Polish leaders cultivating farmers' union

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Polish farmers and the Communist government reached agreement today on a formula for registering an independent, Solidarity-style trade union for the nation's 3.5 million private farmers, Warsaw Radio reported.

But the signing was delayed by wrangling over final details. The farmers' leader, Jan Kulaj, said the formula should "say clearly that the union will be registered," while the government apparently believes a declaration of intent is sufficient, a Solidarity spokesman said.

The problem seemed to center on that part of the formula which said the government "will work" to get the private farmer's union registered by May 10, rather than stating outright that registration would be accomplished at that time.

The two sides were meeting in Bydgoszcz, 140 miles north of Warsaw, where farmers have been holding a sit-in since mid-March to demand their union.

"The trail to the registration of a self-governing trade union of private farmers has been blazed," Stanislaw Ciosek, minister for trade union affairs, was quoted as saying.

Government recognition of such a union would be unprecedented in the communist world, as was the acceptance of Solidarity, a 10 million-member federation of trade unions that is independent of the Polish government.

Private farmers formed the organization Rural Solidarity last summer, shortly after the communist leadership recognized Solidarity. But while the labor federation was chartered by the government, Poland's Supreme Court said Rural Solidarity could not be given similar recognition without specific Parliament action.

On Thursday, Warsaw Television reported that a parliamentary committee had approved legislation needed for formal recognition of a farmers' union.

It said language recommended by the special committee for implementation of social contracts "would ensure the possibility of the establishment of trade unions of individual farmers." The language will be added to an omnibus unions bill currently being drawn up to codify the rights won by Polish workers, the television broadcast said.

Agriculture in Poland already is unique among the heavily collectivized Soviet-bloc countries since the nation's private farmers own 75 percent of the land and produce 80 percent of the food. Rural Solidarity claims to represent as many as 1 million of the farmers. By contrast, the official United Peasants Party, an arm of the Communist Party, has 500,000 members.

The Bydgoszcz farmers began their sit-in March 16. Three days later, when union activists refused to leave a meeting with government officials to discuss farmer grievances, police forcibly ejected and allegedly beat 23 of them. Anger over the reported beatings brought Solidarity to the brink of a nationwide general strike, which in turn raised the possibility of a Soviet military intervention.

Since the Bydgoszcz incident, there have been intermittent negotiations between farmers and government officials. A session had been set for Tuesday, but sources in Warsaw said Ciosek canceled it. The cancellation caused the Bydgoszcz demonstrators to expand their protest with a sit-in by about 100 farmers in Inowroclaw, 30 miles to the south.

That action was followed by announcement of the Parliament committee's action and a hurried trip by Ciosek and Deputy Agriculture Minister Andrzej Kacala to Bydgoszcz Thursday night.

The beatings in Bydgoszcz were the first acts of violence since labor unrest erupted in Poland last summer. Solidarity immediately demanded dismissal of government officials it said had ordered the attacks and backed its demand with a four-hour warning strike and a threat of a general strike. The general strike was averted by an 11th-hour agreement.

Colorado coalminers found dead

REDSTONE, Colo. (AP) — Rescue workers found the bodies of 15 coal miners early today, a day and a half after an explosion ripped through the Dutch Creek No. 1 mine in the Colorado Rockies, a spokeswoman for the mine operator said.

The discovery of the 15th body just after sunup today concluded the search for those killed in the explosion Wednesday afternoon, said Marvin Meyers, personnel director for Mid-Continent Resources Co., which operates the mine 30 miles west of Aspen.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately known, but there was speculation that the miners might have hit a methane gas pocket, which triggered the blast. Miners say being near a methane explosion in a mine shaft would be like being in an exploding gun barrel.

Nine bodies were discovered in the main tunnel just before midnight Thursday, and five more were found about three hours later in a branch corridor about 1,000 feet from the first group, said spokeswoman Mary Boland.

Meyers said the last miner, identified as Kelly B. Greene, 25, of New Castle, was found 3½ hours after rescue workers found the second group of bodies.

Ms. Boland said Mid-Continent President John Reeves was with the rescuers who discovered the first nine bodies, and he reported that the victims appeared to have been killed instantly by the explosion.

The first nine victims were identified as Kyle Cook, 33, of Silt, Colo.; Richard Lincoln, 22, Glenwood Springs; Loren Mead, 35, Rifle; Ronald Patch, 34, Carbondale; Terry Lucero, 28, Glenwood Springs; Glen Sharp, 31, El Jebel; John Ayala, 40, Carbondale; John Rhodes, 29, Carbondale, and Robert Ragle, 29, New Castle.

Meyers released the names of the five other victims: Thomas Vetter, 24; William E. Guthrie, 32; Daniel Litwiller, 21; and Hugh W. Pierce Jr., 20, all of Glenwood Springs; and Brett Tucker, 30, Carbondale.

He said the bodies were being removed from the mine district office to Farnham Richardson Mortuary in Glenwood Springs.

"It's so heartbreaking," he said. "I hired some of those guys and sent them into the mine, and look what happened."

Some of the miners' families were huddled around campfires near the gate at the mine road entrance when someone ran up shouting, "They're all dead! They're all dead!"

Members of the family of one miner jumped up, their bodies racked with sobs.

Ramona Luna of Colorado Springs, sister of victim John Ayala, hugged another relative and said, "Johnny just didn't make it. He just didn't make it. He's down there."

There were 22 men inside when the blast occurred Wednesday afternoon. Seven men made it out immediately after the explosion, which officials have said could have been caused by methane gas. Three were hospitalized for burns, bruises and shock.

Crews with breathing equipment moved down the 13-degree-slope tunnel in front of miners who were rebuilding the ventilation system and shoring up the corridor with timber to make certain there would be no cave-in.

There are few things more pleasing in West Texas than trees — especially when there are 210 of them being planted in Midland. The 210 pecan trees are being planted along Scharbauer Draw as a joint project of the Chamber of Commerce Visual Improvements Program and the city of Midland. Wayne Kohout, left, director of the Parks and Recreation Department for the city, and Gordon Knox, VIP chairman, are in charge of the project.

Project looks 'shady'

The banks of Scharbauer Draw, accustomed only to the West Texas sun, will be shaded this summer by 210 pecan trees currently being planted under a joint venture between the Chamber of Commerce Visual Improvement Project and the city of Midland.

VIP initiated the project, aimed at beautifying the creek in areas where at least 12 feet of bank space exists. This primarily will entail 4,500 feet along Scharbauer Drive between C and I streets, with additional planting near the intersection with A Street.

VIP chairman Gordon Knox indicated that the current planting, which should be completed by the middle of next week, is only a part of a comprehensive plan involving the draw.

