Hart Graduate Writes Article

The following article was written by Leland Hacker, director of an Austin Settlement Home.

Hacker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hacker of Hart.

He is a former Hart graduate and has attended Baylor University and South Western Seminary in Fort Worth and State University in Austin. He has a Masters Degree in social science.

The article appeared previously in an Austin newspaper. It is entitled, "Space Age Teens Partially Different".

Is today's space age "teenager" really different from the teenager of yesterday?

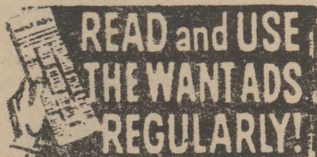

One of the complaints heard most often from parents is that they do not understand why their sons and daughters behave as they do. This comment is usually followed by the charge that young people "are different today".

In part, the charge is true, of course. Each generation of teenagers has been somewhat different. This is to be expected because of the changing times. For example, note the present day young people's hair styles, the way they dress, or the expressions they use.

I feel however, that the differences are external and not really basic. If we include the emotional stress of the "cold war" and the space age, we still have the same basic teenager.

One reason young people attempt to be different is because they see their parents and most other adults as leading a rather dull life.

The adults are normally tied down with the responsibility of making a living and rearing a family. The average teenagers have their dreams of something more romantic than this—whether it be a hero or a movie star, they want something more exciting.

Another reason teenagers strive to be different is because they are attempting to emancipate themselves from their parents. This is proper and to be expected.

Emancipation is a normal part of growing up and should take place toward the end of the teenage years. A great deal of misunderstanding may occur if parents fail to recognize this need in their teenager.

Some parents not only fail to recognize this need for young people to grow up, but actually struggle to keep the son or daughter dependent upon them.

Allowing the teenager to grow up should not be confused with lack of control—this is the point where I feel that today's young men and women are the same as their predecessors.

Changing times do not necessarily alter the basic needs of teenagers or alter what parents can and should offer their children.

Teenagers need love and discipline, they need control and freedom, they need to be taught the value of work and play, they need to become independent—and yet they should know that they can depend upon their parents.

Most of all, teenagers need understanding, and understanding is seldom achieved without adequate communication.

Usually when a parent complains that he cannot talk to his son or daughter, this is not something that has just occurred. It has been going on for a long time. If a child has never been included in the parents' conversations it is not likely that they will care to begin during teenage years.

If parents wish to offer their teenage sons and daughters understanding, they need to begin cultivating adequate lines of communication at an early age.

For parents to meet and know their teenager's dates and friends may offer protection against immature judgements.

To know where they go and what they are doing is not "old fashioned". It is exercising a reasonable amount of control.

Teenagers need to have their parents draw definite lines concerning their activities, lines beyond which they know they cannot go without resulting discipline.

This type of control offers security for the young people and breeds respect for the parent.

Pecans And Cattle Farmer's Dream

Robert L. Hawkins, who farms west of Hart, is working to make a dream come true.

"Someday," he said, "I'd like to stand here and see cattle grazing on grass between full-grown, producing pecan trees out there."

He pointed to 37 acres of pecan trees on his farm, totaling 895 trees.

Hawkins has been in the pecan business about three years. He believes it will be 10 years before the orchard begins to show a profit.

"This is a long term investment," said Hawkins, "I paid $3 a piece for the trees, and it will take time to make my money back."

Hawkins said that several persons have called him "crazy" for planting pecan trees. He believes so firmly in their future though, he intends one day to have all his land in pecans.

"They're the coming thing," speculated the Hart farmer, "house wives who buy shelled pecans can vouch for the estimated price."

Already Hawkins is beginning to find small nuts on his trees but doesn't believe they will stay. "I expect them to fall off," he said.

As for ease of growing, Hawkins believes pecans to be ideal.

"I water the trees three or four times a year, depending on the year, said Hawkins, "and they're not too hard to farm around."

This year, he will plant maize between the 60x30 spaced trees. Last year he harvested a wheat crop from between them.

Hawkins said, "The main reason I planted pecans was to keep the government out of my business."

Too, Hawkins is a conservationist who doesn't want his land to wear out. He said he had two sons he wished to leave rich land to.

"The soil," said the farmer, "seems ideal for pecans since it's several feet to caliche." He added "caliche ties up the zinc sulfate and the trees can't get it."

Hawkins told that pecan trees have to have zinc sulfate and consequently are sprayed three times a year to supply that necessity.

The young farmer is raising a paper-shell variety called Western Schley. He is cross-pollinating it with Burkett varieties.

Hawkins bought his trees from Robert Meinecke, the first pecan grower in the region. Meinecke lives about four miles northeast of Olton.

The trees resemble scrawny sticks when very young but after Hawkins had planted them he lost only nine.

