of $30,000.

Between Christmas in April projects, the CIA organization, operated under auspices of the Human Relations Council, continues to help elderly and handicapped Midlanders with repairs at their homes. During the past year, 32 homes were repaired throughout the year at a cost of $8,000. Those repairs included replacing heaters, repairing sewer lines, gas leaks and roof leaks, and repairing bathroom plumbing.

And Midlanders have really become involved in the Christmas in April project. Elcor Corp. donated a truck-load of shingles, one of the largest contributions to the project.

But there's much more work to do this year. Already 100 homes have been chosen by the 35 groups that will be working in full force next Saturday. Yet there are about 30 applicants remaining on the Christmas in April "waiting list."

Yes, Christmas in April has a big job to do again this year. But volunteers aren't turned down. You don't have to be a skilled worker to get a job on the Christmas in April work force. All you need is the desire to help those who need the assistance you can give.

Christmas in April has a big job this year, but it's a job worth doing.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, April 19, the 109th day of 1981. There are 256 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On April 19, 1775, the American Revolutionary War began with the defeat of the British in Lexington and Concord, Mass.

On this date: In 1782, Holland recognized the independence of the American colonies.

NICK THIMMESCH

Raking up the past to judge Professor Ernest Lefever

WASHINGTON — Prof. Ernest Lefever, the president's nominee to be Assistant Secretary of State for Human Rights, has been catching all manner of hell in the press, mostly because he won't back off what he said or wrote in the past.

Lefever, president of the Ethics and Public Policy Center, and an ordained minister for 40 years, is a man of conviction and a prolific communicator. He does not mumble about totalitarian leftist regimes, and he believes that they are infinitely worse than authoritarian right-wing governments.

When he is badgered on this belief by senators or press, a fair amount of name-calling ensues. The conservative weekly, Human Events, called Sen. Alan Cranston "left-wing" last week, for opposing Lefever. This designation must be news to California's liberal Democrats who regard Cranston as a canny centrist.

In 1967, Dr. King delivered what Carl Rowan later described as "the most scathing denunciation of U.S. involvement in Vietnam ever made by so prominent an American."

King scored the U.S. as "the greatest purveyor of violence in the world today," accusing his country of poisoning the Vietnamese people's water, destroying their crops and possibly killing one million civilians, "mostly children." He compared Americans with Germans using concentration camps as laboratories. King called President Johnson a liar, and urged Americans to become conscientious objectors.

Three years later, Lefever wrote an article, "Reckless Rhetoric and Foreign Policy," devoting considerable space to King. He said that King's speech "gave aid and comfort to the enemies of peaceful change in Southeast Asia as well as to their allies in Moscow and Peking" — which it certainly did.

For this and other criticism of the speech, Anderson charged Lefever with using innuendo which richly implied that King was either Communist or traitor — which he wasn't.

Now if Anderson thinks Lefever is a bad guy because he cut loose at King for that incredible speech, he should research what others said about it at the time, and read Rowan's September, 1967, Reader's Digest article.

Roy Wilkins, the late Ralph Bunche and Sen. Edward Brooke were among prominent blacks who took issue publicly with King over the speech. So did Freedom House's directors who characterized it as a "demagogic and irresponsible" attack on our government. Rowan wrote that a White House aide shouted: "My God, King has given a speech on Viet Nam that goes right down the commie line!"

In his article, "Martin Luther King's Tragic Decision," Rowan concluded that King had alienated "many of the Negro's friends and armed the Negro's foes in both parties by creating the impression that the Negro is disloyal."

Altogether, Prof. Lefever was in the mainstream of criticism on the King speech. Jack Anderson reaches back 11 years to the Lefever article to build his case against him, and that requires others to reach back 14 years to read the original King speech and the consequent flurry of criticism — including Carl Rowan's.

There is no end to this sort of unraveling of the past. Such settling of old scores might have fit the French Revolution or other epid blood-lettings, but why don't we judge Prof. Lefever on what he stands for in 1981, and what his qualifications are?

ART BUCHWALD

Remembering the days Joe Louis was in the ring

I hope the reader won't mind if I use the column today to say goodbye to Joe Louis. For those who were around when Joe was fighting, I know there won't be any objections. For those who came later, I assure you that, despite what you've heard about other heavyweight champions, Joe Louis was "the greatest."

In Hollis, N.Y., where I grew up, there were three things the kids in our gang were certain of: One was that Franklin Roosevelt was going to save the economy; the second was that Joe DiMaggio was going to beat Babe Ruth's record; and the third was that Joe Louis was going to save us from the Germans.

The "Brown Bomber" played a very important part in a Jewish household, for the simple reason that Adolf Hitler had a fighter named Max Schmeling, who exemplified Hitler's ideal of the perfect Aryan. When Joe Louis signed to fight Schmeling in 1936, there was a lot more at stake than a heavyweight championship. For weeks before the bout all the talk around the house was concerned with, "Could Joe beat the Nazi?"

There was no television, and it's hard for anyone who didn't grow up in those days to imagine how you could possibly enjoy a boxing match sitting around a radio. But in some ways it was even better than television. You got as close to the radio set as you possibly could. All the members of the household stared straight into the loudspeaker, hanging on to every word that the announcers were bringing you "live from ringside." The imagination was brought into play, and you could see the ring in your mind — and the cool Joe Louis staring at the vicious representative of the "master race."

For 12 rounds, we "saw" every punch — the right to the jaw, the left to the stomach, the clinches and perspiration pouring from the boxers' bodies. Whenever Louis landed a blow, we cheered with as much fervor as if we were at ringside. When Schmeling made a point, we remained nervous and silent.

Schmeling knocked out Louis in the 12th round, the blackest day in Hollis since Roosevelt closed the banks. The consensus at Public School 35, the next day, was that Schmeling had probably fouled Louis, or Hitler had someone poison Joe's food. The one thing we were all certain was that it hadn't been a fair fight, and the next time around Joe would kill Schmeling and save the honor of America.

We had to wait until June 22, 1938, for the rematch. The tension that built up to the fight was tremendous. Schmeling made the mistake of making racial remarks about Joe and also derogatory statements about the United States. It had become a do-or-die situation for every kid in the country.

I think it was a hot night — I'm sure it was a hot night. Radios were blaring from every open window in the neighborhood.

The announcer told us Louis looked mad as he entered the ring. I could "see" the anger on his face. The bell rang and Louis charged in. "Bang to the head. Bang to the body." Schmeling was on the ropes. Schmeling couldn't raise a glove. Joe was swinging with fury — and then a right to the jaw and Schmeling hit the canvas; then he was up; then he was down; the neighbors were yelling — we were yelling. Schmeling made one more effort to get up and then sank for the last time. The Brown Bomber had finished off Hitler's superman in two minutes and four seconds of the first round.

