Irrigation Systems Operating on Farms In Rayland Section

Irrigation systems are now being operated on a number of farms in the Rayland community.

H. T. Faughn's system is the largest one to be installed in that section and water for irrigating over fifteen acres of land comes from two sources, the largest being from a well operated by an electric pump. Many farms in the Rayland section are connected with the West Texas Utilities Co.'s high line from Vernon to Thalia.

Mr. Faughn is also using water from a spring north of Rayland, lifting it fifty feet up the hill into a concrete reservoir through the use of a hydraulic ram, a device which utilizes the water falling on it as power for forcing water to the reservoir. The well operated by electricity is in an old gravel pit and is 8 feet in diameter to a depth of 12 feet. From that depth on down to the clay, he has an 18-inch perforated pipe which is 6 feet long.

A few weeks ago five acres of onions were set out on the farm and are being irrigated. Ten acres of sweet potatoes will also be irrigated this year.

Two years ago Mr. Faughn secured the old R. D. German place adjoining Rayland and now has one of the most modernly equipped farms in the county. Forty-six acres in cultivation.

Mr. Faughn, who operated a garage and filling station at Leckett for three years, made use of his mechanical ability in installing the irrigation system and in improving his farm home, a 5-room structure with a 2-room basement, having its own pressure water system, sewage system, electric lights, gas and all other conveniences to be found in a modern city home.

A. T. Beazley, a pioneer on irrigation in the Rayland section, plans to irrigate about 15 acres of sweet and Irish potatoes and peanuts this year. He will use a gasoline engine in pumping water that has been impounded in a lake beneath a bluff leading to Pease River. This water comes from springs. The lake has been enlarged this year by increasing the size of the dam.

Five years ago Mr. Beazley demonstrated the success of irrigation by raising three hundred or more bushels of sweet potatoes to the acre.

The most extensive irrigation project in Foard County is operated by McLarty Farm Products Co. on their Rayland farm. The company is composed of S. W. McLarty and sons, Frank and Shirley. In the spring of 1931 they started irrigating various kinds of truck products from two wells that had been put down during the winter to a depth of 42 feet.

May 9th—High School Edition—May 9th "The Best Yet"

It is the honest opinion of The News staff that one of the finest issues ever put out by this paper will go into the mails on Thursday, May 9, for at that time a 24-page tabloid "Crowell High School" edition will be inserted with each regular issue of The News for that week.

Included in this special section will be individual pictures of Seniors, teachers, board members and P. T. A. leaders; group pictures of classes—Junior, Sophomore and Freshman; group pictures of athletic teams—football, basketball, track and volleyball; group pictures of the band, pep squad, choral club, district meet winners, one-act play cast and others.

With the exception of a leather back, this edition will serve the same purpose as does a high school annual costing $2.50 to $3.00 each, yet it will go to all regular subscribers without additional cost. However, extra issues will sell for 20 cents each.

This edition will be printed on regular "annual type" book finish paper, which is over four times as costly as ordinary news print paper.

It will have considerably more school features and information than are found in the average high school annual. We feel sure that the school, town and community will be proud of it, for the edition in a way will serve as a mirror portraying the entire school system. Naturally, the edition will necessarily be good if it accurately portrays the school system that boasts one of the greatest all-around records of achievement of any high school in the State. We believe that this edition will really do justice to our unusually fine school here.

ADVERTISERS are urged to submit their copy this week, since The News staff is faced with a tremendous task in completing this special edition by May 9. Practically all local business institutions have been approached for ads and have readily responded in making this issue possible. Due to their absence from the city or for some other reason, we have been unable to see a few prospective advertisers. If you want an ad and have not been seen by a News representative, then let us know of that fact.

The Crowell High School news staff is co-operating in a splendid manner with this edition.

The present operators, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Dockins, have not announced future plans. They have operated the hotel many years.

This stucco structure, just west of the Ringgold building on Highway 28, consists of about 20 guest rooms, a lobby and a space now occupied by the White Rose Cafe, which is operated by Joe Eddy.

Mr. and Mrs. Kamstra plan to make a number of improvements about the building, including the refinishing of walls and floors and the addition of some new furniture.

Mr. Kamstra will move his jewelry and watch repair business, now located in the Bank of Crowell building, to a space in the lobby of the hotel.

SUBSTANTIAL RURAL SCHOOL AID PLANNED

"The Texas Legislature at its present session will probably give more money to the rural schools than has ever been done by any previous Legislature," writes Representative George Moffett of Chillicothe in a letter to The News this week from Austin.

"There have been a few objections on the part of some of the rural school people to some of the provisions of former rural aid bills. I am very anxious that the rural aid bill, which is to be passed at this present session, shall operate to do the greatest good with the money that is to be spent. Therefore, I am anxious to hear from rural school teachers, trustees and patrons as to the proposed law," Mr. Moffett wrote.