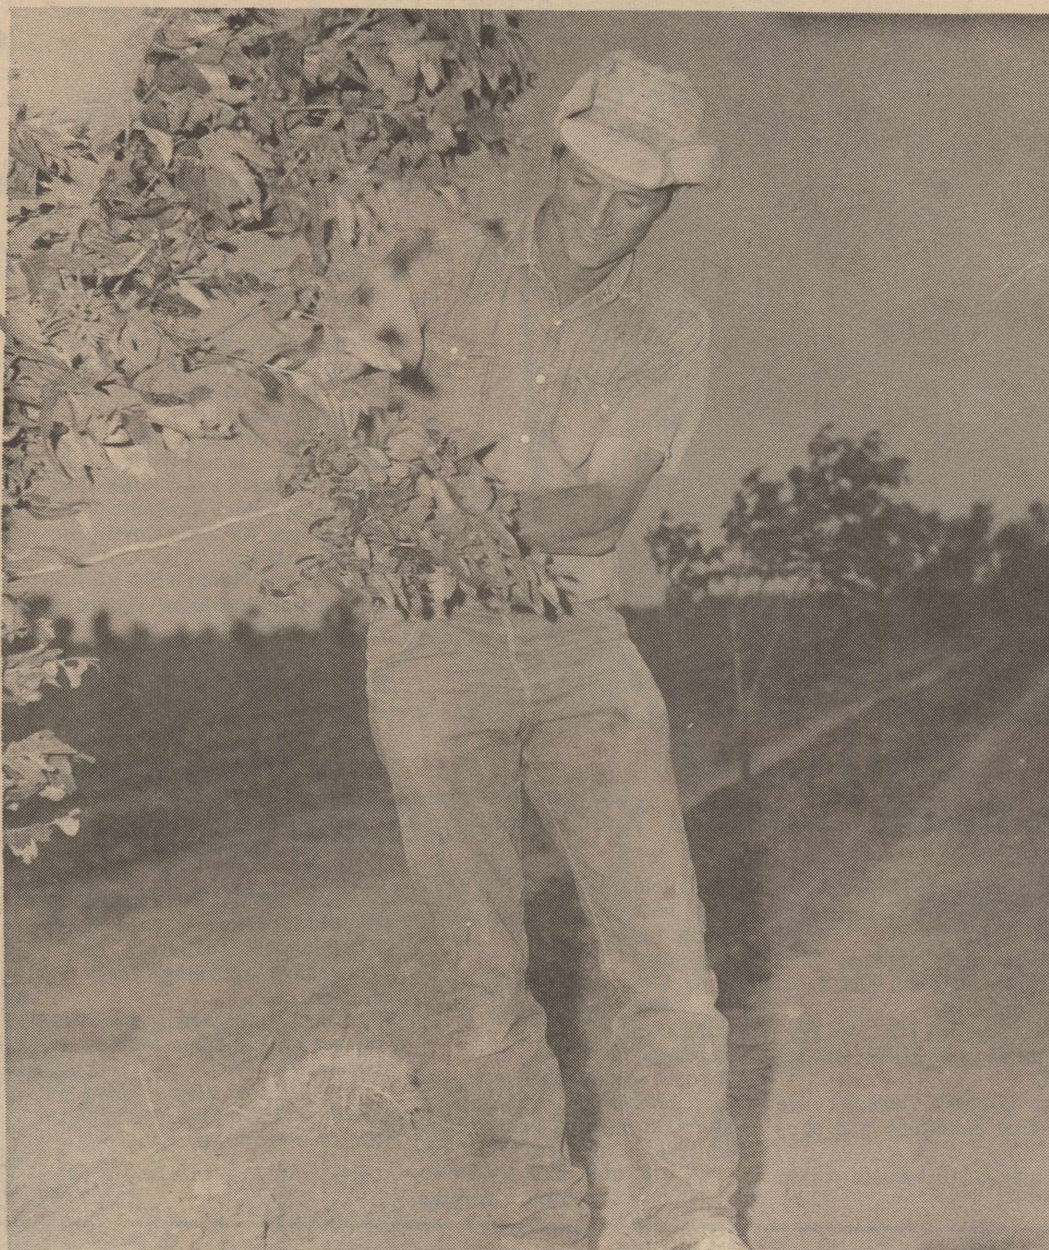

"They're tougher than elm," he said, "The ones I bought are also local climatized and adjusted to this part of the country."

Hawkins tells that the common diseases in pecan regions are unheard of around here.

Therefore, his job consists of occasional pruning, spraying with zinc sulfate and getting rid of weeds with a flame cultivator.

"I don't plant too deep between the trees," explains Hawkins, "and later I'll have to be sure and not plant in the tree's shade."

But the progressive-minded

ROBERT HAWKINS

Hawkins doesn't count the minor woes, he's too busy thinking about tomorrow with its cattle grass and money-making pecans.

Rubber got its name from its early use as an eraser or "rubber."

The Battle of New Orleans was fought after the War of 1812 had ended.

AUSTIN, Tex.--Many Texas drivers who carry insurance will need to notify their agents to increase their public liability insurance after August 24.

By the narrowest of margins a single vote-- the House adopted a bill by Rep. Bob Fairchild of Center to raise the bodily injury insurance or security requirements under the driver financial responsibility law from $5,000 for one person and $10,000 for two or more to double those amounts.