The next day at school we kept punching each other all during class. The Brown Bomber had given us back our national pride. There was only one time when the people in our house had mixed feelings about a Louis fight, and that was when he fought Max Baer. We wanted Joe to win in the worst way. But we had a problem. Max Baer was Jewish.

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

Hollywood writers, those unseen heroes who put words into the mouths of our stars, are on strike. This could mean a hit series for Marcel Marceau.

A writer's strike could take the zip out of the routines of our favorite comedians, resulting in this: "How cold was it? Twenty-two degrees!"

"I gotta tell you — the traffic was so heavy on the San Diego Freeway today that it took me 15 minutes longer to get home than usual!"

"What do Dolly Parton, Adlai Stevenson and Phyllis Diller have in common? Uh, wait a minute, I have it written here somewhere."

You have to have mixed emotions about a strike involving the writers of MASH as well as those responsible for Laverne & Shirley. It's as if Mark Twain was in the same union as someone who composes zany sayings on barbecue aprons.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

Teachers vs. lawmakers: Are they learning from past mistakes?

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — In sessions past, relations between teachers and lawmakers have been a bit on the — shall we say — difficult side. Lawmakers have given the impression that teachers are a bunch of overgrown Oliver Twists, snivelling and begging for more money instead of teaching.

other with that tail-twitching anxiety which frequently precedes a cat fight. But up to now, there's not been the level of unpleasantness which marked the 1979 session — although some lawmakers say that there's no guarantee things won't get nasty before the Legislature wraps up in June.

But we are faced with looking at the total budget... It's a question of how much money will be there," she says. "Hopefully, there will be enough to offset some of the inflation which teachers have had to live with."

teachers over the next biennium. "I think there's less hostility this session," Madla reports. But Ms. Polk thinks that while there's less argument over pay increases, the tension still is there.

"there will be substantial support" for legislation to include some sort of testing for licensing teachers, although she argues that unless steps are taken to cut down on the number of emergency teaching certificates which are issued, the tests won't really mean much.

terrible beating they're taking today. People don't get into teaching to get rich...they do want to make a decent living. Teachers have to educate their children, too."

POSITIVE THINKING

Easter, like spring, symbolic of life, hope, faith, resurrection

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

A few years ago at the New York Rotary Club I was listening to a program by a college choir from Ohio. During the singing someone came and told me that the wife of the president of the college was with the choir and that word had just come that her husband had died very suddenly back home.

the program I sent up a prayer for this woman whose world was soon to crash about her. When I met her later she said, "I know you. I knew your mother and father a long time ago. They helped my family in several crises."

ment, then a flash of pain; a kaleidoscopic series of emotions. Finally one emotion remained. It was, it seemed to me, a look of glory. The eyes of all of us filled with tears as we watched. Here was a person who was not afraid of life even though a hard blow had come. She had the Easter faith sustaining her. She knew her husband still lived, though on the other side.

Which law of the land are you now living by?

Universal laws affect all people and things equally. Only the reaction is different. Man-made laws don't count here. They're far too arbitrary, they're mostly rules and regulations, and their enforcement and penalties are whimsical.

ROUSTIN ABOUT with Ed Todd. —Finagle's Law No. 2: No matter what results are expected, someone is always willing to fake it. —Finagle's Law No. 3: No matter what the result, someone is always eager to misinterpret it.

Can we logically believe that the Creator who has given us this amazing and beautiful world would put us in a place of ugliness when we die? There is no sign that God is capricious. Take the orderliness of the universe. The seasons follow one another in absolute regularity.

Midland is a Tall City, populated by big, proud, progressive-thinking people. Our citizens typically exhibit a can-do attitude. We are rich in resources the most valuable of which is our children, it is on them which our future depends. We cannot afford to provide them with the second rate for we diminish their pride thereby and their produce will be proportionately affected.

Awards for excellence in several categories were distributed to members of the Marathon Metallic Building Company's builder network when the company met in Houston for the annual March sales meeting. Held at the luxurious new Adam's Mark Hotel, the four-day meeting attracted Metallic builders from across the United States to participate in a series of seminars. The convention, punctuated by tours of Houston and a visit to the Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo, culminated in the annual awards banquet.

The top member of Metallic's builder organization, Abbott Building Company of Midland, Texas, swept the field of award recipients. Besides ranking first among Metallic's top 30 builders for 1980 and receiving six photo awards, the firm is a member of the Metallic Million Dollar and Five Million Dollar Clubs. Moreover, Abbott is the only member of the Ten Million Dollar Club, an indication of the company's cumulative sales from 1971 through 1980 as a part of the Metallic builder organization. Marathon Metallic Building Company is a subsidiary of Marathon Manufacturing company of Houston. In addition to steel buildings, the parent company is the leading manufacturer of mobile offshore jackup drilling rigs and is a multi-product-company manufacturing materials-handling equipment, fabricated steel products, white oils, batteries, and consumer goods, as well as providing civil engineering and construction services.

The one-week resident session provided courses to compliance officers on an assortment of topics, including an update on laws and regulations, auditing and monitoring techniques, and the qualifications, role and importance of the compliance officer within the bank.

The faculty consisted of bank compliance officers and managers, bank examiners and regulatory officers. "The goal of our school is to ensure that all students return to their banks equipped to deal with compliance regulations that impact lending, leasing deposits, advertising and other areas of banking," stated Jane Quinn, one of the deans of faculty for the school, held on the campus of the University of Oklahoma in Norman.

First National also announces the promotions of Marilyn M. Culp, Jananne H. McLaughlin and Gilbert J. Riojas, Jr., to Commercial Loan Officer in the Commercial & Consumer Credit Division, according to Charles Fraser, Chairman of the Board.

Marilyn Culp joined First National in January, 1980, having previously served as President of Scholars Press, Inc. Mrs. Culp is currently involved in several professional and civic organizations including the National Association of Banking Women, Uptown Business and Professional Women, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, United Way, Junior League of Midland and Law Wives.

Jananne McLaughlin, a native of Kansas, graduated from the University of Kansas with a Bachelor's degree in Personnel Administration and has completed several courses from Texas Tech University School of Banking. Prior to joining First National, Mrs. McLaughlin was associated with the National Bank of Commerce in Dallas. She is a member of the Junior League of Midland, Act IX and is the corresponding Secretary for the Lawyers' Wives organization.