He stated he would do his best to get worthwhile suggested changes in the rural aid measure put into law that were brought to his attention through letters sent to Austin.

VIVIAN SCHOOL AID

An appropriation of $3,200 was granted the Vivian school district by the Texas Legislature as a result of the loss of the school by fire March 28.

PEASE BRIDGE WEAKENED BY HEAVY RAINS

Normal traffic over the old Pease River bridge between Crowell and Quanah will likely be resumed today following damage resulting last Thursday night from heavy rains west of here that sent the river to its highest level in many years.

Since last Thursday night loaded trucks have not been permitted to cross the bridge and have been directed by a sign between the Crowell State Bank and the Ringgold building to detour to Vernon. Traffic was completely halted Wednesday while old piling was being replaced with new in supporting two spans of the bridge that were dangerously weakened near the north end of the half-mile frame bridge. The water had washed away much sand that surrounded the piling at this point, leaving thin and weak rotted sections of the piling exposed.

The repair work is being completed by Ernest Loyd of Fort Worth, contractor for the new bridge across the river. Work was started on this project over a month ago.

About 1,500 yards of dirt were carried away from the dump being constructed on the south side of the river. The water came to within about two feet of the floor of the bridge and passed over a large portion of the top of the dump, which lacked about one more foot of dirt on top in being completed for the portion of its length that was completely or partly washed away. This dirt would have been placed the following day and would probably have prevented the damage, workers stated.

The completed dump will be about 600 feet long and will contain about 7,000 yards of dirt. Work on it has progressed satisfactorily this week and the dump is now nearing completion.

The rise in the river reached its highest level shortly before midnight last Thursday. A number of residents living near the river report the rise at that time was the highest in 15 years. The channel at this point was cut back about ten feet north.

Bridge Out Near Vernon

One hundred and twenty feet of the half-mile frame bridge spanning Pease River two miles north of Vernon collapsed at 11:45 o'clock last Friday morning. There were no automobiles on the bridge at the time, traffic having been stopped earlier in the morning. The bridge is on the Highway No. 23 route between Vernon and Altus, Okla.

Repairing of this bridge was started Wednesday by the State Highway Department. The work may be completed in two or three weeks.

About five thousand Texas boys were selected to report to recruiting stations for C. C. C. enrollment between April 17 and 23. Enrollment will be for a six-month period as usual with an opportunity to re-enroll for an additional six months.

The Rural Community Has Come to Town

The rural community and small city faces a new future. Electric service and all that electric power and light mean to home life, commercial and industrial development is now available for a more constructive and wider field of achievement.

Much work, planning, testing, engineering and large investments of capital was necessary in order to make this possible. Our 2600 miles of power transmission lines, interlacing 49 counties in West Texas and serving 160 towns and communities provide an adequate and economical source of dependable electric service with precise regulation to meet the requirements of modern day appliances.

Today hundreds of small West Texas towns and communities can offer to industry this modern electric service in proximity to its raw materials . . . two very necessary prerequisites for industrial progress.

We point with pride to our part in assisting the small towns and communities in this way, thus guaranteeing to them the same opportunities in respect to power as the larger metropolitan cities enjoy. It is our policy to fully co-operate with the small towns and communities we serve so that they may realize the full benefits accompanying and made possible by electrical development.

FIRE HAZARDS

Automobile and truck drivers should be careful not to park near fire plugs because it creates a dangerous situation in case of a fire in the business district. If a fire should break out some night when the streets are crowded with cars and the fire plugs surrounded, it would be extremely difficult for the city fire department to get hooked up to extinguish the fire as quickly as it would if it were not handicapped in this manner. The delay might cause a loss of thousands of dollars in a fire that could have been prevented with a little careful thought on the part of car owners.

Another dangerous fire hazard is the burning of waste paper at the rear of store buildings when it is not placed in a container. Burned paper, blown by the wind, can cause a disastrous fire. Failure to burn waste paper, but letting it blow about the business district, also creates a serious fire hazard.

Crowell's business district has not suffered a severe fire loss in many years and any effort put forth by the citizenship to prevent fire loss will be richly rewarded, not only in the cash saving on insurance premiums, but in the satisfaction that a service of real benefit to the community has been performed.

At present Crowell is enjoying the maximum fire credit of 15 per cent. Up to 1932, Crowell had secured the maximum credit for 16 consecutive years, but because of a bad fire record in 1931, the credit was reduced 6 per cent which continued through 1932 and 1933. The maximum credit was regained in 1934.

Retaining the maximum fire credit means the saving of hundreds of dollars for the citizens of this town. Being careful with fire pays big dividends to all property owners.

If each individual took a keen interest in keeping his premises neat and clean the problem of having a clean town would be solved. Getting ready for the Centennial would not be a huge undertaking if we would adopt and adapt the slogan presented by The Dallas News on Sunday, "Tidy Up Texas."

