GENERAL TO BE DIED TODAY FOR FOARD PIONEER

Funeral services will be held at the Baptist Church in Crowell tomorrow, Thursday, at 3:30 p. m. for Mrs. G. W. Harrell, 70, died Wednesday afternoon at 10 o'clock in her home three miles northeast of Crowell.

In the absence of the local pastor, Rev. O. L. Savage, the funeral services will be conducted by Rev. J. E. Billington of Paris, former Baptist pastor here. Burial will be in the cemetery near Crowell.

Mrs. Harrell was one of the earliest pioneers of this section. Over 40 years ago she first came to the section of Texas that became Foard County. She had been in declining health since May, however, her condition had become serious until about a month ago following a stroke of apoplexy.

Born in Alabama, Annie Minor, maiden name of Mrs. Harrell, was born in Alabama on Sept. 15, 1863. Both of her parents died before she was five years old with the result that she was taken into the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Collins, and was raised there. Mr. and Mrs. Collins became pioneer residents of Foard County.

In 1877 Miss Minor was married to Jim Wright. One child, Nancy Wright, who now resides in Oklahoma City, was born to the union. In November, 1883, she became the wife of G. W. Harrell, a wedding near Marietta, Okla. The only child born to this union was Mrs. R. M. Fox, who lives in Crowell.

Besides her husband and two children, Mrs. Harrell is survived by 12 grandchildren and two other children and two sisters, who live in Alabama and Arkansas.

When a small child, Mrs. Harrell was brought to Cass County, Mo., by Mr. and Mrs. Collins. They moved from Cass to Wise county and later to the vicinity near Gainesville, Texas, and Marietta, Okla.

Shortly after her marriage to G. W. Harrell, the couple came to what is now Foard County in 1885 and settled about six miles west of Crowell. Joe, a brother of Mr. Harrell, came with them and the two brothers started cattle raising. The land they settled upon at one time was an acre proved to be railroad land and they had to leave after two years. From the place at the west part of the county, they moved just across Pease River, remaining there for about one year.

In 1888 they settled on the place where Mrs. Harrell died. In that year Mr. Harrell bought a half section of railroad land and built a box house on it.

They remained there for about 12 years and then moved to the Indian Territory, settling near Cache. Mr. Harrell was one of the participants in the Oklahoma land rush. He and Mrs. Harrell lived in a home within four miles of where Quannah Parker resided and it was while there that they became well acquainted with this famous Indian chief.

After farming for about one year, Mr. Harrell built a hotel and he and his wife operated it for about 7 years.

Absentee Voting for First Demo Primary To Begin Next Week

All ballots for the first Democratic primary in Foard County on July 28 have been printed and absentee voting, in person or by mail, is scheduled to begin on July 8.

The period for absentee voting in person will come to an end on July 25. Absentee voting by mail ends on July 26.

Voters who expect to be out of the county on July 28 may secure ballots from the county clerk for absentee voting in the period mentioned above.

The ballots this year contain 35 less names than the ballots that Foard voters marked two years ago in the first primary, the number of names this year being 75, compared with 110 in 1932.

The fact that there are fewer candidates for both local and state offices will make the matter of casting ballots this year considerably easier than was the case two years ago.

LOCAL POSTAL RECEIPTS SHOW BIG GAIN FOR 1934

Receipts at the Crowell post office for the first six months of 1934 gained almost twenty-five per cent over the receipts for the first six months of 1933, according to figures announced by Alva Spencer, postmaster.

Total receipts for the first six months of 1934 amount to $3,769.41, compared with $2,861.99 for the same period last year, a difference of $907.42.

July 4th Is Quietly Observed in Crowell

Independence Day was very quietly observed in Crowell on July 4, since most Foard County people who were in a mood to celebrate journeyed to points where celebrations had been arranged. Quannah's free rodeo and barbecue claimed by far the largest number of local people leaving the county to enjoy the Fourth.

ON TECH HONOR ROLL

Richard Sparks of Foard City, graduate of the 1932 Class of Crowell High School, made the spring semester honor roll at Texas Tech, Lubbock, with an average grade of B plus on 15-17 semester hours work, according to information reaching The News from Tech.

4-H CLUB GIRLS DRESS CONTEST WINNERS NAMED

The annual dress contest for the 4-H Club girls of Foard County was conducted Friday afternoon in Crowell, at which time Mrs. Gus Hooks of Crowell, former home demonstration agent of Baylor County, named the following winners:

Second place winners for all divisions were Geraldine Rhey of West Rayland and Ada Groomer of Good Creek, and third place winners for all divisions were Bessie Short of Ayersville and Maxine Fleisher of Thalia.

Honor mention was given the following: Louise Hembree, Ayersville; Marie Dunn, Good Creek; Elouise Joiner, Ayersville; Frances Tamplin, Ayersville; Leila Carroll, Gambleville; Maggie Starnes, Ayersville.

Former Crowell Boys Star in Polo Games

Two former Crowell boys, the Barry brothers, of Wichita Falls, have become two of the best known polo players in the Southwest. Since taking up polo here several years ago, the skill of this pair has increased with the passing of each year and both brothers are now rated as three-goal men.

They have made fine records in various parts of the country. During a tournament at Augusta, Ga., in 1933 in which some of the finest players of the South participated, Roy Barry was hailed by Augusta papers as the sensation of the polo season there.

Bill and Roy are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Barry, who left Crowell about two years ago. They now live near Wichita Falls. Mrs. Hartley Easley of Crowell is a sister of the polo-playing pair.

OVER 5 TIMES AS MANY MARRIAGE LICENSES FOR FIRST SIX MONTHS OF 1934 AS FOR SAME 1933 PERIOD

The total number of marriage licenses issued from the office of the Foard County clerk, Grady Magee, for the first six months of 1934 was just one less than for the entire previous year. Up to Saturday night, June 30, the total for 1934 had reached 31, compared with 32 for 1933. Only six licenses were issued here for the first six months of 1933.

The six-month total for 1934 exceeds the totals for the four years preceding 1933. The totals for those years follow: 1929—30; 1930—12; 1931—15; 1932—21. Improved business conditions and the change in the Texas marriage law have been responsible for the increase here. In 1928, the year before this law went into effect, 86 licenses were issued in Foard. Of the 1933 total of 32 licenses, 18 were issued in the last three months of the year, following the change in the law requiring a 3-day wait.

Drilling Progresses On 2 New Oil Tests

Drilling is now under way on two new oil tests in Foard County, the Baker-Beverly No. 1, five and one-half miles north of Crowell, and the Texas Company's L. K. Johnson No. 5, eighteen miles airline distance west of Crowell. The two tests were spudded in one week ago.

Former Resident of Foard County Dies In San Antonio Sat.

Paul Bruce, 40, brother of Jeff Bruce of Crowell, died Saturday morning at a hospital in San Antonio following serious illness of only a few hours. He had been in ill health for the past ten months, however, his condition was not considered serious and his sudden death was unexpected.

Mr. Bruce and his wife had lived in San Antonio for the past five or six years, spending a part of the time in Mexico City, where Mrs. Bruce's parents lived. He was born in the Cottonwood community in Foard County on March 15, 1894, leaving this county when about twenty-three years of age. For many years he lived in Omaha, Neb. During the World War he served fourteen months in the U. S. Army and was discharged from the service a few months after the war closed.

Funeral services were held Sunday morning in San Antonio with interment being made in that city.

Survivors include his widow, father and mother, four brothers and one sister.

