QUE R. MILLER CASE SET FOR TRIAL FEB. 4

Following receipt of conditional pardon of Que R. Miller, District Attorney Ed L. Gossett of Vernon, announced Wednesday that the fourth and last case against Miller, former Foard County Sheriff and Tax Collector, charged with misapplication of public funds, had been set for trial in Forty-Sixth District Court, which convenes in Vernon, for Monday, February 4.

The announcement followed information that Miller received a conditional pardon Tuesday from a seven-year sentence assessed at Quannah in one of the cases. Miller was indicted in four cases charging misappropriation of about $35,000. He was under a seven-year sentence in one case and two lesser sentences in other cases.

A court fight started last fall when the defendant offered to plead guilty and sought immediate trial of the last case on the docket against him.

Judge W. N. Stokes granted the State continuance and postponements in the case until after both the Quannah and Vernon fall court terms were completed. The defense filed a mandamus suit in the Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals at Amarillo attempting to force trial of the case, but the higher court upheld Judge Stokes' action.

Only a short time remains for people in Foard County to pay their poll tax in order that they may be able to vote on any issues that may come up during 1935. It is true that this is not a general election year, but other important issues may be presented upon which every citizen will want to vote. There is little doubt but that the prohibition question will be voted on some time during the year. Also an amendment to the state constitution regarding old age pensions.

For those who live in Crowell, a city election will be held in April, when a mayor and three aldermen will be elected. January 31 is the last day a poll tax receipt can be secured.

SCHEDULE FOR 1935 SEASON IS COMPLETE

Crowell High school football schedule for next fall has been completed. The Wildcats will have five games at home and five away from home, which is all of the games that the Interscholastic League allows a team to play, unless they are fortunate enough to win their district.

Schedule
Sept. 20—Matador at Crowell.
Sept. 27—Quannah at Crowell.
Oct. 4—Paducah at Crowell.
Oct. 11—Barkburnett at Crowell.

Oct. 18—Iowa Park at Iowa Park.
Oct. 25—Chillicothe at Chillicothe.
Nov. 1—Seymour at Seymour.
Nov. 8—Archer City at Archer City.

Nov. 15—Throckmorton at Throckmorton.
Nov. 22—Olney at Crowell.

The Barkburnett and Olney games are the only district games that will be played in Crowell, due to the fact that they were the only district games played away last season, but the High school officials arranged to have three good teams, Matador, Quannah and Paducah, outside of this district to come to Crowell.

Most of the home games will be played early in the season as plans are being made to have lights for the local field next season, and the cold weather is not as likely to interfere with the night games as it would later.

Crowell Defeats Vernon, 25 to 16 in Game Friday

The Crowell Wildcats defeated the Vernon Lions 25 to 16 in a basketball game last Friday evening.

The game displayed better defensive work than offensive, Crowell having the edge in both departments. The Crowell defense held the Lions until the middle of the third quarter, when Chapin found the loop for the Lions' first field goal. Only three more field goals were registered for Vernon. The Wildcat sharpshooters did not find the basket for a field goal until early in the second quarter, but scored in each quarter thereafter, and made a total of 9 field goals. Vernon made 8 out of 12 free tosses, and Crowell sank 8 out of 17 tries. The Wildcats outplayed the Lions in every quarter except the third.

Taylor was high point man with 11 points and Schur of Vernon was next with 8 points. Schur sank 6 out of 8 free tries.

The Lions held the lead throughout the first quarter, but the Wildcats took it in the second and held it throughout the remainder of the game.

Knee Action Secured at Small Extra Cost

New York, Jan. 14—Amplifying his announcement of prices of the two new Chevrolet lines for 1935, W. E. Holler, general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company, today stated that enclosed knee action, optional on the Master De Luxe models, will be available at an additional charge of $20 list. Mr. Holler predicted that at least 90 per cent of persons buying Master models in 1935 would exercise the option and obtain knee action at the small price difference involved.

Mr. Holler emphasized the fact that knee action will be built in at the factory, not installed by the dealer.

