1965 Cotton Sign-Up Extended To April 9

Deadline for signing up to take part in the 1965 Domestic Allotment Program for Upland cotton is extended to April 9.

The sign-up is being conducted only for the operators of farms whose domestic allotments are less than their effective allotments; in general, these are farms with an effective cotton allotment of more than 15 acres. Growers on farms with cotton allotments of 15 acres or less are eligible for program without signing up provided their cotton acreage is within the farm's domestic allotment.

Program includes a price-support payment of $4.35 a pound on the normal yield per acre determined for the farm times the acreage planted for harvest. In addition, participating growers will be eligible for price-support loans at 29 cents a pound for middling one inch at average location on all the cotton produced on the farm.

A cotton grower qualifies as a participant in the domestic allotment program by (1) signing up, if the sign-up applies to the particular farm operator; and (2) planting within his farm's domestic acreage allotment, which for most farms with allotments over 15 acres, is about 65 percent of the farm's effective allotment. Another program provision for such participating growers is staying within the farm's feed grain base.

Growers who do not participate in the domestic allotment program for 1965-crop upland cotton will be eligible for cotton loans if they keep their cotton acreage within the farm's effective allotment.

Efficiency In Irrigation Discussed By HPRF Study

Efficiency of operation in modern farming is a must if today's irrigation farmer is going to realize the net returns necessary from his investment. Efficiency in the use of the available irrigation water is at the top of the list for net returns.

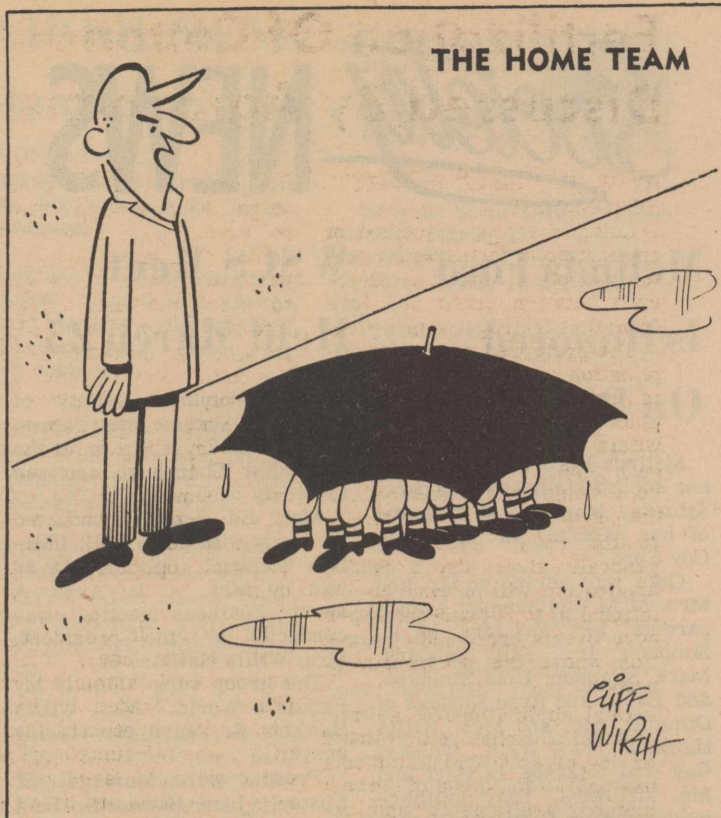

Research personnel at the High Plains Research Foundation in Halfway have come up with this formula toward getting the maximum effectiveness irrigation wells. A farmer with a small well pumping 200 gallons per minute can put five acre-inches of water on two acres every 24 hours. This amount of water will saturate most of the soil types found in the Plains of Texas three to four feet deep. A 400 gallon per minute well would apply this amount of water on 4 acres every 24 hours; a 600 gallon per minute well will cover 6 acres each 24 hours, and so on for the different pumping capacities.

This formula should be utilized especially by farmers who are in the weak water areas and also by the farmers who are trying to cover too much land with too few wells. This information will be valuable to farmers so that they can more effectively plan the proper length of run, head of irrigation water, and time when irrigation must be started for maximum efficiency.

The proper timing of irrigation along with the proper balance of fertilizer can make the difference of a profit or loss in today's highly specialized farming. One example of the value of the proper planning of irrigation as well as the proper length of run was shown in the 1964 report from the Foundation on sugar beet production.

Field averages, using standard irrigation methods, yielded 28.13 tons of sugar beets per acre. This yield represented a net income of $148 per acre. Yield and net income were increased by the proper length of run of the irrigation water. Yield increased to 33.05 tons per acre and net return jumped to $208. This increase of $60 higher net return per acre was due to the length of run. The same amount of water was applied on all plots.

Higher yields and higher net returns can be obtained by using the same amounts of irrigation water if it is applied properly. This, along with the proper planning of an irrigation program to fit the farm, can cut the cost of farming.