ELEVATORS IN FOARD RECEIVE 300,000 BUSHELS

Close to 300,000 bushels of Foard County's 1934 wheat crop had been brought to elevators in this county up to Thursday morning.

Various estimates as to the amount of the 1934 crop remaining in farmers' granaries have been given. A summary of estimates by those keeping in close touch with the local grain crop leads to the opinion that Foard's total wheat production for 1934 amounts to between 360,000 and 375,000 bushels.

Jim Minnick's Team Wins Polo Tourney At Fort Reno, Okla.

The Norman, Okla., polo team, captained by Jim Minnick, Foard County rancher, recently won the championship of the annual polo tournament at Fort Reno, Okla. Eight teams participated in the tournament.

Ray and Bill Barry, formerly of Crowell, and Charlie Stanley, a member of the Oklahoma University team that played in Crowell several years ago, were the other members of the Norman team.

Minnick's team beat Oklahoma University in the championship game on June 22. Wichita Falls, Anadarko, Okla., and four government teams were also in the tourney.

Mr. Minnick became ill following the tournament and was unable to play in the recent Texas-Oklahoma series, although he was captain of the Texans.

The Daily Oklahoman recently had the following comment regarding him: "Jim is called the 'Daddy of Oklahoma polo' because he has played since 1902 and 1903 when polo was played on hard dirt fields. He has since captained winning teams in all parts of the United States."

"This pioneer polo player is responsible for more young polo players succeeding in the game than anyone playing polo today."

In the best brand of polo ever seen in Oklahoma, according to Oklahoma City papers, a team of Oklahoma players won two out of three games over the Texas four in the recent series at Nichols Hills, Oklahoma City.

The Texas team, consisting of the Barry brothers, Brack McKinley of Boyd, Texas, and Luther Weeks of the El Ranchita team in Fort Worth, won the first game 8 to 7.

The score of the second contest was 4 to 3 in favor of Oklahoma. Another very close game resulted in the deciding tilt Sunday afternoon, which Oklahoma won, 6 and 5.

PERSONS REFUSING JOBS WILL BE TAKEN FROM RELIEF ROLLS WARNS TEX. RELIEF COMMISSION

Persons physically able to work and who are offered employment at the prevailing scale in the locality wherein the work is to be performed, and who refuse to accept same without good cause, shall not be furnished either direct or work relief, according to a communication received this week by Bryan O'Connell, county administrator, from the Texas Relief Commission.

A warning in this respect was announced several weeks ago, however, it is being issued again because the Relief Commission reports that great complaint is coming from the citizens of Texas as that the services of farm laborers and household servants are difficult to secure and that it is believed that persons on relief rolls have been offered and refused such employment, but have continued on the relief rolls.

Persons who offer employment to anyone on the relief rolls are requested to advise their local county boards when the employment offered is refused, such advice to include the name, address, employment offered and wages offered.

When any person has been offered employment and has refused it under the conditions stated above, the county relief boards are prohibited from giving him either direct or work relief.

Kinloch Cole and Children to Leave For China Friday

After visiting for nearly three months in America, Kinloch Cole and three daughters, Ella, 11, Frances 10, and Robertha 8, will leave Crowell tomorrow, Friday, for Los Angeles, where they will board the steamship "Hoover," which departs for Shanghai on July 13, arriving in Shanghai on July 30. Enroute to Los Angeles, the group will spend one day with relatives in Columbus, N. M.

Mr. Cole is a brother of Grover Cole of this city and has spent most of the time in his home since reaching here on April 9, after being away from his old home town for twenty-one years. He and his daughters also visited in the home of another brother, L. C. Cole, at Vernon.

This visit marked the first time that Mr. Cole's daughters had ever been outside of China. On their trip to the U. S. A., they left China on March 13.

Thirteen of the 14 years that Mr. Cole has lived in China have been spent in service with the British Cigarette Co. He lived in Tientsin for 5 years and in Tsingtao for the past 9 years.

He will not know until he arrives in Shanghai whether the company will send him back to Tsingtao. It will be four years before Mr. Cole and his daughters can again return to America, according to present indications.

Renewal of acquaintance with Mr. Cole after his lengthy absence and the forming of a new acquaintance with his daughters, to whom local people have become closely attached, have brought much enjoyment to citizens here, whose best wishes go with them upon the return to their faraway home.

EARLY ACTION IS REQUESTED ON TRANSFER WORK

Tuesday, July 31, is the last day that pupils may be transferred from one school district to another and for that reason, Vance Swain, county school superintendent, is urging parents and trustees to make every effort to get transferring pupils accounted for at once in order to avoid confusion and disappointment later.

No tuition will have to be paid by a pupil changing to another school district if proper transfer is first made. When students are transferred, their portion of the state school fund is transferred to the district in which they enter.

If their names are on the census rolls, pupils may be transferred to any other district in the county. They may not transfer out of the county unless they live near the county line.

Frank Parsley of Vernon has been appointed assistant in the office of Fred Remels, county agent, by the Extension Service of Texas A. & M. College.

SCATTERED SHOWERS

Light scattered showers fell over Foard County Monday. About the heaviest downpour was at Crowell, the rain here Monday morning measuring .24 of an inch.

WATER EVENTS BROUGHT LARGE CROWD MONDAY

A large crowd was in Crowell Monday for Trades Day despite the terrific heat. The "water carnival" on the southeast part of the court house lawn provided the main feature of entertainment.

Through the use of equipment borrowed from the Chillicothe fire department, four water polo contests took place. A cable was stretched from the south side of the court house to a pole next to the street under the direction of Claude Dodd and George Self. A large tin ball was suspended from the cable on rollers attached to the cable.

Three of the four matches to determine which team could shove the ball to the other's goal post with a stream of water was won by the team composed of Geo. Self, captain, Tom Reeder Jr., Guy and John Todd and John Rator. Members of the other team were Brown Franklin, Bob Oswald Jr., J. W. Gibson, Joe Ben Roberts and Amos Lilly, with Claude Dodd as captain.

The water fight following the polo matches was also won by Geo. Self's team. Water used in both events was pumped by the fire truck through the siamese twin hose at a pressure of about 300 pounds. Ragdsdale Lanier was referee for both contests.

Guy Todd Injured

The only unfortunate incident to mar the success of the contests, outside of torn shirts and blistered backs, was a severe injury to Guy Todd's right eye, which was struck by the stiff stream of water during the water fight.

He was taken to Quannah Monday evening, where it was found necessary to take two stitches in his eye ball. It is considered likely that the eye will not be permanently injured and that it will soon be back to normal.

Five Dollars Given

At the conclusion of the water carnival, Dave Sollis dropped five roosters from the top of the court house. A tag was attached to one leg of each rooster which entitled the person catching it to both the rooster and a dollar bill.

One of the roosters lost its head and many feathers in the mad scramble that ensued when it landed among a group of boys. The final result was that the tag torn to shreds was presented co-operatively by two boys who divided the prize.

Those receiving the dollar bills in this feature were: Essell McGuire, Frank Meason, Murphy Sollis, Lawrence Johnson, and Melton Connell-Clois Porter (co-operative).

ONEAL ISSUES

STATEMENT IN SENATE RACE

Senator Ben G. Oneal of Wichita Falls, who is serving his first term in the Senate, and who some time ago announced his candidacy for the democratic nomination for a second term, asks The News to give his statement hereinafter to the people of the 23rd Senatorial District composed of Foard, Hardeman, Knox, Wichita, Wilbarger, Young, Archer, Clay and Baylor counties.

