

UNDECIDED — We've noticed more and more papers are starting their column writers stories with the notation that "this is not necessarily the views of this newspaper, but the writer's," or "this is not an editorial but a syndicated column."

We are seriously considering using the same heading for this column 'cause sometimes it is used for editorials but usually just opinions, and we must admit, may or may not be the one we would have to stand behind if it became a major issue of the Herald.

We can think of so many reasons we will drop the subject before we get started and have to continue this into several long-winded installments.

Bill Sams and yours truly were standing in front of the Herald office recently when Mr. Antonio Ballejo strode by with a hoe on his back and although he is very old, as you can see by the picture, he couldn't resist stopping long enough to hoe the weed in the small patch of Bermuda grass striving for life on the small piece of ground by the water meter.

"He's done more for Knox City than anyone I know," Bill replied when we quit talking long enough to make this off-the-cuff remark and we ran for our camera to get his portrait before he moved on down the road.

Not many (eight) were on hand last week for our general membership meeting of the C of C. We were in competition with too many other functions so the thing was a flop.

We would like to point out that members and prospective members are always welcome at the board of directors meeting and that is the first Tuesday of each month at 7 a.m. and place will be alternated between Central Cafe and City Cafe.

A membership drive is now in progress and Hob Smith is the chairman. If you have an idea let us know about it. Nothing ventured nothing gained.

Sam Reed usually greets me with, "Hill, can't you get people to do right?" and Saturday he finally admitted he has the same problem with some of his pet projects. Mr. Sam has worked night and day, spent a bushel of money, and has traveled no telling how many miles to get the farmers in upmeaten counties in Texas and Oklahoma to pay 50 cents a bale for the control of insects.

The Plains area has been in the program for some time and is proving very successful there. Surprisingly, Mr. Reed is having a hard time collecting the 50 cent per bale figure, although most farmers in this particular area are spending up to $12 or in few cases $15 or more dollars per acre for poisoning.

The government will match whatever figure can be raised we understand.

Com'on Mr. Farmer let's put the boll worm out of commission before he ruins us all!

JUST HABIT — Having worked in the fields for many many years, Antonio Ballejo just couldn't resist the temptation of clearing the small spot shown above of weeds as he passed by recently. He first came to Knox City in 1949 during the big cotton picking rush and has been here for the past 11 years. He still works, when he can, but his eyes are in very bad shape.

Other States Recognize Problem

By HARLEY PERSHING

The community junior college has a definite place in the scheme of higher education in Florida and California.

Educators and law makers in these two states recognize the importance of the two-year colleges and their relationships to industry, commerce, business, research and community growth and development.

These educators point out that Texas, which is second only to California in the number of tax supported junior colleges, could learn many lessons from the West Coast state on how to expand and improve its community college programs.

These are lessons to be learned in Florida, too, says Dr. C. C. Colvert, a University of Texas professor in junior college training.

One big problem facing Texas now is the ever-present demand from communities and regions that their junior college be elevated to four-year status.

This trend is viewed by educators as a dangerous one in that it dilutes the entire education program. The state's strong schools and universities are forced to share the increasingly hard-to-obtain educational dollar with smaller, ill equipped and inadequate schools.

The elevation of junior colleges to four-year status has another deteriorating effect on the state's program of education beyond the high school.

Once a community or region is successful in pushing its junior college to senior college status through the legislature, the role of the junior college is forgotten. No attempt is made to establish another junior college to fill the gap created when the school jumped the traces.

According to the nation's top educators, as long as there are high school graduates, industrial complexes and commercial centers there will be a need for junior colleges.

California has recognized this problem and has done something about it.

According to Dr. Colvert, who has served as a consultant to California in its program of expanding the junior college program, that state has never elevated a junior college.

In fact, the state's comprehensive program for higher education prohibits such action.

California's plan requires that a community or region must contain a junior college before a state university or one of its branches can be located there.

