THE ONLY SOLUTION

During 1934, the automobile caused the deaths of 24.7 persons out of each 100,000 of our population.

Each 100,000 cars in use killed 130.4 people.

Every time 10,000,000 gallons of gasoline were consumed, 20.1 persons died.

There are three different ways of looking at the automobile accident problem—and any one of them should be sufficiently impressive to make the public think, and think seriously.

The problem would be bad enough if it were no greater than in previous years, but statistics show that it is steadily becoming more acute.

In 1931, for example, automobile registrations were 3 per cent greater than in 1934 and gasoline consumption about one per cent greater—but 1931 automobile deaths were 8 per cent under 1934.

This year, with automobile registrations and gas consumption again on the upgrade, it isn't pleasant to speculate on what the death toll will be—unless that proportion of the motoring public which is reckless, incompetent and plain discourteous is forced to change its ways.

A glance at the records shows that the so-called "unavoidable" accident is so rare as to be practically non-existent.

All but a handful of accidents are caused by one of two things—mechanically defective cars, or a defect in the person behind the wheel.

And of those two, the last is infinitely more important—93.9 per cent of the cars involved in accidents last year were in apparently good condition.

The time has passed when appeals to the reckless driver to improve his ways are sufficient. He has refused—and the force of public opinion, backed by modern, aggressively enforced laws, presents the only solution to the problem.

Division of Finance Created by Relief Commission of Tex.

Austin, May 21.—Establishment of a division of finance in the Texas Relief Commission to take over all auditing and accounting functions was announced this week by Adam R. Johnson, state relief director.

J. T. Duke, formerly auditor and co-ordinator for the State Board of Control, will head up the new division as the director of finance, Mr. Johnson said.

The new division will be divided into four departments: purchasing, under N. H. Banister; accounting, with D. Patterson as chief accountant and R. J. Landers as assistant chief accountant; research and statistics, with H. L. Sherrill as chief statistician; and disbursing, with W. B. Willie as disbursing officer.

"This reorganization," said Mr. Johnson, "is in line with suggested procedure being adopted in all states by emergency relief administrations. It looks toward more effective administration and reduction of administrative costs by a close co-ordination of the efforts of departments formerly operating independently of each other and will enable the state office to efficiently control all funds delivered to the counties for relief purposes."

L. T. Nein, regional accountant for the federal emergency relief administration, here to effect organization of the new division, declared Texas has lagged far behind in development of statistical and research studies of the relief problem.

The head of the research unit for Texas will necessarily have to be well acquainted with the work of the Texas Relief Commission and be equipped to do research work, Mr. Duke said.

Under the new set-up, funds sent to counties will be budgeted for expenditure in the various programs and supervisory control of these funds will be exercised by the state office in order that all programs may be executed according to instructions.

"This reorganization will not require additional employees," Mr. Duke said. "We will be able to carry out the new procedure merely by shifting some of the personnel in the accounting and auditing departments."

He pointed to past eras of civilization that had perished and emphasized the special need at this time for moral and spiritual development.

ART EXHIBIT

A large number of paintings by Tex Moore of Wichita Falls, the official Cowboy Artist of Texas, were exhibited at the Christian Church Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. Paul J. Merrill of Henrietta, a close friend of Tex Moore, brought the paintings to Crowell and, preceding the exhibit, made an interesting talk about Mr. Moore and his work. He stated that he had never had an art lesson, that his talent was natural and that he paints, largely from memory. His paintings are from real scenes, a few being of animals.

He has attained national recognition but is of a quiet, retiring nature.

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientists, on Sunday, June 2.

The Golden Text is: "When the wicked spring as the grass, and when all the works of iniquity do flourish; it is that they shall be destroyed forever" (Psalms 92:1.) Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world" (Revelation 12:9.)

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "This dragon stands for the sum total of human error. The Revelation lifts the veil from this embodiment of all evil, and beholds its awful character; but he also sees the nothingness of evil and the allness of God" (page 563.)

JUST A TRUNKFUL!

THREE smiling young stowaways demonstrate the ample space available for luggage, golf clubs or trophies of a shopping expedition, found in the trunk compartment of the new Ford V-8 Touring Sedans, two of the new de luxe types recently announced by the Ford Motor Company. The trunk compartment—with 13 cubic feet of space—is an inherent part of the design of the Tudor and Fordor Touring Sedan body types. All the space is used for luggage, the spare tire being carried conventionally at the rear, while an inner compartment under the floor provides space for tools. The trunk compartments may be locked with the same key that fits the tire lock. The new touring sedans were designed to provide ample luggage carrying facilities for families doing extensive traveling who wish to utilize the car interior for passengers. They have proved thus far to be among the most popular Ford body types.

