Spray Painting Can Be Easy

Spray-can painting is a breeze--If you know a few things about aerosols,

If you know a few things about aerosols, how the can works, what the paint is and how best to use it.

It avoids the stirring mess before—hand, the need for a brush clean—up afterwards and the not infrequent annoyance of finding once—used paint dried up or scummed over.

The resulting brushmark-free finish may alone justify the somewhat higher cost of aerosol paints, at least for touch-up applications. Too, any leftover paint stays fresh in the sealed aerosol container.

Shaking is important. You can't reach into a spray can to mix the contents wih a paddle as you do with ordinary paint. Aerosol paints are mixed by shaking. Most aerosol packagers provide a ball agitator which functions as a stirring paddle.

When you shake the can, if you can't hear the agitator rattle, it may be imbedded in the pigment. To free it, try a wrist-snap motion until you hear the rattle. Then shake for one full minute more.

True color reproduction and a clog-free nozzle depend on a thorough shaking job. Mask the area around the object or surface you intend to paint. The temperature of the can should be about 70 degrees or warmer. If outdoors, paint on calm days or in a windsheltered area.

Hold the spray can 10 to 12 inches from the object. Point the nozzle an inch or two to one side of the surface, Start moving your hand and as it reaches the edge of the surface, press the spray button. Stroke parallel to the surface in one direction. Stop the spray at the end of each stroke.

If you move too slowly, the coating will run and drip. Should this happen, stop. Wipe off the paint with a lint-free cloth and start again.

Two thin, even coats are better than one thick coat. Go back after a few minutes to get coverage and hiding quality. Aerosols are generally quick drying. You can apply a second coat in as little as five minutes.

Three or four thin coatings will provide a more professional appearing job. The surface dries fast to prevent dust collection and permit additional coatings. The paint

Volunteer Castor Beans Eliminated In Sorghum

castor beans were completely eliminated in grain sorghum in 1965 by the use of Propazine. This excellent contirol was probably partially due to extremely heavy rainfall immediately after application, which may have moved the herbicide sufficiently deep into the soil to control the germination of the volunteer castors. Dr. Arthur F. Gohlke, senior soil scientist at the High Plains Research Foundation, conducted the test.

The grain sorghum was seeded June 1, 1965, on Pullman clay loam, bench leveled preplant irrigated plots where castors were produced in 1964. Prior to seeding the plots with grain sorghum, the volunteer castors were eradicated by rod weeding. Following seeding one and a half pounds of 80 W Propazine per acre was sprayed broadcast. Two days following the Propazine application, a 4.7 inch rain was received. Since the bench-leveled land area was all level, all the rain penetrated the soil without any runoff. An additional 1.83 inch rain was received within two weeks following the previous rain. The only cultivation was the establishment of water furrows prior to the first of two summer irrigations. Ten days following the application no new volunteer castorbeans emerged. At harvest time, no castor plants were found in the area treated with Propazine, even though the check plot, which was not treated, demonstrated the large number of potential volunteer plants.

Control of volunteer castor beans with Propazine is again being studied in 1966 by tandem disk incorporating it into a sufficient depth for control. This incorporation technique might eliminate the need for rainfall necessary for the deep activation of Propazine required to control the castor beans.

Dr. Gohlke issues the following warning, 'Should Propazine or other herbicides be applied to control volunteer castors in grain sorghum, All volunteer castorbean plants, not contlolled, must be removed prior to grain harvest.'

New GI Bill For Education Now in Effect

The VA Regional office in Waco has received more than 4,000 applications for educational benefits under the Veterans Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966 which was unanimously passed by Congress and signed into law by the President March 3, 1966.

This new GI Bill, which became effective June 1, provides for educational opportunities for veterans who have had more than 180 days of active duty since Jan 31, 1955.

The bill also includes those still in service who have had at least two years active duty since Jan 31, 1955.

According to Jack Coker, manager of the regional office, more than 21,000 applications are expected in the Waco office during the next 12 months. The Waco office serves 164 counties in Texas covering approximately the northern two-thirds of the State.

Under the provisions of the new GI Bill veterans with no dependents are paid $100 per month, those with one dependent $125 and those with two or more dependents $150 for full-time

'Allowances under the bill are only intended to assist veterans financially and in most cases will not cover all the high costs of education', Coker explained.

'Veterans planning to go to school umder the new GI Bill also should have enough money of their own to pay all entrance fees and room and board for at least a month,' Coker said. Veterans who do not have ready resources for getting into school should begin investigating possible loans or parttime employment, Coker suggested.

Admission to colleges and universities is no longer a simple matter of sending in an application, the VA official went on.

'Nearly all of them now require entrance examinations and aptitude tests,' Coker said. 'Since these tests are only offered a few times a year, veterans should contact their schools now and make arrangements to take the tests.'

In selecting educational objectives, veterans may consider practically all colleges and universities, the VA manager said, but abocational or recreational type courses are banned under the new GI Bill. This includes flight training except in institutions where such instruction is credited toward a degree.

Application forms to establish eligibility for training under the new GI Bill are available at the VA Regional Office at 1400 North Valley Mills Drive.

cures completely in 12 hours.

Paint the hard-to-reach places first. When the can is full, you can hold it in any position except upside down to spray. Finish up in accessible, vertical surfaces where the can may be held nozzle up. There is more than enough gas to empty the can.