Has this requirement harmed the junior college program or endangered enrollment at the university or four-year college level?

"Absolutely not," said Dr. Colvert. "In fact, the junior college enhances a senior college. It helps prepare students for the junior-senior year work by preparing them for tougher studies

It also serves the student interested only in two years of college work or training in technical and vocational programs.

This frees the four year colleges to provide educational programs for those interested in bachelor degrees and graduate work."

One example of the success of the junior-senior college program can be found in Long Beach, Calif.

In 1950, the Long Beach two-year community college had an enrollment of 20,000 students. The college offered the full range of study: programs in technical and vocational training, adult education, community services and those leading to baccalaureate degrees at a four-year school.

A few years later, the state decided to create a four-year school in Long Beach. No attempt was made to tamper with the junior college program.

Instead, a site was found across town from the community college. A new plant was constructed and opened. Last year, the four-year state college had an enrollment of 10,139 students.

What of the community college? Its enrollment was 24,047.

Entrance requirements of California's four-year colleges and its university system play an important role in the success of the community college programs.

The university system will accept for enrollment only those high school students whose academic work put them in the upper eighth scholastically. Students entering the university from junior colleges or transferred from state colleges must meet similarly rigid requirements.

Only students ranking in the one third of the high school program are eligible for enrollment in the four-year state colleges.

The doors are wide open in the junior college level, however.

This does not mean, says Dr. Colvert, that there is any lessening of excellence in the teaching or curricula of the junior colleges.

On the other hand, the junior colleges help serve as the springboard for those late comers who failed to blossom in the high school. The schools also provide terminal education for those who desire only two years of college for the quest for a job or who want to enter the technical field and can obtain the training only at the junior college level.

Florida, too has recognized the role of the junior college and its high place in the state's system of higher education.

Industry recognizes the importance of the junior college, too. Dr. Colvert cited this example to show how much emphasis industry gives the junior college program:

A few years ago a big Eastern industrial firm picked St. Petersburg, Fla., as the site for location of one of its plants. The region offered everything: ideal weather, excellent tax structures, plenty of labor, top working conditions.

One of the company executives mentioned availability of a junior college. He wanted to know its location, its size, its enrollment and the courses offered.

Community leaders at St. Petersburg ruefully explained there was no such college in that city or even close by.

The company executive said a junior college was vitally needed. Where else could the firm obtain technicians and skilled craftsmen for the jobs?

That did it. The community quickly approved a bond issue. A first rate community college was opened. The plant moved to the area, boosting the region's economy by millions of dollars.

Another significant point is that Florida does not turn to its junior colleges as the source for creating four-year schools.

The state now has embarked on a bold new program, which educators like Dr. Colvert say, could be the answer to the education explosion that will erupt in the next decade when college enrollment will almost double that of this era.