"In phase two we hope to have the entire draw planted," he said. "This is Midland's effort to duplicate Turtle Creek." The Dallas waterway has been recognized as a success in beautification efforts.

VIP projects, which have included the planting of 162 live oaks along Wall Ave. and 180 live oaks at Midland Regional Airport, are funded entirely through private donations. Many of the pecans along Scharbauer were purchased with donations presented by landowners along the street, said a spokesman.

Knox envisions the Scharbauer development as being more than just aesthetic, however. During a tour of the site he noted that it would be ideal for installation of a bike or jogging trail.

Shrubs will be planted between each pecan, while buffalo grass will be strewn along the creekbanks.

The trees and labor were contracted by VIP with Casa Verde Nursery.

Recoup on Reagan budget plan 'sure'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director David A. Stockman is guaranteeing that the setback the Reagan administration suffered at the hands of the Republican-dominated Senate Budget Committee will be reversed swiftly when Congress returns to work.

Three Republicans sided with the panel's Democrats last week in providing the votes needed to reject a budget blueprint drawn to meet the specifications of President Reagan's tax and spending proposals.

But Stockman, appearing Thursday in the White House briefing room, said, "I would guarantee to you here today" that the problem that led the three Republicans to vote against the president will be solved quickly.

He offered no details, but his comments echoed those of Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., who voted against the budget plan.

"In all likelihood, we're going to be able to put it together with very little difficulty," a vacationing Armstrong said by telephone from Florida. Both houses of Congress are on a two-week recess that ends April 27.

Armstrong was joined by Sens. Charles Grassley of Iowa and Steven Symms of Idaho in rejecting the budget proposal. They complained that the Reagan package would not guarantee the balanced budget that the president says his economic program will produce in 1984.

The administration has to come up with more than $70 billion in additional budget savings for 1983 and 1984 to balance the budget, but so far has resisted outlining specific cuts.

Stockman provided no details of how the problem can be solved, but he repeated his earlier statement that the disagreement was over accounting, and an "accounting solution" is likely.

Widows of slain fishermen file lawsuit against accused

SAN ANGELO — The widows of two men slain while fishing near Mertzon March 22 have filed a wrongful death suit against the suspect in the murders, 76-year-old Mortimer "Bubba" Hall.

Hall is being held under guard in a San Angelo hospital, following murder indictments returned Wednesday by an Irion County grand jury. He entered the hospital Wednesday afternoon for treatment of high blood pressure and alcoholism.

The civil suit, filed here Thursday by Linda Bernardon and Alona Adams, alleges Hall "wantonly and with malice shot and killed" their husbands — John Barnardon, 34, of Midland, and 32-year-old David Adams of Rollin Acres.

The men had been fishing from a rowboat on Spring Creek. Their bodies were found on a portion of the creek that winds through Hall's property. Hall has been described as a wealthy Mertzon rancher with "odd ways." Court records show he has had several complaints lodged against him for shooting incidents over the years.

No one was injured in those alleged shootings and only one of the complaints was ever prosecuted. That complaint resulted in a $200 fine against Hall for disorderly conduct in 1976. The other complaints were either dropped by the complaining parties or were not pursued by local authorities, sources say.

Although no monetary damages are specified in the suit, it seeks compensation for wages the victims would have earned in their lifetimes, punitive damages because the shootings were "of a malicious nature" and all funeral and burial costs.

San Angelo attorney Aubrey Stokes is handling the suit for the widows, and Jerry Johnson, also of San Angelo, is representing Hall in the criminal case. It was not immediately known if he would also defend Hall in the civil case.

Singapore gets model airport

By KENNETH L. WHITING
Associate Press Writer

SINGAPORE (AP) — The finishing touches are being put on a new Singapore airport designed to cope with civil air traffic well into the next century.

Construction of the $717 million Changi International Airport is on schedule, officials said. The formal opening is scheduled for July 1.

All scheduled flights will be transferred from Paya Lebar Airport on that date, said project coordinator Goh Keng Chew.

The older facility will handle diverted commercial flights until 1983, when a second runway will be completed at Changi, and will also serve military planes.

Conversion of the former British military airfield on the northeastern tip of Singapore island was ordered in May 1975. By then, expanding passenger traffic was jamming terminal facilities at Paya Lebar, which had an expected life of at least 30 years when it opened in 1955.

More than 5 million passengers passed through Paya Lebar last year. The new H-shaped terminal at Changi is designed to handle 10 million a year. Space has been set aside for three more passenger terminals.

Phase one of the project also includes aprons with parking bays for at least 45 aircraft, a cargo terminal and parking space for more than 2,000 cars and a number of buses.

There will be two fire stations, a police station and a flight kitchen large enough to prepare 50,000 meals a day. The 27-story control tower was recently handed over to the Department of Civil Aviation.

Rainwater from the runways will be collected in two reservoirs and recycled in the air-conditioning system and for fire-fighting purposes. New access roads connect the airport to equally new express highways. Changi is about 11 miles from downtown.

The roof for Singapore Airlines' column-free hangar was fabricated in Indonesia by McDermott Southeast Asia, a U.S. firm. Sections of the roof weighing more than 600 tons have been towed across Singapore Strait by barge to the construction site.

Swampy land was drained, streams diverted and 40 million cubic meters of earth reclaimed from the sea to accommodate the second of two parallel runways. Dredging got underway in 1976 only after dozens of unexploded bombs, relics of World War II, were recovered or detonated under water, officials said.

About 600 families have been resettled to make way for the 3,954-acre airport.

Billy the Kid's Tombstone returns, but is it his?

FORT SUMNER, N.M. (AP) — Billy the Kid's Tombstone is back in this southeastern New Mexico town, recovered after it had been stolen early in February. But some people say it's not Billy who's buried in the grave here.

They believe he died at a ripe old age in the 1940s and was not killed by Sheriff Pat Garrett's gun in 1881.

The Kid's granite tombstone was recovered in Huntington Beach, Calif. The story brought memories for some residents of the Southwest, including C.S. Holmes of Clovis, N.M., who had obtained a copy of an old grand jury indictment in Seymour, Texas, in the 1960s.

The indictment, filed in Hardiman County, Texas, on Dec. 28, 1881, charges a man with the killing of another. Witnesses who testified before the grand jury were listed as W.A. Tackett, Jack Grishman, Billy the Kid and Sam Watson.

The Kid's tombstone says he was killed by Garrett on July 14, 1881, five months earlier.

Either someone used his name on the court document or he was not killed. And if the Kid was not killed, someone else was buried in his grave at Fort Sumner in 1881.