Gilbert Riojas is a 1979 graduate of Texas A&M University with a Bachelor's degree in Agricultural Business and Economics. He is an active member of the Midland Jaycees, Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Cotillion Club and is a past advisor for Junior Achievement. Before coming to Midland, Mr. Riojas was a native of Uvalde, Texas.

Rip Knickerbocker and Walter Ashby have recently joined the First National Bank of Midland according to Charles Fraser, Chairman of the Board.

Rip Knickerbocker is Vice President in the Commercial Credit Division. Mr. Knickerbocker was most recently associated with the Michigan National Corporation where he was a commercial loan officer, credit analyst and credit manager. He has taught several accounting and taxation courses for Oakland Community College, Eastern Michigan University and the American Institute of Banking in Michigan. Knickerbocker received a Bachelor of Science degree in Economics and Business Administration from the University of Pennsylvania and an MBA in Finance and Banking from the University of Michigan.

Walter Ashby has joined First National as Assistant Vice President and Economic Research Officer for the Marketing and Development Division. Ashby's prior experience includes Senior Planner for the City of Midland and Planning Director for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission. He is currently adjunct professor of government at Midland College. Ashby is active in several professional organizations including the MISD Special Education Advisory Board, the American Institute of Certified Planners, Executive Board member of the City Planners Association of Texas and Vice President of the Board of the Midland Tape Lending Library.

"We are pleased to announce the addition of these highly experienced professionals to our team as we grow to serve the needs of our customers," commented Fraser.

Walter R. Stephens has been appointed controller of Ingersoll-Rand Compression Services. He graduated from Ohio State University, in 1969, with B.B.S. in finance. His previous employment experience has been with Babcock & Wilcox. Prior to that, he was with General Electric. Mr. Stephens is a member of the National Association of Accountants. He and his family now reside in Tulsa, Okla.

Ingersoll-Rand compression Services, an air and gas compressor service company, is headquartered in Tulsa, Okla., with district offices located in Bakersfield, Cincinnati, Denver, Fort Smith, Houston, New Orleans, Midland, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, and Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

David J. Weir has been elected vice president and real estate loan officer at Commercial Bank & Trust, it was announced by Robert D. Southerland, president and chief executive officer.

Weir spent 10 years with Security Federal Savings and Loan Association in Albuquerque, N.M., where he was senior vice president managing commercial and residential lending. He was also a director of several subsidiary companies, serving a three-year term as a director of the New Mexico League of Insured Savings and Loan Associations.

He is a graduate of the University of New Mexico where he was awarded a B.B.A. degree in 1971. He obtained an M.B.A. from New Mexico Highlands University in Albuquerque in 1980, and completed several courses through the Institute of Financial Education in Albuquerque.

Weir and his wife Cassie, and their two children reside at 3316 W. Michigan.

Dallas — Texas Instruments President and Chief Operating Officer J. Fred Bucy reported to stockholders this week that TI net sales billed were $1063 million for the first quarter of 1981, up 11 percent over the same period in 1980.

Net income was $34.2 million, down 32 percent, and earnings per share were $1.47, down 33 percent from a year ago.

"Four principal factors accounted for this sharp decline in profitability. Compared with the first quarter of 1980. They are: increased depreciation and R&D expenses — about half in semiconductors; severe price declines in metal oxide semiconductors; continued weakness in consumer demand, particularly for calculators; and market weakness in Europe for most products along with the decrease in value of European currencies against the dollar," Bucy said.

ASAP Air announced Wednesday, that the all-cargo airline had successfully completed flying its one millionth pound of freight from Midland Regional Airport.

John Hyatt, station manager of the Midland-Odessa station, said the millionth pound shipped was for TOTCO Distribution in Odessa. The freight was oil field equipment and was moved from Midland Regional to Victoria, Texas.

ASAP Air, Inc., which is headquartered at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, began service for Midland-Odessa customers in December of 1979. Larry Waldrip is regional manager for West Texas.

The demand for service has required ASAP to add a second flight to transport inbound cargo from Dallas and Houston connections. The airline currently serves 20 cities direct in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana and connects to 180 other major airport hubs as well as thousands of smaller communities.

Permian Basin Chapter of American Society for Training and Development has won the National Excellence Award for 1980 for group one (chapter size under 100 members). Awards are made on chapter development.

The award will be presented to the chapter at a dinner meeting to be held April 28, 7:15 p.m. at the Villa Vagabond Motor Inn, I-20 and Grant, Odessa.

Ed Scannell, national president-elect of ASTD, will present the award. Scannell, who is director of the university conference bureau for Arizona State University in Tempe, will be in Odessa and present a train-the-trainer workshop in the afternoon preceding the dinner.

The workshop, "Creative Problem Solving" is a fast-moving, hands on type workshop designed for trainees, managers and first line supervisors. Advance reservations may be made by contacting Jo Gordon, president of local chapter, 563-0532 or David Brown, vice president and program chairman, 332-1681.

The Permian Basin Association of Personnel Consultants will meet Tuesday, April 21, at 7:30 p.m. in the First National Room (second floor of First National Bank-east entrance), Midland.

After a short business meeting, Carl Trim, president of the Permian Basin Better Business Bureau, will present a program on Arbitration.

All personnel consultants involved in making permanent placements are invited to attend.

Budget battle becoming fierce

By Robert E. Thompson
Chief, Washington Bureau
Hearst Special
News Service

WASHINGTON — To compromise or not to compromise. To veto or not to veto. To obstruct or not to obstruct.

With each passing day — almost with each passing hour — the political sparring around Ronald Reagan's program of massive budget and tax cuts becomes more intense and more partisan.

House Budget Committee Chairman James Jones of Oklahoma believed last week he had a commitment from three top Treasury Department officials to work out a bi-partisan accommodation on the most controversial part of Reagan's program, the three-year, 30 per cent Kemp-Roth tax cut.

But when Jones mentioned the Democrat-GOP accord in a television appearance, which he probably should not have done, the White House, in a face-saving move, declared that there absolutely would be no compromise on any segment of the president's package.

Jones, Congressional Joint Economic Committee

Chairman Henry Reuss of Wisconsin and House Rules Committee Chairman Richard Bolling of Missouri, all Democrats, told reporters at mid-week that they did not expect Reagan to veto legislation that included only a one-year tax cut.

To quiet such speculation, Vice President Bush, who a year ago labeled Kemp-Roth as "voo-doo economics," declared that Reagan would give "very, very serious consideration" to vetoing a tax cut that did not adhere to the three-year formula.