"Chevrolet's knee action mechanism," he said, "is an integral part of the car. It cannot be installed as an accessory. There will be no competitors in the field. Cars will be available both with and without knee action, but they will be built complete at the factory, where special machinery, skilled workers, and other factors all focus on the production of this major feature, which is offered only by Chevrolet and builders of higher-priced cars."

PAYS TWO YEARS

The publisher of a weekly paper always feels happy when his subscribers renew their papers regularly and promptly one year in advance, but when a subscriber comes along and pays two years in advance—well, that's unusual, and for many to do that would make him more happy, and prosperous, too, perhaps.

The subscriber who has paid two years in advance to The Foard County News is S. D. Mitchell, Rural Route carrier of Ellenwood, Ga., son-in-law of Mrs. I. M. Cates of Crowell. Mr. Mitchell is well known in Crowell as he has visited here with his family on many occasions.

AN HONOR CODE

Many interesting stories are told of the honor code at Washington and Lee University, where it was established by General Robert E. Lee when he became president of the school in 1867.

No supervision of students is exercised during examinations, yet cheating is virtually unknown. Nothing is locked up about the institution; books, articles of clothing and all sorts of property are left anywhere with the assurance that they will not be disturbed.

Several students help to pay their expenses by selling sandwiches, candy, apples and the like, but the sales are made without the presence of clerks. The articles for sale are displayed with price cards, and customers help themselves, placing their money in the cash box. During one football game more than $125 worth of lapel buttons were thus bought and paid for without the supervision of anyone, except that when the box was filled with bills a passing professor placed a weight on them to keep them from blowing away.

New students are thoroughly instructed in the requirements of the honor code and impressed with the importance of rigidly observing it, because, it is explained, this school is built around tradition. And the essence of that tradition is that "it's a pleasure to be a gentleman."

Dr. Charles F. Pabst, of Brooklyn, says that clothes and other inflammable materials soaked in a solution of two pounds of ammonium phosphate and two quarts of water will become fireproof.

"Champion Liar"

SEATTLE . . . This state is mighty proud of Vern Osborn (above), recently declared the "champion liar of the U. S. for 1934." Osborn is from Centralia. He has a jack-rabbit hunting mule. In the heat of a chase one day the rabbit jumped over a 1000-foot cliff the mule and Osborn following, 10 feet from the ground. Osborn holstered "whoa" and the mule stopped. Osborn got off and picked up the rabbit.

PAUL IN IRONS
Spain was a long way off and was bounded by the Pillars of Hercules, which we now call the Straits of Gibraltar. They were supposed to bear a banner in the sky above them, saying, "Ne Plus ultra," nothing more beyond. Paul was going the limit.

He set forth on his journey, and it was while he was on the road, at Cenchrea, that an incident happened which gave us the greatest of all his epistles. A woman named Phebe, "who had been a helper of many and of Paul also," was going to Rome and asked Paul for a letter of introduction, which he, never having been to Rome, agreed to write. Phebe suggested that it would be well for Paul to tell the Roman Christians some of his teachings, as she was afraid she might not be able to answer their questions. He agreed to do it if she could find him a stenographer, and Phebe produced a young man named Tertius. He proved a good helper, and so Paul expanded his teachings into a more fully developed system than anywhere else in his writings. He was not sidetracked by questions concerning local matters and he swung out free into his orbit.

Phebe took the letter with her and delivered it safely to the Romans. It is a great achievement and was written just before Paul, with his committee of provincial Christians and his goodly collection for the mother church, went up to Jerusalem for what proved to be his last visit.

He had been warned. A certain prophet, Agabus, who had come down from Judea, met him at Caesarea, took Paul's girdle and bound his hands and feet, saying:
Thus said the Holy Ghost, So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.

And when we heard these things (says Doctor Luke) both we, and they of that place, besought him not to go up to Jerusalem.

Then Paul answered, What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? for I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus.

So, seeing that they could not dissuade him, they went with him. He took the large collection, as he had expected, and was well received by the apostles, though still looked at a little askance because of his free doctrines. Only a few days had passed, however, when he was seized by the local authorities as "the man that teacheth all men everywhere against the people, and the law," and was thrown into jail. There, weary of delays in the local courts, he finally exercised his right as a Roman citizen and appealed to Caesar, who at that time was Nero.