Senator Oneal, in the comparatively short time he has served in the State Senate has attained recognition as one of the able members of that body. He is chairman of the committee on Constitutional Amendments, vice-chairman of the committee on Stock and Stock Raising and of the committee on Public Lands and Land Office, and is a member of seven other committees, including the committee on State Affairs to which more important legislation is referred than to any other committee, and the committee on State Highways and Motor Traffic.

Senator Oneal was selected by the State Senate both for the year 1933 and for the year 1934 to represent that body in the Interstate Legislative Assembly, a conference composed of a member of the Senate and a member of the House of Representatives of each State Legislature. He is also a member of the Interstate Commission on Conflicting Taxation, a commission created by the Interstate Legislative Assembly for the purpose of making a study of the burden of the double taxation placed upon the people and the industries of the country by the Federal Government and the State Governments.

Senator Oneal has been one of the outstanding advocates of economy in the Senate; however, he believes in liberal support of the public schools.

He was one of the first members of the Legislature to begin work for court reform and particularly for the reform of procedure in criminal cases, which will make swifter and more certain and less expensive to the taxpayers the conviction and punishment of criminals.

Senator Oneal has represented solely the interest of the people of his district and of the State. He has taken no retainer's fees and other employment from any utility or from any other corporation or concern interested in pending legislation. He favors requiring all members of the Legislature to divulge their connection with and employment by any corporation or individual interested in pending legislation.

Through a member of the Legislature, Senator Oneal has not hesitated between sessions to give his time at his own expense to finding out the needs of the district, and keeps well informed on the conditions of the 23rd Senatorial District.

The people of Crowell remember appreciatively his work in getting passed in the Senate the Moffett House Bill under the terms of which money was procured for the building of the excellent gymnasium here.

Senator Oneal's statement follows: Any person who has been a member of the Legislature and asks again to be returned to that body should be able to point to some accomplishments as a member of the Legislature which commend him to the consideration of the voters for such position. And while I ask for nomination for a second term based upon my record as your Senator, and not upon any single issue or single vote in the Senate, I desire to call your attention to some of the bills that I have been the author of or sponsored or have supported in the Senate during the comparatively short time that I have been serving there:

Economy in Government Without Reducing State Support of Public Free Schools

I have stood for economy in government and helped to reduce the general appropriation $14,000,000.00, but with this reduction in the cost of government I believe in keeping the per capita apportionment for the public schools up to the $16.00 per student. I also favor and voted for liberal appropriations for rural schools more nearly to equalize the advantages of the children in the distant rural sections with those in the larger schools. I opposed a heavy cut in the appropriation for the work of the County Agents and Home Demonstration Agents, believing that the money thus appropriated gives real returns to the State of Texas for the amount involved. These policies I shall continue.

Tax Relief

I am the author of and have supported a number of bills seeking to afford tax relief, some of which I give below.

I am the author of the substitute bill in the Senate giving the auto owners until the 31st of March to pay their auto license fee each year. This law allowed the hard-pressed auto owner this year to pay his license fee as late as March 31st without penalty, and provided that the payment for this year covered fifteen months, that is, to April 1st, 1935.

I am the author of the split tax bill which permits the owner of property to pay his ad valorem taxes in two installments if he so desires, but lets him pay all at one time, as heretofore, if he prefers. I supported the bill allocating 1c of the 4c gasoline tax to the fund to pay off the county and district road bond indebtedness incurred for money used to build the highways that were taken over by the State of Texas.

The effect of this law is to lower the amount each county has to raise by taxation for road purposes. In Foard County it lowers the amount annually approximately $20,701.02.

I voted for and supported the resolution submitting to the people the constitutional amendment exempting family homesteads from all State taxes up to $3,000.00 assessed valuation, which was adopted by a vote of the people; also the constitutional amendment combining the office of Tax Assessor and Tax Collector, and I sponsored in the Senate the bill combining the two offices under this constitutional amendment. This is another matter of economy.

Reform of Criminal Procedure and Apprehension of Criminals

Some time ago it became apparent to me that the criminal situation in Texas is such that reform in criminal procedure is imperatively necessary, and that the handling of the whole criminal problem needs methods of greater efficiency. In March, 1933, during the Regular Session that year, I and Senator Collie of Eastland, working together, introduced eight bills all of which had for their purpose reforming the code of criminal procedure to the end that criminals may be brought more swiftly to trial; that the punishment meted out to them may be more certain; and that there may be fewer reversals of convictions and thereby more expense saved to the taxpayers. We succeeded in getting favorable reports from the Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence on all of these bills but by reason of the large number of bills on the calendar these could not be reached for final passage.

Again during the called session of thirty days this last February, when the Governor by message had opened the way for the consideration of reform of criminal procedure, Senator Collie and I, (this time joined by three other Senators), introduced again the eight bills. And again we procured a favorable report from the Committee on Criminal Jurisprudence. The shortness of the called session after the Governor submitted the question prevented the consideration of all but one of the bills. That one was passed by a vote of 24 out of the 31 Senators, but in the House it was defeated by some members who were opposed to the bill.

Not only does the Code of Criminal Procedure need reforming but the method of apprehension and identification of criminals should be strengthened. The Associated Press in September, 1933, carried a notice that I would propose a bill calling for the establishment of a combined State Bureau of Criminal Identification and Detection, to be placed under the supervision of an expert in matters of criminology and to be given the support of all law enforcement agencies in the State, including the State Highway Patrol, Texas Rangers, Sheriffs and constables and city police; and providing for close connection to be maintained with the Federal Bureau of Identification of other States. This improvement can be made at practically no additional expense by using existing governmental agencies.

The called sessions are limited by the Constitution to thirty days and the two since that announcement have been crowded with many measures and this has not been submitted to the Legislature, and for that I have not heretofore introduced into this matter and such bills for passage.

The criminal conditions of the State have become such that I believe that the reforms we have made in the next regular session of the Legislature. The demands of the people for better protection of the criminal element have become so insistent since Collie and I began work on

Advertisement for Seiberling tires with text: 'The eyes of the road beneath your car are blind to trick phrases, pretty colors and exaggerated claims—only facts count in the constant struggle between speeding rubber and grinding concrete. Saying that a tire will not blow out—that it is three or four times safer—that it is "the marvel of the tire world" may tickle the vanity of the bullyhoo artist, but unfortunately you cannot ride with safety, economy or satisfaction on bullyhoo. When a tire blows out or fails long before it should, it is poor consolation to remember that it was supposed to be burst-proof and three or four times safer. Seiberling tires are built to wear well—not road well. They reflect in mileage, safety and economy the fact that F. A. Seiberling has been building good tires since 1908. Old phrases make good reading but not F. A. Seiberling says—"You'll go farther on facts." Come in and let us show you visible proof of the superiority of Seiberling Air Cooled tires—the only tires with two anti-skid treads that grip and protect to the final mile.'

WHY A COMMUNITY NEWSPAPER?

Theodore Roosevelt was once asked, during a friendly discussion of relative value, to name three things which he would consider most essential to his welfare should he be marooned on an uninhabited island.

The fact that his home-town newspaper came second in importance to his family speaks volumes for that institution and it is not altogether strange that a person with Roosevelt's perception of values should make this choice.

The community newspaper is essentially a serial history and biography, combined, of the people and events in the territory which it serves.

His appeal is not so much one of "better bargains" and "cut prices" as it is of friendship, cemented by years of pleasant and constructive community association.

It is the function of the community newspaper to direct and to further the cultural, educational and spiritual life of its community, in addition to the dissemination of news.

The community newspaper occupies a traditional place in the existence of its home town parallel in importance to the school and the church.