Jimmy Ramage, an elementary-school principal in Hico, Texas, said during a telephone interview that he remembered an old man who lived in Hico in the 1940s and claimed to be Billy the Kid.

Ramage said the man called himself "Brushy Billy" and was always talking about his experiences. He wore a big hat, usually a plaid shirt. He had a handlebar mustache and a gray beard.

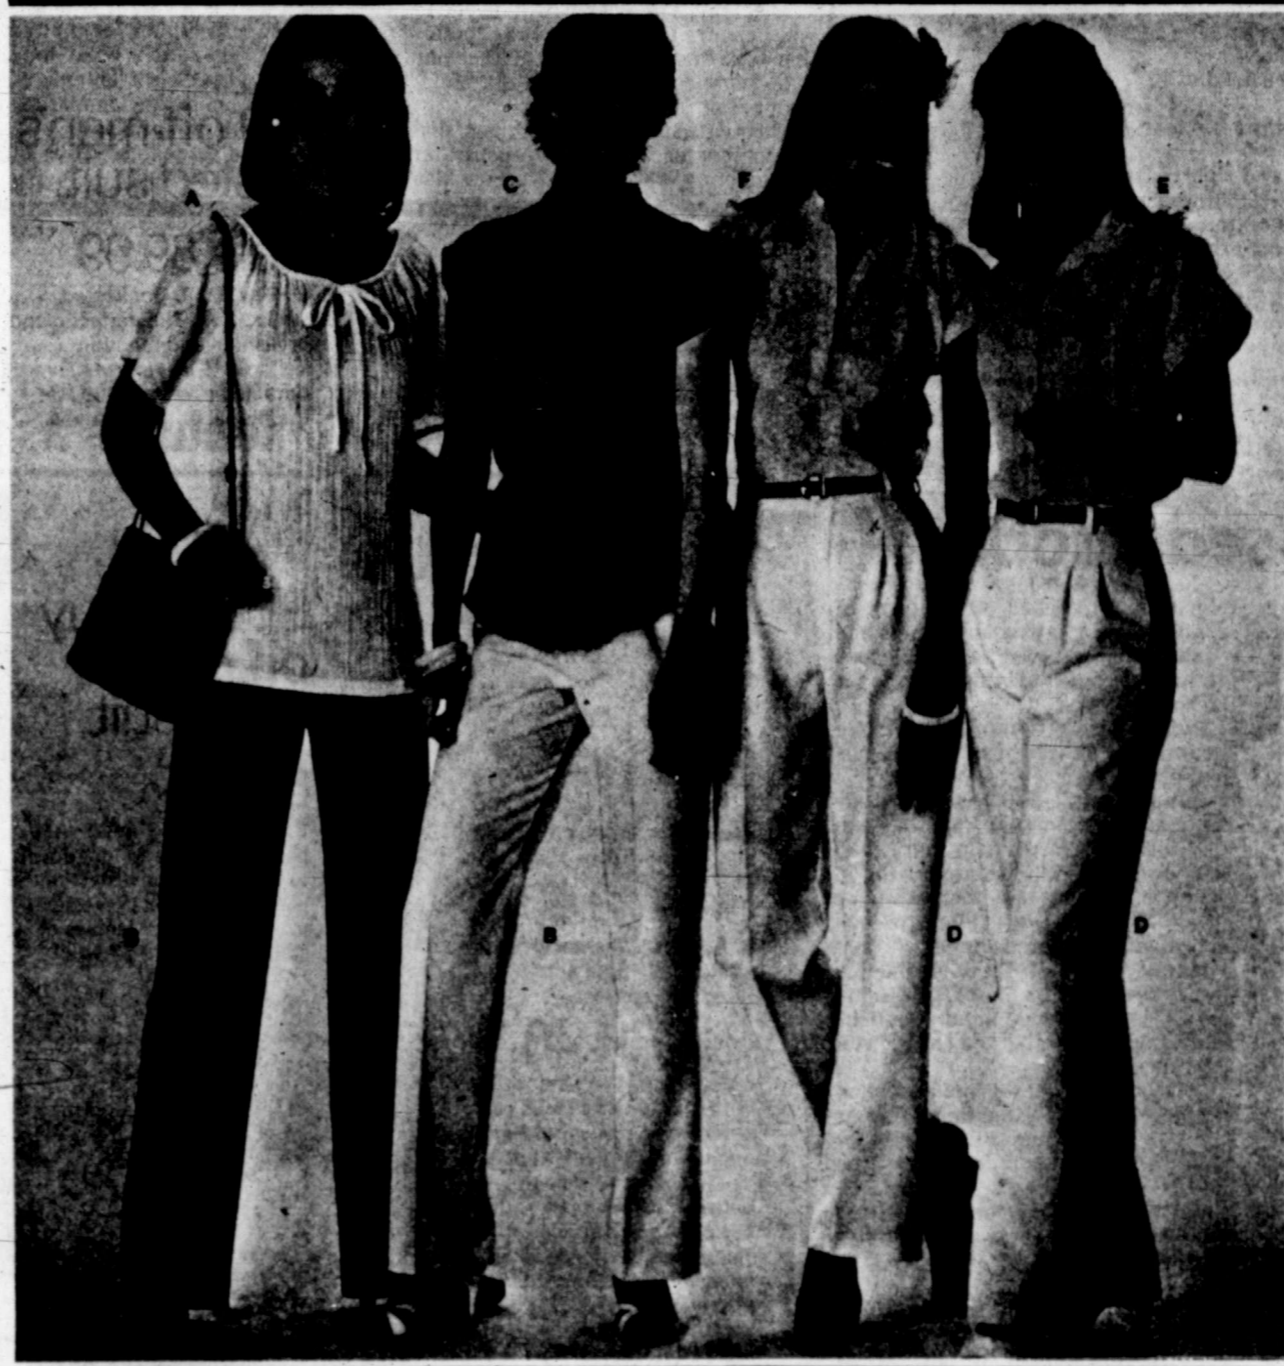

Brushy Billy was about 5-foot-6 or 5-foot-7, of medium build, and chewed tobacco on occasion.

Folks took his word about being Billy the Kid with a grain of salt, Ramage said.

It has been suggested Garrett and the Kid were friends, and that his death was a ruse to allow the Kid to escape from the public eye. And they say a derelict was buried in the Kid's place 100 years ago.

Soviet poem in honor of 23 slain children

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet children's newspaper, Pioneer Pravda, today published a poem dedicated to the 23 black children killed in Atlanta, Ga.

Soviet news accounts of the slayings have repeatedly made the assumption that white racists are responsible.