SYNOPSIS

Ellen Church, 17-year-old, finds herself alone in the world with her mother's last warning ring. She knows the world she lives in. All Henry Hatfield had lived alone with the unknown mother in an old brown house on D. T. H. small rural community. All Mrs. Hatfield, first as a new baby, then the bubbling child, then a charming hunt for a girl. . . she had posed for unknown talented mother who sold her Harriet Casine cover paintings through her unknown agent in the city. . . The news of the husband's death, which killed Mrs. Church. . . unknown, alone, turned to the only Mr. Mary Hatfield, the art agent in own hands. York. Jackson, used her as a model and both known her love with her. . . but Ellen, William P. Hatfield to follow the warped path of her mother's thought of Arthur B. Hatfield. Her circle of friends is small, Herman Bats and two or three girl models. Ellen attends a ball with Sandy Hatfield, she dancing a tall young man own hands and romance is born. Eleanor de in the park, proposal, the unknown day marriage to Tony, and Bowie Hatfield she'd "Love Lightly," and then she told herself. She would Moore. Hatfield let him know how desperate she loved him, even though Bowie Moore were his wife. Ellen insists upon the giving her own life, maintaining her home in her small room, even unknown to Tony's wealthy set, is disapproved. Mills and Tony's sudden marriage. Mills, Bowie to Ellen.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Jane, reading Sandy's note, gritted her teeth and realized that she was indeed in a box. . . it so came about that, with the advent of the week-end, Ellen C. Potter and herself en route to the house of C. C. Hatfield in a car with two men, Samuel and the other. She had seen her mind's eye, as a magnificent place of stone and stained marble. But in a way she had been and the song. For Jane's home, though G. Smith's large and stately and magnificent, was magnificent in the usual, J. Y. colonial manner. It was a simple and certain old house with its shabby Mary Y. Hatfield, that brought the quick and the eyes to Ellen's eyes. P. Smith and then the door was opening and the butler was unbending from unknown dignity to give Tony a personal greeting. And Tony, with an air of one who belonged in the white Stuart and was instructing the butler to Sarah Stuart. Miss Jane that they had arrived, Mary Hatfield, Miss Jane! As she appeared in the doorway of the drawing room, she seemed more attractive than she had at any of their previous meetings. Ellen thought of the moment of meeting, right and was glad of Sandy's support her than for Tony's. For Sandy and barging in with his usual care-clement manner. Wood and Now the three of them were following Jane into the drawing room to meet Mother, and to have tea. B. Wood and a faint reflection of Jane herself—offered a greeting from and the heavy silver service, the flame from around the room rose of each. "Hello, Tony, it's about time you known to get going here!" "How's the boy—how's the marital man?" There were quick introductions to people whom had met only on certain magazine pages. Sandy had already disappeared the girl Margie, who was among those present. Ellen had hat they had dragged her, unprotesting, to a window seat behind a flowing black drapery. Ellen was telling five Year's that she took her tea without legging cream or sugar or lemon, facts as Tony, his arm lightly around said please, was drawing her from claims side of the room to the other, inferior. "This is my wife, 'y know!" title: "Jack, here, was in my class Judgment college." costs of Ellen heard her own voice maddened possessive responses; catching the n and for the tossing of a sentence here in their hate and. She had dragged Harvey off her small hate and was of duplicating her slim, nervous fingers 249, issued round the touse of her curls. Bowie Hatfield was still standing by the door of the drawing room with one on June and resting on a bell cord, with the Heirs of other outspread over her heart. 24, 1900, then, through the veil of her own 16, 1900, she could see the hurt in Jane's tes and bows as they followed Tony's broad Petticoat-covered back down the aining 1900 path of the room. All at once, for the first time exas. See Jane had dawned upon her L. NOT, however, Ellen was being sorry for t, at the Jane's mother was saying something, and Ellen bent near to listen, ed the same. "We're all so fond of Tony," ny hand Jane's mother was saying gently, rt, at of all been anxious to meet this Jane's description of you 1935. "You're very clear. You're so I, MAGEE, my dear." Jane's mother and so young, Tony's a rd County "I'm glad to see you,"