Children are the biggest asset any community can have and they should be developed fully. The lead in their proper training should be taken by the parents, however, the influence of others plays an important part in finally fitting them for a place in society.

The recent rains in this county have shortened many long faces and we hope will lengthen much short wheat, besides providing moisture for spring planting.

The lack of confidence is prolonging the depression which too much confidence started several years ago.

Before the advent of the radio we didn't have to listen to a lot of advertising ballyhoo along with our "recordings."

Removal of County Seat from Margaret Received Publicity

The following dispatch concerning the removal of the county seat from Old Margaret to Quannah has been received by all Texas newspapers from the Texas Centennial Commission at Dallas:

Quannah, Texas, April 8. — (Special) The fact that the county seat of Denton County once was changed owing to the fact that water was not encountered when a well was dug after the designation of the county seat is not more unusual perhaps than is the fact that reminiscence has it that the laudering accommodations of Quannah resulted in that city's becoming the county seat of Hardeman County, another of the former components of old Fannin County, which is preparing to participate in the Texas Centennial celebrations of 1936.

Laxity in the ballot regulations in the early days in Texas is well known. Fannin's men scarcely had landed at old Port Copano when, as citizens of Texas, they elected their delegates to the convention of March 1, 1836, at old Washington-on-the-Brazos, where Texas' independence was declared. In the early days of the Republic, it still was very nearly just a matter of a man's announcing his arrival and intention of remaining that accorded him the privilege of exercising the prerogative of the ballot. Times have changed, however, and in Texas today a man does not merely have to be an actual resident over a period of years, but also must pay a poll tax for the privilege of voting.

Incidentally, it was as late as 1890 that the town of Margaret was the county seat of Hardeman County. Quannah, named for the famous Comanche chieftain, Quannah Parker, and located some twenty miles to the north and across Pease River, had been born when the Fort Worth & Denver Railroad had been surveyed through the county. On petition by Quannah, in December, 1889, the county commissioners ordered an election to determine the county seat.

At that time there were not so many males of voting age in Quannah, but the law, as construed along the new railroad, was that, if a man "had his washing done" in a town for six weeks, he thereby became a citizen of that community, with all the rights and privileges appertaining thereto. It is said that the laundry business became the most important industry in Quannah for the six weeks immediately preceding the election, and that every employe of the railroad from Fort Worth to Texline became qualified as a citizen of Quannah by election day.

The election was held Feb. 7, 1890, and, needless to say, resulted in a landslide for Quannah to be the county seat.

Texas Int. League Serves Schools for Twenty-Five Years

CROWELL TEAM LOSES GAME TO TRUSCOTT NINE

The Crowell baseball club lost its second straight game to the fast-going and hard-hitting Truscott club last Sunday before a large opening day crowd.

The Truscott club outfit Crowell by getting 20 hits while Crowell collected 16 singles. Crowell committed 6 errors and had 12 men left on bases.

The hitting of Bell, Graves and J. Myers and the sensational playing of Pogue and Abbott were the features of the game.

to Austin to represent their rural and high schools in athletic, forensic, art, typewriting, English and other events, according to Roy Bedichek, chief of the University Bureau of Public School Interests, which is the State headquarters for the League.

"Many of these boys and girls return to the University after their high school days are over," Mr. Bedichek said. "Of the 25 students who made the University debate squad this year 24 had previously participated in the Interscholastic League debate contests. Governor James V. Allred, in presenting the trophies awarded in the State basketball meet recently, said that as a Bowie High school student he was a contestant in debate and in track and field events of the League. Many distinguished men and women trace their interest in various activities to the stimulus they received from participation in high school Interscholastic League contests.

"A distinctive feature of the Interscholastic League contest is that it is a strict 'qualification' meet, every contestant having gone through local, county, district and regional meets in order to qualify. This guarantees that only the most talented product from the schools of Texas shall participate in the State meet."

Contestants in the League State meet will be in Austin two days, and Austin citizens are asked to provide rooms for them. Free rooms are to be provided only for actual contestants and their faculty advisors.

Crowell Team Plays Next at Eldorado

The Crowell baseball team has been strengthened for the Eldorado, Okla., game, which will be played at Eldorado Sunday, by the addition of Gotchie Mints and Aubrey Mason of Thalia, according to O. O. Hollingsworth, manager.

There is no doubt but that the addition of these two players will make the Crowell club one of the strongest in the Cotton Belt League, because they are good hitters and fielders. Mints will be placed on third base and Mason will be either in left or right field.

The probable starting line-up and batting order for the Eldorado game will be Norman, cf; Graves, 1b; Sloan, 2b; Mints, 3b; Ashford, 2b; Larue, c; Bell or Rushing, rf; Mason, lf. The pitcher will be either Rasberry, Russell, Bell or Drabek.

This will be the third game for Crowell in the Cotton Belt League play.

its former owner. It is the famous King ranch in South Texas, comprising 1,200,000 acres, larger than the state of Rhode Island.