Research at the Foundation has shown that the most important single irrigation is preplant. For agricultural areas falling in the category mentioned earlier, either weak water or too few wells for the number of acres, adequate amounts of preplant irrigation water can be applied by starting early in the season, possibly in January.

Early planning of an irrigation program can help to insure that adequate moisture is available for the crop.

For more information on irrigation farming and production of sugar beets, write the High Plains Research Foundation, P. O. Drawer 2200, Plainview.

Study The Grocery Ads For Good Buys In Food

COLLEGE STATION--Supermarkets are featuring a number of good buys at present, so study grocery ads and make shopping lists accordingly, recommends Mrs. Gwen Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist.

At retail meat counters, look for best beef values on ground beef, short ribs, arm and blade pot roasts, sirloin, T-bone, round steaks and beef liver. Look for more emphasis on marketing the rib and loin cuts during the next several weeks. Consider stew meat for variety in menu planning and to help stretch the budget as well.

Pork values include pork loins, picnics, hams, shoulders, roasts and steaks. Pork supplies are below those of a year ago, however some markets are featuring specials on roll sausage, Boston butt roasts and chops.

Frying chicken continues to represent a good value, and the fryers are weighing about two and a half to three pounds, giving more meat in proportion to the bone. The Grade A large eggs offer food shoppers the most economy and quality for their money.

Plentiful supplies of dairy products are also available, and there's no price change here. Cheese is one of the valuable protein foods and is versatile.

Bananas highlight most fruit counters, so use them generously while they are available at attractive prices. Several varieties of apples are plentiful. Just appearing on the markets in limited supply are pineapples, rhubarb, strawberries and honeydew melons. Red tart cherries and pears high light the canned goods department.

Best vegetable buys include head lettuce, celery, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, broccoli, green peppers, radishes and green onions. Potatoes are available at relatively higher prices since supplies are down considerably.

Fertilization Of Cotton Discussed By Agronomist

BY W. F. "BILL" BENNETT, AGRONOMIST.

Using the proper method of application of fertilizer for cotton can often mean the difference between profit and loss from that fertilizer application.

The preferred method for application of a phosphate source is in a band with the band being placed on 20-inch centers or within 10 inches of the row on each side. If convenient to do so, it would be desirable to place the phosphorus band even closer to the row. Research has generally shown that a banded application will produce an additional 10 to 20# lint cotton per acre over a broadcast application where the phosphorus is needed.

Dual applications of an ammonium phosphate, either liquid or dry, plus anhydrous ammonia has proven to be one of the best methods available for application of fertilizer for cotton.

Banding of an ammonium phosphate provides one big benefit. This is the combination of nitrogen and phosphorus together in the same fertilizer particle in the same band. It has been definitely shown that this combination of nitrogen and phosphorus will result in a greater uptake of the applied phosphorus by the plant.

The calcium phosphates, 0-20-0 and 0-46-0, can be also applied as a dual application with ammonia, however, such a dual application will result in a decreased water solubility and availability of phosphate, therefore, it would generally be undesirable to band together a calcium phosphate and ammonia. Where calcium phosphates are being used, it would be more desirable to proceed with a broadcast application with a separate application of ammonia being made.

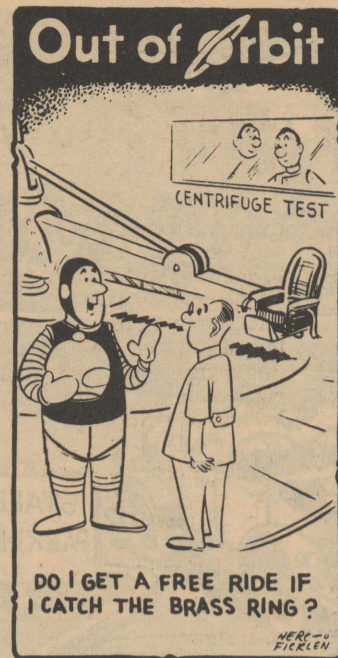

For time of application of fertilizer for cotton, phosphorus should be applied either pre-plant or early sidedress when the plant is in the 4 to 6 leaf stage. Nitrogen application can be made up to time of first square. A good method which has been proven to be good is to place the dual application into the sides of the bed prior to watering or sidedress after the cotton is up to a good stand. By applying the fertilizer on 20-inch centers and if replanting is necessary, the fertilizer band is only 10 inches away from the row. Some prefer to wait until they see that they have a good stand of cotton and then make the dual application on 20-inch centers.

In cotton fertilization, for best results, use a completely water-soluble ammonium phosphate in a banded application. The dual application of ammonia with the ammonium phosphate is desirable and saves one trip across the field and saves time and labor costs.

AMA Links Heart Health

Some half a million Americans die of heart attacks each year, and countless others are stricken.

Why is it that some people have heart attacks and others don't?

Heart experts cannot answer this question definitively, and they sometimes do not agree completely on the probabilities. But here are some generally recognized danger signs that mark the heart-attack prone individual.