Estimates are that it will cost the average driver about $5 a year for the extra coverage. This will enable him to keep his driver's license and car license should he be involved in a collision in which someone is hurt.

It was a hard fought issue in the House. But Fairchild won, 68-67, with the vote of Speaker Byron Tunnell breaking the tie.

In the Senate, passage was by voice vote, with 12 Senators recording themselves as voting no.

Argument for the bill is that it would bring requirements up to a more modern figure. Court judgements in personal injury cases, resulting from auto collisions, often exceed $5,000.

Argument against it, voiced by Rep. Eligio de la Garza of McAllen was that 35 per cent of the drivers cannot afford to carry liability insurance at present rates. So there will be even more uninsured motorists on the highways after the Fairchild law takes effect.

WIND UP--Regular session of the 58th Legislature ends Friday. That's three days earlier than the constitutional requirement.

Hundreds of the 1,500 proposed new laws submitted by the 181 legislators were left to die in committees and on the crowded calendars of both houses.

Other hundreds will become law when Gov. John Connally signs them. Rush of business at the session's end is pouring them into his office by the score.

All legislative proposals are important to someone. In a few cases, it is a single person.

One proposal would allow a newspaper editor to practice law. It was killed on the floor.

Another would permit the practice of architecture, by a qualified person who failed to apply for a license before the deadline arrived. It died in committee.

But the major issues of the session appear to be fairly well settled.

COURTS--An exception is judicial redistricting.

Rep. Henry Stollenwerck, a Republican from Dallas, vainly tried to move some rural district courts to the cities. This to follow the people who have moved into the population centers.

Stollenwerck presented statistics showing that some courts are handling only 150 cases a year, while others in major cities have towering caseloads even after disposing of five times that many cases a year.

Bill was killed in committee.

Rep. Bob Johnson of Dallas persuaded the House to pass a bill under which a judicial redistricting board, made up of the Lieutenant Governor, House Speaker and Attorney General, would reapportion district courts if the Legislature did not. Bill died in the Senate.

HOUSE MINORITY LEADER--In the waning days of the session, House Republicans ceremoniously announced their 8-member delegation leader, Rep. Horace B. Houston of Dallas.

Houston has some sort of seniority since he previously served a term when he ran as a Democrat.

Speaker Byron Tunnell quipped, "From now on, when you talks have complaints about your bills, you can take your troubles to the House minority leader."

Houston then cast his first vote as G.O.P. leader in favor of extending the Veterans Land Program, while his followers cast votes against it.

MORE JUNIOR COLLEGES--State Board of Education named a committee to study Snyder's request for a junior college. Appointees were Penrose B. Metcalfe of San Angelo, Herbert O. Willborn of Amarillo, and Paul Mathews of Greenville. Committee will meet on May 31, in San Angelo.

Recently the board authorized a junior college election for Travis County voters. Claim is that even though the University of Texas is in Travis County, entrance requirements are too stiff for many local youngsters to enroll.

AT CONFERENCE

Brother and Mrs. E. H. Phillips are attending a Methodist conference in Abilene this week.

oh, daddy-
GOLD
Medallion

This little girl's delight is typical of those who see their own Total Electric-Gold Medallion home for the first time. And, the nicest thing about a Gold Medallion is that it will continue to delight the longer you live in it. Everything is electric, modern and clean even to the comfort heating. Your builder, architect or Public Service manager can give you the facts about Gold Medallion living ... why wait?

Golf Buddies Give Bailey Hard Time

Joe Bailey of Hart shot the best game of golf of his life last weekend at Olton Recreation Center, but he was having trouble convincing his buddies of it.

Joe reported a 38 on the par 36 course, the top round shot by a Hart golfer this year. He is ordinarily a bogey golfer, shooting around 43 to 46.

They carried Joe pretty high of Hart this week, as one skeptic, banker Norian Dudley, an avid golfer himself, declared: "It isn't official...I didn't see him do it.... I didn't think he could do it, that is, if he really did...."

It all seemed to make Joe try harder Monday evening, he was only one over par for six holes before rain washed out his round.

Water Levels Studied

The High Plains Underground Water Conservation District has announced the publishing of water-level measurements made during January 1963.

Allan White, director of education for the water district, said concerning the water-level report, that a majority of the official measurements in observation wells throughout the 13-county District have been published in "The Cross Section," the official publication of the High Plains Water District.

He says that a map which indicates the approximate location of the observation wells accompanies the measurements.

White states that the measurements are made each year during January prior to the beginning of extensive pumping for pre-plant irrigation. They are made by the Texas Water Commission in cooperation with the Water District. In the recently published tabulation of measurements, the years 1953, 1962 and 1963 are reported. Measurements for these years were used so that a 10-year period and a one-year period of fluctuation could be studied.

White states that those persons who are interested in receiving the water-level measurements and who do not receive "The Cross Section" should write to the High Plains Water District, 1628 15th Street Lubbock, Texas and ask for a copy. It will be mailed at no charge to the recipient.

The sun is 700 times heavier than the total weight of the nine planets.

There are about three and one-half pounds of salty material to every 100 pounds of sea water.