By close adherence to a policy which is dictated by a philosophy peculiar to rural society, the community newspaper has come to be regarded as an indispensable part of the rural civic plan.

Liberty is that priceless boon which gives everyone the right to mind everybody else's business.

THE IMMORTAL FIFTY-SIX

Fifty-six members of the Continental Congress signed the Declaration of Independence after its adoption on July 4, 1776, and of these daring patriots it has been said that "not one of the signers ever fell from the high estate to which that great act had elevated him."

Among the 56 were many of the notable figures of the early history of the United States. Two of them, Adams and Jefferson, reached the presidency.

The signers included 34 lawyers, 13 farmers, nine merchants, five physicians, two mechanics, one clergyman, one mason and one surveyor.

To the wisdom, courage and patriotism of these immortal 56, who declared our independence and made heroic sacrifices in its behalf, the existence of the nation is largely due.

THE PASSION PLAY

Many thousands of tourists will flock to Oberammergau, Germany, this summer to witness the world-famous Passion Play, which has been performed in that humble mountain village at intervals for 300 years.

According to tradition, when the town was menaced by the plague in 1334 the village made a vow to give a play every 10 years depicting scenes pertaining to the life and death of Christ if they were spared.

Usually the Passion Play is presented on years whose number is divisible by 10—1900, 1910, 1920, 1930, and so on—but an exception is made this year in order to commemorate the 300th anniversary of the villagers' vow.

Each performance is given in day time, from 8 in the morning until 6 in the afternoon, with an intermission of two hours at noon.

Considerable interest on the part of Americans is manifested in the person of Fraulein Klara Mayer, who plays the role of Mary Magdalene this year, because she has lived in the United States and expects to marry and make her permanent home in Washington this fall, after the close of the Passion Play season.

If the old-time humorists could come back to earth about the only thing they would find still being used would be their own jokes.

OUR QUEER LANGUAGE

In a plea for greater consistency, a spelling reformer has called attention to a few of the many vagaries displayed in English spelling and pronunciation.

The sound of long "a," for example, is represented in many different ways, as in lady, ai in rail, eign in reign, ay in pay, ei in veil, ea in they, eye in obeyed, ea in great, oa in goal, au in gauge, ag in champagne, aig in campaign, aigh in straight and ai in wait.

Other sounds are represented by an almost equal variety of spellings. Words pronounced alike have different meanings, such as right-rite-write-wright, to-two-too, oh-owe, and many others.

These peculiarities have to do merely with orthography. When the other innumerable inconsistencies of the language are considered, the wonder is that anyone ever learns to speak and write English correctly.

GROUND BUNDLES AND HEADS MAKE BEST GAINS

BENJAMIN, Texas, June 16.—More than double the gain per acre resulted from feeding ground bundles instead of whole bundles. Nearly double the return per acre of feed when bundles or heads were ground for feeding.

These results were developed in a feeding test just finished at the League Ranch, at Benjamin, Knox County, Texas.

Raises Calves and Feeds

The League Ranch is one of the most efficiently operated outfits in West Texas. Calves bred there have been going into feed lots in Texas, Kansas, and the Corn Belt States and making quick and low cost gains.

Some of the High Quality Calves Finished on Ground Maize Heads at the League Ranch, Benjamin, Texas

Jack Idol, Manager of the League Ranch, is interested in selling calves at a profit. He raises his feeds also, however, and plans to feed out part or all of his calf crop, depending upon the feeder market in the fall.

Makes Test With Ground Feeds

Last fall, Mr. Idol's attention was called to a feed mill similar to one that he had been using, but with a new improvement on it. This made it possible to reduce bundle feed and separate the grain from this roughage. The roughage part was chopped only, while the grain was ground. All the feed was then mixed together.

This new type of feed mill was of special interest to Mr. Idol because it also fills his trench silos without requiring any changes on it. Mr. Idol decided to run a feeding test to determine the improvement made in bundle feeds and heads, by chopping and grinding them for his cattle.

Progressive "42" Party

Miss Mattie Bond entertained quite a number of her friends Thursday night with Progressive "42."

On the arrival, the guests were seated at tables and a most enthusiastic game ensued. The game being over, it was found that Tom Haggard had won the first prize, a book, and the "booby" prize fell to Clarence Self. Other interesting features of the occasion were contests, a cat contest and guessing contest. Miss Minnie Strickland won the lucky prize and Carl Thacker the "booby."

After the games the guests were ushered into the dining room where they were served with pineapple sherbert and cake, which was delicious and refreshing indeed.

The music, both vocal and instrumental, by Miss Lala Drew of Clarendon was rendered in a charming manner and much enjoyed.

This evening was one long to be remembered. Those present: Misses Cope, Wilkerson, Strickland, Minnie Strickland, Lancaster, Nelson, Thacker, Essie Thacker, Messrs. Lawhorn, Bell, Thacker, Clark, Crowell, Self, Haggard, Beverly, Bond and Klepper.

BOOZERS' BLOOD TEST

Hard sledding faces drunken drivers in Germany, according to a report from Berlin, where for the first time a court has officially recognized the Widmark test, which makes it possible to determine with exactness the amount of alcohol in the blood.

The test was applied to a young student who had "borrowed" a car for a little spin, in the course of which he knocked down and seriously injured two pedestrians. The medical expert making the test told the judge that the culprit had imbibed a quantity of alcohol equal to that contained in nine drinks of cognac and nine glasses of beer—the assumption being that the beer, in accordance with "an international custom," had been taken as a chaser.

The defendant, also adhering to an international custom, strenuously denied having imbibed to excess, but upon assurance by the expert that "the blood test never lies," the judge imposed a sentence of one month's imprisonment, which was a more severe penalty than even the prosecutor expected.

In passing sentence the learned judge declared that "drunken drivers must be sent to jail under any circumstances," a dictum with which most persons will readily agree. Perhaps we Americans might learn something about handling the drunken speeder problem from our German contemporaries.

GEORGE BACKUS ASKS VOTES IN CONGRESS RACE

In Congress Race

GEORGE BACKUS

To the voters of Foard County and the 13th Congressional District: When I entered the campaign for congressman two years ago I gave a rather detailed outline of my younger life. I mentioned the fact that my first schooling was in a back-woods country school and my final schooling was in a seminary where I swept floors and tended fires for my tuition. After that I worked as a hired hand on a farm for some years; from that, I went to employment in town in a factory for about eleven years. In 1901 I moved to Vernon—a young man with my little family—to make our home. There I entered upon a small business requiring much personal hard labor and strict economy for twenty odd years. As many of the constituents of the District will recall my more detailed statement of two years ago, this is all I shall say in this respect, except, I do want to state that I am glad I served the youngest and strongest years of my manhood in the performance of hard work, as I believe that experience would be worth much to me and you as your representative in the National Congress.

Two years ago I offered a constructive program in the interest of the people. My many years of political observance brought to my attention the fact that all our panics and depressions, for the past fifty years at least, have been the direct result of high money. Some will doubtless remember that in my campaign two years ago I spoke in favor of our government leaving the gold standard—of bimetalism and inflation as a necessary move for financial relief; I also advocated guaranty of bank deposits, while my opponents did not mention these points. This was before anyone knew who might lead our national government at this time. Now, as it is a fact that we are of the gold standard and the administration has adopted the bank deposit guaranty and the silver bill measures, and our country is on a much better business basis, was it a mere guess or pipe-dream of mine that such a revolutionary program as I proposed in my campaign two years ago was needed? Or do you believe that my experience in political history led me to see that these two major acts in our national government were necessary? Some of my friends who thought I was wrong two years ago have recently voluntarily told me I was right on these points.