ONE DECADE OF SERVICE

Only one decade has passed since a unified plan of electrical development was inaugurated for West Texas. The West Texas Utilities Company pioneered in this development in 49 West Texas Counties and now serves 159 towns and communities. Many of these towns have for the first time dependable and adequate electric service and many without immediate hope of electric service were enabled to procure such service.

The results of this well-planned and unified system of electrical development has made possible economies in operation through a closely correlated and experienced management. Rates have been reduced over 60 per cent since the organization of this company.

This company realizes the importance of electric service in the home today. It reasonably anticipates a far greater service in the future. Every plan of company operation is guided not only by immediate needs but by the potentialities for tomorrow. The policies that this company has adhered to in the past of building and of reducing rates can be continued with the co-operative efforts of its valued customers.

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

by Charles E. Dunn

Our Day of Worship.
Lesson for June 2: Psalm 100.
Golden Text: John 4:24.

We are all well aware of the marked change in the observance of Sunday. We have swung far away from the strict habits of our forefathers. In some ways our modern Sunday is an improvement. For example, we do not frown on the play of children as did the Puritans. "Children," declared Increase Mather, "must not be allowed to play on the Sabbath." This prohibition we rightly considered absurd.

Neither do we tolerate today the long services of the past in unheated churches. Nor do we harbor that marked dislike for fine music which was so characteristic of our colonial period. And we are happily removed from the yoke of those harsh "Blue Laws" the fanatical rigor of which was such that a Boston husband was once set in the stocks for two hours for kissing his wife on Sunday, after an absence from home of three years!

On the other hand there is no doubt that the pendulum has swung too far in the direction of a Sunday that is essentially a secular holiday. "A free Sunday of free Americans" is the slogan of the hour, and this is interpreted in such a fashion that the highest values of the day are lost.

Certain standards can be upheld. First of all, the Lord's Day should be observed as a day of rest. Disraeli said that the Sabbath is the cornerstone of civilization. Secondly, Sunday should be a time for the cultivation of the personal life. "Know thyself," said Socrates. It is a good practice to get away from the crowd on the Lord's Day.

In the third place, Sunday should be a day of the home. We call God "Father," and surely His Day ought to be a family day. Finally, the Lord's Day should be devoted to public worship. While we love God always, Sunday is a special occasion when we draw unusually close to Him.

Fifteenth Installment

SYNOPSIS: Speed Malone, gambler, and Ed Maitland, a seafaring New Englander, were partners in the gold rush of '97. They met in the gold fields of the Rocky Mountains, where they met Frenchy, the fisherman, and the beautiful girl who was to be the center of the gold rush. Fallon, the miner, who resented the interest in Maitland; the old-time prospector; Garnet, who gave Maitland and Speed the clue when he quit the trail; and his drunken partner, Pete, who was drowned after a fight with Speed.

Pete turned out to be a disguise. Speed killed a man at Skagway—a cheat man in a shell game—and months later was arrested and put in jail. He got out, but he was wanted for Lefty, who of the gold. Speed was carrying for the man at Bennett—where Drew Fallon was stationed—he was captured by his enemy, Fallon. But Maitland and Pete had him as Fallon was about to shoot him. They made for their horses, by one route, by another. Led by the lead horse, they found Dalton's cabin. The second morning Dalton staggered in mortally wounded—and died before he told Pete where the claim was. Two months later Speed Maitland for the murder (of Fallon) they are innocent) of a man on Lake Lebarge.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

and so, gentlemen of the Jury, you will prove that the death had a motive for the murder of this Siwash, and did in fact, kill him.

Crown Prosecutor, Wade, heavy-lidded, mordant stare and sat down. By contrast, Garnet, at an adjoining table, the prisoner's dock looked an urbane courtier.

Arrival of one of the first steamers, some weeks behind provided the accused with their distinguished counsel, Garnet's mission in the had proved to be a political learning, when he landed, a charge against the two men, he had offered to understand their defense.

Hand looked older for the months of prison life that had since his arrest. The shadow in his eyes, however, wholly due to the ordeal of which it came from one his past.

Feather-beaten man he had seen was being sworn in, he had resumed his seat. Fallon's figure slouched at ease in the center of the row of seats. Nearer, Maitland's eyes on Pete, with the emotion of the sight of a loved and loyal brings to a man in trouble of tenderness brims his heart. Pete wore a sun-sock of light blue; her gold-locks was longer than he remembered it, and arranged in a feminine fashion. It was his impulse of her in girl's attire, he was altogether lovely.