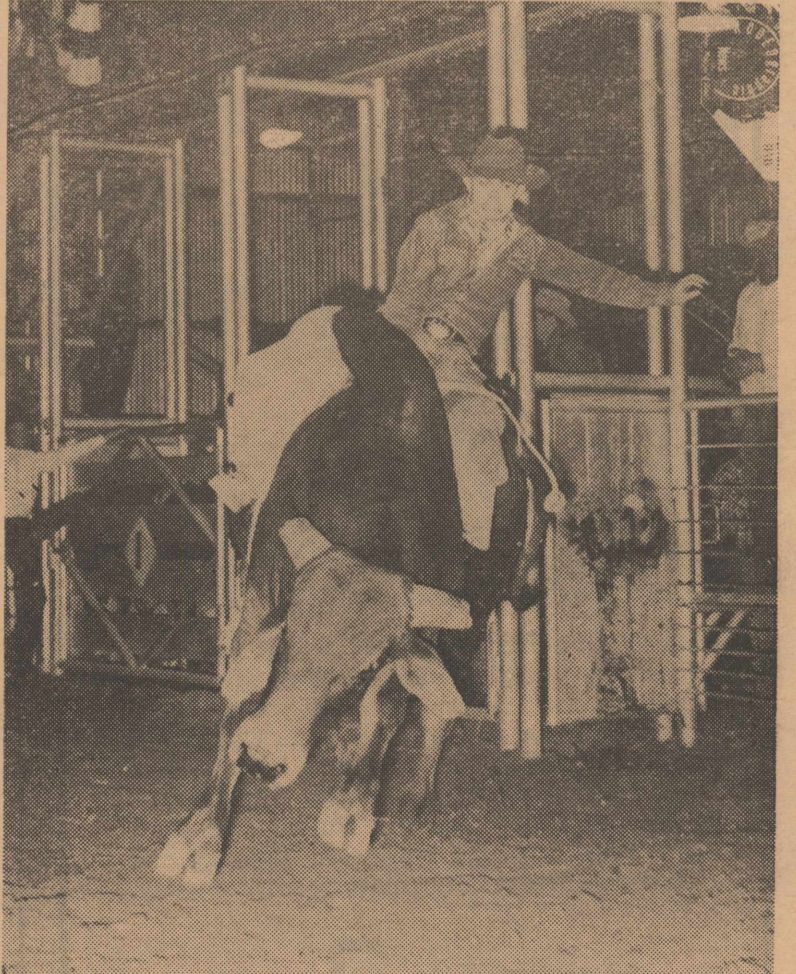

Florida has opened a branch of its university system at Boca Raton. This school provides studies in the junior and senior level and in the graduate programs.

The university center depends on the junior colleges in surrounding cities to provide training in the freshman and sophomore level.

This program will permit the university to sharpen its standards of teaching, boost the importance of the junior college and offer to the student and public as well a greater degree of excellence.

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights by Vern Sanford TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — A new governor moved into the chief executives office in the capitol this week—but only for a day.

Creighton invited homefolks from Callahan, Clay, Denton, Eastland, Jack, Montague, Palo Pinto, Parker, Stephens and Wise counties to his "inauguration."

He also turned out the usual volume of proclamations and commissions — and received praises of his colleagues.

Creighton, 36, an attorney, brought along his pretty wife,

Sue, and three children to the governor's mansion.

MEDICAL SCHOOL VETOED — Gov. Connally vetoed the bill authorizing Texas Tech to establish a medical school in Lubbock.

Connally said that not enough study had been given to the idea and that he preferred that his recently created college coordinating board be the supreme authority in new college programs.

Veto drew critical attacks from West Texas proponents of the school, including Lt. Gov. Preston Smith and Sen. H. J. Blanchard, both of Lubbock.

COMMISSION NEARS PASS-AGE — After a two-week delay, the Senate was ready to take final action on the bill to create a "Little Hoover Commission" to cull waste and inefficiency from state offices and agencies. Bill is sponsored by Rep. Dick Cory of Victoria and Sen. Bill Patman of Canado.

An amendment which Patman considers crippling was tacked on by Sen. Culp Krueger of El Campo. Amendment makes the lieutenant governor and the speaker chairman and vice chairman of the commission, replacing a provision that the members would elect the commission leaders.

DISTRICTING GUIDELINES SET — Rep. Gus Mutscher of Brenham says the House Districts Committee aims to get a congressional re-apportionment measure to the floor by May 1. Mutscher is chairman of the committee.

The optional plans for state House of Representatives redistricting also are due from subcommittees by May 1.

Committee has adopted these tentative legislature redistricting guidelines:

Population variance between districts should be held to a maximum of 15 per cent over and below the mean average.

"At least one attempt" will be made to eliminate "floterial" districts;

Small counties without population sufficient to justify a representative of their own will not be divided;

Two or more representatives will not be allowed to run at large in two or more counties.

Committee also approved Senate-passed bill to permit up to 15 per cent population variance in forming legislative districts.

House Speaker Ben Barnes is optimistic that the Legislature can solve the thorny redistricting problem without need for a special session.