Physicians can identify susceptible persons on the basis of cholesterol in the blood, excess weight, cigarette smoking, inactivity, tendencies to diabetes or hypertension, and can often predict the disease in seemingly healthy persons years before it arrives, says Today's Health the magazine of the American Medical Association.

Of course, a non-smoking woman or a lean man also can have a heart attack, but the risk, statistically, is much less.

The three most important signs of susceptibility, says the American Heart Association, are high blood levels of cholesterol, high blood pressure and an abnormal electrocardiogram.

The health of the heart is definitely linked with life habits, Today's Health declares. More and more heart specialists point to one great cause—an abuse of our prosperity, the abundance and temptations of modern times.

Many men, the magazine says, abuse cigarettes, food, liquor and their muscles. Quoting a noted heart specialist, the article points out that adult people "must learn to distinguish between moderation and abuse. Two packs of cigarettes a day is an abuse. Too much fat or too many calories is an abuse. Drinking during most parts of the day is an abuse. Doing no physical work is an abuse."

True, there still are differences of opinion among competent men regarding the exact connection between these abuses and heart attacks. True, there still is much to be learned. The decision is one that each individual must make for himself: To wait until all of the evidence is at hand and the doctor can give a positive answer to the question of what causes heart attacks; or, to stop abusing the good things of abundant life and use today's knowledge in the hopes of saving the heart.

Retirement Decisions Now May Lengthen Your Life

It's practically never too early to start thinking about or actually planning for retirement. Decisions made in one's thirties, forties, fifties or even sixties will be some of the most important decisions one ever has to make. These decisions may actually lengthen your life, according to Clarence Wright, senior member of the Kiplinger Washington Editors editorial staff and author of Successful Retirement: Plan It Now.

Know your mind and your money is Mr. Wright's preliminary advice. The basic question on the subject is whether you should retire, whether you want to retire.

If you do, you can; and if you've planned far enough ahead, you can do it comfortably. A widely held theory today is that people who retire in good health live longer than those who keep on working at their jobs.

Know where you want to live. Regardless of where you decide to retire, don't base your decision purely on impulse or enthusiastic reports. Go take a look. A special section of Successful Retirement examines the world's most popular retirement areas and some of the retirement facilities available in this country, to help you find out where you will want to live in your retirement years.

The book goes on to tell how to make your retirement years the most satisfying period of your life. One suggestion is to do something in your retirement. Retire "to" something-- and not merely "from" something.

Money is not necessarily the problem many think. You can afford to retire if you want to badly enough. The question is the degree of comfort. Start by figuring how much you are worth, says the Kiplinger book. Then you will need to know what your income will be in the years ahead and how much your post-retirement income will be. Specific Kiplinger advice includes:

Plan for more income later. Consider health insurance a must.

Make your will now, or check up on it at regular or frequent intervals. Don't trust your memory of what is in a will you made years ago.

Plan now to be doing something you enjoy after retirement. That is the real key. And take a few minutes for it occasionally when you are young.

Consider carefully where you will live. There are hundreds of questions you must answer regardless of the type of dwelling you prefer.

Consider getting another job or running your own business.

Trial-Watching

What has become of the ancient and honorable pastime of trial-watching? In old England, where it was known as "attendance at court," people of all classes indulged. But today, except at a few well-publicized spectaculars, there is often no audience at all.

True, we watch plenty of make-believe trials. On TV, in movies, at the theater, the trial scene is the cornerstone of countless dramatic thrillers.

But the real courtroom adds something vital. That grim young man on the witness stand is no actor earning his weekly wage. He is really afraid he may be found guilty of burglary and sent to jail for three years. That aging widow, seeking damages for the death of her husband, really needs the money to give her children a respectable upbringing.

Perhaps you feel that trial-watching is a form of idle curiosity. Surely it shows curiosity. But is such curiosity idle? The law itself doesn't think so. The silent spectator, there only to watch, is not just tolerated but welcomed. In the eyes of the law, he serves two useful purposes:

1) He helps justice. His show of interest tends to put all of the participants on their mettle. The dictatorial judge, the apathetic juror, the dishonest witness—all may fear that they might, somehow, run afoul of that anonymous observer in the back of the courtroom.

2) He helps himself. He learns at first hand how democracy meets the acid test: the way it treats an individual. The things he finds wrong can make him a more constructive citizen. The things he finds right can breathe fresh meaning into the slogans of freedom.

Access to the courtroom may be limited in a few special circumstances. For example, if the testimony is sordid, children may be barred to protect their morals. Troublemakers may be kept out to preserve decorum. Crowding may be forbidden as a matter of public safety.

As a rule, however, the courtroom doors are wide open. No one will take your name or ask your business. You can walk in or out at any time.

But stay awhile. Far more awaits you in a courtroom than the sight of a few people in trouble. It is, in fact, the best place to discover why Daniel Webster called justice "the great interest of man on earth."