Here, in unofficial translation, is part of the poem, titled "The Right to Live Without Rights," which was published alongside pictures of some of the Atlanta victims. It was written by Nikolai Entelis, whom the paper identified only as an outside contributor.

With open smiles, so trusting they appear,
I look at these children with fear.
They are gone now — understand, they are gone!
Never again will they see a spring dawn.
The sea will never sparkle for them.
And they will never say "mother" again.
And these curly-headed children have committed what sin?
Only the color of their coal-black skin.
Only that their teeth are sugar-white.
Only that they are small, and they have no rights.
For this they suffer, from knives and lead
Their fathers and mothers are in sorrow and dread.

So who is guilty in that distant land?
The hail of lead comes from whose hand?
America has its racist groups.
Conscience and honor mean nothing to their groups.

And the state? There are laws and rights, says the state.
Deception! Hypocrisy! Words with no weight!
The fate of Negroes is pain and terror,
And 20 million people have become their bearer.
The whole earth condemns the evil bands,
The killers of children, who had clean hands.
And ever more often now, when racists attack,
Negroes stand up, and fight insolence back.

FBI chief says agent's remarks caused problem

ATLANTA (AP) — An FBI agent who alleged earlier this week that parents killed some of the 23 young blacks slain in the Atlanta area in the past 21 months may be in trouble, his supervisor says.

"There's a potential problem there for Mike Twibell," Special Agent John Glover said Thursday. "But it's a sensitive issue and I'm not at liberty to discuss it."

Glover refused to comment on whether Twibell, the head of the Macon FBI office, had been disciplined or relieved of duty because of his statements, made Tuesday night to a Macon civic club.

Twibell's statement brought an angry reaction Thursday from the head of a group that includes many of the parents of the 23 slain and two missing young blacks.

Camille Bell, mother of slain Yusef Bell and head of the Committee to Stop Children's Murders, sent FBI Director William Webster a letter that said:

"As parents and relatives of 25 young Americans either murdered or missing in Atlanta for more than 20 months, we stand united and dedicated to let almighty God alone be our judge.

"For this reason, we urge you, based on alleged available evidence, to place under arrest immediately those parents suspected of mercilessly taking their babies' lives," she said.

If such arrests are not made within 24 hours, Mrs. Bell said, "we ask that you personally inform the nation of this error in judgment and miscommunication."

In Washington, FBI spokesman Dave Divan said Thursday night that the letter had not been received at FBI headquarters and Webster would have no comment. He said the agency does not plan to respond to the letter until Glover has "made an assessment of the situation."

Twibell's comment that "some of these kids were killed by their parents" came one day after Webster himself had touched off a storm of controversy by saying authorities had "substantially solved" three or four of the cases but couldn't prosecute for lack of evidence.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown denied that any of the slayings had been solved.

But Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton said Thursday authorities have suspects in more than four "isolated" killings among the 23 slayings, but that they may never be tried because of court rulings on evidence-gathering procedures.

Slaton, whose office would handle the prosecution in at least 18 of the cases if arrests were made, said he doubts that several of the cases "will ever be tried no."

"It used to be that we could question people without advising them of their right to an attorney as long as we didn't abuse them in any way," he said. "Now we can't. Some of the cases might have been solved and brought to trial if those rules weren't on the books."

Slaton would not identify the more than four "isolated" slayings in which he said authorities "have someone in mind" as the culprit. He said that in some of those cases, police investigators have different opinions as to whether they have a "strong suspect."

At a news conference on the steps of Atlanta City Hall, Mrs. Bell said she and several other parents had been interrogated by police and had submitted to lie-detector tests.

In another development, members of the special police task force investigating the 23 slayings decided not to question a man arrested in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who resembles a composite drawing of a man seen with the latest victim, 21-year-old Larry Rogers.

Police spokeswoman Beverly Harvard said the decision was made after the task force received a report from FBI agents who had questioned the man in Fort Lauderdale.

Confidentiality question arises in welfare probe

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The FBI's quest to ferret out welfare cheats among 109,000 South Texas government workers and military personnel has run into a snag in the form of laws protecting confidentiality of the welfare rolls.

In an effort to ferret out any welfare cheats who are on government payrolls while illegally collecting food stamps or Aid to Dependent Children payments, the FBI has launched massive "Project Match."

The investigation entails the laborious checking of welfare rolls in Bexar and seven surrounding counties against personnel records of military bases, federal agencies, state agencies, and county and city governments.

But Bill Wagner, assistant chief of information for the Texas Department of Human Resources in Austin, said his agency was not sure it could legally comply with a grand jury subpoena issued for a computer tape of all welfare records kept by the agency for Bexar, Atascosa, Bander, Comal, Guadalupe, Kendall, Medina and Wilson Counties.

"Our problem is that both state and federal laws protect the confidentiality of welfare recipients," Wagner said. "The question is, are we violating the confidentiality of welfare recipients when we turn the records over?"

Wagner said the subpoena is being reviewed by the agency's attorneys. "We want to cooperate in ferreting out welfare fraud wherever it exists," he said. "We favor the investigation 100 percent, but we need to know where we stand."

FBI investigators said they want records for all 32 welfare programs operating in the South Texas area, but that they are primarily interested in the food stamp and Aid to Dependent Children programs, Wagner said.

Approximately $92 million in food stamps and ADC payments are distributed each year to some 190,000 people in the eight counties, TDHR statistics show.

The FBI wants to match these names against the names of 41,351 military personnel stationed at San Antonio's five military installations. State and federal agency employment in the eight counties totals 44,133, according to the latest figures, and 27,709 municipal and county workers are employed.

Wagner said officials of the state welfare agency probably will appear before the San Antonio grand jury on May 5 as ordered, bringing the computer tape requested, and tell federal officials they are bound by law to keep welfare rolls confidential unless ordered to release them by a judge.

"We are going to show up at the right time and make our confidentiality statements and say that if we are directed by a federal judge to turn them over, then we will," Wagner said.

FBI agent Albert Robinson, who is heading the investigation, said every previous investigation like it in several other cities across the nation have turned up high levels of fraud.

Clements says talks basis for conference

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements says a June meeting of the governors of U.S. and Mexican border states will provide a basis for binding agreements when the presidents of the two nations meet later this year.

President Reagan and Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo were scheduled to meet last week. But the meeting was postponed because of the assassination attempt on Reagan.

"I can guarantee you that President Reagan is not going to ignore what we in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California feel and know about this border situation," Clements said.

The governor made the comments and promoted an upcoming conference between officials of the two countries during a visit to El Paso Thursday.

Clements said energy will be one of the primary issues at the June conference between governors of the four U.S. border states and the six Mexican border states.