This vast estate was the personal empire of Captain Richard King, who died a half-century ago, the nucleus of which he bought from Mexican owners in 1853. He added to his holdings from time to time, encouraged settlers, built towns and railroads, and raised prodigious herds of cattle.

It is related that a few years ago when meat packers were very short of cattle and in the market for 20,000 head, a representative of the King ranch who happened to be in Chicago said he could supply them. The packers were skeptical and asked that the ranch be

After Captain King's death in 1885, Mrs. King managed the vast estate, with the aid of her son-in-law, Robert J. Kleberg, for 40 years until her death in 1925 at the age of 94. Kleberg died about three years ago, hence the big ranch will be divided, and the world will probably never see its like again.

OLD RAILROAD QUITS

After more than 100 years of service the oldest passenger carrying railroad in the United States will quit business, according to the United Press. It is the Pontchartrain line, five miles long, between Pontchartrain and Milneburg, La.

With its discontinuance, the ancient little locomotive "Smoky Mary" brought from England in 1832, will also go out of commission. It is said that in all its 100 years of operation no passenger has ever been killed on the line.

Other distinctions claimed for the road: It is the only one to operate for a century under the name given in its original charter; the first line in the world to use a raised platform for the handling of freight; the only passenger line to operate without dispatchers or trainmasters.

There is also a story to the effect that in the old days it was the custom to attach sails to the train when the wind was favorable, in order to give it added speed and at the same time economize on fuel.

FORMER RESIDENT TELLS OF COLO. SAND STORM

In a letter received by Mr. Mrs. J. L. Kincheloe from the son, Herman, who lives at Prossett, Colo., is a description of one of the much-talked-of sandstorms experienced there, which in reality makes the Foard County storms seem insignificant.

He states that he and his family were on an outing in a canyon on Sunday, April 14, and that the sandstorm bore down upon them about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. They knew they could not expect so they remained in their car, but were unable to see persons in the same car. It continued dark all night for more than thirty minutes. When it finally became clear, they experienced difficulty in driving through the sandstorm in order to reach the main road. Mr. Kincheloe enclosed a picture of the approaching storm and it closely resembles pictures of a cyclone.

An interesting program at the luncheon of the Rotary Club Wednesday consisted of a vocal solo by Miss Jo Griffith, with Mrs. Arnold Rucker as accompanist; a classification talk on the whole-sale oil business by Roy N. Barker, and a talk on "men" by Rev. W. B. Fitzgerald, new Baptist pastor here.

LOSES GOOD TEAM

When J. N. Ribble went to his farm six miles northwest of Crowell Monday morning he found a horse and mule dead. They were lying together and Mr. Ribble thinks they were struck by lightning during the rain storm last Thursday night. Another mule in the pasture appeared to be suffering from shock and it is supposed that he was near the dead animals when the bolt struck.

THE BOOK

... the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Four Great Treasures ... by BRUCE BARTON

JUDAS MACCABAEUS

Judas Maccabaeus' record falls between the Old and the New Testaments and is told in detail in the books which formerly were printed in the Bible in slightly smaller type and called the Apocrypha.

Alexander the Great was kind enough to conquer the world at one of the easiest of all dates to remember, 333 B. C. When he was asked, "To whom do you leave your kingdom?" he answered, "To the strongest." In the division which followed, Palestine was under the domination of Ptolemy, who ruled Egypt. He caused the Old Testament to be translated into Greek. The ancient Hebrew was no longer a spoken language and most of the Jews who could read at all read Greek.

Bruce Barton

In the subsequent redistributions of authority, Palestine passed under the domination of a Greco-Syrian dynasty. Antiochus Epiphanes endeavored to unify his little empire by instituting a kind of emperor-worship, or worship of the state.

Many thousands of Jews accepted this bastard form of idolatry, including most of the priests. But there was one aged priest, Mattathias, who revolted and withdrew from Jerusalem, taking with him his five sons, Jochanan, Simon, Judas, Eleazer and Jonathan. Even that retired country village was not secure from the invasion of the new paganism. To his horror, the old priest saw one of his summer neighbors come to render the detested worship, a priest of God leading him in the new idolatry. Full of wrath, the old man killed both the idolator and the priest, and he and his sons fled to the mountains. There they rallied a band of revolutionists. They gathered strength till they were able to meet the armies of Antiochus in open battle, at first with no faintest hope of winning but only with the determination to die fighting for God and their country.

Never was a truly noble cause more valiantly defended. In 166 B. C. Mattathias died, but not until he had seen the struggle on the high road to success. He counseled his sons to make Simon their political leader and Judas their captain, and they did so.

What followed is brilliant indeed. In 164 B. C. Judas actually defeated the imperial armies and captured Jerusalem. The Temple was cleansed and rededicated, and the worship of God re-established. For more than thirty years the brothers fought their good fight, establishing again a Jewish dynasty in Jerusalem and making it possible for Jesus to come to a people who still worshipped the God of Abraham. Judas was killed in battle in 161 B. C.