AMENDMENTS GET PRIORITY — State representatives returned from their brief Easter Vacations to find two proposed constitutional amendments high on their work assignment list.

Gov. Connally finally got the balky House Amendments Committee to clear for debate measure to increase terms of governor and other officials elected statewide from two to four years.

Committee also approved redistricting pain-easer calling for increase of State Senate membership from 31 to 39, but stripped from it provision to lengthen upper house terms to six years.

Pressure for submission of both measures to Texas voters (in November and August 7 elections, respectively) were intense.

NEW LAWS ADOPTED Dozens of bills have been given final passage in one house and sent to the other for further action.

Two bills by Rep. Dick Cory would authorize commissioners courts in all but the largest counties of the state to give county officers raises of up to 20 per cent.

Sen. Don Kennard's bill to create a North Central Texas Airport Authority in Tarrant County, which is opposed by Dallas, was passed in the Senate, but the House version ran into a filibuster by Dallas delegation members in the committee hearing.

Bill by Sen. W. T. Moore would authorize Texas A&M to accept James Connally Air Force Base for the state and establish a technical institute.

POLL TAX REPEAL FAILS—Proposed constitutional amendment to abolish the poll tax fell four votes short of getting the necessary two-thirds in the House of Representatives. But measure was kept alive by a parliamentary maneuver.

Rep. Travis Peeler of Corpus

Christi is sponsor of the bill.

BUDGET WRITING TOUGHER THAN EVER — Appropriations bill conferees to make the April 15 deadline set by House Speaker Ben Barnes for completion of their work.

Despite any sharp differences between House and Senate bills, the budget-writing job in general is tougher than ever this year. That's because of creation of new state agencies and transfers of duties — particularly in hospital and water fields — plus impact programs just being evolved on state finances.

LOAN BILL ADVANCED — Legislation which opponents charge would mean the highest interest rate loans in the nation for Texans received tentative Senate approval 16-14.

Measure by Sen. Jim Bates of Edinburg would allow interest rates on installment loans of $9 per $100 up to $6,500. An amendment, finally accepted after strong objection, exempted small loan companies from terms of the bill. Another amendment exempted mortgage loans on real estate.

NON-CITIZEN AID PROPOSED — Proposed constitutional amendment to make old age assistance to non-citizens who have lived in the U. S. for at least 25 years received heavy support in a House committee hearing.

Rep. Joe J. Bernal of San Antonio, sponsor of the bill, said only three other states require citizenship for such assistance. Many thousand long-time Texas residents, who have not qualified for citizenship for such assistance due to language or other barriers, have no income at all today, Bernal told the committee.

COLLEGES GET FEDERAL FUNDS — With $11,200,000 presently allotted for distribution in federal grants for college construction in Texas, the Texas Commission on Higher Education already has requests from 24 more colleges and eligibility established for 12 junior colleges.

Applications received amount to an additional $12,500,000 of construction requests under the 1964 Higher Educational Facilities Act.

Grants pay for 40 per cent of the actual cost of new construction for approved college facilities.

RAIN-MAKING STUDY URGED — John T. Carr Jr., weatherman with the Texas Water Commission, says long-range experiments in weather modification should be undertaken in Texas, even though at present conditions do not seem favorable and existing methods are expensive.

Carr says that ideal conditions for rain-making are infrequent in Texas. However, experiments have shown there are effective methods to bring about rain where it would not have fallen

Outdoor Project Combines Skill and Science

Planning and planting a garden is a perennial task of 4-H Club members. Last year nearly 212,000 gardens flourished under the green thumb of 4-H boys and girls.

