COTTON TALKS

Cotton farmers who save and plant their own or their neighbor's seed -- a predominant practice on the High Plains-- may well lose lint production worth over $30 per acre at 27 cents per pound.

This is the conclusion drawn by Lavon L. Ray, assistant agronomist at the South Plains Research and Extension Center, following comparative yield tests of "farmer-saved" seed lines and a line from the seed producer. Ten lines of a popular variety saved by farmers for planting in Crosby County averaged 505 pounds lint production per acre, compared with 621 pounds per acre yielded by seed of the same variety coming direct from the seed producer. The 116 pound difference, at 27 cents, amounts to a dollar-loss of $31.32 per acre. "And since all seed lines were planted and grown under identical conditions, the inevitable conclusion is that the seed themselves were responsible for this variance in yield," Ray said.

"The production of quality planting seed requires a great deal of technology, skill and attention to detail," Ray continued, and added that: "Most farmers, even if they have the required know-how and managerial ability, are not equipped to properly handle and process planting seed and cannot give the attention needed for a good job."

In 1963 a "planter-box" survey was conducted in Crosby County by Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., with the cooperation of the SPREC, Texas Planting Seed Association and others, and the ten farmer-saved lines were among over 80 samples of one variety taken from growers at planting time. All of the 80 samples were of seed saved by a farmer from his own or a neighbor's crop, as were 97 percent of all samples taken in the survey. When planted in yield trials in 1963 these 80 samples produced yields varying as much as 300 pounds lint per acre, and in view of the wide yield differences, the five high and the five low yielding lines were saved for further testing in 1964. The 621 pound production from the seed producer line in 1964 was 87 pounds above the average of the five "high" lines and 144 pounds better than the "low" average.

Ray pointed out that: "Even taking the high average for farmer-saved seed, at 27 cents per pound a farmer is losing $23.49 per acre, and that figure applied to the High Plains as a whole reveals a staggering income loss to the area."

Yield losses from farmer-saved seed, Ray believes, is because of the difficulty in maintaining a pure variety under ordinary field conditions. He bases this belief on the fact that most seed breeders agree it is more difficult to maintain a cotton variety than it is to develop that variety originally.

To avoid such losses and achieve maximum lint and dollar production per acre, Ray suggests farmers follow three simple rules:

- (1) Select a good, high-yielding variety that will produce a quality fiber;

- (2) Use sound seed with good germination, avoiding seed which have been weathered in the field or stored at high humidity and temperature, and also of prime importance,

- (3) Make certain that your seed source supplies you with the best and purest available seed of the variety you have selected.

Much that is in the Administration's farm bill, if passed into law as introduced by Congressman Harold Cooley, would relate to cotton either directly or indirectly although cotton is not among the commodities specifically provided for in the measure. The bill, sent to Congress by the President April 5, has been dubbed H. R. 7097 and referred to the House Committee on Agriculture.

Bearing directly on cotton and cotton producers would be the section titled Transfer of Allotments. Under this section the Secretary, if he determined it would not impair the effective operation of a given commodity program, could permit the sale of lease of farm allotments to any other owner or operator of a farm, or could permit the owner of a farm to transfer allotments to any other farm owned by him. This section would presumably apply to any allotment, including cotton allotments, with the following provisions:

- (1) Allotments could not be transferred across state line;
- (2) Would be subject to agreement by any mortgage or other lienholder;
- (3) Would be subject to approval by the county ASC committee in the county to which the allotment was being transferred;
- (4) Would have the effect of transferring acreage history with certain exceptions in the case of an allotment leased instead of sold,
- (5) Would be adjusted, at the discretion of the Secretary to provide for different yields between the two farms involved, to provide reasonable limits on the size of resulting allotments, and "such other terms and conditions" as the Secretary might see fit to impose.

The effect of this provision for sale or lease of allotments on the High Plains area is to some extent unpredictable, but it is generally thought that it might aid in getting more cotton acreage. Assuming that the price were right, and that the Secretary's "Other terms and conditions" were not prohibitive, many farmers in this area would likely jump at the chance to buy or lease allotments from farmers in other parts of the state who annually fail to plant their allotments. And, if properly administered, this device could help to get the 15-acre or less farmer, who some have long contended has been a stumbling block to realistic cotton legislation, out of the cotton growing business once and for all.

H. R. 7097 proposes specific programs for wheat, feed grains, rice and wool. The wheat program purports to transfer some of the cost of supporting wheat prices from the Government to the consumer in the form of what critics refer to as a "bread tax," which would reputedly add about a cent to the cost of a one-pound loaf. As of this moment, at least, there is no indication that the Administration proposes to apply this line of thinking to a program for cotton. However, the "bread tax" would enable the price for domestically consumed wheat to be supported at about double the level of wheat grown for export, and it is this price support dualism which may well influence things to come for cotton.

Similarly, the President's program for rice incorporates this same philosophy. But here, for some reason not fully explained, there would be three price support levels--one price for the first 50,000 pounds of a farmer's production, another and lower price for that falling between 50,100 and 150,000 pounds, and a still lower support for production in excess of 150,000 pounds.

Cotton producers have almost traditionally fought against direct compensatory payment type programs for fear that limitations on the extent to which any one producer could participate would be imposed. And advocates of this type program have most often cited the wool program to cotton producers as evidence that direct payments did not necessarily lead to limitations.

But alas, H. R. 7097 would inject limitations--in the form of tri-level support payments--into the wool program along with wheat and rice. The first 2,000 pounds of a sheep man's wool would be supported at not less than 75 or more than 90 percent of parity, the next 5,000 pounds at between 70 and 85 percent, and the excess over 7,000 pounds at from 65 to 80 percent of parity.