Health Dept. Gives Snake Bite Advice

Austin, Texas, April 25.—A warning about the dangers of snake bite has just been issued by Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer. A number of cases of snake bite are reported each year in Texas during the summer and early fall; however, few of these result fatally.

Most of the bites occur on the hands or feet, which indicates that stepping or falling in the immediate vicinity of an unseen snake or picking up objects under similar conditions are the hazards of contracting snake bite. The pain following the injection of the poison is most intense. Other symptoms are swelling, giddiness, difficult breathing, hemorrhage, weak pulse, and vomiting.

If one is unfortunate enough to be bitten by a poisonous snake, such as the rattlesnake, the following first aid measures should be carried out.

After making proper incisions at the site of the wound, apply suction and continue for at least half an hour.

Apply a tourniquet above the site of the wound, releasing same every ten or fifteen minutes for about a minute at a time.

If the proper antivenom serum is available, apply it according to directions, but most important of all is to remove as much of the poison as is possible so as to prevent its absorption.

Secure the services of a physician at the earliest possible moment.

If one is bitten by a poisonous snake do not run or get overexcited and do not take any alcoholic stimulants because circulation increased by alcohol or exercise serves to distribute the poison much more rapidly through the body.

Don't injure the tissues by injecting permanganate of potash, which is known to be of no value as an antidote.

Don't depend upon home remedies or so-called snake bite cures, for they are of no value.

L. W. BRIDGES, Pastor.

Methodist Church
The revival closed Sunday with two full house congregations. There was one conversion on Sunday evening. The real test of the meeting will come Sunday and in the services that are to follow. If our loyalty has not been awakened the church will be little better off; but if we take hold of our responsibilities, put the Kingdom first in our thoughts, attendance and sacrifices, the meeting will be justified. The pastor was encouraged by the way the members put aside other interests for the benefit of the church. Another encouraging feature was the large increase in the number remaining for services at the close of the Sunday School meetings. Our teachers are feeling their responsibility for leading the pupils to a full Christian life for which the hour of study is merely a preparation. The separation of the members from worldly entertainment was noticeable and encouraging. May we again cross the 200 mark in attendance. Evening worship will be at 7:45.
GEO. E. TURRENTINE.

Foard City Methodist Church
The revival at the Methodist Church at Foard City begins Thursday evening, April 25, at 7:45. Rev. O. B. Herring of Abilene, Texas, will assist the pastor and people in this revival. Rev. Herring comes highly recommended as a good preacher and revivalist. I'm sure no one expects the visiting evangelist to bring a revival with him. He can only help us bring it to pass by letting the spirit of it begin in our own hearts. May each Christian of the Foard City community be much in prayer and as God puts it in our hearts to

WHY STUDY DRAMATICS?
The value of elementary training in the field of dramatics and speech is undeniable but often ignored. Basically speaking, this training is for potential actors, dramatists, or orators. However, it also contains much for every individual. We are all members of society; we meet many people and are intrinsic parts of a group. Our success, our popularity, depend upon our personality; it is not what gifts we have but how we put them over to the public. And probably the choice is the most important part of our personality. In the majority of cases, the appeal of a human being, save for his intimate associates, is gauged by the quality of his voice; a pleasant, well-modulated, flexible voice is an asset to anyone. Then there must be considered the bugaboo of self-consciousness, of wanting to meet people and talk with them but being inhibited by some intangible fear. A speech course can do wonders toward overcoming timidity. Perhaps it cannot give you a source of subject matter, but it can give you voice, ease and assurance in delivery. It has the effect of broadening one's views and aiding in the realization that many others have your own "phobias."

SLUMBERING GOLD

by Aubrey Boyd

Tenth Installment

SYNOPSIS: Young Ed Maitland, the hardened gambler, Speed, the Yukon gold fields when word of the rich ores first came down the Pacific coast. Maitland, son of a New England family, was determined to win back his lost family. Frenchy, the fisherman, took him and Speed north; Rose, beautiful young woman who had given Maitland a keepsake, Fallon, trail boss of the miners, who resented Maitland's presence, and the money lender, young Bill, the drunken partner, Bill Brent, old-time prospector, Garnet, a well-to-do doctor who hired Maitland and to haul his stuff from the mountains to the valley—these were among the men who made up the gold seekers. Liarville, a camp in the mountains, because Speed's plan closing the trail till it was repaired. When a detachment of the Canadian North-West Mounted Police came riding the pass and mended the trail, there was a truce between Maitland and the police. Garnet went to civilization for the winter and his ponies and equipment were left behind. Maitland and Speed were left alone. Maitland killed a man who was a crooked shell game at the trail—Rose helped find the man and decided to build a winter near Ben Camp, policed by the Mounties, head of the Mounties, there was a strange legend of a ghostly Siwash that left the snow—his new Catholic was specially interested in it. The two partners thought of these tracks. Speed wanted to go alone and killed a buck to bring Maitland to the woods. Speed's starting order obeyed and both stood in the air. The woods gave back no comfort. You bein' hostile or just Speed asked. "I was a little more cautious," voice spoke with freezing breath out of the dark, "you be talkin'." Stand over on side of the fire and keep these way. Both of ye, use your shots a while this arms still raised, Speed toward the caribou hide in the fire smoke. "I your dog was trackin' the man growled, in a name that seemed to expect. "Is that dog still alive?" other travelers along his around here. . . Could tell if I knewed who you thin' for." pause followed before said, with an effect of "An oldish, square-built, man."