From the beginning of the battle over Reagan's economic program, Republicans have charged that Democratic attempts to revise the presidential package would constitute "obstructionism." Democrats, including House Speaker Tip O'Neill, have countered that Congress has a constitutional obligation to put its own imprint on both spending and tax cuts.

The hard line from the White House is that Congress must give Reagan all he asks or face both a veto and a direct presidential appeal to the people. The popular president, they indicate, would go on television and denounce Democratic opponents of his program or parts of his program.

But the Democrats are not the only ones who are dubious about the Reagan program. When the Republican-controlled Senate Budget Committee sought last week to approve the whole Reagan package, its efforts were sabotaged by three Reagan-style GOP conservatives—William Armstrong of Colorado, Charles Grassley of Iowa and Steven Symms of Idaho.

The battle will continue in both houses—and it will center on Kemp-Roth. There will be skirmishes in regard to budget cuts, but basically both Democrats and Republicans agree that $40 to $50 billion must be slashed from the fiscal 1982 budget.

In the House, Republican discipline is awesome. Bolling, who has been in the House since 1949, does not expect a single GOP member to stray off the reservation when the Reagan budget is voted on.

But, Bolling—like a great many Democrats and Republicans—is convinced that the president "will have to compromise on taxes." It was the tax proposal that frightened the three conservative Republican senators who broke with Reagan.

What they saw was the possibility of a federal deficit of between $70 and $100 in fiscal 1984 if a three-year tax cut is approved without a congressional commitment to slash the budget by additional tens of billions of dollars.

A lot of people, including members of congress and economists, are wary of the Kemp-Roth concept of three straight years of across-the-board tax cuts. They fear that such a program could greatly fuel inflation and increase the federal deficit.

When the battle ends and the dust settles, Congress probably will have given Reagan 75 to 80 per cent of the budget cuts he has requested.

Terry Cargile was awarded the Victor J. Smith Memorial Scholarship by Dr. Delbert A. Dyke. She is the daughter of E.W. Cargile of 4310 Anetta Drive.

More than 100 students were recognized for scholastic achievement by academic departments and local organizations during the ceremony.

Midland College...just another great part of Midland...a great city!

Education is the cornerstone of a technical society. Education also aids in the development of a city's most valuable asset...it's people. Midland College trains students, of any age, in the development of initiative and capability to prepare for either higher education or employment by local businesses. Midland College prepares students in academic subjects, vocational and technical skills necessary to support the employee needs of our local industry. Computer technology, automotive and equipment repair, welding and other job skills needed by Permian Basin employers are taught on a regular basis at Midland College. Midland College is an investment in the future of Midland and it's technical economy. And...at the First National Bank of Midland, That is our kind of investment.

More conflicts to come in Britain

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Britain's simmering racial problem has boiled over again into rioting and leaders of non-white groups are predicting that the worst is yet to come. Here is a report on what lies behind it all.)

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — "Make no mistake, black people are here to stay," said radical black leader Darcus Howe. "History has placed a lot of us in circumstances that are unhealthy and barbaric. We have to stand firm. "There's going to be a lot of social explosion as this society wrenches itself out of its racistist postures."

A black youth leans on his bicycle as he watches a fireman spray the smoldering debris of a building gutted by fire during the recent rioting in the Brixton section of London.

Howe, a 38-year-old West Indian and editor of Race Today, echoed the sentiments of many of Britain's young non-whites who claim they are trapped in a web of discrimination, unemployment and mounting white hostility — with nowhere else to go.

The black slum in the center of Brixton, an impoverished south London district, exploded last weekend into four nights of fierce rioting by young blacks hurling bottled-gasoline bombs and paving stones at police.

More than 200 people were reported injured, most of them white police officers. Scotland Yard said 207 rioters, virtually all of them young non-whites, were arrested.

It was the worst racial eruption in this country since large-scale non-white immigration to Britain began in 1948 when people from the Commonwealth countries of Asia, Africa and the West Indies started flights from political, social and economic disorders in their homelands.

The fighting and the bitterness that caused the rioting underlined the non-integration of the nation's 1.9 million non-whites, 40 percent of them born in Britain, into the mainstream of British life. Britain's population is 56 million.

The Battle of Brixton, and the sight of London policemen, their faces dripping blood, charging into mobs of rioters brought the state of Britain's race relations into vivid focus.

Britain has suffered periodic racial outbursts, but nothing on the scale or ferocity of the race riots that swept U.S. cities in the 1960s.

But as racial violence spreads to urban areas until recently untouched by trouble, Britons are beginning to wonder if it does not carry echoes of America's long hot summers.

Non-white leaders and community relations officials have cited police harassment, unemployment, poor social conditions and racial discrimination as the root causes of the Brixton violence.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has denounced the rioters as "criminals" and not people who claim they acted out of frustration and anger and in the belief that by rioting they would demonstrate to whites that something is seriously wrong with Britain's race relations.

David Lane, chairman of the state-funded Commission for Racial Equality, recently urged Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative government to do more to stamp out racism as Britain's economic squeeze and the scramble for jobs heightened the sense of alienation among non-whites.

"The government has not done enough," he declared. "We'd like senior (Cabinet) ministers to speak out against discrimination, to show they mean business."

Courtney Laws, a West Indian community leader in Brixton, said after the riots there: "It needs this sort of explosion to awaken the authorities and make them think about doing something."

The government has ordered Lord Scarman, a leading appeal judge and a human rights advocate, to investigate the causes of the riots. But few non-white leaders believe it signals any dramatic change in official or public attitudes to what they term "a timebomb ticking away."

Don't Be Misled

There are few things in life more important and of a more personal nature than providing life insurance for the protection of one's family. Because of the almost sacred nature that is usually associated with a family's life insurance program, it would only seem logical that a family would proceed very cautiously if anyone suggests that their insurance program be abandoned, in favor of something new. We have all learned that new is not necessarily better.

In recent weeks our local association has received notice that a sales force, mostly out-of-town people, is working in West Texas with a "new" way to provide a life insurance program. Whatever else their suggestions might be, the main thrust of their approach seems to be based on replacing policies that are already in force. Be very careful if someone approaches you with such a suggestion. In fact, the following guidelines might prove to be helpful:

- (1) Contact your local insurance agent and get his opinion. Closely compare the benefits of both your present policy or policies with those you are being offered. It may surprise you to find out what benefits you may lose if the change is made. A comparison of this type should either confirm that you ought to make a change or that you might be making a mistake.
- (2) If the salesperson represents himself as a Financial Planner, Consultant, etc., find out if he has a permanent license. Depending on individual circumstances, the person with a temporary license might not be around long enough to service what he sells. Since you are contemplating doing business with him, you owe it to yourself to find out.