Records of the finding of Fallon's body that Spring in making ice of Lake Lebarge, established the fact of murder. The Siwash had been killed 44 bullet which struck him back. His corpse had been of through an air hole in and had lain in this condition through the winter. Its floated finally to the surface due to the rising warm from the lake bed.

His first witness was a trader, the old post at Ogilvie on the river, which went back into Yakon days, and rehearsed to which the accused men ready heard from Drew.

Some of this testimony open to objections. Garnet the witness without crossing, and Wade called a seagoing officer of the Mounthere produced the furs which Dalton had worn. He had them with those taken from the body of the murdered man. An identical work of the head ornaments, that had been fashioned by the same hand.

Wade called the witness to the stand. He explained that the tangled in an odd way the timber that sheltered them, and were difficult to find. He told of finding a pool of melting snow crystals near the lake, covered but through in a dark shadow, then sought out the dead and questioned them.

He said they had met no Siwash, and showed an unwillingness anything more. When he asked about the blood stain, he said as the blood of fresh hide shot, and professed to be a clear mark.

Witness told of his visit to the man in the wane of the blizzard. Speed was being sent away. Before he reached the Siwash dog had slunk away around the cabin and he caught only a storm-glimpse of it. The dismalmut dog was, of course, startling, and a fact of great importance. Maitland, when asked where it came from, claimed to have found it astray, not long after his partner shot the caribou on Lake Lebarge.

"In the meantime, the Siwash's body was found in the breaking ice of Lake Lebarge, establishing the fact of murder.

"To establish our case against the accused men, it remained to be proved that they actually used the dog to trace its camp of origin, and that that camp was the hide-out of an unknown white prospector with a gold secret. As was proved."

Garnet, after a brief address to the jury as to the circumstantial nature of the evidence, called the first, and so far as was known, the only witness for the defense.

Pete was unmistakably a very attractive girl; to this crowd of hardy men she was something more rare and gracious than the words convey, or than may be imagined by any but men who have lived in frontier mining camps.

"Had you ever seen the defendants before they arrived in Skagway? Garnet asked.

"No, sir."

"What was Owens' relation to you?"

"I suppose you would call him my foster father. I was raised at his ranch."

"Did he ever speak to you of your real father?"

"Only once. He spoke then as if Dalton were my father. Or any way some near kin of mine."

"What did you do after Owens died?"

"I went over the pass to find Dalton and warn him. I sold a gold-mounted gun and some things. I had for grub, and rode down the lake looking for him. I didn't find anyone waiting, and didn't have much to go on, not even knowing what Dalton looked like. When the cold came, I met a rafting outfit who camped to cut timber a little way up the Teslin, and they gave me a job cooking for them through the winter."

"Why did you leave them?"

Garnet prompted.

"It was only a week or two before the break-up. I hadn't heard anything of Dalton, and was wondering what to do."

"That night I woke up hearing a voice close to my bunk, on the other side of the tent wall. The voice was shouting to me above the noise of the storm, but it sounded dim. The words were something like, 'If you're Pete, get out of the North, and get quick! You're in danger. I'm in a tough fix. . . can't take you down for God's sake, keep clear of me.' The wind shrieked and the voice died away. I wasn't sure of what it said at the last."

"Soon after that, one of Fallon's men happened by the camp and saw me. I knowed Fallon was lookin' for me, and felt that this was what the warning meant. I saddled the mare and started for the coast."

"It was a heavy, cold trail. The going was easier on the level snow of Lake Lebarge, but Chiquita and I were both dead tired by then, and there's more than a day I'm not clear about. All the time I had a feeling of being followed or shadowed by someone or something."

"Then—I kind of lost count. I think I was in a river canyon when the storm broke. There were wild voices in it like wolves. I must have pulled the mare out of it and into the open when the storm struck. The next thing I know I was in Mr. Maitland's cabin. The dog led him to where I'd fallen in the snow."

"Did you tell Maitland why you were making for Skagway in that weather?"

"No, sir."

"Why didn't you, Pete?"

"He and Speed had had a quarrel with Fallon before, and I didn't want to mix it up worse because of me. Or to mix them up in any trouble about Dalton either."

"During your stay at the cabin, did Maitland ask you any questions about Owens or Dalton, or his gold secret?"

"No, sir. Anything I told him was of my own accord."

"I felt as safe as if I was in—God's pocket."

The courtroom smiled a little at this homely but expressive miner's phrase.

Pete then told what had happened up to the arrest of the accused men in Dalton's camp.

"I will ask you one more question," said Wade, in the deep silence that followed. "Do you love the defendant, Maitland?"