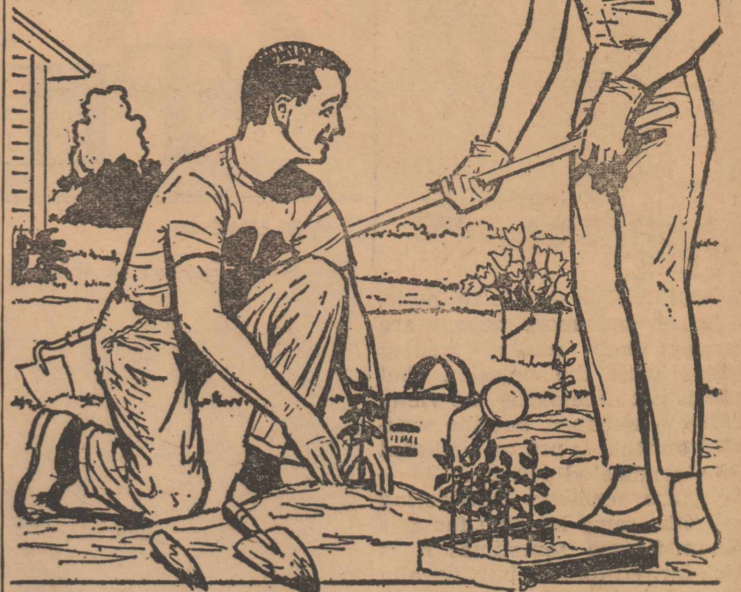

With spring well along and summer just ahead, the 1965 national 4-H Garden program is off to a good start. Some gardens will beautify, and some will nourish. But whatever the garden—large or small—the main goal is to produce a fine harvest of boys and girls with new skills and scientific know-how.

There is a great deal of work between planting the seeds and harvesting the crops. Controlling weeds and insects, keeping records, creating exhibits and giving demonstrations are a few of the jobs that must be done. The most successful projects will be judged for awards.

Recognition will be provided for the 20th year by Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, Farm Equipment Division, sponsor of the national 4-H Garden program.

During the National 4-H Club Congress at Chicago next fall, company officials will personally present eight $500 educational scholarships to the highest ranking 4-H gardeners in the nation. The Congress trip will go to the boy or girl having the best project in the entire state. Medals will be given to a blue award group in each county. All winners will be selected by the Cooperative Extension Service which supervises 4-H.

The young gardeners agree that getting close to nature is most gratifying, and tending a garden provides healthful outdoor exercise as well. A flare for landscaping or a scientific curiosity also can be satisfied.

Gardening fits in with other projects such as food preservation and home improvement. For many, a garden has become a business venture. Roadside stands dot the countryside.

Any boy or girl between 9 and 19 years of age can become a 4-H member. Those interested in starting a garden can obtain information from a local 4-H leader or from the county extension office.

Chevrolet Impala Super Sport Coupe—one of two bucket-seated beauties for '65.

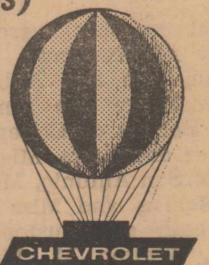

People who buy other big expensive-looking cars get one thing you won't (big expensive-looking payments)

It looks like a big car. And is—by almost any standard you want to apply.

Width? Nobody builds a car as wide as one inch wider. Length? It grew three inches this year. Roominess? Every closed model's got three inches more shoulder room, front and rear, and more leg and foot room up front too. Luxury? Nice little touches like the look of mellow walnut across the Impala's instrument panel. And big touches. Like the fineness of the same Body by Fisher workmanship that makes some of America's most expensive cars look so expensive. How about the ride? Chevrolet engineers took the Jet-smooth one and smoothed it out even more this year. Also made it more stable by widening the wheel stance. Price? That's where Chevrolets fall way short of the other big expensive-looking cars. But we wouldn't have it any other way. Would you?

Leroy Payne Is Rated On FBI's Most Wanted List

The following letter was received by the Herald this week:
 Dear Sir:

Donald Leroy Payne was added to the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives" in October, 1960, at which time feature stories concerning him and the crime for which sought were published by news media throughout the country.