Presented as a public service by the members of the Midland Association of Life Underwriters listed below.

More generic drugs allowed for consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — More generic drugs will be made available to consumers at prices cheaper than those of brand-name prescription products under a policy the Reagan administration has suspended but is readopting.

The administration also wants to give large pharmaceutical houses, which may spend millions of dollars on developing a new drug, a longer monopoly on its exclusive sales of the product before generic versions are allowed.

The administration's policy toward generic drugs was announced Thursday by Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker.

It means the Food and Drug Administration once again will accept copies of published reports proving a drug's safety and effectiveness from small manufacturers that want to sell a generic version of a brand-name drug whose patent has expired.

This practice of accepting paper NDAs — new drug applications — saves small companies the cost of redoing expensive animal and human tests. The administration suspended it in February while conducting a review.

The suspension raised outcries from some members of Congress and from consumer groups, who claimed it was imposed on behalf of pharmaceutical interests who had input with President Reagan's aides. Schweiker has denied those claims.

The congressmen, Reps. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., and John Dingell, D-Mich., and a consumer group, Public Citizen's Health Research Group, welcomed the administration's decision. But they criticized Schweiker's move toward altering patent laws.

Gore said the suspension was "against the public interest, anti-competitive and never should have been put in effect in the first place."

"As for the pharmaceutical companies recovering their investment, there is little danger of that not occurring," he said. "They are one of the most profitable industries in the country."

"We oppose extending the patent period," said Sidney Wolfe, director of the Health Research Group. "Any drug company with a big-selling drug which might get competition from a generic version once the patent expires has already made so much money ... under present patent law that to extend the patent is clearly unnecessary."

Prescription drugs were a $7.9 billion business in 1978 with the government spending $1.1 billion for drugs under Medicaid alone.

The current patent law gives a drug's developer a 17-year monopoly. The industry has complained the period is too short because of the time it takes to get a drug through the FDA clearance process.

Twins have eye-dentical surgery

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Identical twins William Nimrod Seltzer and Nimrod William Seltzer have gone through 77 years of life seeing eye-to-eye on everything from education to jobs to marriage. This week after identical glaucoma operations they are still seeing eye to eye, but William is using his right eye and Nimrod, his left. The twins are at Wills Eye Hospital recuperating from surgery to relieve interior pressure in their eyes. Dr. George Spaeth, who performed the surgery on both brothers Monday, said he will operate on each twin's second eye next week. The brothers' operations were the same day. The fact that the surgery was performed on William's left eye and Nimrod's right is one of the biggest differences in their lives. Spaeth said he chose to operate first on the eye where the pressure from glaucoma was most severe. William and Nimrod went to the same school in their hometown of Lebanon. They both quit school at age 14 to work in a local shoe factory, where they were employed for 50 years. They got married within a year of each other, played on the same baseball team and bowled the same average. The twins have identical mustaches, weigh about 150 pounds, stand about six feet tall, wear size 15 shirts and size 8 1/2 shoes. They have grown bald at about the same rate. "If he'd put his teeth in," William said, "he'd look just like me." "The only difference is he's right-handed, and I'm left-handed," said Nimrod. Spaeth described Monday's operation as a trabeculectomy, an exercise in microsurgery that

CONSUMER TIPS

Beware of door-to-door home repair con artists

By LINDA TRUITT
Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc.

As warm weather approaches, itinerant workers will be traveling through the Permian Basin looking for home repair jobs. Going door-to-door, these con men will use a variety of tactics to obtain work: you may be told your spouse authorized the work or the job will cost less because materials were left over from another job. Whatever the sales pitch, the result is always the same — exorbitant prices for inferior work.

A primary focus of itinerant workers is roof repair. Homeowners are told that spray coatings will seal leaks, increase the life of the roof and are guaranteed for a lifetime. Only later do the victims find they have paid an enormous price to have motor oil sprayed on their roof and the con men have skipped town.

Melton Post, owner of Stanley Roofing, states all roofs generally fall into three categories:

- Those that can be maintained by patching and coating.
- Those that require resurfacing with a new membrane (new felt).
- Those that have deteriorated to the extent that they require removal and replacement.

Spray coatings are only helpful when applied to flat or low pitch built-up roofs. Those who hire someone to spray their asphalt shingles are wasting their money. While linseed oil can help preserve a wood shingle roof, applications must be started when the roof is new and made periodically thereafter.

Post warns that maintenance roof coatings will not revitalize a roof when the waterproofing membranes have worn out. Therefore it is important to have a reliable, established company determine the extent of the damage and the best solution.

Complaints are constantly made to the Better Business Bureau by people who are dissatisfied with the repairs made to their roof. Use the following checklist of dos and don'ts when considering what action to take.

DO: Extend roof life expectancy through a planned maintenance program with periodic roof inspections.

DO: Apply roof coatings before serious roof deterioration occurs — roof coatings alone, without reinforcing membranes, are not likely to correct serious roofing problems.

DO: Make required repairs to distressed areas before applying roof coatings.

DO: Use a coating that is chemically compatible with what is already on the roof.

DO: Check the reputation and reliability of any roofing contractor before you do business with him. Ask for references or check with your Better Business Bureau.

DO: Ask if the company carries workman's compensation and general liability insurance. If a worker is hurt or breaks a window and the contractor does not have insurance, you could be held responsible.

DO: Get at least two written estimates from reliable companies. The estimate should include the materials that will be used, how the job will be done, and the warranty coverage.

DON'T: Use a roof coating as a substitute for re-roofing.

DON'T: Expect a roof coating alone to stop leaks.

DON'T: Use roof coatings on asphalt or wood shingle roofs.

DON'T: Apply a maintenance coating over a gravel roof.

DON'T: Be taken in by a high-pressure roof coatings salesman who knows nothing of the type, age and condition of your roof, and who promises that the roof coating alone will stop leaks.

DON'T: Pay in advance. If a contractor needs money for materials, get another contractor.

DON'T: Use a contractor who can start work today. Most reliable roofers are extremely busy and will add you to their list.

DON'T: Use a contractor who cannot provide a local business address and telephone number.

DON'T: Sign any contract or work order unless you have read and understood it completely.

Four indicted in extortion plot

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A grand jury has indicted four persons who allegedly planned to use sophisticated electronic equipment and remote-control bombs to kidnap and extort money, reportedly from the owner of the Pittsburgh Steelers.