Always clear the nozzle when the job is done if there is paint leftinthe can. This will leave the nozzle clear for the next job. You can't tell how much paint you're going to get by weight.

The propellant gas in some aerosols weighs more than the paint !

The heavier can is likely to hold more gas, which weighs ll pounds per gallon, than paint which weighs only eight pounds per gallon. Read the labels carefully. Choose a can that specifies "Contents One Pint."

Always store aerosol paints out of reach of young children.

Before disposing of an aerosol can, hold down the release valve until the contents, including the propellent gas, are exhausted. Even so, do not expose to fire. Its heat can dangerously expand any remaining gas in the can and cause it to burst.

Do not use flammable aerosols near open flames of cigarettes. Also avoid inhaling the spray or spraying near the eyes.

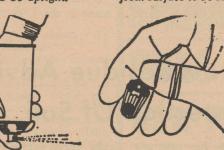

While painting, pause occasionally and shake the can to keep the paint mixed. Shaking has no effect on the propellant gas. If the spray seems to lose force, clear the nozzle. To do this, turn the can upside down, press the button and hold it for one second. Aim the nozzle at a drop cloth or piece of scrap paper as some paint will be forced out of the valve.

Niew shows why can should be upright.

Hold can at least 12 inches from surface to be covered.

Turn can and spray Remove head if nozzle is clogged. clean with a needle or fine wire. to clear after use.

Skip-Row Residue Advised For Protection Of Soil

Farmers in this area are Crops grown for this purpose finding the practice of 'skip- need to provide cover and prorow residue planting' very useful in their farming systems.

When properly used, this practice can provide both soil tection to the land against wind erosion during the fall, winter, and spring months. During this most unfavorable.

Summer skip-row crops are of vital importance. In areas of sandy soil and where wind velocity may be excessive, a cover crop is essential unless the soil organic matter is unusually

After your cash crophas become well established, it would be a good time to plant skiprow crops. Sorghums that are planted prior to July 1 should be planted in at least two rows. Small grains drilled by Oct 15 may vary from 5 feet to 12 feet according to the number of the skip-rows. Two rows (skiprows) should be drilled at least 5 feet and 4-rows (skip-rows) should be drilled at least 12 feet. Late planted (Aug l) sor-ghum or millet should be planted in 4-20 inch rows or drilled. These distances offer the best protection for your cash crop.

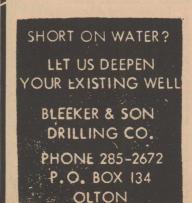

Sudex or millet when planted in late August or early September use little moisture and are killed by frost. When growth stops, the use of soil moisture ceases with minimum effect on the succeeding crop.

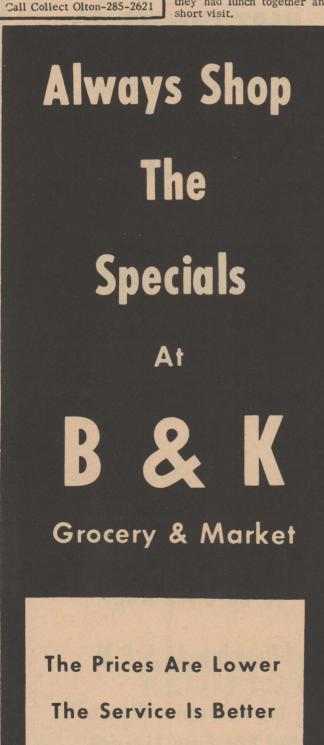

Minimum heights of stubble from harvested crops should not be less than 10 inches on sorghums and small grains. Emergency tillage should be practiced when residues on the soil surface is not sufficient to control wind erosion.

Technical assistance on adapted crops and planting recommendations is available from your Soil Conservation Service office.

'Too Much Demand' Causing Inflation

doing, not what it is saying, about inflation, you may be sadly disillusioned.

For while haranguing the housewife, the farmer, the union duce demand: by scaling down leader, and the businessman to hold the line on prices, spending, wages, and profits, the Government is actively following policies that promote inflation. Gardner Ackley, the Presi-WASHINGTON-- If you judge dent's chief economic adviser, the Government by what it is has recognized the cause this has recognized the cause this inflation: Too much demandin the economy.

> public expenditures or by restraining private expend-itures." he said in a recent speech to the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Yet instead of the remedy, Government policies are providing for more spending.

The Federal Reserve Board has made the country's pockets overflow with a rapidly increasing supply of money and credit, which is being spent. The results: business investment in new plants is booming (to make tomorrow's products better and to create tomorrow's Jobs); consumers are flocking to the store counters on a giant buying spree.

And public spending also is soaring. Despite the war in Viet Nam, the Administration is pouring billions more dollars into Great Society programs such as education, poverty, and housing.

As a consequence of these policies, demand for goods and services across the nation is outrunning the supply, and prices are rising. Joblessness is at a low, and many areas have labor shortages.

CITY OF HART

Dear Editor:

We enjoyed the 4th of July Holiday. We have twenty eager little students on the school steps every morning.

Mrs. Lyle , District Supervisor of our program, from Lubbock visited us, and was very pleased with our classroom and progress.

No where but in America could we enjoy this privilege.

We do need very much slow signs on our school street.

We welcome visitors, before