I am in absolute sympathy with our President's program of keeping our navy equal to the greatest. Some think we should be adding more strength to our army and auxiliaries of our defense, but I am sure this will be duly taken care of when necessary by those in command and as our President may indicate. With our distance from the major warring nations of the world, I do not believe it necessary to hurriedly rush millions and billions of dollars for defense purposes more than is being provided at this time.

In connection with war procedure by our country, if ever again, I favor taking all profit out of war. I believe our government should commandeer all war manufacturing plants as soon as Congress declares war, and a nominal interest only be paid for the use of same. When this is done, the less apt is our country to be drawn into war. It is the mercenary greed for staggering war profits by the big munition profiteers that clanks the bells of war spirit throughout our country occasionally. I heartily favor a small old age pension by the Federal Government for all who deserve it, same not to conflict in any way with such pensions by the states. I am pleased to observe that our President has under consideration unemployment insurance and am quite sure he will perfect a request upon our next Congress in this regard, and I hope to be able to co-operate with his plan for such a bill as your representative.

I favor outlawing the professional and paid lobbyist from the Hall of Congress. They constantly pull and tug at the members, interfering with their work and presence in the chamber, that they may gain their ofttime nefarious ends. I strongly favor amending the Constitution of our country, making it a long term sentence in Federal prison for any Congressman or U. S. Senator to accept a retainer fee from, or represent, any person, firm, or corporation. The ex-service men have no stronger friend than I. Two of our sons enlisted in the World War—one in the army, the other in the navy. I favor paying the adjusted compensation certificates as quickly as possible and the remittance of all interest now accrued against that part of the bonus that has been paid. I will unflinchingly, as your representative, fight for elimination of this interest.

As indicated two years ago, I favor holders of notes and mortgages on homes and lands paying taxes on such paper, and that homesteaders, farmers, and stockmen pay taxes only on such equity as they may have in mortgaged property of all kinds.

I am led to believe that our government should stop issuing non-taxable securities and bonds;

Savage and Merrill To Attend Ten-Day Red Cross School

Rev. and Mrs. O. L. Savage, Rev. and Mrs. Paul J. Merrill and son left Sunday night for Utah. They will return to Crowell in about three weeks.

Rev. Savage, representing Crowell, and Rev. Merrill, representing Henrietta, will attend the Red Cross life-saving school that will be conducted ten hours each day for ten days at a point near Salt Lake City. Upon their return to their respective cities, these men will give demonstrations in their communities of the life-saving knowledge that they have gained.

that holders of our government paper should pay a tax on it; that we should issue currency under rigid statutory control, with which to pay off the outstanding bonds, thus stopping the paying of interest on them—this currency being subject to recall and cancellation as may become expedient. This is a very important point in economic government that I shall study more fully.

GEORGE BACKUS.

reforms that practically all the candidates for Governor and some of other state offices are now advocating these reforms.

Regulation of Utilities

I favor the regulation of utilities. Ever since I entered the Senate I have supported proposed laws for that purpose. I am taking space to mention some but not all of these bills.

It was on my motion in the Senate Committee on State Affairs that Senate Bill 439, by Senator Loy, (not a member of the committee), was reported favorably to the Senate with recommendation that it pass. This bill had for its purpose giving better regulation of gas utilities. I supported the bill in the Senate. It passed both houses but was vetoed by the Governor.

I procured on my motion in the Senate Affairs Committee a favorable report on Senate Bill 50 by Senator Blackett, (not a member of the committee), and favored the passage of the bill. It was passed by the Senate but killed in a committee of the House of Representatives. This bill gave fuller regulation of gas utilities; and particularly gave aid to small incorporated towns and unincorporated towns as to gas rates.

I supported and urged in the Senate passage of a House Bill having for its purpose prohibiting the ready-to-serve charge by gas utilities. I also supported in the Committee on State Affairs and tried to get a favorable report on passage in Senate a House Bill making pipelines transporting natural gas Common Carriers, and regulating them.

At the last called session I sponsored in the Senate House Bill No. 95 by Tennyson, for the better regulating utilities, and giving small towns and villages further powers over utilities, and particularly giving protection to towns owning their utilities. The Senate over my objection radically amended the bill. It went to Conference Committee between the Senate and House. I was one of the State Conferees. In the Conference Committee we restored the House Bill and I then procured the adoption of the House Bill in the Senate. This bill the Governor vetoed.

Old Age Pension

President Roosevelt in a message to Congress recently said that he is looking for a sound means which he can recommend to the next Congress to provide security against several great disturbing factors in life, among them destitution in old age, saying he believes this insurance should be national in scope but that there should be a maximum of co-operation between the States and Federal Government to the end that all the destitute aged may be properly cared for.

Oil

I stated in my announcement for the Senate when I was elected that the oil business is one of the main industries that has built up this section; that the condition of the oil industry affects almost the entire citizenship of the district. That condition is as true today as then. And I shall continue in the future as in the past to favor and vote for such measures in the Senate as will be to the best interest of that industry.

Prohibition Amendment

I shall vote to submit to the people of Texas a constitutional amendment for the repeal of statewide prohibition. If this amendment is adopted I shall favor careful limitations by law upon the method of handling or selling intoxicating liquors to the end that nothing like the old-time saloon may return to Texas.

Publicity of Employment of Legislators

I favor a law requiring all legislative candidates to make under oath and file with their application for a place on the ballot and publish a statement of their corporate connections and employment; and further requiring each member of the Legislature to show under oath any and all of his employments either on a retainer fee or other compensation by any corporation, firm or person, interested in pending legislation.

I am not employed by nor connected with any corporation. I have not since I have been a member of the Senate received a retainer's fee or been employed in any capacity by any utility or other

THE BOOK

... the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Four Great Treasures by BRUCE BARTON

THE UNFORGETTABLE SENTENCE

A few weeks ago two young men desiring to enter the Christian ministry were asked, "Do you believe in the Virgin Birth of Jesus?" Upon replying that they did not know how to answer the question, nor regard the answer as vital to their work as ministers, they were rejected.

Bruce Barton

It is no part of the purpose of our little book to deal with controversial subjects, but in approaching the life of Jesus we may perhaps be permitted to point out that the question of whether He was or was not born of a virgin did not seem very important to two of the writers of the Gospels. Mark makes no mention of it. John ignores it. Paul does not once refer to it, and if Jesus Himself was much concerned there is no evidence of that fact. When He was assembling His disciples, He called a certain Philip of Bethsaida:

Philip findeth Nathanael, and said unto him, We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

If this assertion on the part of Philip was a mistake Jesus did not rebuke it nor refuse Philip and Nathanael as disciples because of it. Indeed, one astonishing fact about His life and the doctrines which have been built up about it is that most of the points on which the bitter controversies have been waged were apparently regarded by Jesus Himself as of lesser significance, and some of no significance whatever.

How many cruel debates have arisen over the question of His miracles. He was often reluctant to perform them, and was so fearful that He might be advertised abroad as a wonder-worker and thus have the real significance of His teaching blurred that He frequently urged those whom He had healed to "go and tell no man."

The question of baptism has split Christian communions. Jesus, when His success began to bring great crowds to Him so that His disciples were baptizing more than John the Baptist, ceased Himself to baptize anybody.

When therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John, (though Jesus Himself baptized not, but His disciples,) He left Judaea, and departed again into Galilee.

The question of forms and ceremonies and revisions of prayer-books occupies the time and discussion of many church assemblies. But there is no record that Jesus ever prayed in public. The one prayer which He gave to His disciples is the simplest imaginable and consists of sixty-six words. As for the place and manner and form of worship, He dismissed the whole subject with one great and unforgettable sentence.