finally, "if that ain't the imagin' of a native Drew's patrolman's been puzzlin' over."

"Did you see him?"

"Just a glimmer when I got up from the fire. He stole in to unhook a piece of deer meat from the tree."

Maitland had a vague sense that he was withholding something. "And that's the prospector Pete was looking for?"

"If you can figure it."

"Why does he wear native furs and moccasins?"

"Because no one in the North, I reckon, pays much notice to a Siwash's trail."

"To cover a gold secret, you mean?" The idea Rose had suggested loomed in Maitland's mind. "I dunno," Speed pondered. "They's somethin' more behind this prospector than it's likely either of us can figure."

"His waiting for Owens here would fit with your conclusion about Pete's not having gone down the river. But how would Pete miss him?"

The mysterious man with the mukluks had evidently gone in search of Pete. That seemed the last they were likely to hear of him. But the next day brought an odd reminder. The lamed and starving malamute they had seen in the timber trailed the scent of the caribou in the sled. Its following them instead of the man it knew gave a grim color to Speed's idea about its owner, and the cruel necessity to which he had been driven.

On the trail the dog kept a cautious distance, but it drew closer under cover of the darkness when they camped. Maitland cut off a strip of frozen meat and threw it out in the snow, at the rim of the firelight. The strip vanished in a flash of wet fangs. So did several more, without visible effect of its aloofness, except that it no longer snarled when it evaded Maitland's approach. He called it "Rusty," because of its mottled fur.

After a day's log cutting at the place they had chosen for a winter camp, Speed left Maitland to trim timber for the cabin, while he took the team up to Tagish and hauled down the more necessary part of their outfit.

They set up the cabin walls, and whipsawed the softer spruce into lumber for the floor and fittings, laying aside the best wood to season for the boat.

In the midst of this work they were interrupted by a surprise visit from a mounted patrolman.

"My name's Cathart," said the corporal, stiffly. It was their first glimpse of Drew's "new man." He was a tall, raw-boned, fresh-colored rook with frosty eyes, rather narrowly set. "This is an out-of-way place for a camp."

"We chose it so we could launch a boat below the rapids," Maitland explained politely.

"You men have just made a haul for Inspector Drew that took you by way of Lake Lebarge," said Cathart. "Did you see anything between here and Thirty Mile of a lone Siwash on the trail?"

Speed's eyes narrowed a little in their turn. "No," he said.

The patrolman looked quickly around their camp. "Let me see your guns."

He examined Speed's and handed them back; then picked up the carbine.

"This gun's been used recently," he said.

"We shot a caribou down on Lake Lebarge," said Speed. "Maybe you saw the blood dust."

The patrolman seemed disconcerted for a moment. "All right," he said abruptly, and took his departure.

The two partners stared after him, and then exchanged a long unsmiling look.

"Where's the dog?" asked Speed. But Rusty seemed to have vanished at the first scent of the patrolman.

A deathly stillness of cold amber crystallized the White Horse river canyon.

It was early in April. With the first lengthening of daylight a few weeks before, Maitland had started building the boat, which was now almost finished. Speed had been called to Tagish by some message from Drew.

Today a pale and furtive sun had risen high enough to send some oblique rays into the canyon. But the delicate harbinger had perished at birth. In the western sky a strangely hued pall of vapor was stifling the sun gleams.

From a bank above him, the malamute, Rusty, gave a low whine and nosed the wind with a faint bristling of his guard fur.

Warned by its nervousness, Maitland stowed his tools. He thought it strange that the dog should show so much uneasiness about a still distant storm, and wondered if there might be something else in the seemingly lifeless air.

Taking a length of rawhide, Maitland leashed the dog in a squaw hitch, and gave it its lead, curious to learn what was troubling it. The dog barked at last on the crest of a long ravine. A lifting shiver ran through the malamute's fur. He gave a trailing desolate howl.

Out of the canyon rose a vaguely prolonged moan like the tremor of a deep organ stop. With that breath, incredibly cold, the air came to life. It was like a gasping exhalation from the indraught that had made the void. Now the pall from the West came streaming, in needle points, a flick ahead of the blast. Instantly the moan in the canyon leaped to a snarling bellow, and to a whine and a whistle and a scream from the bending timber on the cliffs.