Clements spoke with optimism several times of what will transpire at the meeting, where the governors also will consider such issues as pollution along the border, illegal aliens, drug traffic and business development.

The governor also said that the United States must keep in mind the needs of Mexico as well as its own needs in business and government.

He gave the speech on Mexican oil to a meeting of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, which has been discussing relations with Mexico.

In particular, the governor emphasized Mexican oil supplies, which he says have the potential of equaling world powers such as Saudi Arabia.

"To state it quite simply, Mexico has oil, and while we need it, there is much more we have to take into account," Clements said. "We must start with what Mexico needs and wants."

"What they don't want is to simply be a crude oil supplier for the rest of the world," he said. "What they do want is to use their tremendous oil reserves to build the foundation for lasting growth and prosperity."

Clements also dedicated the city's new foreign trade zone.

Reagan not judging jury in FBI pardons

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House has backed away from a statement that President Reagan pardoned two former top FBI officials convicted of violating civil rights through illegal break-ins because he felt the jury rendered the wrong verdict.

"I want to correct the impression that the president was making a judgment on the outcome of the trial," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes told reporters Thursday.

Just hours earlier, Speakes had said at a news briefing that Reagan "clearly felt the decision of the jury and the decision of the court was not correct."

Speakes also had said Reagan believes the two former officials he pardoned Wednesday — W. Mark Felt and Edward S. Miller — had acted properly in authorizing searches without warrants against the radical Weather Underground.

The White House spokesman changed the explanation for the pardons after talking with Fred Fielding, a White House lawyer who held a similar position in the Nixon administration when the FBI searches were conducted.

"The president is not passing judgment on the jury — the rightness or wrongness of the jury decision," Speakes said. "It (the pardoning) is certainly a step the president takes because he feels an act of punishment is not necessary."

The government prosecutor in the case, John Nields, criticized Reagan's action, saying it undermines democratic processes by allowing the executive branch to protect its own members despite a jury verdict. He said the pardon revealed an ignorance of trial testimony.

South Plains residents oppose plan

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The MX missile system is an undesirable neighbor that would take too much agricultural land out of production and use money that could be spent to feed the hungry, a group of South Plains residents has told an Air Force panel.

The panel was in Lubbock Thursday for one of 16 hearings scheduled in four states that may become the system's home.

Federal spokesmen say the preferred site for the 200 missiles and 4,600 launch sites is in Nevada and Utah. But an alternate plan would based the system between Dalhart, Texas, and Clovis, N.M.

About 125 South Plains residents attended the afternoon session, and about 90 showed up for the evening meeting. Most of those attending expressed their disapproval of the Texas-New Mexico proposal.

"We're not against the MX system per se," said Carl King, spokesman for the Texas Corn Growers Association. "We're not against it if it's necessary for deterrence, but we are against using agricultural land (as a site for the system)."

About 10 protesters picketed the meetings, wearing signs that read, "Help Unborn, Abort MX" and "No MX."

Soviet poem in honor of 23 slain children

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet children's newspaper, Pioneer Pravda, today published a poem dedicated to the 23 black children killed in Atlanta, Ga.

Soviet news accounts of the slayings have repeatedly made the assumption that white racists are responsible.

Here, in unofficial translation, is part of the poem, titled "The Right to Live Without Rights," which was published alongside pictures of some of the Atlanta victims. It was written by Nikolai Entelis, whom the paper identified only as an outside contributor.

With open smiles, so trusting they appear,
I look at these children with fear.
They are gone now — understand, they are gone!
Never again will they see a spring dawn.
The sea will never sparkle for them.
And they will never say "mother" again.
And these curly-headed children have committed what sin?
Only the color of their coal-black skin.
Only that their teeth are sugar-white.
Only that they are small, and they have no rights.
For this they suffer, from knives and lead
Their fathers and mothers are in sorrow and dread.

So who is guilty in that distant land?
The hail of lead comes from whose hand?
America has its racist groups.
Conscience and honor mean nothing to their groups.

And the state? There are laws and rights, says the state.
Deception! Hypocrisy! Words with no weight!
The fate of Negroes is pain and terror,
And 20 million people have become their bearer.
The whole earth condemns the evil bands,
The killers of children, who had clean hands.
And ever more often now, when racists attack,
Negroes stand up, and fight insolence back.

FBI chief says agent's remarks caused problem

ATLANTA (AP) — An FBI agent who alleged earlier this week that parents killed some of the 23 young blacks slain in the Atlanta area in the past 21 months may be in trouble, his supervisor says.

"There's a potential problem there for Mike Twibell," Special Agent John Glover said Thursday. "But it's a sensitive issue and I'm not at liberty to discuss it."

Glover refused to comment on whether Twibell, the head of the Macon FBI office, had been disciplined or relieved of duty because of his statements, made Tuesday night to a Macon civic club.

Twibell's statement brought an angry reaction Thursday from the head of a group that includes many of the parents of the 23 slain and two missing young blacks.

Camille Bell, mother of slain Yusef Bell and head of the Committee to Stop Children's Murders, sent FBI Director William Webster a letter that said:

"As parents and relatives of 25 young Americans either murdered or missing in Atlanta for more than 20 months, we stand united and dedicated to let almighty God alone be our judge.

"For this reason we urge you, based on alleged available evidence, to place under arrest immediately those parents suspected of mercilessly taking their babies' lives," she said.

If such arrests are not made within 24 hours, Mrs. Bell said, "we ask that you personally inform the nation of this error in judgment and miscommunication."

In Washington, FBI spokesman Dave Divan said Thursday night that the letter had not been received at FBI headquarters and Webster would have no comment. He said the agency does not plan to respond to the letter until Glover has "made an assessment of the situation."

Twibell's comment that "some of these kids were killed by their parents" came one day after Webster himself had touched off a storm of controversy by saying authorities had "substantially solved" three or four of the cases but couldn't prosecute for lack of evidence.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown denied that any of the slayings had been solved.

But Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slaton said Thursday authorities have suspects in more than four "isolated" killings among the 23 slayings, but that they may never be tried because of court rulings on evidence-gathering procedures.

Slaton, whose office would handle the prosecution in at least 18 of the cases if arrests were made, said he doubts that several of the cases "will ever be tried no."

"It used to be that we could question people without advising them of their right to an attorney as long as we didn't abuse them in any way," he said. "Now we can't. Some of the cases might have been solved and brought to trial if those rules weren't on the books."

Slaton would not identify the more than four "isolated" slayings in which he said authorities "have someone in mind" as the culprit. He said that in some of those cases, police investigators have different opinions as to whether they have a "strong suspect."