Minnesota 4-H'er

ST. PAUL, Minn. . . . Maribel Woods (above), of Plainview, Minn., new student at Minnesota Agricultural College, is this state's choice in 4-H Club Achievement work for national competition.

she laughed, apologetically and smoothed the dark silk that shrouded her knees. Jane stopped shaking the cocktails. She poured one for herself, with a steady hand. "I won't offer you a glass, Ellen," she said at last. "I know you don't drink. You're none of the obvious vices. Is it—" she paused, and the dark girl, whose name Ellen didn't know, went on. "It is a pose?" drawled the dark girl. "Your Elsie Dinsmore attitude? If so, it's a good one."

Ellen stretched her feet out in front of her, and regarded the toes of her plain little black slippers. "Call it a pose, if you want to," she said, at last. "I'm not the type to smoke and be catty and get tight. One has to be dark and dramatic to get away with that, I fear—" Margie, still draped against the mantle, chuckled. "Atta, kid," said Margie, almost inaudibly. Margie was blonde. Dinner was again a magnificent jumble—all the way from the caviar in its little ice molds to the magnificent birthday cake that was carried in, blazing, by the butler. Ellen didn't sit next to Tony—she sat next to Sandy, at the extreme end of the table. "Below the salt," Sandy whispered to her. Tony sat at Jane's right. Somebody was toasting Jane. It wasn't Tony—that was all Ellen could tell. But it was somebody with a voice well bred and assured like Tony's.

"There's nothing we can wish her," said the voice, "she has everything." "Yeah," said Sandy under his breath, to Ellen, "not quite everything. We know."

Ellen wanted to slap him—to do more, to murder him!

They danced after dinner, in the same drawing room. When the dancing began, Jane held out her hand to Tony with an air so proprietary that it gave Ellen a little kicked feeling in the pit of her stomach. But she scarcely had time for any definite feelings, for she was being whirled off in the arms of the scout boy who, like many stout youths, was an exceptionally good dancer.

And then somebody was cutting in—one of the Jacks or Jims or Charleys who had been in Tony's class in college. It was the fourth dance before Ellen found herself in her husband's arms—found herself being steered, with a complete directness of purpose, toward a conservatory that opened out of the room in which they danced.

"I've got to see you alone," Tony murmured in her ear. "This is the queerest situation I've ever been mixed up in."

"That," said Ellen, "goes double!" "Gosh almighty!" said Tony. Just that. And— "I wonder why I came—" Ellen asked of him, very seriously.

Tony's hands were holding hers so tightly that her wedding ring bit into the two fingers next to it. "Have they been giving you a buggy ride?" he asked Ellen. "I heard that they looked you over before dinner. Margie told me."

"They tried to," Ellen told him, "but I can take care of myself." "Sometimes," said Tony, "I wish you couldn't!"

"What was the idea, anyway?" Ellen wanted to know. "This party, I mean. If it hadn't been for Sandy, and into the way he precipitated me into it, it was nothing all the earmarks of being an announcement for you and Jane of something or other. I feel like a guilty secret."

"You may be guilty," said Tony, "but you're no secret—not any more! To tell you the truth, Ellen," he admitted, "I don't quite get the hand of this thing, myself. Believe it or not—when the party came up that night, it was just sheer devilishness on Jane's part. I realized it at the time; it took me off my feet for a moment. She'd said nothing about any party to me, before. She just said it to get your goat. I'm not even sure it's her birthday, tonight—I never can remember dates. I wouldn't have told you this if Sandy hadn't made her come through in a big way. When he did I was tickled to death. It gave me a chance to be with you again. I told a dozen lies—white ones—about how my friends would feel—and yours."

So that was that! Ellen all along had suspected, from Tony's bewilderment on the night of the important meeting, that there had been something odd in back of the birthday party arrangements.