Maitland, already slanting with the wind toward the canyon, was almost swept off his feet. The malamute kited before him at the end of the leash—drawing at the foot of the slope, he caught a momentary glimpse of the tracks of some animal—erased before his eyes by powdered drift. Shortly afterwards, as he came out of the wallow he saw below him, dimly through the blinded air, the effigy of a riderless white horse, standing with its tail to the wind and its head low.

The malamute's pull on the line carried him on till he staggered against the flank of the white horse. When he groped to its head he had a vague glimpse of Rusty, a yard away, standing over a mound in the dancing snow.

A cold foreboding of the truth already chilled his heart. He stooped down, brushing the snow from the head of the fallen rider with one hand, while he dropped Rusty's tether from the other to try and unblind his eyes with stiffened fingers. A murmur of protest choked him at sight of a golden glimmer in the snow. It was Pete!

He raised the boy's slight form. Clumsily he lifted the light burden to his shoulder, and felt for Rusty's line.

The dog was gone. The malamute, he thought, had answered a simple savage law, and was finding its own shelter.

From one ravine to another he battled through the tearing mazes for what seemed a mile. Swaying in the storm, with its ghastly chaos screaming on his ears, he stepped to marshal his senses. He was lost. He changed his direction on a mere gamble. Fortunately he was prevented from testing it.

He had hardly started when something dark whirped by him, like a fragment of tumbling storm wreckage; the sight of it stung his blood into sharper life and halted him. It appeared again, and his heart leaped with a great thankfulness as Rusty's wolfish head pushed through the welter within reach of his hand. The malamute was peering up at him through rimmed slits of eyelids, its guard hair plastered and parted by the driving sleet.

Unable to trust his fingers, he wound the line around his arm. The rest lay with the dog; and Rusty's first move turned him from the course he had almost taken. Within a few minutes they were in the river canyon. After a timeless struggle up that roaring gut, they brought up against the cabin roof.

Careful still of his burden, he slid down through the drift that smoked around the door, and stumbled inside.

He slid to the floor beside the low bunk and tapped Pete into it. He slipped a tarpaulin under the lifeless figure and scooped a bucketful of snow from the drift. Without knowing whether raw whiskey was the right medicine, he forced a spoonful between the white teeth, praying that it was. To remove the riding boots, he slit the leather down the seams. He cut through every tight garment in order to save time.

At sight of the form he revealed, a murmur of complete astonishment fell from him. The adolescence of the slim, virginal figure had concealed the strange fact that Pete was a girl!

Amazed as he was, his hands did not pause. Covering her with snow, he rubbed the snow crystals against her flesh, with a cold fear in his heart that he was too late.

Motorists who know these facts will save money:

Motor oils refined by the usual methods have some oiliness and film strength, but they may form carbon and sludge, which lead to expensive motor repairs.

Other oils may form almost no carbon and sludge, but are so over-refined that they are robbed of oiliness and film strength they need to prevent motor wear.

Germ Processed Oil is refined to eliminate carbon and sludge troubles and then the Germ Process adds extra oiliness and 2 to 4 times more film strength than any mineral oil.*

YOU will save money on repairs and have a smoother running motor if you use Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil!

The Germ Process—adding concentrated oily essence to highly refined oil—gives it the extra oiliness and film strength so necessary for full protection of high-powered, high-speed motors. No other oil is made by the Germ Process.

This-That, Etc.

By Typo Wrighter

Saturday, April 27, will be Foard County's 44th birthday. And who remembers what was happening here about this time four years ago? The 45th Anniversary in 1936—Texas Centennial Year—should be an appropriate time for another big celebration.

Faithful Service

A few weeks ago we listed a number of local employees who have served many consecutive years at the same job. The following week, we offered apologies for having overlooked three truly outstanding veterans along this line... and now we find that one of the most outstanding of all was overlooked.

She has been on the job 24 hours per day for over seven years with the same firm; has never once taken a day off and from all indications she fully intends to remain loyal to her employer until death comes.

We refer to "Old Coaly," the black cat at Haney-Rasor Grocery. She was born in this store and has never left it. Along with five other kittens, she was offered to B. J. Glover, who planned to take them to the Halsell ranch after they were a few weeks old. When the time for departure came, the little black cat eluded all efforts to catch it with the result that its brothers and sisters were taken to the ranch and hope to catch the wild black one was abandoned. Since then she has absolutely refused to leave the store.

The faithful cat has been a valuable member of the Haney-Rasor staff throughout the years and has perfectly discharged its duties in keeping the store entirely free of mice and rats, which any groceryman will admit means the saving of hundreds of dollars over a period of many years.

During its first three years the cat refused to show a friendly spirit toward anyone, failing to respond to the genial nature of one of the bosses, Hid Haney. It remained for the late W. T. Rasor to remove the feline's antagonistic attitude toward humans and the job of taming the wild creature was apparently completed when Erwin Greening entered the store's service four years ago and today the cat's one best friend is Erwin.

