RAILROAD MAN HORTIE E. LOMAN

Hortie E. Loman Railroad Man 35 Years

Hortie E. Loman was 15 when he got his first job for the railroad. He's 74 now and getting ready to retire.

Loman has seen many a locomotive since he began working for $37.50 a month, seven days a week, 12 hours a day.

"I started with the railroad in Jamesburg, Ill.," Loman will tell you, "and the first job I got was agent telegrapher."

The Hart man is still agent on the job he holds down here. He gets off work now at 5 p.m. and the days have shrunk to five instead of seven.

"I've been with the Fort Worth and Denver Line for 35 years," says Loman, "and I've seen a lot of changes in railroad operations."

When the first old steamers came choo-chooing through the country, Loman was making the railroad rounds in Illinois. He held agent jobs in Royal, Ill., Tipton, Ill., and Danville, Ill.

"I was a 'floater'," confesses Loman, "just 18 when I decided to come West."

"I was the first telegraph agent in Lubbock," says Loman, "and I've worked in Chaning for the Rock Island."

Loman farmed for 13 years when his first wife died, but he went back to railroading when the farm quit paying off.

He married the former Myrt Pistole, when on the farm, and they moved to Goodnight, Texas, for a job with the railroad.

"We wanted to eat," says Myrt.

"Hart has been our home for 20 years," Loman tells, and I've been the agent telegrapher here all that time."

Asked about railroad bums, Loman said he and his wife had seen hundreds of them.

"During the depression," said Loman, "Myrt cooked and fed dozens of them who came through out of work."

Railroad "bulls" have put a stop to most of the freight train riding, Loman says. Too, the trains go too fast. He explains, they used to be a lot slower.

Those were the days a "cow catcher" was installed on the locomotives to push cattle off the tracks.

Loman and his wife have a complimentary pass on the railroad and can ride anywhere they please, free.

The impression shouldn't be given, however, that Loman's job is too easy. Railroad business in Hart in February alone was worth $235,000.

That means Loman is up and down the tracks checking every car on the siding.

"Everything that's down here, I do it," says Loman. That includes filing, billing, and janitorial work.

"He's going to retire", smiles his wife, "before the heavy work begins again."

TEXAS LEADS--This state has led all others in road-building progress since 1956.

Highway engineers from other states and 19 Latin American countries who want to know how it has been done heard State Highway Department Engineer D. C. Greer speak on the subject in Washington, D.C.

A pay-as-you-go plan has been one secret of success, Greer says, in building a highway network of 65,000 miles. Some other states run into road delays because of bond elections and sales.

Greer said his department's motto is "Total road service to all the people."

"The highway administrator must not be guilty of favoritism for one region over another," he stated.