The Allegheny County District Attorney's office said three men were charged Thursday and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police were asked to arrest a fourth person, a resident of British Columbia.

Local newspapers said possible targets were Steelers football team owner Art Rooney, his son, Art Rooney Jr., and Edward Ryan, founder of a home-building company.

"We won't disclose the names of the intended victims. It serves no purpose," said Walter Bunt, executive assistant to District Attorney Robert Colville. But Bunt said he wouldn't deny the press reports.

The conspirators allegedly planned to use an electronic device they had already constructed to stop their target's automobile and abduct him, the grand jury said.

Once abducted, the grand jury said a bomb was to be attached to the hostage in such a way that it couldn't be removed without exploding.

"The conspirators planned to construct a van-type vehicle and fill the back ... with gasoline and dynamite. The targeted individual would then be placed in the van ... and given instructions as to how to procure the money and how to disperse it to the conspirators," the grand jury said.

The grand jury said testimony indicated the alleged conspirators planned to kill the target if a substantial amount of money wasn't provided. They planned to communicate by using a radio in the van.

Indicted were Gary Small, a former policeman for suburban Edgewood; Richard E. Henkel of Hampton Township; Henry Ford of Pittsburgh; and Roy Travis of Vancouver, British Columbia.

Bunt said Small, Henkel and Ford were arraigned on charges alleging conspiracy to commit kidnaping, homicide and extortion. Bond was set at $100,000 for Henkel and Ford and $25,000 for Small, he said.

Extradition proceedings for Travis were pending, Bunt said.

Electronic equipment that could be used in the alleged scheme was found along with recorded instructions in a large box addressed to Henkel, the grand jury said. The box was allegedly sent from the home of Travis, an electronics expert.

Henkel was already in jail awaiting trial May 4 on homicide and other charges in connection with the May 1979 shooting and stabbing death of Deborah Gentile, 27, of Pittsburgh.

Ford was jailed on charges alleging perjury and false swearing to the grand jury in connection with Miss Gentile's death. She was allegedly killed for an $800,000 insurance policy.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Doctors treat breast cancer different in individual cases

Dear Dr. Solomon: All of these articles in newspapers and magazines about the advantages of surgery in the treatment of breast cancer versus the advantages of radiation cause more confusion than anything else. Why don't doctors simply get together and decide which approach is better? Or why can't they get together and possibly work out some combination of treatment? The way things are today, whichever treatment a woman chooses, she always has some feeling that maybe she made the wrong choice. What treatment would you recommend for a woman with breast cancer? I would very much appreciate a simple answer. — Grace

Dear Grace: I'm afraid there is no simple, final, definitive answer to this very complex problem. Different physicians, equally competent and conscientious and with the best interests of their patients at heart, have different ideas about the best approach to the treatment of breast cancer. Moreover, recommending a particular form of therapy should not be done in a vacuum, but should take into account the specific circumstances in each case. For example, it is essential that such factors as the patient's age and the extent of the disease be considered.

If both mastectomy and radiation therapy were equally effective, radiation would be preferred for cosmetic reasons. Some doctors are now using a combination of minimal surgery plus radiation treatments, which they say preserves the breast while curing the disease.

Dr. K.T. Noell, director of the division of radiation oncology at the Duke University Comprehensive Cancer Center, advocates lumpectomy (that is, only the removal of the lump) followed by radiation therapy which is given in two stages. He calls this approach a satisfactory alternative to more extensive surgery involving removal of the breast.

Dr. Arnold M. Herskovic, an assistant professor of radiology and one of the center's radiation oncologists, has used a combination of external radiation and radioactive implants in patients who have had lumpectomies. In all, he has treated some 30 patients over a four-year period, and apparently has achieved some success.

Following lumpectomy, the patient receives five to six weeks of external radiation directed at the breast and the lymph nodes in the armpit, where the cancer may have spread. The second step in treatment involves the use of radioactive implants. Needles are placed through the cancer site in the breast, and thin tubes filled with radioactive material are threaded through them. This stage of the treatment takes from three to four days.

The possible side effects of radiation therapy include a reddening of the skin, sore throat, and a feeling of tiredness. These usually disappear within two to four weeks after completion of the course of treatment.

According to Dr. Herskovic, various studies have shown that patient survival and tumor control rates are as favorable in patients undergoing lumpectomy and radiation therapy, as in patients who have a mastectomy. Additional studies now under way should clarify the role of radiation therapy in the treatment of breast cancer patients.

As of now, however, the use of limited surgery and radiation therapy is not widespread; fewer than five percent of patients with operable breast cancer are treated in this fashion.

MAKING MORTGAGE MONEY AVAILABLE

The nation's personal savings rate has fallen dramatically in recent years. America's personal savings rate - stated as a percentage of disposable income - does not come near matching the 20% and more that is common in many other industrial nations. During much of the 1970's, the personal savings rate has been about 7%. How do you get more money into savings institutions?

One of the most interesting suggestions is by exempting from income tax all savings account interest and raising the passbook interest rate, perhaps to 8 or 10%.

Practically overnight this would create a massive inflow of funds, especially from high tax bracket investors. A tax-free 8% yield to a 50% tax bracket taxpayer is equivalent to a 16% before-tax yield. Such a tax exemption would lessen the need for savings institutions to offer high cost certificates.

Why are increased savings important? Because the savings rate, the lower the inflation rate; lower cost and more available home loans for buyers, and stimulation of construction, thus solving our housing shortage.

YMCA's to offer fitness sessions

The Midland YMCAs will offer a fitness orientation session Tuesday, 7:30-9 p.m., at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring St.

This orientation is free and open to the public as well as all Y members interested in a fitness class. The 1½-hour session covers body positioning, class composition, pulse rate monitoring, exercises and general facts about aerobic conditioning. By attending the orientation, the participant will enter a Fitness Fantasia or Body Control class more knowledgeable of body position, specific exercises and dance steps.

Midland Central and Alamo YMCA will begin a new session of Fitness Fantasia, which is aerobic dance, beginning the week of April 27, with all new music and new routines. Classes in Fitness Fantasia are offered at the following times at Central Y: Beginners - Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 10:15-11:15 a.m., and Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 5:30-6:30 p.m.; and Advanced - Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 8:15-9:15 a.m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 1:15-2:15 p.m., and Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 5:30-6:30 p.m.; and Combined - Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 9:30-10:30 a.m., Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 1-2 p.m., and Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 6-7 p.m.

In addition, the Central Y also offers Body Control classes Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 9:15-10:15 a.m.; Tuesday and Thursday, 6:30-7:30 p.m.; Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 12:10-12:50 p.m.