At a news conference on the steps of Atlanta City Hall, Mrs. Bell said she and several other parents had been interrogated by police and had submitted to lie-detector tests.

In another development, members of the special police task force investigating the 23 slayings decided not to question a man arrested in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., who resembles a composite drawing of a man seen with the latest victim, 21-year-old Larry Rogers.

Police spokeswoman Beverly Harvard said the decision was made after the task force received a report from FBI agents who had questioned the man in Fort Lauderdale.

Confidentiality question arises in welfare probe

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The FBI's quest to ferret out welfare cheats among 109,000 South Texas government workers and military personnel has run into a snag in the form of laws protecting confidentiality of the welfare rolls.

In an effort to ferret out any welfare cheats who are on government payrolls while illegally collecting food stamps or Aid to Dependent Children payments, the FBI has launched massive "Project Match."

The investigation entails the laborious checking of welfare rolls in Bexar and seven surrounding counties against personnel records of military bases, federal agencies, state agencies, and county and city governments.

But Bill Wagner, assistant chief of information for the Texas Department of Human Resources in Austin, said his agency was not sure it could legally comply with a grand jury subpoena issued for a computer tape of all welfare records kept by the agency for Bexar, Atascosa, Bandera, Comal, Guadalupe, Kendall, Medina and Wilson Counties.

"Our problem is that both state and federal laws protect the confidentiality of welfare recipients," Wagner said. "The question is, are we violating the confidentiality of welfare recipients when we turn the records over?"

Wagner said the subpoena is being reviewed by the agency's attorneys. "We want to cooperate in ferreting out welfare fraud wherever it exists," he said. "We favor the investigator 100 percent, but we need to know where we stand."

FBI investigators said they want records for all 32 welfare programs operating in the South Texas area, but that they are primarily interested in the food stamp and Aid to Dependent Children programs, Wagner said.

Approximately $92 million in food stamps and ADC payments are distributed each year to some 190,000 people in the eight counties, TDHR statistics show.

"We are going to show up at the right time and make our confidentiality statements and say that if we are directed by a federal judge to turn them over, then we will," Wagner said.

FBI agent Albert Robinson, who is heading the investigation, said every previous investigation like it in several other cities across the nation have turned up high levels of fraud.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, Midland Memorial Hospital, Midland, Texas.

South Plains residents oppose plan

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The MX missile system is an undesirable neighbor that would take too much agricultural land out of production and use money that could be spent to feed the hungry, a group of South Plains residents has told an Air Force panel.

The panel was in Lubbock Thursday for one of 16 hearings scheduled in four states that may become the system's home.

Federal spokesmen say the preferred site for the 200 missiles and 4,600 launch sites is in Nevada and Utah. But an alternate plan would base the system between Dalhart, Texas, and Clovis, N.M.

About 125 South Plains residents attended the afternoon session, and about 90 showed up for the evening meeting. Most of those attending expressed their disapproval of the Texas-New Mexico proposal.

"We're not against the MX system per se," said Carl King, spokesman for the Texas Corn Growers Association. "We're not against it if it's necessary for deterrence, but we are against using agricultural land (as a site for the system)."

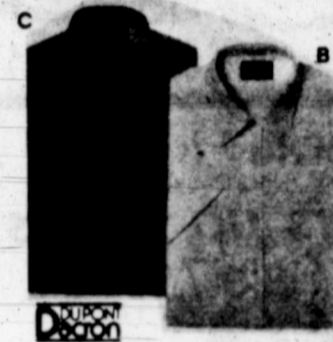

About 10 protesters picketed the meetings, wearing signs that read, "Help Unborn, Abort MX" and "No MX."

Careful action needed

While everything appears fairly well in order, at this point anyway, on the request Tuesday for a specific use permit for construction of a heliport near downtown Midland, the city council is showing wisdom by not rubber-stamping its approval.

Councilmen Tom Sloan and Gordon Marcum II voiced concerns about potential safety and noise problems which could result from the private-use heliport proposed for construction atop the three-story BTA Oil Producers building. Those are primary considerations and should be answered fully prior to any final council action. Likely the answers will be known prior to the April 28 public hearing.

Ed Harbold, regional manager of Lone Star Helicopters which flies the helicopter BTA uses, noted that safety always is the big consideration. "We want it to be a safe operation," he said.

Harbold detailed restrictions already placed on the proposed heliport by both the Federal Aeronautics Administration and local governmental entities. According to the restrictions, the BTA heliport could only be used by a twin-engine helicopter that would be operated in such a manner that if one engine malfunctioned, the craft could continue to operate on the other engine. The heliport would be for daytime use only and there could be no approaches or departures to or from the east (the direction of Midland's downtown skyscrapers).

Further, if multi-story buildings were later constructed either to the north or the south of BTA, use of the heliport would have to be discontinued, Harbold added.

According to Harbold, the BTA heliport would only be used by about five flights per month. But council members appear to be rightfully concerned about a proliferation of heliports throughout the downtown area.

Perhaps the heliport would be a progressive step for Midland. Certainly we do not want to be accused of holding back progress.

But there are numerous oil companies and other business concerns in the downtown area which likely would enjoy the convenience of heliports and, if all chose to pursue that route, the traffic situation above downtown Midland could start to resemble the traffic situation at ground-level in downtown Midland. Careful planning can circumvent many potential problems.

It's best to look carefully at this request, not for what it will bring to the city initially, but what the result may be five or 10 years from now. The city council seems to have those considerations in mind, and that is reassuring.

A voice to heed

World leadership has many dimensions — economic, military, intellectual. Basic scientific research is a key not only to the intellectual leadership of this country, but also to our leadership in economic development and military power.

So Richard C. Atkinson, chancellor of the University of California, San Diego, argued in his plea for research and development funds before the House Armed Services Committee recently. Atkinson, a former director of the National Science Foundation, stressed the link between declining U.S. productivity and the declining commitment to science.

Germany and Japan — even the Soviet Union — have increased the level of research and development investment — with corresponding economic gains. By contrast, the American determination has sagged since 1968. Basic research as a fraction of the federal budget has decreased by 27 percent, research and development by 36 percent. Investment by industry in relation to sales has dropped by 32 percent.

And, Atkinson warned the panel, the serious decline in the nation's defense industrial capability places our national security in jeopardy.

His concern should be heeded by the several government agencies with a stake in science and by industry.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Justice covers up chiefs' misbehavior

WASHINGTON — Attorney General William French Smith's top priority isn't violent crime, but reform of the systematic, high-level coverups within the Justice Department, which threaten to undermine the effectiveness of the nation's chief law enforcement agency.