Intensive investigation by the FBI since that time has proven unsuccessful in locating Payne and it felt our investigation could be materially assisted through additional news media publicity at this time. For this reason your cooperation is being solicited to again cause a feature story to be published by your paper on him.

Payne is a highly dangerous convicted rapist who is charged with a vicious sex attack upon a Houston, Texas, girl in July, 1959. He is being sought for Unlawful Flight to Avoid Prosecution for the crime of rape.

He allegedly raped an 18-year-old Houston, Texas professional dancer on July 10, 1959, after gaining entrance to her residence on the pretext of offering her a dancing job. He reportedly threatened to strangle her if she resisted or cried for help. He has also been identified as the perpetrator of a vicious sex attack on a 12-year-old Houston boy on July 5, 1959.

Payne has a long, foul history of violent criminal sex attacks and parole violations. He has been described as a dangerous man who "would not hesitate to kill."

Payne, a white American, was born at Haskell, Okla., on July 19, 1918. He is 5' 10" tall, weighs approximately 140 pounds, has a slender build, ruddy complexion and brown, receding hair.

He has worked as a newspaper solicitor, fry cook, farm hand, laundry worker, machinist, salesman and tailor. He is identifiable by a large scar on his right elbow, a scar on his forehead and a tattoo of two hearts, a wreath and the word "Christine" on his right forearm.

He should be considered armed and dangerous.

Payne has been known to use the following aliases in the past: R. E. Fielding, Roger Fielding, Bill Johnson, William Donald Johnson, Don Leroy Payne, William Charles Scott, Don Thompson, Don Whitney, and Don Wynn.

Payne may be accompanied by Raye Etta Burningham, also known as Hazel Barclay, a white female, age 27, 5' 8", 130-150 pounds, blond or brown hair, blue eyes and may be wearing glasses. Payne and Burningham may be accompanied by their five-year-old son.

Any assistance you can render in publishing the above information in your newspaper will be indeed appreciated.

Signed J. Gordon Shanklin, Special Agent in Charge.

PATTERNS FOR PROGRESS IN COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Where can our town see an example of Community Development?

WTU says Childress is a good example . . . many projects are underway.

Water is a problem with many West Texas communities, but Childress is solving it with an ambitious program. In connection with neighboring towns, there is a $6 million dam and reservoir starting soon . . . under construction a $4 million pipeline from the water supply to the city . . . and a pipeline system in the city. Add such things as a remodeled City Auditorium with convention facilities . . . vapor lamp street lighting downtown and on highways through town . . . remodeled Chamber of Commerce offices . . . over $400,000 in Church construction . . . new lounge at the Airport . . . and modernizing of many business buildings. Scheduled for the immediate future are a school bond election . . . expansion of State buildings . . . and a new hospital. The Childress record is a PATTERN FOR PROGRESS in "community development," improving chances for continued economic growth and attraction of new industry plus making it a better place to live, work and play. Growth conscious towns are invited to contact their local WTU manager for assistance from our area development representatives.

Collins-McDonald Wedding Planned

Mr. and Mrs. Willie Collins announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Lee, to Eddie Joe McDonald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert McDonald of Brook, Miss.

Virginia is a senior at Knox City High School and Mr. McDonald is a graduate of Biloxi High School and attended a heavy equipment school.

The couple have planned a May wedding.

Mr. K. O. Haddadin, Vegetable Production Specialist, from the country of Jordan, will be visiting in Knox County, April 25-30. Mr. Haddadin is in the United States for a year. He is learning principles and techniques of the way we grow vegetables in order to better teach his own people. Jordan is bringing new land under irrigation and will have a big education program to conduct with their farmers.

Two worm samples from cattle wounds were mailed in last week from Knox County. Both were determined to be non-screwworms. One was from a farm east of Vera and the other near Truscott.