"God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth."

We had the best Bible School attendance last Sunday in a long time. Bro. Merrill brought us two fine and inspiring messages. The church board met for a short session. We believe that progress is being made. May we make that progress steadily greater as we move forward, by each one more definitely and genuinely consecrating his life to the Master's cause. The Bible School is a most potent force for the development to righteous living in the lives of men—may we use it to the utmost.

Services at Thalia next Sunday, both morning and night, (11 a. m. and 8:30 p. m.) Our revival began at Thalia July 15, with Rev. T. M. Johnston of Wellington, Texas, to do the preaching. Bro. Johnston is a former pastor of this charge and needs no introduction to the people of this community.

On Sunday night, July 8, we'll have our Layman's program at Thalia which will be directed by S. J. Boman and those on the program will be from both churches.

The prayer meetings preparatory to the revival are increasing in interest. If you are not attending you are missing a spiritual feast. We meet under the stars, both on the church lawn on Wednesdays and in the homes Tuesday evenings. Will you not join your prayers and desires with ours for a great outpouring of God's grace and a spiritual growth among us while those without hope seek and find the Lord satisfying to their souls?

Our first evening service in some time was larger in attendance than for a long while. Morning worship at 11; evening at 8:30.

"Sacrament" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 8. The Golden Text is: "The bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world" (John 6:33.)

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock; if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me" (Revelation 3:20.)

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Jesus established his church and maintained his mission on a spiritual foundation of Christ-healing. He taught his followers that his religion had a divine Principle, which would cast out error and heal both the sick and the sinning. He claimed no intelligence, action, nor life separate from God. Despite the persecution this brought upon him, he used his divine power to save men both bodily and spiritually" (page 136.)

Conservation

I expect to continue both as an official and as an individual citizen my best efforts toward saving and bettering for the younger and the coming generations the fishing and hunting and other outdoor recreations we have enjoyed, and conserving for them our natural resources.

I am deeply appreciative of the confidence the voters of the 23rd Senatorial District expressed in me when they elected me to the Senate of Texas.

In campaigning nine counties it will be impossible for me to see everyone, but whether or not I get to see you, I assure you and every one of you that I will appreciate your support and influence for a second term.

The Family DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

PREVAILING TROUBLES

I do not remember within my more than forty years of practice when so many patients came to me with ailments of the nervous system. Many have been honestly alarmed at threats of paralysis, great cause of these complaints and "breakdowns" is—the actual nervous depression.

Now, nervous disorders are either organic or functional; that in mind—for there is all the difference in the world between two. An organic disease is always the more serious. Functional disorders, give rise to many disturbing symptoms, but they are generally curable, if the patient can avail himself of the necessary for a cure.

Sometimes rest is a very expensive treatment. I meet many families, broken down from worry over the mortgage. This sole earner of the family is down and out from simple exhaustion. To come stops when he stops; unless he rests his worries continue.

No matter what your symptoms, consult your physician. Let me say here: in most functional nerve-diseases the chief agency for mental and physical rest. A vacation, that takes you away from a arena that holds your over-taxing worries. Go on the creek with a pin-hook. Get out among the birds and wild flowers. If you have been an office man; get out of doors—work in the garden; these things are as good for you as a trip that costs many times as much.

Organic diseases have definite symptoms. They have been studied in long years past. Your functional troubles are often nearly so severe as they seem.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

Asa Relies on God.

Lesson for July 8th. 2 Chron-icles 14-16.

Golden Text: Hebrews 13:6.

Asa was the third king of Judah after the disastrous disruption that had split in two the mighty commonwealth of Solomon. He was a resourceful military leader for he won a smashing victory over a great army that advanced upon him from Egypt. He also played the treacherous game of diplomacy. His rival, Baasha, king of Israel, launched a heavy offensive against Judah, fortifying Ramah, only six miles north of Jerusalem. Asa, in despair, sent the Temple treasures of gold and silver to Benhadad, the Syrian king, as a bribe to secure his intervention.

But Asa's primary claim to our consideration is his religious zeal. He made a sincere effort to abolish heathen abominations, and especially the prostitutes found in association with every Canaanite temple. He even did not even hesitate to depose his queen-mother, guilty of idolatry, from her influential position in the court. "And Asa did that which was good and right in the eyes of the Lord his God."

Such reliance upon God is not characteristic of our own time. The typical modern cherishes the incredible doctrine that man, not God, is the mainspring of the world. He has fallen into the habit of supposing that there is nothing beyond himself. This philosophy is called humanism. At its best it idealizes the powers of man, and calls for their full cultivation. At its worst it defies man, making him the equal of God.

There are many indications, however, that humanism is on the wane. It is proving to be, as Dr. Fosdick predicted, "a tentative makeshift." The ignoring of God on the part of the humanists, and their consequent refusal to come to grips with the great central mysteries of life and death, is an arrogant pose. Thoughtful people are aware of the shallowness of such teaching. And so, like Asa of old, they are turning once again to God.

First Installment

It was not real. It was a lovely brittle glass, and cracking and splintering all over.

The girl in the cream-colored dress tried to realize it in all its implications, tried to see through the bristling force which had closed in on her.

It didn't happen like that; simply didn't. To some, perhaps, who did things that invited her to live on excitement and pleasures. Not to girls who led healthy lives and did the pleasant, agreeable things, were thrilled to pieces over work and the glorious chance to do it. It could not happen to her.

What was she going about it?

The girl kept haunted young in the road ahead, mechanical and turned, hunting frantically for a way out. The speeder needle trembled at sixty, slid back to forty-five. She did not drive too fast, and risk stopped for speeding. Of all that was she going to do?

The first time the firm little wheel slackened and she steadied them resolutely. The roadster moved softly on. The wind that brushed her face was sharp with chill and damp with the moisture of the Pacific. Long fingers reached out for her and dimmed; a nondescript car passed, its driver sending a glance at the smart roadster with the pretty girl at the wheel.

The air on her cheek was noticeable, bringing its own message. A thin fog was creeping in from the sea. Presently it would thicken, a fleecy white blanket, and she would be driving in a dark bungalow, miles back of the shore, hiding it, shrouding it, hiding it, shrouding it and sound.

There were no lights in that shadow, to beat through in a haze. She saw it as she last seen it, blanket-window-dark and furtive on its strip sheltered beach. A silhouette against the pale rectangle of a man's silhouette.

Memories came like black wings, swooping down on her. Other things that were said, things she didn't want to think of them. The road curved again. She saw headlights ahead, and her own headlights picked up a motorcycle on one side of the highway, and a man in uniform bent over it. A motorcycle policeman looked up, with a professional eye on the oncoming car.

She wanted to step on the gas and go roaring past him, but she didn't. Somehow she stopped. Somehow she kept her voice cool and natural.

"Any trouble, officer? Can I call up a garage for you—or anything?"

"Why no, lady. Much obliged." The man in uniform was disillusioned and hardboiled, but he smiled appreciatively at the small creature competently offering help. Drivers of speedy cars didn't really waste much grief over a motor stop stalled by the roadster and this was a pretty girl, pretty for this favored strip of the coast, where pretty girls flocked from all over the country. A little thing, with big soft eyes and a red velvet pulled at a gallant angle over a small, dark head. Looked like a nice kid, for all she was tearing around the country alone at this hour of the night. A swell car, too; it must have cost a hatful of money. Later he was to remember that car, and the girl who had driven it.