Smith is not responsible for the "see-no-evil" attitude of subordinates he inherited, of course. But the relaxed way that Justice Department probers go after allegations of misbehavior by the big fish remains at the scandalous level reached under the Carter administration.

One example involves Peter Bensing, whose unquestioned competence and political savvy have enabled him to remain head of the Drug Enforcement Administration during three administrations. Bensing's success as a narcotics bloodhound is attested to by numerous spectacular busts, which resulted in confiscation of hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of illicit drugs.

My associate Jack Mitchell and Indy Badwar have learned that the Reagan transition team was offered substantial charges of misconduct by Bensing. The allegations include misuse of DEA agents for personal convenience and exotic shopping trips while Bensing was traveling on official business.

In addition, I've received reports that the Justice Department is aware of allegations that DEA agents were assigned to chauffeur Bensing's relatives around various vacation spots abroad. And his mother has been helped through customs by DEA agents on a VIP basis on several occasions.

Furthermore, when the allegations against Bensing by DEA employees were made to Senate investigators and offered to the White House transition team, the informants said they could get virtually dozens of agents to testify under oath on their knowledge of the abuses charged.

I should emphasize that Bensing hasn't been found guilty of any wrongdoing. But the widespread knowledge of the allegations within the DEA has affected employee morale. If for no other reason, the charges should be given a thorough airing.

One serious charge of improper behavior was referred to the Justice Department recently. It got the same halfhearted investigation that has become the hallmark of the department's handling of political big shots.

According to the allegation, Bensing or a subordinate sent a DEA agent from New York to Washington just to hand-carry a Latin American vase the director had bought overseas. To give the trip some faint color of official business, the agent was given a dictation tape to deliver to Washington. According to a DEA source, another agent had feared an impropriety and had already refused the assignment.

The agent who did make the trip said in a taped conversation that he didn't think it was a proper use of his time. He turned Bensing's vase over to a DEA official at Washington's National Airport — and mailed the dictation tape the next day.

CHARLEY REESE

'Disinformation' strategy still pursued by Soviets

The novel, "The Spike," which was written by two respected newsmen, deals with the Soviet KGB's "disinformation" efforts.

Though the book is fiction, the KGB disinformation program is not. Only recently, French intelligence agents arrested a well-know Paris journalist who for years had been handed information by the KGB.

This particular program of the Soviet intelligence agency is designed to discredit anti-communist or anti-Soviet leaders, to disarm the public, to confuse it, to mislead it, and to play a part in undermining Western responses to Soviet expansionism.

It should come as no surprise that the Soviets would seek to both infiltrate and to influence the press in countries it has targeted for subversion and eventual conquest, including the U.S.

Nor should it come as any surprise that such an effort would be relatively easy. A great many journalists tend to be left-of-center in their thinking anyway; thus, it is easier to see the defects in an anti-communist country, such as Chile, than it is in a leftist country such as Cuba or, now, Nicaragua. They are receptive to information which tends to confirm their own prejudices.

It is a fact, for example, that numerous American leaders, both military and Congressional, began to warn that the Soviet Union was racing ahead of the United States in 1971. Yet, most of the national press did not begin to pay attention to this military imbalance until 1980.

The horrible holocaust of Cambodia was virtually unreported for months after the Reader's Digest had published a book detailing the terrible massacres that were taking place.

When Orlando Letelier, the Marxist diplomat from Chile, was assassinated in Washington, papers in his briefcase proved that he was receiving money from the Cuban intelligence service, yet the Washington Post, which did not hesitate to publish the Pentagon papers, declined to report this even after Accuracy in Media called it to the Post's attention.

Subsequently, when the late Laurence Stern, the Post's national editor, died, he was eulogized by the head of the Cuban intelligence apparatus working in Washington. The Village Voice waxed eloquent about Stern's leftist ideology.

Stern had defended the Post's use of a "free lance" writer in Havana who had been on Fidel Castro's payroll for a number of years and Post coverage of Nicaragua was blatantly sympathetic to the Sandanistas.

Some people decry even the suggestion that foreign intelligence agencies or ideological leanings influence the news in the American press. I believe that is a naive position. We have the historical record which proves of course that communist do end up on the staffs of American publications. Whittaker Chambers, for one, was senior editor at Time. We have evidence that the KGB does use journalists to plant stories.

I would think, however, that the degree of penetration by KGB agents or communist is relatively small. Just the natural limitations of our craft, however, makes it vulnerable to unwitting manipulation. Most papers, for example, rely on native stringers in foreign countries and objectivity is not a journalistic tradition in any country.

The wire services today frequently rotate their foreign correspondents with the result that it is rare to find a wire service journalist stationed overseas who speaks the language of the country in which he is serving. This is a tremendous disadvantage.

Still, it behooves every editor and publisher to at least be aware of the KGB disinformation program and to watch for signs of it. It's far better to clear our own houses than for the FBI to do it for us.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan overrules admirals on vital communications system

WASHINGTON — A hospitalized President Reagan did not wait for the tragic sinking April 10 of a Japanese trawler by a missile-firing Polaris submarine to bring the admirals to heel by ordering full speed ahead on a vital submarine communications system they wanted stopped.

From the White House last week, an undated memorandum ordered Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to countermand the Navy's decision to cancel its extremely low frequency (ELF) communications system. The memo bore only Reagan's name, not his signature, but it had been orally approved from the hospital bed of the invalid commander in chief.

There shall be no funding reductions," Reagan said. "You should advise the Navy that I am not inclined to terminate this much-needed program without compelling evidence to do so."

That presumably scuttled the effort by the admirals to play the familiar old Navy game: Put aside currently needed projects at the expense of funding futuristic systems. Surprisingly, the Pentagon civilians did not bring the Navy brass up short; the decision on a piece of hardware had to go all the way to the president's hospital bed.

The Navy leaked the first news of this to the public via no champion of the Pentagon: Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan, a liberal Democrat and all-out environmentalist foe of ELF, a system destined for his home state. When Levin passed the word to the Detroit News, it exploded with the force of a Polaris missile among defense leaders on Capitol Hill.

For 20 years, the Navy and a few brave politicians willing to take on the environmentalist lobby had preached the soundness and safety of ELF. Without it, the president cannot communicate with submerged U.S. submarines; they must come close to the surface and trail their antennas.

That is probably what happened, Navy submariners told us, in the East China Sea tragedy April 10. The U.S.S. George Washington, a Polaris missile sub, was almost certainly surfacing to pick up new orders. That maneuver would be unnecessary with ELF.

In an international emergency, the president could not order U.S. strategic submarines to prepare for possible missile firings, or to rush to a new location, without risking their destruction by an enemy as they expose their surface antennas. ELF is "the critical linchpin" to wartime deployment of the subs, wrote Sen. John Tower, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, in an angry note to Weinberger when he first heard about the Navy's decision.