Knox County has reached its quota in the current screwworm eradication fund drive, reports Mr. B. B. Campbell Jr., treasurer. Several community chairmen have not finished contacting all the producers in these communities. Livestock producers that have not been contacted can help by sending their money in so this drive can be completed. Everyone agrees that this is the cheapest worm control they have ever experienced.

Planning to buy some galvanized roofing for your farm or commercial building? If so, you should know what service the material will give. Quality roofing will give longer years of service at the lowest annual cost. Roofing sheets are usually 26, 28, or 29 gauge. The lower figure indicates the thicker sheet. Gauge influences the weight and strength and the time required to rust through.

Galvanized roofing is made of zinc coated steel or iron. Uncoated iron or steel will start rusting soon after sheets are put in place. Zinc does not rust.

Therefore this material is applied in thin coats on both sides before rusting begins. Zinc coatings are designated in ounces. The highest quality roofing has two ounces of zinc, the next grade one and one-half ounces, and lower grades one, or three-fourths of an ounce.

This ounce designation is the amount of zinc coating per square foot, on both sides of the sheet. The amount of zinc should be stamped on each sheet you buy. If there is no stamp on the roofing, there is no way to know how much zinc it has.

Tests indicate that galvanized roofing with two ounces of zinc lasts twice as long as roofing with one ounce. The zinc coating is eventually worn off by the weather. The atmosphere in different localities has some effect on the lasting qualities.

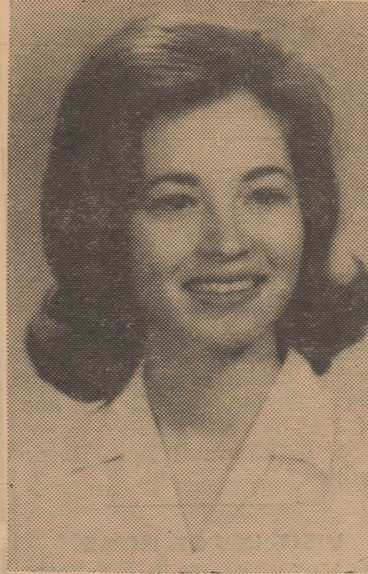

Roofing with a two ounce coating of zinc should last 10 to 15 years and sheets with one and one-half ounces should last 5 to 10 years before rusting appears. Roofing with no designated zinc coating may start rusting in one to three years.

Galvanized roofing should be painted before any rust appears and if this is done, any quality roof paint will be satisfactory. If you wait until rust appears, you should use a metallic zinc paint to prevent further rusting.

The County Elimination Contest for all method demonstrations and public speaking will be held for all 4-H members Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. in the courthouse. Junior and senior winners in each division will be eligible to compete in the district contests at Midwestern University on May 8.

IN NEW MEXICO

Mr. and Mrs. Gentry Day, Gail and Roxie spent the week end visiting Don and Sharlyn Williams in Albuquerque, N. M.

home gardens. As an aid to on the gardeners, entomologists of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service have prepared information which should help in the fight against insect pests. The new publication, L642, "Control of Insects in the Home Garden," is now available without cost at my office or from the bulletin racks in the banks in Knox City and Munday.

Among the topics covered in the publication are discussions of the three groups of insects which normally cause trouble in the home garden. They include those with sucking mouth parts, those with chewing mouth parts and those which live in the soil.

Each group requires a different control method and often a different insecticide. Dust and sprays are discussed as are insecticides used in combinations. The entomologists have prepared tables showing the amount of each recommended insecticide needed to make even a small amount of spray and have listed safety precautions regarding the use of the most commonly used materials.

For your copy, visit, call or write the county agent's office. And, of course, copies of other publications are available on many other subjects in the field of agriculture and home economics.

Grassed Waterways Needed Technician Says

According to Cecil Seitz, technician with the Soil Conservation Service, grassed waterways are needed on many farms in the Wichita-Brazos Soil Conservation District. These waterways are needed for the safe disposal of runoff from a field, diversion, or terrace system, and to carry outside water in some instances across the farms.