It would appear, then that there is considerable foundation to the belief that "limitations follow direct payments as night follows day," and that those who make light of this contention now, need evidence other than the wool program to bolster their never-too-convincing argument.

BY A BANKER

AMERICAN BANKERS' MAGAZINE

"No business man in any town should allow a newspaper published in his town to go without his name and address being mentioned somewhere in its columns. This does not mean you should have a whole, half or even a quarter page ad in each issue of the paper, but your name and business should be mentioned, even if you do not use more than a two-line space.

"A stranger picking up a newspaper should be able to tell what business is represented in a town by looking at the paper. This is the best possible town advertising. The man who does not advertise his business does an injustice to himself and to the town. The man who insists on sharing the business that comes to town, but refuses to advertise his own, is not a valuable addition to any town . . . The life of a town depends on the live, wide-awake and liberal advertising man."

Tetanus Risk Is Stressed

Are you and your family immunized against tetanus?

If not, you are running an entirely unnecessary risk of serious illness, perhaps even death, from this serious disease.

With the coming of spring and a return to gardening and other out-of-doors activities, the risk of tetanus increases. The spores can be found in the cultivated soils of most areas of the United States. They can be picked up by plants, or animals, and introduced into the victim's body by something as inconsequential as the scratch of a thorn or an insect bite.

While millions of babies and members of the armed forces have been inoculated against tetanus, the fact remains that about three-fourths of the adult population is lacking in immunity. The protection offered by immunization wears off after a few years and must be re-established by booster shots, which most people fail to get.

Once they enter the body, tetanus spores "hatch" into tiny microscopic bacteria, which begin to multiply. In the process, they liberate one of the deadliest of all poisons which attacks the nerve centers, causing convulsions and muscle spasms--some so severe that victims have been known to fracture a vertebra. Usually the first nerves affected are those of the head and neck which control the chewing muscles. These turn rigid with spasm, giving the disease its familiar name--lockjaw.

In a clean, free-bleeding cut tetanus spores are usually washed out. Or if they do sprout into bacteria, the microorganisms may be destroyed by oxygen in the blood. But when blood flow is slight, as in a deep puncture from stepping on a nail or in crushing wounds, or when the spores are insulated by imbedded dirt and debris, the tetanus bacteria may gain a deadly foothold within the body. This is because tetanus bacteria thrive in the absence of air.

No antibiotic or other drug can halt a full-blown case, and about 60 percent of those afflicted by the disease die.

By means of immunization, tetanus is almost completely preventable. Protection should start early--one and a half to two months after birth--for the scrapes and falls of childhood offer tetanus many opportunities. In children, as well as adults, immunity is initiated by a series of three shots, spaced over eight weeks, and followed by a booster dose within six to twelve months. Thereafter, immunity is maintained by boosters every five years.

Don't take a chance with tetanus. Call your doctor and make an appointment to have your family immunized.

STATE CAPITAL Highlights AND Sidelights

AUSTIN-- A new governor moved into the chief executive's office in the capitol this week--but only for a day.

Following tradition, Gov. John Connally and Lt. Gov. Preston Smith left the state Tuesday---clearing the way for Sen. Tom Creighton of Mineral Wells, Senate president pro tempore, to take a 24-hour turn as governor.

Creighton invited homefolks from Callahan, Clay, Denton, Eastland, Jack, Montague, Palo Pinto, Parker, Stephens and Wise Counties to his "inauguration."

He also turned out the usual volume of proclamations and commissions -- and received praises of his colleagues.

Creighton, 36, an attorney, brought along his pretty wife, Sue and three children to the governor's mansion.

Medical School Vetoed

Governor Connally the bill authorizing Texas Tech to establish a medical school in Lubbock.

Connally said that not enough study had been given to the idea and that he preferred that his recently created college coordinating board be the supreme authority in new college programs.

Veto drew critical attacks from West Texas proponents of the school, including Lt. Gov. Preston Smith and Sen. H.J. Blanchard, both of Lubbock.

New Laws Adopted

Dozens of bills have been given final passage in one house and sent to the other for further action.

Two bills by Rep. Dick Cory would authorize commissioners courts in all but the largest counties of the state to give county officers raises of up to 20 percent.

Sen. Don Kennard's bill to create a North Central Texas Airport Authority in Tarrant County, which is opposed by Dallas, was passed in the Senate, but the House version ran into a filibuster by Dallas delegation members in the committee hearing.

Bill by Sen. W.T. Moore would authorize Texas A & M to accept James Connally Air Force Base for the state and establish a technical institute.

Amendments Get Priority

State representatives returned from their brief Easter Vacations to find two proposed constitutional amendments high on their work assignment list.

Gov. Connally finally got the balky House Amendments Committee to clear for debate measure to increase terms of governor and other officials elected statewide from two to four years.

Committee also approved re-districting pain-easer calling for increase of State Senate membership from 31-to 39, but stripped from it provision to lengthen upper house terms to six years.

Pressure for submission of both measures to Texas voters (in November and August 7 elections, respectively) were intense.

... CAN YOU PUT A PRICE ON YOUR CHILD?

Of course you can't. A child is priceless. Yet, it is very important that you calculate her worth in dollars and cents. Does that sound incongruous? It's not. Here's why: If you are going to be able to protect her valuable future, financially, you must decide now exactly how much money that will require, then you must begin to accumulate that amount. How to do it: Save regularly in one of our high-earning, fully insured savings accounts! Open your account today.