Why, then, did the Navy risk congressional wrath and the commander in chief's personal affront by canceling ELF? The full reason is shrouded in Pentagon mist, but defense specialists — including many submariners — say the reason was simple greed for defense appropriations.

The Navy brass decided the $34 million earmarked for ELF in the coming fiscal year could be used to develop a futuristic aircraft for communicating with submarines called TACAMO. Then, in another year or two, it could return to ELF, knowing that growing congressional support of the ELF system would still guarantee delivery of the funds.

In so doing the Navy betrayed its friends who, on April 7, had won a referendum over the environmentalists in Ashland County, Wis., where the first part of ELF is being built. Supporting ELF in the name of national security, veterans groups have spent thousands of dollars to argue there is nothing to fear from the underground antenna. The VFW had wired Adm. Hayward, chief of naval operations, two weeks earlier that cancellation would destroy Navy credibility.

The decision reversing the admirals was made by the White House on two grounds: First, ELF is the only foreseeable system to give the president command-and-control access to missile-firing submarines, which are a vital part of the strategic triad; second, credibility of the entire defense establishment, not just the Navy, was on the line at a time the new administration is trying to restore American defenses.

Pentagon civilians, in distinction to this White House posture, did little to bring the admirals to heel. Entirely exempted was Secretary of the Navy John Lehman, who pleaded conflict of interest stemming from his activities as a Washington-based defense consultant. Although Weinberger quietly informed White House aides of his own doubts about the Navy's decision, he did nothing publicly to force a reversal.

That left it up to the commander in chief. The display of a decisive president able to make a quick political decision from his hospital bed is the one dividend to emerge from the ELF affair. What Reagan should now do is transfer some of that spirit to the Pentagon.

Six die, 35 hurt in five-alarm fire in Kansas City

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A smoky, five-alarm fire erupted in a 10-story mid-town apartment building early today, killing at least six elderly residents and injuring 35 others, including six firefighters, police said.

"There's a very good chance there will be more fatalities (among the injured)," said Harold Knabe, a public relations spokesman for the Fire Department.

Police initially had listed eight dead because of a mixup with a hospital report, police Sgt. Jim Treese said.

Treese said there were 27 people injured, most of them elderly, and nearly all were suffering from smoke inhalation.

The fire in the Westport Central Apartments was discovered shortly after 2 a.m. and was reported under control about two hours later.

The blaze was contained on the first floor, but thick, black smoke filled the building and poured from apartment windows. Rescuers, initially unable to enter the building because of the smoke, plucked residents to safety from ladders.

The second floor suffered extensive heat and smoke damage, officials said.

Authorities said some 184 people, most of them elderly, lived in the apartment building.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

"If people had kept all their doors closed and stayed in their rooms, every one of them would have gotten out," Knabe said. "But, of course, it was a panic situation."

Treese said "there was an awful lot of smoke in the building and that seems to have been the killer."

Police were the first to arrive, and about 25 officers entered through the rear of the building and went up and down the halls and floors waking the residents and advising them to go out the back, he said.

The building, erected in 1941, is all concrete and brick. Fire officials said there were no smoke alarms in the building except for a few purchased by individual residents.

Treese and Knabe said firemen made two full searches of the building and were convinced there were no other victims in the building.

Treese said all of the victims appeared to have died of smoke inhalation.

Police said four of the victims were found between the second and ninth floors, including a 23-year-old woman, identified as an employee of a delicatessen on the first floor, whose body was found in an elevator. Officers said she lived on the 10th floor and apparently was trying to flee the building when she was overcome. Two bodies were found just outside the apartments.

N. Carolina, Florida forests charred in fire

By The Associated Press

While firefighters in North Carolina tried to keep stubborn forest fires away from homes in Onslow County, Florida crews were working to contain a blaze in Everglades National Park before it could disrupt the area's fragile ecology.

The blazes charred 13,000 acres in Florida and consumed 20,000 acres of prime timberland in North Carolina.

Damage in North Carolina was estimated in the millions of dollars. No serious injuries were reported.

"I don't care if it rains on my Easter parade," said forest service fire prevention specialist Tom Hegele. "I don't think anybody would."

By Thursday afternoon, a fire at Piney Green had destroyed about 5,000 acres. In the Great Sandy Run Pocosin, fires raged through 5,600 acres in one section, 7,000 in a second and 2,000 in a third, said Hegele.

Three fires in the same general area of the Dixon community south of Jacksonville burned about 15,000 acres, most of it owned by the International Paper Co.

Most of the Dixon fires were blamed on arson. In a military-like campaign, forest service workers set up a temporary headquarters under the Dixon fire tower and worked more than 36 hours with only brief breaks to eat.

New fires broke out Thursday in Jones, Onslow, Craven, Currituck and Columbus counties, Hegele said.

Five firefighters were injured at the Piney Green blaze, none seriously, Hegele said. Late Wednesday, three volunteers from the Swansboro Fire Department were injured when they either fell off a truck or were thrown from it. They were treated and released.

In Florida, firefighters Thursday began lighting "backfires" — intentionally set blazes to strip land and block flames from spreading.

The latest fire began Monday near Chekika State Park and spread to the Everglades National Park area, said state forestry dispatcher Carl Colbert. Three other fires near the tip of the Florida peninsula were declared under control Thursday, said urban forestry coordinator Bill Slaymaker.

Officials were trying to keep the flames from spreading into several stands of cypress and pine at Pay-haw-okee, a popular tourist spot 65 miles south of Miami.

State forestry officials said the national park fire has burned more than 13,000 acres. Two fires in nearby Broward County last week burned more than 40,000 acres in what officials said was the worst Everglades fire in a decade. Those fires were under control earlier this week.

State Forester Bob Dutty said the cause of the largest fire is still being investigated, but he blamed two fires on carelessness and said another started after someone burned trash in a backyard.

Eight injured by smoke in New York hotel fire

NEW YORK (AP) — Some 1,500 guests of the New York Statler Hotel were forced onto the streets around Madison Square Garden early today after a smoky fire erupted in a pantry near a third-floor bathroom, officials said.

Fire officials said eight people suffered minor smoke inhalation and were taken to nearby hospitals for oxygen and observation. There were no other reports of injuries.

The fire started around 2:45 a.m. and was believed confined to the ballroom area on the third floor. At one point part of the ceiling weakened and fell but there was no major danger, according to fire officials.

Scores of hotel guests stood around outside the hotel in midtown Manhattan in various stages of undress, across from the Pennsylvania Railroad station. The temperature was in the lower 50s.