Most waterways need some shaping before they are established to permanent vegetation. After shaping a dead litter of some kind should be provided to seed most grasses in. This dead litter can be provided by drilling sorghums of some kind or by mulching with cotton burrs. Sorghums, if used to make dead litter, should be kept mowed or shredded to prevent from making a seed crop.

After waterways are established, use should be limited to seed production and light grazing. Do not use waterways for roads, turn-rows and cattle lanes. Practices such as these tend to destroy the protective cover and defeat the purpose of the practice.

One of the jobs personnel of the Soil Conservation Service is to assist producers with the establishment of a waterway. Cost share assistance for the establishment of a waterway is being offered through A.S.C.S. office and the Great Plains Conservation Program.

Established waterways can be seen on the Bush Burnett ranch west of Knox City, on the Anto Brown farm east of Rhineland and on the Paul Russell farm east of Rochester.

MEDICARE

THE MORE YOU HAVE,
THE MORE YOU WANT

By KEN THOMPSON

"MEDICARE ABROAD," writes Thomas Foley in the Los Angeles Times, "has proved not unlike the drug habit — it's expensive, it causes problems. The more you have, the more you want. And once hooked no one seems to want to break it."

Many countries, Foley notes, have been "hooked" for generations. Today 81 other countries have some kind of government program for medical care—although there is little uniformity in the type of benefits and how they are paid for.

The medicare concept began in Europe, when Germany adopted a health program in 1883. Today all of the European nations have some form of medicare. The programs in Great Britain and Sweden are the broadest, taxing all of the citizens and insuring all of the medical costs for everyone. This, of course, is socialized medicine.

The U. S. proposal does not go that far. But, once "hooked," will we end up with the same thing?

Under the proposed legislation, payroll taxes of less than one per cent are supposed to cover most of the cost of medicare at the outset. Will this soon reach the 5.5 per cent West Germans pay?

In many countries, medicare programs are lumped with old-age-pension plans — as would be the case here if the pending proposal to provide medicare under Social Security is adopted.

The proposal calls for a combined tax of 4.35 per cent at the outset for each employee. Would this soon reach the 10 per cent tax paid by employees in East Germany or the 17 per cent tax assessed in Uruguay?

The answer is anybody's guess, but it is almost a sure thing that taxes will rise, for the cost of medicare in virtually every country has soared far beyond original estimates.

Foley notes that, when Britain was preparing its medicare program in 1946, the estimated gross cost was placed at 370 million dollars a year. In the very first year the program cost nearly a billion dollars, and today it is three times as expensive.

Canada's program cost 575 million in 1961, but went up 40 per cent to 800 million in 1964.

Sweden's cradle-to-the-grave plan absorbed two per cent of that country's national income in 1950, four per cent in 1960 and is expected to reach six per cent by 1970.

"It is almost a universal truth that every country that starts with something less than complete coverage for all persons has worked or is working toward that point," says Foley.

Will this happen in the U. S.? It certainly has happened with our Social Security program. When Social Security began, the annual payroll tax was $30. Next year it will be $252.

Eight of the countries with medicare have experienced doctors' strikes in the last few years. Many more have been confronted with the problem of the goldbricker or hypochondriac who conjures up imaginary illnesses and visits the doctor when he doesn't need to, often to avoid work. This reached crisis proportions not long ago in Italy, which finally had to levy a fee in advance to discourage unnecessary visits.

Britain, after 17 years of nationalized medicine, has fewer medical students than it did in 1938, loses 500 doctors a year, has built almost no new hospitals and is facing a potential doctors' strike.

"Whatever the problems," Foley sums up, "medicine continues to grow the world over. The pattern for the U. S. has been set in the bill now before Congress and the pains of growth experienced by others undoubtedly will be felt here. There always is the hope that these problems can be anticipated and eased by studying others' mistakes." But if we were really going to learn from the mistakes of others we probably wouldn't be considering adoption of medicare in the first place.