Also on the schedule is Yoga on Monday, 6:30-7:30 p.m., and Belly Dancing on Wednesday, 6:30-8 p.m. Body Control emphasizes muscle toning, flexibility and mild cardiovascular training. This class will contain only 10 to 12 minutes of aerobics and is well-suited for the beginner.

Yoga will introduce the participant to exercises in breathing, limbering, balancing, stretching, toning and relaxing. This general toning and conditioning offers you the benefit of releasing tension and increases one's ability to relax.

Belly Dancing is another popular way to improve your health, lose weight and tone muscles. This class emphasizes coordination, balance and muscle control which in turn will have a trimming and firming effect on your figure.

For further information, call the Y at 682-2551.

Cotton growers plan meeting Thursday to decide merging with IPM

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent - Agriculture

A very important meeting for all Midland County cotton producers will be held at 9 a.m. Thursday at the Midland Farmers' Cooperative located on South Fairgrounds Road.

At this meeting growers will be asked to make a decision on whether to become a part of an Integrated Pest Management program with Martin and Howard counties.

IPM is a partnership between growers and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service to conduct an educational, survey and demonstration program in the area of crop pest management to result in the most efficient and economical production.

Basically, Midland growers will have several options in a bollworm pest management program with the services of an entomologist available who will train and supervise field scouts to monitor crop progress and insect populations. The emphasis will be on full and complete utilization of natural beneficials and predators with backup cultural and biological controls when and if damaging pests begin to get out of hand.

I URGE every cotton producer and/or landowner to attend this meeting to get a detailed explanation and join in making a decision concerning this program.

Soil Stewardship Week will be held throughout Texas and nationwide this year May 24 through 31. Since 1955 Soil Stewardship Week has been recognized in millions of churches and schools across the nation. It is designed to focus on the nation's natural resource problems and to consider ways to solve them.

This country must, at whatever cost, maintain the capacity of the land to produce food and fiber. With our own population at 220 million and growing and with many regions of the world depending on the United States to supplement their food supply, the need to maintain our productive capacity becomes increasingly apparent.

Generally speaking, city people are probably less concerned than rural people are about the soil. They shouldn't be. City people like to eat, too. And none of us can eat if the topsoil is depleted. This six-inch crust that covers the productive surface of the earth is what keeps us from starving.

WE HAVE the responsibility as stewards of the soil to consider two trends that are now underway.

The first trend is population growth. World population is now over 4 billion and is increasing at approximately 180,000 daily. Some experts predict that if the current rate of growth continues, the population of the world will double within 30 years.

The second trend that's disturbing is the loss of productive farmland. Consider these statistics: Back in 1800 in the United States we had 104.2 acres of land for every man, woman and child; by 1870 the figure had declined to 48 acres; by 1900, it was 15. Today, we have slightly more than 10 acres for every person, with only 2.6 of that being cropland. Each year more than 800,000 acres of our best farmland become housing tracts, highways, airports, industrial sites and parking lots. Nearly 200,000 acres are covered by water for man-made lakes and reservoirs.

Local Soil and Water

Conservation Districts are the primary sponsors of Soil Stewardship Week. Working closely with them in furthering the celebrations are the Texas Agricultural Extension Service and USDA-Soil Conservation Service.

THIS YEAR'S event focuses on "Society's Pressure Points" as its theme and covers such topics as soil and water conservation, urbanization, and loss of prime farmland.

Have you heard one of these claims? Inorganic chemical fertilizers are poisoning the soil and soil organisms. Crops grown with inorganic chemical fertilizers are less nutritious than those grown with organic fertilizers and lack the essential elements necessary for health of the human and animal body.

These notions are ill-founded. The concept of organic gardening is partly true, partly false. It is time we attempt to separate fact from fiction and negate ideas that do not withstand scientific testing.

First of all, no reputable horticulturist disputes that organic materials are valuable in a soil management program. Organic materials should not be overlooked and should be utilized to the fullest extent consistent with cost. These materials — particularly bulky ones such as peat moss, mulch bark, dried grass clippings, compost manures, and sewage sludges — do have special merit. Their use may mean better tilth and better water permeability. These improvements are very real and justify some premium for organic materials above their value as suppliers of nutrients.

ORGANIC materials have no special virtue as suppliers of nutrients. Higher plants do not take up organic materials. They absorb chemical salts. When organic matter is applied to the soil, it becomes mineralized by bacterial action. Many of the nutrients in organic matter become available very slowly and with less than 100 percent recovery. The nutrients absorbed by the plants are identical, whether produced by decay of organic matter or in chemical fertilizer. Regardless of how soil is fertilized, elements used by plants are the same. No evidence indicates commercial chemical fertilizers used properly have ever adversely affected food quality, plants, animals, humans or soil.

Homicide is 10th killer in California

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Homicide has become the 10th leading cause of death in California and is the fifth greatest killer of children aged 1-4, according to a state health report.

The report, part of a health plan released this week by the administration of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., said the statistics justify "a growing concern for an apparent increase in child abuse."

RINGING THE BELL

Equal working conditions sought

With BOB TIEUEL

The Black Experience in South Africa — According to M. Weiss of the Dallas Morning News, Dallas-based Dresser Industries, Inc. has more than a thousand employees in South Africa, about half of them black or Asian. It is the second largest U.S.-based employer in the country which has not signed the so-called Sullivan Principles. By the end of 1980 137 of the 350 U.S. corporations maintaining operations in South Africa had signed the principles. The six-point Sullivan Principles, formulated by Dr. Leon Sullivan, a black Philadelphia minister, and adopted in 1977, seek to promote social change in the workplace and outside by compelling U.S. firms to remove all racial barriers and in some cases adopt an activist role. They call for equal and fair employment practices including non-discriminatory pay, workplace, supervisory and training policies.

Additionally firms are to develop programs to aid development of skilled managers and to take steps aimed at "improving the quality of employees lives outside the work environment in such areas as housing, transportation, schooling, recreation and health facilities." Provisions in the principles call for participating corporations to agree to on-site inspections and to report on their compliance every six months.

To be in compliance, U.S. firms must demonstrate they are making a good faith gesture at seeking racial equality — recognizing that immediate action in all areas is difficult, said Dr. Sullivan, himself on the boards of directors of General Motors and Girard Bank in Philadelphia.

Chimes: Dallas businessman Robert Dedman and his wife Nancy recently presented Southern Methodist University with a $25 million endowment — the largest single donation in SMU history. The gift is also believed to be one of the largest endowments given to a U.S. university or college. "We think it's fun to give money away to good causes while we're still alive to see the results," stated the Dedmans.