He swung a sturdy leg over his saddle.

"Better detour inland if you're going far. The fog's getting thick back there. Driving's going to be bad before long."

"Thanks, I'll remember."

She smiled, and the cream-colored roadster slid past him. Fog, and dangerous driving along the coast road. It was so very simple. She had been up and down this road a score of times since the new roadster had been hers. She knew its curves, its grades, its ragged coast line. She knew, now, where she was going. The speedometer needle crept a little higher.

A road appeared, branching obliquely from the main highway. Tall trees marched along each side of it, and a denser planting showed ahead. In the darkness beneath the trees she brought the roadster to a standstill, and let her hands drop from the wheel.

It was lucky that she had remembered this place. So accessible and yet so secluded, with no curious eyes to see the queer preparations that she had to make. . . . Funny how wobbly she felt, now that she could just drop back and let go. . . . It wouldn't do. She must get herself in hand, keep her head clear and her nerve steady.

It was not so easy. She seemed to be two people, and one of them was a sly, persistent imp which hovered close to her ear, flooring and wheedling.

"You're running away! Running away! You've never been a quitter before!"

"But I've never," she found herself arguing, "been in such a ghastly jam before."

"If you go now, you can't come back. You'll be giving up everything. All this that you've worked for. You can't ever go back to that."

"I know. That's all finished. . . . She shook herself impatiently and swung the door open with a vigorous jab."

The pocket of her light sports coat bumped clumsily against her very stiff for a moment, with an odd, arrested look on her face. Then she thrust her hand into the overloaded pocket and drew out the thing which had weighed it down.

Starlight had all but vanished before the stealing mist, but even in that obscurity it was a bright and lovely trifle, a woman's jeweled bag, extraordinarily full. The strained catch must have been too hastily snapped shut, for it yawned open at a touch, and the bulging contents coaxed into view. Bills, the bag was fairly stuffed with them, high denomination bills, tightly crammed in.

The girl in the red beret stared at it soberly. It seemed to give her no pleasure, not even any particular sense of the risk she ran in carrying such a sum with her, through lonely roads and at all hours of the night. She just let the bag lie there on her open hand, looking at it.

There was a faint aversion in that look. The palm tilted slowly, as though she meant deliberately to let that opulent roll slide to the dust of her feet. Then with the brief grimace of distaste she righted her hand again, thrust the bag deep into the coat pocket and turned, a little blindly, back to the car.

The girl looked very small beside the big car, very young and troubled, yet somehow determined, and every move now was brisk and efficient. A vigorous tug, and a smart traveling case came out of the car—was hidden behind a mass of shrubbery.

"Lucky," she reflected, "that I was all set to stay. . . . If there is any luck in such a miserable snarl as this."

She slipped quickly into her seat again, and the engine's heavy purr cut abruptly into the stillness. The roadster swung smoothly out of the shadowed drive and down toward the highway. The fog had thickened perceptibly and the road was dark, but she drove without lights. Time enough to switch those on. There must be no one who could remember, later, a distant glimpse of flaring lights.

On the last turn she had a good view of the main road in both directions. No dazzle of oncoming lights showed either way, blurring through the fog. She swept out into the highway, and her own came on.

There was no placid strips of beach here; only rough ground and dark rocky headland, now fairly close, now farther away, dropping sheer. About an eighth of a mile beyond there should be a place where it jutted boldly into the sea.

There it was. A queer little tingle went skipping over her as she caught sight of it, vaguely outlined. How much distance would she need? Ten—no, twenty feet before striking the incline. It would be too dangerous beyond that. She brought the car slowly to a standstill. Shut off the engine.

For a moment she sat listening, every nerve alert. There was not a sound, except for the heavy murmur of the sea below. Even though fog might muffle distant sounds, it wasn't dense enough yet to matter. She started the engine again.

Her heart was beating fast as she stepped down. The roadster was pointing at a strange angle. It looked so sleek and beautiful, and she let a hand rest on it softly. This was a shabby trick to play on a good friend, but it had to be done. She would miss it, too. There was no time to be wasted. She stepped up and leaned in, and her hands moved swiftly and competently. She gave a last tug and a hasty glance toward the naked ledge beyond.

The car lurched and started, and left the smooth road with a protesting heave. It was gathering speed. She jumped, staggered for a few steps and fell.

Huddled there on hands and knees, panting but unhurt, she saw the big car strike the slope and go hurtling down. Lurching, with lights flaring toward the empty sea. On the brink it seemed almost to rear back, hung for a split second and flashed down. She saw it turning, and pressed her hands to her ears against the grinding crash of its fall.

The silence that followed was blank and empty. She pulled her hands down shamefacedly and found the palms moist.

"That's done!" she muttered shakily, and got to her feet. Her face was a white patch against the darkness.

She knew that she must hurry away, before some belated motorist came by and saw her. A girl in a red beret had ceased to exist, and her fitting ghost must not be seen. How queer it seemed. . . . There wasn't any such girl any more.

A dusty train jolted steadily through empty country. It was a short train, only three coaches and a baggage car, and the coaches had left their first youth far behind. But this was a branch line, crawling long miles out of the beaten track of the big transcontinentals, and No. Twelve's patrons did not expect the pampered ease of Pullman and dining car.

About midway of the last car a girl sat looking out of the window. The outlook was not particularly interesting, that she should be so absorbed in it. Sand and low bushes, endlessly slipping by. A distant peak. A smear of blue which might be still more distant mountains. Sand, bushes, sand. The girl hadn't seen a house for miles.

The scattered half dozen of her fellow passengers looked at her with undeniable frequency, partly because she was the pleasant thing there was to look at in their whole journey, and partly from a healthy curiosity. Strangers, and particularly strangers as pretty as that, did not often travel on Number Twelve.

The girl felt that friendly scrutiny. She had been restless under any interested glance for days, and it was not merely interest in the harsh waste beyond the window which kept her face so steadily turned that way. She wondered, with a prickle of uneasiness, what newspaper people saw out here.

Newspapers! She turned a little further toward the window, remembering a terrifying, heart-squeezing day when she had last heard them cried on the streets of a big city.

What a morning that had been! The cheerful Saturday crowd thronging the downtown streets, jamming good-naturedly at the crossings; newsboys shouting their wares; people buying them, talking about something that had just happened. Herself among them, feeling curiously unreal as she handed over her pennies, and rather small and quaking as she looked at a front page splashed with headlines and pictures. Her picture. Feeling all chilly and gone inside, even though the face on the front page was so different from that of the girl on the street, with her hair pulled forward in loose, dark waves under a low-brimmed hat. Putting nervous finger tips up to the framing hair, to make sure that it completely hid the uncomfortable strips of adhesive which gave her eyes and eyebrows that long, unfamiliar tilt. Wondering if the tiny pads under her lip were still properly in place, and if they really did change her mouth as much as she had thought—and then passing a long mirror and seeing a queer looking stranger there. Thanking her stars—her one remaining star—that she had learned how to do such things. Hurrying at last to a railroad station, to get as far away as she could before another day came.

In the nearly empty station, with an hour's wait for her train, she had sat in a secluded corner and read the paper from the first page to the last.

It had been rather ghastly. All those pictures of a girl who was supposed to be dead and mustn't ever come back to life again; insets of other people whose lives had touched hers; a snapshot taken from a boat, showing curling waves against a cliff's dark background, black, ragged rocks thrusting out of the water, and sprawled helplessly on one of them the twisted, shattered wreckage of a car.

It was news. There had been several columns about it. Reports, conjectures, interviews. A motorcycle policeman had testified to seeing a young lady in that same roadster and warning her about the thickening fog. No, there had been nothing in the young lady's manner to indicate any suicidal intent.