So far as other cats and dogs are concerned, Old Coaly evidently issued a "Monroe Doctrine" many years ago with regard to the space occupied by the grocery. For she has not permitted any member of the four-legged tribe to remain in the store and just last week chased a large dog out of the place of business in rapid order.

Next to other cats and dogs, Old Coaly's greatest dislike seems to be for children. She will permit petting by regular workers in the store, but will promptly dash in the opposite direction when a child appears. While the store manager, John Rasor, states that he "wouldn't take" for the cat, his small son, John Thomas, says the unfriendly old black cat should be traded for a little pup, Sharon Sue Haney, little daughter of the other partner in the store, also has no kind feeling for the store's faithful feline.

The cat is fed once a day and those in the store may know that closing time is right at hand when she appears at the front and starts crying for food, a procedure that is as regular and as much on time as day and night. Cow liver is her favorite food. She refuses to touch hog meat of any kind. She also eats raw eggs, but has never been guilty of breaking any of those in the store. However, she is always on hand when eggs are being cracked, realizing that broken eggs are likely to appear.

A Mistake, Maybe?

J. W. Wishon says that 30-year-ago item in last week's paper about his birthday celebration was true with regard to the celebration but he's quite certain that the printer made a terrible mistake either in 1905 or last week with respect to his age at that time. It seems, according to his statements, that he must have been around 15 at the time of said celebration.

More Eggs

Since publishing facts about the "NRA," "WAR" and "Blue Eagle" egg laid by a Rhode Island Red hen at the T. J. Cates home last week, we now have on hand two more eggs that are supposed to represent something or other.

They came from the Fox Hatchery to The News. Before that they were laid on the W. S. Carter farm in the Margaret community. While they have no lettering, their entire surface closely resembles water waves and L. D. Fox says that means Foard County will receive mighty heavy rains soon and that the people should watch out for floods.

Large Group Present for Shrine Banquet

The banquet given last Friday evening at the Griffith Hotel by officers of Maskat Shrine Temple of Wichita Falls for Shriners of this section was attended by a large group of Masons from Crowell and Quanah.

Illustrious Potentate Jim Spoons was in charge of the program which consisted of talks by all officers of the Temple that were present and others. Buddie Campbell, 10-year-old lad from Quanah, who has recently received correction for serious defects in his lower limbs in the Scottish Rite Hospital in Dallas, was present with the Quanah Masons and, although he is walking with the aid of crutches, he is recovering rapidly and he is overjoyed at the prospects of being able to play as other children within a reasonable length of time.

Thousands of crippled children are being restored to a normal life each year by the aid of Shrine hospitals located in different cities of the nation which is a source of pride to all Shriners.

Wildcats and Exes Grid Game Results In Tie Last Week

The Crowell High Wildcats concluded spring football training last Friday afternoon in a game with ex-Wildcat stars and others that resulted in a 6-6 tie.

The 1935 high school team tied the score on the last play of the game when Mark Saunders, end, received Paul McKown's 15-yard pass across the goal line. Previous passes to Saunders and Otis Klepper, halfback, had placed the ball in scoring position.

The Exes' lone touchdown came early in the last quarter when Saunders' pass on an end-around play was intercepted at the line of scrimmage by J. M. Crowell after other linemen had broken through to bat the ball into the air. J. M. then raced the remaining 25 yards for a touchdown.

The only other serious scoring threat by either team during the contest came in the third quarter when the Exes placed the ball on the 2-yard line on a 35-yard pass from Bob Oswald to Jim Riley Gafford. Four power-horse drives at the line lacked inches in shoving the ball across the goal line and the Wildcats punted out of danger. In the first quarter the Exes advanced to the 11-yard line, but were again held for downs.

Principal gains by both teams were made through the air. Each squad had a few passes intercepted. McKown's interception of an Exe aerial paved the way for the Wildcats' touchdown.

The Exes accounted for eight first downs during the game to six for the high school squad. Some of the longest gains of the day resulted from the famous "1932 combination"—Roy Mullins to Crews Cooper.

The line-ups: Wildcats—Bill Dunagan and Mark Saunders, ends; Tuffy Spears and Oscar Nichols, tackles; Bill Dunn and John Cogdell, guards; Oliver Briscoe, center; Otis Klepper and Bob Lilly, halfbacks; Paul McKown, fullback; and Capt. Aldon Horn, quarterback.

Exes—J. M. Crowell and Jim Riley Gafford, ends; John Todd and Marion Crowell, tackles; George Carter and George Owens, guards; Dan Callaway and Henry Ashford, centers; Crews Cooper and Lester Patton, halfbacks; Francis Klepper and Bob Oswald, fullbacks; Roy Mullins, quarter.

Dick Todd served as referee. Defensive work of Lester Patton for the Exes and Bill Dunagan for the Wildcats were featured in the game.