The number of black Americans has topped 26 million and the count also includes more than 14 million persons of hispanic origin, according to latest figures from U.S. Census Bureau. The report also disclosed 1,418, 195 listed as American Indians, Eskimo and Aleut.

Carl Rowan Quotes: "Ronald Reagan is going to achieve a lot in his honeymoon days but without the vote of a single committee, or house of Congress. Reagan bids to destroy much of what Lyndon Johnson built up through executive sabotage... Yes Washington is one big chicken coop, and the foxes have the feathers flying."

Racism in education, according to G. Horne in The Eagle, is not only a problem in the Deep South but has managed to cling as well to the ivy walls of the supposedly "liberal" North. Cross burning has been reported at prestigious Williams College in Massachusetts.

DICK TRACY

by GOULD/Fletcher/COLLINS

Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

Does storing extra table leaves present a problem at your house? I never could find a satisfactory place to put them at my house as space is very limited and the leaves were always in the way no matter where I stashed them.

Since I never seem to have enough shelves either, I decided to combine the two problems, and — you guessed it — I made shelves out of the leaves.

My husband put up some wall brackets made to hold shelves.

I simply laid the leaves on top of them. No further installation was necessary.

Since these leaves are used only two or three times a year, removing things from the shelves when I needed the leaves was not a big hassle.

I used one in my sewing room and two in the den to hold stereo records, books, etc. Sure is better than having the leaves take up much-needed space in a closet.

True... and if your closets are like mine, there's just no room for table leaves.

Your solution is a real problem-solver, luv, and we are all grateful for your sharing it with us. Thanks!

Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

DEAR HELOISE:

To balance the household budget, figure a certain percentage of regular income for each regular expense plus a percentage for treats, emergencies and savings.

Mark envelopes and place a check for each item in its own envelope.

Give one tenth off the top to charity; the other nine-tenths will somehow stretch much further.

What goes around, comes around... Jack Rhodes

BOTTLE BUTTONS

DEAR HELOISE:

Buttons for doll clothes can be cut from a plastic bottle, etc., using a paper punch. Poke holes for the thread with a hot needle.

Sarah Miles

DEAR READER:

This is your column. If you'd like to share a hint, ask a question or make a suggestion, write me care of this newspaper.

Hugs, Heloise

Just for Kids
A NEW HOME FOR MISS DOLL

DEAR HELOISE:
I've been reading (and enjoying) your column for a long time, but I've never had anything to write in. Finally, I got an idea for other kids.
If you like to play with small costume dolls, but are always losing their clothes, try organizing them.
Ask your mom to get you two inexpensive plastic containers that are used for washing dishes. You can put the dolls in one container and the clothes in the other.
Kristin Vopicka, Age 11

CREAM YOUR EYEGLASSES CLEAN
DEAR HELOISE:
If you wear glasses you probably know how hard it is to keep them clean. My grandmother solved the problem for me.
Just put a dab of shaving cream on each lens (both sides) and rub it around. It cleans them super.
To wash off the shaving cream, just rinse the glasses with lukewarm water, then dry them with an old flannel nightie or pajamas. Presto! You have clean glasses.

NO FUNNEL?

DEAR HELOISE:

To pour liquid into a narrow-necked container when you don't have a funnel, put a stick of some kind into the neck of the container and pour.

The liquid will cling to the stick and run down into the container easily.

J.R.

PIN 'EM UP

DEAR HELOISE:

Being a military wife and having to relocate every few years, I've found this hint to be quite valuable. When hanging pictures, etc., on the walls, try using dressmaker pins.

One pin will hold most small pictures and leaves no large holes to fill in later.

Mary Lou Galloway

CRATE IDEA

DEAR HELOISE:

I purchased two wooden soft drink crates one in the liter size, the other in the 12-ounce size.

After painting them with some left-over house paint to match the colors in my kitchen and bathroom, I hung one in each room.

Eva Whiteside

FUNNY GIFT

DEAR HELOISE:

When visiting friends in the hospital, I take a little book for them which I have made.

I cut out cartoons, glue them to colored construction paper, then put them together with colored yarn.

I use "Pleasant Thoughts" or "Smiles" for titles and my friends seem to enjoy them.

These are inexpensive and fun to create. My young nephew colors some of the cartoons — fun for him too!

Helen Pace

FRESHEN BREATH

DEAR HELOISE:

When serving garlic or other foods with a strong odor, have sprigs of parsley on the table for chomping.

Parsley is a great breath-freshener.

Mrs. J. Burnett

TUB EXITS

DEAR HELOISE:

For those who find it difficult to get out of the tub after a bath, turn over to a kneeling position, then push up to a standing position.

Use a damp washcloth on the edge of the tub to keep wet hands from slipping.

CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story:
AS VIKINGSHOLM SMOLDERS, MORDRED ENTERS THULE IN TRIUMPH. HE HAS PAID THE RABBLE FOR ITS WINK OF APPROVAL. THE PUPPET DALGRIND RIDES IN FRONT, BUT IT IS MORDRED WHO GIVES THE ORDER TO SACK THE CHURCHES, AND MORDRED WHO MEETS AT MIDNIGHT WITH THE GENERALS.

"CAMELOT IS NEXT," HE EXPLAINS. "DALGRIND WILL REMAIN BEHIND AS KING UNTIL OUR VICTORY IS COMPLETE. I EXPECT HIS REIGN TO BE SHORT."

IS IT FATE OR THE PREVAILING WINDS THAT STEER AGUAR TO THE SAME BLEAK FENS IN BRITAIN THAT SHELTERED HIM THIRTY YEARS BEFORE? "REBUILD THE OLD LODGE," HE DECLARES. "THERE IS FISH AND GAME APLENTY. I WILL NOT HAVE ARTHUR'S CHARITY."

BUT PRINCE VALIANT IS STRANGELY QUIET, FOR HE WAS A BOY WHEN HIS FATHER WAS DRIVEN FROM THULE, AND HE HAS NEVER FORGOTTEN THE SHAME AND THE FEAR. HE SLIPS AWAY FROM THE BUSTLE AND CLIMBS A DISTANT KNOLL, COLLECTING WILDFLOWERS ALONG THE WAY. HIS MOTHER WAS BURIED HERE.

ONLY LATER DOES HE RECRUIT THE YOUNG SQUIRE FROM AGUAR'S RETINUE: "TAKE THIS MESSAGE TO CAMELOT. STOP ONLY TO CHANGE YOUR MOUNT."