One thing had puzzled her badly. There had been all this about one roadster found wrecked at the base of a cliff, but not one line in the whole story about the thing she had feared most. How could that be suppressed?

The man across the aisle was saying something to another man several seats back. Everybody here seemed to know everybody else. Perhaps it would have been better, after all, to have buried herself in a big city. One can be lost so quickly in the shifting crowds. But there would be always the tingling expectancy of seeing someone she knew some day, or someone who knew her. In shop or office, in restaurant, or on a crowded street.

She wasn't going to be actually in any town. It was some miles out of this town of Marston, whatever that was like, at the end of a long private road, the agent had admitted. She had named it already. Trail's End. She liked the sound of that. Remoteness. Safety. Home. And work, of course.

Except in the larger cities, electric service was rarely satisfactory before long-distance transmission of electric power was perfected.

Small local plants serving single communities generally lack the variety and volume of demand which enables a larger system, serving a wide area, to operate efficiently.

Nor can small, isolated plants meet sudden demands for more power nearly as readily as the larger system.

The transmission line can deliver larger amounts of power at once without the delay of installing additional equipment. Thus it clears the road for industrial growth.

The present-day industrial progress of small communities is based in a large measure on the ample and economical power supply which resulted when the transmission systems replaced small local plants throughout the nation.

With 2,608 miles of transmission lines, the West Texas Utilities stands ready to render satisfactory service to 159 prosperous cities, towns and communities throughout West Texas—"The Land of Opportunity."

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule . . . and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

This-That, Etc.

By Typo Wrighter

Jupiter Pluvius' name isn't on the Foard County News mailing list, however, he may be like a number of other folks who read The News by borrowing a neighbor's paper, for the way he handled the rain situation First Monday was pretty good evidence that he must keep in fair touch with the local paper.

The following prediction was printed last week: "In connection with the Water Carnival here Trades Day, we predict that old Jupiter Pluvius is going to join the spirit of the occasion and provide a nice rain."

Despite the drought that he is promoting, Mr. Pluvius again proved to be a friend of Typo by doing just what was predicted with the result that the rain that fell in Crowell Monday morning measured .24 of an inch at the official local weather station at the Crowell State Bank.

However, there was not another spot within miles that received as much rain as did the local business section, the site of the "Water Carnival" for Trades Day.

A number of Foard County farmers have registered complaints with this column claiming that it is playing favorites in this rain matter, since Crowell was about the only spot to receive any rain Monday.

In answering these complaints, we will first state that old Jupiter is a mighty tough customer to handle, especially when he is determined to stage a big drought and personally we feel that it was quite an accomplishment (pardon the modesty) to secure as much rain as resulted, although we meant for that rain to not only fall on the site of the "Water Carnival," but over the rest of the county as well, but just remember, we do not always get just what we expect or ask for.

Our negotiations with old Jupiter the time preceding the last one proved successful for the county as a whole, and maybe by calling that incident to mind, some of those feeling we are playing favorites will change their mind.

Last fall the inch and half rain that fell over the county on Nov. 2, after nearly two months of drought, came on the very day that had been predicted for it about 8 days prior to the downpour. Old Jup almost failed us entirely, however, on the prediction last August that we would have a wet fall. It so happened that the fall was about the driest in our history.

One of Mr. Pluvius' relatives, Jack Frost, has proven a 100 per cent friend to this column. Early last fall we predicted 3 weeks prior to his arrival that the white-bearded old gent would reach

Plow and Plan Now For Fall Gardens

College Station.—With gardens cut short in a wide spread drought it is of unusual importance this summer to plow up garden plots and keep them in good tilth in anticipation of rains which will make fall gardens possible, garden demonstrators throughout the state are being told by J. E. Rosborough, extension horticulturist at Texas A. & M. College. If weeds are kept down and the garden land kept in good condition to catch and hold moisture it should be fairly easy to get good early fall garden stuff, he thinks.

Granting rains come, fall gardens may be planted in early August in South Texas, and in late August in all the rest of Texas. The most dependable early fall garden plantings are onion sets, Swiss chard, Irish potatoes, pinto beans and radishes.

A method of saving much of the tomato fertilizer applied this past spring is offered by Mr. Rosborough. About 500 to 600 pounds of fertilizer were applied per acre on the average, he says, and 30 per cent to 40 per cent of this remains available in the ground. If the land is not planted fall and winter rains will leach out the fertilizer and it will all be lost. He suggests that farmers plow up and destroy the dried tomato vines to clear the land and prevent disease and insect infestation, and when rains come plant in early fall to adapted crops. The surest truck crops are Irish potatoes, beans, and fall roasting ears. If rains come very early, sweet potatoes will make a good crop.

Foard on Oct. 23, two weeks earlier than his customary arrival. The result was that Mr. Frost really arrived on Oct. 23, and was nice enough to come in such a way as not to damage anything.

After giving some attention to the matter, we plan to come forth with another rain prediction next week.

trades Day Sidelights

Although he was with the losing team, we still contend that Joe Ben Roberts was the individual "hero" of the day. After all of his other teammates had been forced from the water fight, Joe Ben alone remained in the thick of the melee. Though flat of his back, he grabbed the hose and continued to defy five others until Referee Lanier ended the contest.

We couldn't help but compare Joe Ben's performance with that of old Peta Nocona when that famous Indian chief alone defied even unto death, a whole group of Texas Rangers at the Battle of Pease River in which his white wife, Cynthia Ann Parker, was restored to civilization.

Farmers of the Vivian community in town Monday contend that one of their fellow citizens, Chas. Reynolds, is the champion "big predictor" of West Texas. After correctly telling Hartley Easley a few weeks ago that his sow would bring birth to seven pigs, Reynolds again hit the nail on the head when a sow on the J. Wooley farm farrowed eleven pigs last Saturday, just as he had predicted.

Barbecue Tourney Won by Billington Golfers This Week

With a 11 to 11 tie resulting after the first matches in the annual July 4th barbecue tournament of the Spring Lake Country Club, it was necessary for an extra four-hole tie breaker to decide which team would entertain members of the other team and their families with a barbecue on the evening of Independence Day.

As a result of the extra four-hole tie breaker, the team captained by J. T. Billington was victorious in the tournament. In the four-hole Tuesday afternoon, Billington and R. D. Oswald, Sr., defeated Captain Raymond Burrow and Alton Bell.

Members of the two teams were as follows: Team No. 1, Raymond Burrow, captain; T. S. Haney, Alton Bell, Grady Magee, Alyn Spencer, Fred Rennels, Lee Black, Ernest Spears, Ernest King, H. Court House Lawn Improved; Memorial Beauty Increased

Work is now taking place to put the court house lawn in first class condition. All bare spots are spaded and planted in grass and thoroughly irrigated. Relief labor is being used for the work and is being supervised for the county by Elmer Briscoe.

In addition to providing wider streets, the cutting down of the court house lawn 30 feet on the north and west sides eliminates that much of the lawn that has to be maintained.

The local war memorial, consisting of the soldier and sailor statues and the large German cannon is placed to better advantage since it now occupies the northwest corner of the square next to the street. The memorial was purposely set back from the corner of the square over years ago because it was felt some time in the future the would be cut down.

The large flag pole that has been removed as a result of cutting down the lawn has been repurposed as a monument and is being used for the work and is being supervised for the county by Elmer Briscoe.

A movement is under way in Kansas to give state highway patrolmen additional authority to increase their number as a deterrent.