Pete's gray eyes were shadowed. She bit her lip as she had done that day when she recovered from the throes of cold. Two big tears rolled down her cheeks. "I have told the truth," she murmured.

"I think, Your Honor," said Wade, "that the question has been sufficiently answered."

Next morning, when the court re-opened, Garnet produced an unexpected witness. He looked toward the rear of the courtroom and said, "Rose Valery."

At the name, Fallon came upright in his chair, startled out of the detachment. He turned his head in frowning disbelief.

But he was unnoticed by the courtroom as Rose approached the stand. Though the river had carried many rumors of her beauty, this was her first appearance in Dawson.

Indifferent to the crowd's stare, she looked at the accused men and then at Pete, with some inward, unobtrusive thought. Her dark eyes showed a glimmer of fire when they crossed with Fallon's, who slouched back now, carelessly, while she was being sworn.

"Miss Valery," said Garnet, "where were you born?"

"I don't know," Rose answered. Her low voice had the quality of plucked harp strings.

"Where were you cared for as a child?"

"In the convent school at Notre Dame at the Mission Dolores in San Francisco. I was taught music and singing at the convent."

Rose ventured, "until I was 15, but I was restless, and discipline only made me unhappy. I decided to run away, and did, and so became a professional singer."

"I had a plan of reaching the gold country. A little after dark I climbed over the convent wall at a place where a sloping barn roof touched it. I got on a street car at Guerrero Street. As I hadn't any carfare the conductor put me off at the second stop, two blocks below."

"A boy was singing in a high soprano voice in front of an open-air booth stand next the saloon, where the sports were getting shined up for the evening."

"It surprised me to see the men at the shoe-stand throw him money—even one half-dollar piece—for what wasn't really a good song, or very good singing, except for being strong and clear. While he gathered up the coins, I sang the refrain of the song. The boy was angry, but the men encouraged me, and we tried to sing each other down. I sang alto, and our duet stopped the shoe-shining. When we finished, the men gave me a handful of silver; one of them handed me a dollar piece."

"I divided what I got with the boy and then he wanted us to throw in together and play the corner, but I said I was going to Nevada to sing in the gold camps."

"The boy got excited and wanted to go. While we were talking it over, a shadow fell between us from the street lamp, and I found that the man who'd given me the dollar was standing there listening."

"So you're headin' for Nevada?" he asked.

"When I agreed we were, he said he knew all about the country; had been there not so long before and brought out a heap of gold, and he was going again, so he could give us a steer and see that we were treated right."

"On the car going downtown, he said something to the boy I couldn't hear, and gave him a gold coin. The boy got off, telling me he was going to buy some things and meet us later."

"I wasn't so sure about the man's looks. He was big, rather handsome, and sunburned. He said we couldn't start till morning, and he got me a room at a hotel near the Baldwin. He told me he wasn't going to Nevada. He didn't need to, and didn't want to."

"I was angry and disgusted. While he was sleeping, I got out. I still had some of the small change I'd sung for, and soon found that money was easy to earn that way. I bought a guitar and some clothes, and paid my own way to Nevada. One night I was playing a camp casino in Golconda when a woman who was drinking with a fuddled miner called me to their table to sing for them. She was half-drunk herself. Her face must have been beautiful once."

County Federation Held Interesting Meeting Last Week

The Foard County Federation of Women's Clubs met at the court house last Thursday in an all-day meeting. At the morning session, Mrs. E. V. Halbert made a report as delegate to the district conference at Plainview. She was assisted in the report by Mrs. M. S. Henry and Mrs. R. L. Kincaid, who were visitors to the conference.

In a candle-lighting ceremony, with the out-going president, Mrs. S. E. Tate, in charge, the following officers were installed: Mrs. E. V. Halbert, president; Mrs. F. W. Davis, vice president; Mrs. Blake McDaniel, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. N. J. Roberts, reporter. Standing committees for next year were appointed.

A delicious covered dish lunch was served at noon, with the Adelpian and the Columbian Clubs as hosts.

A delightful garden program was presented in the afternoon with Mrs. Oscar Boman as leader. The orchestra opened the program with two numbers "In the Garden" and "Tiptoe Through the Tulips." Mrs. Boman gave a very helpful talk on soil preparation. She was followed by Mrs. Gus Hooks, who had as a supplement to her talk, a miniature home, with its surrounding grounds arranged and planted suitably with flowers, trees and shrubbery. She showed that native growth can be used effectively and told that the surrounding locality is rich with material which can be used in beautifying the yard, such as stones for building purposes and walks and sand for concrete walks, lily pools and fountains.

Mrs. Bert Self gave, in her talk, suggestions for having perpetual bloom in the garden, and named a list of early blooming shrubs, followed by spring flowers and ending with autumn plants with rich foliage for fall and winter. She also talked on bouquet arrangement, illustrating good and bad taste in color combination of both vases and flowers.

Miss Myrna Holman told of programs under way over the county, by girls' clubs particularly, in an effort toward rural yard beautification.

Mrs. Jno. Ray gave an interesting article on "Southern Homes and Gardening" and Mrs. Jack Roberts told how individuals and communities are becoming more and more flower-minded, creating in many towns and cities a demand for organized effort through garden clubs.

The final number on the program was a reading by Mrs. I. T. Graves, "Living Flowers." A tea had been planned to take place in the garden of Mrs. B. W. Self, but, due to rain, this was held in the court room. Punch and wafers were served.

Invitations had been extended from a number of ladies to this group to visit their yards and this feature of the program proved most enjoyable and helpful. The yards of Mrs. A. Y. Beverly, Mrs. Arthur McMillan, Mrs. Fannie Thacker, Mrs. Geo. Hinds, Mrs. T. V. Rascoe, Mrs. Oscar Boman, Mrs. Lawrence Kinsey, Mrs. Jack Roberts, Mrs. C. P. Sandifer, the Methodist parsonage, Mrs. M. S. Henry, Mrs. H. Schindler and Mrs. B. W. Self were visited and the special features of each were emphasized.

The tour proved a revelation, showing what can be done in this soil and climate. The day's program was one of intense interest as well as of practical help to anyone desiring to beautify the yard.

Codes Under N. R. A. Are Unconstitutional

NRA codes were wiped out Monday as a result of the Supreme Court ruling Section 3 of the Industrial Recovery Act as unconstitutional. Under this ruling, Congress delegated authority to the President for making codes.

The court held this authority had not been sufficiently limited or defined and also ruled "where transactions have merely an indirect effect on interstate commerce, the control rests with the states."

Highway Delegation Going to Washington To Ask Fed. Funds

Austin, Texas, May 29.—In a determined effort to obtain $100,000,000 for gap-closing on Texas highways before the Centennial and the opening of the Mexico City road, Harry Hines, new chairman of the State Highway Commission, will head a delegation of Texas leaders to Washington in mid-June, he has announced.

His hope is to impress the federal administration with the fact that the building of modern highways in Texas can provide more and better and quicker employment than weed-cutting, ditching or many of the other former CWA activities. It can do this, he contends, with minimum waste or abuses, and the result will be useful, permanent, revenue-producing facilities.

Accompanying Chairman Hines to the capital will be the other commissioners, Gibb Gilchrist, state highway engineer, Col. Ike Ashburn of the Texas Good Roads Association and envoys from many other groups.

Gov. James V. Allred favors utilization of road-building as a means of unemployment relief in Texas, and has wired his view to President Roosevelt.

"Well over 90 per cent of the Texas road dollar goes to labor either on the job or in the factories, mills and pits behind it," Mr. Hines explained, "and this is why we hope to get some of the money from purely temporary relief projects shifted to it."

"Texas should get over $50,000,000 for roads and grade separations from appropriations already made, and we will ask for $40,000,000 more. We have the plans all ready for badly-needed roads that will exceed this amount, and we can get them under way swiftly."

The highway chairman explained that he has no thought of disturbing the many worthwhile city and community projects to be presented through PWA, but only random and unplanned work relief.

Frazier-Lemke Farm Act Is Invalidated

The Supreme Court held unconstitutional Monday the Frazier-Lemke act granting a five-year moratorium for paying farm mortgages and affecting billions of dollars of indebtedness.

The law which had been forced through Congress in the closing hours of the last session provided for the moratorium if attempts failed to scale a farmer's debts down to a figure he could pay. The property could not be foreclosed during the two years if the owner paid a "reasonable rental."

In addition, the act enabled the farmer to obtain full title to his property by payment of its appraised value regardless of the amount stipulated in the mortgage, at the end of the five-year period.

Good Profit Made by Feeding Poor Calves

Goliad.—Herman Wehe of Berclair in Goliad County has found it a highly paying proposition to take his small, poor calves in the fall put them on feed in December, feed them until March or April and then sell them, according to county agricultural agent, K. J. Edwards.

The feeds Wehe used were mostly home grown corn and cottonseed supplemented by some cotton seed cake. The calves fed last fall were worth 88 or 89 at the time they were put on feed, but they sold for $21.19 in a co-operative shipment in April.

Figuring all home grown feeds at market price, the feed bill was approximately $13 per head, which left Wehe a good profit, according to the county agent.
